Br. Bassett: We still have some encouragement on Bourneville Circuit, though nothing of special importance at present. Our third quarterly meeting was held at Mt. Latham Meeting House (Pike County) on the 10th and 11th inst. The members were much refreshed and comforted, and one brother an exhorter from the Methodist Episcopal Church united with the church. At this meeting I had the assistance of Br. Kezerta. Our next quarterly meeting will be held in Bourneville, on the 12th day of August. We invite Ministerial assistance.

Yours, in love,

C. H. WILLIAMS.

Washington Circuit, June 8th, 1848.

Br. Bassett: The Lord has done great things this year for the Ohio District. Hundreds have been converted to the religion of Jesus Christ, through the instrumentality of the Methodist Protestant Church. This has been a year of general prosperity with us in the West. At our second quarterly meeting we had a good meeting, Br. Young conducted it. I was sick at the time, and continued confined to my bed for 49 days, and was 4 months unable to preach, but my health has improved greatly so that I am now travelling the Circuit in connection with Father Dobbins.

At our third quarterly meeting we were again favored with the labors of Br. Young. Had a very good meeting, and I think the day is not far distant when the fruit of many years' labors will be gathered at Union. We commenced a protracted meeting on the 25th of May at a place called Parrott's School House, where we had no class, and the Lord heard our cry and revived his work among us. We formed a class of 14 members and the prospects very encouraging for one of the best classes on this Circuit. We have taken in 30 members this year, and yet the prospects are very good. I shall still Pray for Zion.

Yours in love,

A. CHANNELL.

Lima Circuit, June 8th, 1848.

Br. Bassett: Having to write to you on business, I would by your permission inform our brethren through the Recorder, of the condition of my field of labor, and also drop a few lines in reference to other subjects. We have held three quarterly meetings, and several protracted meetings, and have had the gratification of seeing sinners returning to God, and believers built up in the faith of the gospel. We have had thirty accessions to the church, but brethren I feel to lament our condition in this place, this circuit has had more to bear up under, perhaps than any other in the Ohio District. But amidst all the discouragements and conflicting circumstances, many of the brethren and sisters stand with christian firmness, and seem determined not only to have the form of godliness, as one brother remarks in reference to his intire circuit, but live in possession of the power. That good brother in his report of a circuit some where in the north western part of the State of Ohio, says that he found a hundred persons who were "called Protestant Methodist." We trust he did not design, by this remark to stain the religious profession of all his charge by supposing that they were not worthy the name given them. He also says, "darkness dwelt upon the face of the circuit, for there was not a meeting house in all our borders, nor any prospect of building any, but now we have got two splendid Church houses under contract." Now we hope that the 'splendour' of these houses will gild the benighted face of that circuit,

And chase its voidness all away
And turn its darkness into day,
Then will the members all be sure
They have the form and feel the power.

J. L. BORTON.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, June 22, 1848.

ANOTHER COMMUNICATION FROM REV. C. SPRINGER.

Our readers will please excuse us that we yield so much space in our editorial columns this week to a personal matter, which cannot be considered a matter of general interest. Our old friend "claims" to have the following article published, and we wish him to have every possible chance for self-defence, if self-defence it can be called since every body knows we have not assailed him. We make the above apology, because a number have written to us that personal matters introduced into our paper, are calculated to do injury to the cause of religion, whilst others complain of injury thereby done to the paper, and threaten to withdraw their patronage. We should be glad to let the article of our friend pass without comment, if we could in justice to ourself do so, and let our readers form their own judgment. We will endeavor to use as few words as we consistently can, in the notes we may append, which will be referred to by the figures in parenthesis,

Written for the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor, Dear Sir;—Your annotations and commentaries upon my article in your paper of the 8th inst., give such a false (1.) coloring to the matters at issue between us that I claim the privilege of giving those facts as I understand them.

It will be recollected that the Western Recorder was got up by my own individual enterprize, at a time when other efforts had failed to supply the church with a periodical for the purpose of sustaining her interests; of course the establishment was my own private property. After it was known that my health was so failed that I would probably have to retire from my task I had sundry applications for the office, which I, no doubt, could have disposed of to advantage. But waving them all I made to you a proposition, uncalled for on your part, to take the paper on trial on terms that you were to pay nothing for the use of the office, or any facilities that I afforded you, unless the proceeds of the paper would justify it after defraying expenses. (2.) To my proposition you accorded. In this matter I was not actuated by pecuniary interest, but with reference to the welfare of the church.—From a distant acquaintance I relied with confidence upon your judgment and prudence against committing such a powerful engine as I proposed transfering to your hands to the interests of such parties as might be ruinous to the church in her infant state.

Well, gentle reader, our worthy brother B. entered on the duties of his new post with seeming good cheer. In his inaugural he congratulated his readers upon the fact that he was to be assisted in his duties by the "former editor," and "expected to realize no little advantage from his knowledge and experience." All things proceeded very harmoniously until near the close of the 7th vol. when certain ultra abolitionists assailed the General Conference at Cincinnati, (3.) misrepresenting her acts with a view unquestionably of disaffecting the members of the church. To this we replied under the signature of C. S. And after handing over an article on this subject, for publication, somewhat caustic in its manner, but nothing different from our usual style with such men, we noticed the new editor seemed to be much excited about something. He paced back & forth in the front of his residence with a rapidity rather unusual.—We noticed him also, at least twice, in long private talks with his printer boy. On the whole we anticipated, from the movements (4.) under our notice, something, in the coming number, for our special benefit.* So soon as the paper was out we looked for it and found the following article:

"A word to C. S. [C. Springer] J. G., M. K., Spectator and all others concerned.—We hope that these good brethren will get through with their uninteresting controversies before the next volume of our paper commences. As we intend to get new type to print the next vol. with, we should feel very sorry to see it soiled by issuing such unimportant original matter."

There is the note of "about half dozen lines" to which our brother refers, but took good care not to insert. (5.) It is very likely, indeed, we would "forget" the "language and intentions" of such a precious paragraph. It was written, if not by the editor's suggestion, at least with his knowledge, and that it was with his approbation facts declare. And our article in the same paper, we have little doubt, was the very thing which induced it. Of course, the others are named, to save appearances, yet it was mainly designed for our benefit. Now, if our worthy brother had thought our correspondence "poluting" his "type" why did he not name the thing to us in private (7.) instead of arraying us before the public in this invidious and "personal" manner? This undoubtedly was the proper course for a christian gentleman towards a personal friend and Co-Editor. The reader will bear it in mind that this is the publication of a man who makes great objection to "personalities," yet this is an invidious "personal" reference to one, who, at the very time, was confering on him the highest confidence, and who had ever treated him with liberality & friendship. At the commencement of the vol. he expected to "realize no little advantage from our knowledge and experience," now our articles are "unimportant" and "uninteresting," "soiling" his "type," &c.—A very "unimportant matter," indeed, to defend the integrity of the church against the attacks of men who would stop at no expedient to injure her character! very "unimportant," this!

When we saw this note, above, we wrote a laconic reply to it, such as in our judgment its merits demanded, and handed it over for publication. Upon which the worthy editor come to us and made, apparently the most humble concessions. He did not even intimate any thing justificatory or paliation of his act, but acknowledged the corn right up, and offered to publish our defence if we said so. But we did not require it, and agreed to be satisfied with his apology. ☞ And should always have remained satisfied if there had been no repetition of any thing of the kind. On our part the matter was buried forever unless dug up by the brother himself by some similar acts. Such exactly we think has occurred in his bearing of late towards us.

First, he did not give our articles, on the Restrictive Rule, their regular turn. We had been requested by a number of old and influential members of the church to reply to those essays against this rule. We waited until those on the opposite side were through before we began, und then expected to have our regular turn; but in this we were disappointed. One article was deferred to make room for a writer against the rule who had ran until he got out of breath, stopped to rest, and had began again. Another was delayed and the editor without our complaining apologized* to us therefor—stating that it was because Homo's on the same side was so lengthy. But yet when the boys were to be accommodated two or more articles could appear, at any time, without regard to their length. (8.) And so of other articles. This I readily admit was a small matter, but still it was ominous; yea, and it involved an important principle.

Second, our communications, although we had taken the pains to re-write them; were published, to say the least of it, with a great deal of typographical negligence.† Words were altered from the copy, and in some instances added which made nonsense of the sentences. (9.) This, though another small affair, was nevertheless, no difference from what principle it originated, very vexatious to a man who has any ambition for literary correctness.

Thirdly, it is circulated through this neighborhood, and I do not know how much further, that, "Br. Bassett says he is sorry for Brother Springer, as he is only injuring himself." Now, although my confidence is considerably impaired in the judgment and prudence of the editor, to manage the difficulties of his position, yet I am slow to believe him capable of lending his name and influence, to those who were the subjects of my strictures, to do me, in this way, private injury. And if he has never made such statements, in reference to me, it is due to himself that he should publicly deny the fact and place the responsibility where it belongs. (10.)

Fourthly, he has opened his columns to invidious communications, anonymous & otherwise, against me, which have no connection with the controversy, at issue, in which I am charged with the high crime of having no children; of being filled with "gall and wormwood;" as destitute of "christian love;" of "epistolary politeness," &c., &c., &c. (11.) These communications are not only invidious in their character, but, as it seems to me, invidiously inserted. That I may not rely entirely on my own judgment in this matter, I will here give an extract from a letter, bearing date 29th ult., and written by one of the oldest & most intelligent ministers in this part of the work;—"I noticed in the Recorder with great dissatisfaction and surprize that rarely an article of yours, on the Restrictive Rule, could appear without a neutralizer being appended from some of the boys. This I regretted on several accounts. I deemed it unfair to yourself, and injurious to the cause under discussion, which I believe is closely allied to the interests and well being of the church." (12.)

Fifth, & lastly, in his paper of the 11th inst., which contains one of these invidious anonymous communications is the following editorial:

"To Correspondents.—We still have on hand six or eight articles on the Restrictive Rule. Writers will have patience and we will endeavor to treat all by the rules of justice.‡ We desire that those who wish to write further on this subject, will please send us all they design to forward us by the 1st of June, for we learn that a large portion of our readers would prefer to have the present discussion give place to something more interesting or edifying."

A man who will do a thing once, will generally do it again, if occasion requires. And here I am virtually told, once more, in company with others, that my correspondence is neither "interesting or edifying." (13.) In his (14.) note of July 30th, 1846, before quoted, he informs us that our communications were "uninteresting," "unimportant," and "soiling" to his "type." The imprudence of that note he acknowledged, as we have already stated, without any qualification whatever. And pray wherein does it differ from the one here quoted? This last was written under similar circumstances, couched in similar terms and has a similar bearing. If he did not so understand the matter why did Br. B. apologize to us for that editorial when we had uttered no complains about it? (15.) Yea, indeed, is not the latter even more reprehensible than the former, in as much as it is a repetition of an act which he knew by previous experience, if nothing else, was calculated to give offense? And, moreover, when you take into account the private circulation. (17.) "Br. Bassett says he is sorry for Br. Springer as he is only injuring himself"——this will satisfy the boys, that this editorial is designed for my special and particular benefit. At least this is the light in which I am compelled to see it from the fact before me.

Now I should be very fond of knowing how we are to understand the "good brother." He permits into his columns the defamatory communications of ultra-abolitionists, & if we defend the integrity of the church against their slander, it is "unimportant" "matter," "soiling" to his "type." If a set of inexperienced young men combine to subvert the government of the church, and introduce their revolutionary movements into a paper expressly dedicated to her interests, and they are replied to, it is neither "interesting or edifying." If, then, neither the character or welfare of the church are of "interest" or "important," in the name of God what is? Do tell us if you please! We wait for light on the subject. (18.)

Does the brother reply, he does not object to the matter but the manner—that we are too "severe" and "personal." Very well, then; "thou that sayest another shall not steal, dost thou steal?" If he can find any thing more severe, personal or invidious, under the circumstances, in all that we have written, than the quotations we have made from him, above, (19.) we will agree to come up to the work flat footed, and acknowledge the corn. We are never found fighting only on the defensive. We never contend only when our character or principles are assailed, for we are rather indolently fond of peace. But when duty compels us to enter the conflict we do not want so young a man as the editor to dictate to us how we ought to act. (20.) That great "experience" which his inaugural accords to us, must guide us in this matter. And we always employ such manner as we think adpted to the case, and the responsibility thereof we are willing to bear with out asking others to share it with us, or shrinking from it by denying our obvious intention.

We do not however, claim to be perfect.—There are no doubt things in our manner exceptionable, which will be seen sooner by others than ourself; especially by those who are hunting after them. But we claim some redeeming qualities. You will never find us concealed behind the door flinging little dirt spots upon the character of either friend or opponent. (21.) Whatever we have to do with others is done in the style of this communication, directly in the light of the Sun. We never attempt to soil a man's reputation either by acting or writing so that every one understands the thing, but yet in such an evasive way as to leave room to avoid responsibility by denial. When we act towards others they all understand us; and when we speak or write about them they know what we mean. Or in other words, (pardon the egotism) if we are cursed with "severity" we are blessed with frankness.

Our worthy brother thinks he is a very popular editor. He seems to intimate that so many "complimentary expressions" from the "east and west, from the north and south," as to his "mode of conducting his paper," has established his fame beyond question. And he has evidently dressed up this subject with a view of holding us out to public reprobation because we had the temerity to intimate the fallibility of so popular a man. But we happen to be a little into his secrets as it respects the popularity of his "mode." We have peeped into a score or more letters, a number of them addressed to himself, objecting to his "mode of conducting his paper." Did not several Western Virginians discontinue because of his "mode of conducting his paper." (22.) Did not a number of the principal Steubenville Subscribers, within a year, give notice to discontinue their subscriptions because of his "mode of conducting his paper." Did not his friend Cole discontinue his patronage because of his "mode of conducting his paper" And how many in this neighborhood, and else where, consider the inflictions, of his Michigan correspondent, a great calamity upon them? We do not pretend to decide whether all or any of these objections are well or ill founded. We simply mean to inform the brother that he has plenty to relieve him from the curse without our aid.

Take another view of the subject. At the time our friend entered on the discharge of his editorial duties, the commercial distress of the country was relieved, and we have had financial prosperity ever since. That great Methodist hierarchy which gnashed its teeth upon us and threatened our very extermination, was, about the time of his installment, by the dispensations of Providence, turned upon itself. Its membership now spend their strength in biting and devouring one another, while at the same time they treat us with such courtesy that a man must be very pugnatious indeed who would seek a quarel with them. The abolition excitement, which had threatened the destruction of every church in the land, was then, so far as our fellowship is concerned, dying away like the expiring zephyrs upon the mountain heights. So that our worthy brother, has, all his editorial days, been permitted to sail on a comparatively unruffled sea. He has met with nothing yet to test his ability to manage his vessel in a storm. (23.) The only breeze, which has been sprung upon him, is this attempt to revolutionize the government of the church. And it really appears to us he has managed his part of this affair in bad style. However, our judgment, in a matter of this kind, is worth nothing in a comparison with that of the rising sages of the day.

You say; "we are bound to regret that some things should have appeared, considered slanderous by some, which were not anonymous." Now, this, if we understand it, is a plain intimation that you charge us with slander. Such insinuations coming from a man of whom we have right to expect charitable treatment, we think peculiarly unkind. We have slandered no man, if to say the truth about them be not slander. And we call on you as matter of justice either to give us the specifications of the slander, so that we may have an opportunity to defend ourself against the charge, or to take back the allegation, so far as we are concerned. (24.)

We regret that we had to write the last communication to protect ourself against a kind of petty annoyance, and we further regret that such commentaries should be made upon it as to call for this reply. It is extremely unpleasant to us to have to meet things of this kind. But although we have had to deal plain with our old friend, the editor, we would still do him an act of personal kindness if necessary.

Very respectfully, &c.,

C. SPRINGER.

Meadow Farm, Ohio, June, 17*th*, 1848.

(1.) "False coloring." Never, in our boyhood or manhood have we before been thus accused. Through grace, however, we can endeavor to "bear all things."

(2.) This arrangement was for the first year, during the "trial," as our Brother will recollect. We take pleasure in stating, as we have stated again and again to brethren in three or four different Conference Districts, that Brother S. gave us a fair chance, and dealt honorably with us in this matter. It is just as he states. And after the year was up, he trusted to our own reckoning of the expenses, whether we should or should not pay him the one hundred dollars, (for that was the amount) which we did subsequently pay him.

(3.) We cannot help thinking that our Br. has forgotten how this affair originated between himself and the "Ultra Abolitionists." If he will allow us to refresh his memory, we have no doubt he will distinctly recollect the circumstances, as do we. Before the "ultras" (as he is pleased to call them) had time to "assail the General Conference," through our paper, even immediately on his return from the session of that body, Brother S. determined to publish strictures upon a certain protest of certain Anti-slavery brethren of the General Conference, in case said protest was published. And he gave us sufficiently well to understand that he intended to use severity. Apprehending that that severity might do harm, in the critical state of portions of our connection at that crisis, with the best of motives we concluded, in the publication of the closing part of the proceedings of the General Conference, in our next number, not to publish the protest, but made the following entry:

"Brother Stephens introduced and read a protest of several brethren against the action of this Conference respecting slavery, which was accordingly entered upon the Journals." Signed by twelve members.

Our Brother is welcome to charge us with "currying favor" with barnburners in this case, if he will. In waiving the publication of the protest, we hoped that Brother S. would waive his strictures upon it. But we were mistaken. In due time for the paper of the week following, he returned to us the copy of the protest which we had brought from the Conference, accompanied with his strictures. In an inoffensive way we had requested him to be as mild as possible. His characteristic reply was—"You might as well sing Psalms to a dead horse, as to deal mildly with such men." Finding that his strictures were indeed severe, we as modestly as we knew how, requested his consent to modify the language a little. But we were promptly informed that what he had written he had written—that it must go so or not at all. Our readers will understand the occasion of our "excitement" to which he refers, and his kind allusion to our "pacing back and forth" before our residence, all of which probably was the case. With reluctance and pain we sent the matter to the press. Our readers will at once see how delicate was our situation; in view of the "liberality and friendship" and we will add, kindness with which we were treated, the circumstances also of our being situated upon the premises of our friend, after he had been accustomed to control the press in his own way for many years, but was now associated with us as assistant editor, (though in fact senior editor,) how could we dissent from his views or his wishes, even should our own judgment somewhat suffer? If guilty of "currying favor," as he charges us, would it not seem to have been with himself, rather than with the "ultra" brethren?

Well, after the publication of the protest and strictures, it was full seven weeks before a reply appeared from Brother James Gay, one of the protestors. That, we suppose, was the time the General Conference was "assailed." That writer may have done so—and we justify him in no unworthy thing—never did. We recollect that he proposed taking the liberty to use "plain language," because Brother S. had done so. Whatever bluntness Brother G. used, we had to indulge, because it was in reply to the like in Br. S. Our worthy senior had a rejoinder promptly prepared to be inserted in the same number of the paper. In that article, amongst other like things, he said of the signers to the protest, of whom was such a man as Rev. D. H. Stephens, then President of the Indiana Conference, but now we doubt not, in the Paradise of God, that they were "not fit to belong to any decent community. If they are, it should be to some hierarchy, where a bishop has the power to kick and cuff them to their proper places." Now our readers will see, that it was far from being agreeable to our feelings to give place to such language between brethren, in our paper. But as precedents had been admitted, where could we stop? It is likely this was one of the times when our observing senior, saw us "excited, pacing back and forth" before our residence, &c. He knew that we were grieved by his severity. But nay, we were only "currying favor with the barnburners!" &c. We believe that the circumstances of this General Conference matter, were as above stated. If not, we will promptly admit any correction when it is made appear.—Brother S. we believe will admit our statement, unless he considers that we give things a "false coloring" again. We are sure, however, that we give them only such a coloring as we believe to be true.

(4.) This "printer boy," as our friend is pleased to call him, was then nearly twenty-two years of age, and had served an apprenticeship with Brother S. at the printing business. When we were about to take charge of the establishment, Brother S. recommended to us to employ him. He did it to aid us in our arrangement, as we were not yet initiated. It was a kindness, for which we have ever felt grateful to him. Well, this was now near the close of our volume & we had several occasions to have consultations with our printer. One was, whether he should serve us another year, and what should be his wages.—A second was, in reference to the quantity and the kinds of new type and other materials we should have to purchase for our new volume.—A third was in reference to our anticipated absence in attending the sessions of three successive Annual Conferences, as Brother Springer had kindly suggested to us the importance of attending them, and had given as his opinion that the said "boy" was competent to conduct the paper in our absence. It is not unlikely that our respected senior noticed us in at least two "long private talks" with him, on these matters. And like a man of acute discernment as he is, he concluded to be sure, "from the movements," that in those "long talks" we two must be concocting something for the coming number of the paper, for his "special benefit." Now, we protest that taxing our utmost recollection, we do not believe that we had one word of consultation with our printer respecting the matter in question in the course of the "talks" alluded to, or on any other occasion.

(5.) We are gratified that our friend has here inserted the note as it is. But why does he "take good care" to omit the signature, "Printer?" It could not be, we presume, to give the impression that we adopted it as editorial. And as he goes on to state that "it was written, if not by the editor's suggestion, at least with his knowledge," besides our own denial which we have heretofore expressed, we add that a young man who was then with us in the office, now testifies that to his knowledge, the note being short, (eight lines we confess, instead of six,) was put in type before it was submitted to us. As our Brother has here inserted the note entire, our readers can judge of its atrocity (and we do not defend it,) as this and a subsequent one of ours, which he also gives below, are the two "articles" which he makes to be more exceptionable than any thing he ever published. We feel very sorry that we have been such a naughty man. We have made our confession before, and now, how shall we get forgiveness?

(6.) Most cheerfully we acknowledge this "personal favor," and express our gratitude therefor. The "offer" alluded to was made in less than six months after we came to Meadow Farm. The "responsible person" alluded to was not a member of the church, and equally a stranger to Brother S. and to us. We are at a loss how he could have been advised of his 'responsibility.' He was, in the offer, associated with James E. Wilson, then of the Ohio Conference, who was to be editor of the paper, and the paper was to be removed to a town where we had not then, and have not now, a single subscriber.—Said Wilson withdrew from our church soon after the offer was declined in our favor. The fate of the Recorder, in that event, can be imagined. We concluded on the purchase, before we had made our year's experiment, and before we had realised the first dollar from the enterprize, above its expenses,—for the great mass of the moneys paid in, during the 7th vol. were due to Brother S. for previous volumes and were regularly paid over to him. In consummating the arrangement, we paid Brother S. the sum of $500, in hand, of our private means, whereas $600 was offered by the other gentleman. We however agreed that we would faithfully attend thereafter to the collecting and paying over the dues of Brother S. on previous volumes, as we had done during our first year. We thought we paid our friend a fair price, as the type was worn out and had to be immediately renewed, at an expense of little short of $400, and the subscription list was then less, by 300 names, than it is now. We were not disposed to bring our private affairs before the public, but as our friend has seen proper to introduce the matter, (to which we feel no objection) we thought it not amiss to corroborate his statement with a few additional particulars.

(7.) Did we not "in private" as above stated, respectfully make objection to his severity?—"Polluting" the type however, was not a word of ours.

(8.) "Homo" had commenced his series of articles, before Br. S. commenced his. There was no injustice in that case to Br. S. Then his article was so long as to include the space ordinarily occupied by any two others on the subject. And as to our inserting two or more without regard to length, when the "boys" are to be accommodated, let any one look over the file and he will see that in no instance during the progress of Br. S's. series were there two articles inserted from those he calls "boys," save the present number of the paper, which he has not yet seen, and if we had had another number on hand from Br. S. we should most certainly have given it the preference. As to our deferring an article of his in favor of Prudentia (as we suppose he means,) we cannot plead guilty to the charge. To the best of our recollection it was deferred, if at all, in favor of another writer who is no 'boy,' but an elderly man of a distant conference, and which article we had had on hand for six or seven weeks. Why does not that writer complain? Our excuse and apology to him are that his paper needed some preparation for the press which we previously had not time to attend to, and such documents we usually feel at liberty to lay over for our convenience, as we have heretofore given notice. The article of Prudentia was inserted in the same number because of its brevity, whilst the articles of Brother Springer, and the other elderly brother, signing himself "South" would have occupied more space than we usually devote to the subject in one paper. We did not know that it would disoblige our friend to have his article wait just a week, or we would certainly have accommodated the matter in some way, to avoid this ground (?) of complaint. We disclaim any intention, at any time, to favor other writers in preference to himself. But then, we marvel, why did not our worthy brother "name the thing to us in private," as he has above admonished us, "instead of arraying us before the public in this——manner? This," he tells us, "undoubtedly was the proper course for a christian gentleman towards a personal friend?" Wonder if that "alters the case." The very week following the first transgression, we were out and spent an agreeable afternoon with our friend at his hospitable mansion. Wish he had named to us the complaint. We would have tried to give satisfaction.

(9.) It is certainly unfortunate, and even "vexatious," that errors should go out in any man's articles. We very much regret it in the case of which Br. S. complains. Oftentimes after all our care, we are mortified to see errors from our own copy uncorrected. In no instance however have words been intentionally altered or added, in the articles of Brother S. After the publication of

---

* As a general principle it is prima facia evidence of guilt, when a person apologises for an act before any complaint is made. The straight forward man, conscious of high minded integrity, rarely, if ever, makes apology before complaint, and he thereby finds that he is rarely misunderstood.

† The usual method of meeting such complaints is to throw all the blame on the MS., as that is a matter which can rarely be investigated. I will here state, however, that a hand in the Gazette office, not acquainted with our hand writing, a short time since, put up some two columns of an article, and on examming the first proof we did not detect a single essential typographical error. And there was no more pains taken with the copy than usual.

‡ The old readers of the Recorder will here call to mind one of our maxims which we had frequent occasion to repeat, viz: that whenever a man made unnecessary pretentions to any virtue it was rarely there. Our friend, here, without any apparent occasion professes to be disposed to treat "all by the rules of justice." Now, just look at the facts of the case." The editor tells us he has 'eight' communications on hand, on the Restrictive Rule, most of which, of course, cannot be published until after the first of June; it is now being seen that these are mostly from the boys. About the last of May it was expected that we would get through with our first course of essays on the subject, which in a private note the editor says he wishes us to "go on and finish," but further he sayeth not. So then the boys are to have the first and the last fire, for no one can reply to them on the principles of this "rule" after the first of June, and this is the editor's idea of "Justice." (16.)

* Another important reason, beside the movements before us, which put us on the look out, was during our management of the paper we found it to be our duty to stricture with some severity the slanderous communications of the barnburning abolitionists. Owing to this we were not in very good odor with them. After our worthy friend had assumed the duties of publisher we discovered, on various occasions, that he manifested considerable solicitude to retain the confidence of these men. And, as our article, alluded to might be supposed to interfere with this calculation, although published on our own responsibility, when taken in connection with the unusual symptoms which we discovered, tended to make us suspicious.

Another fact, we should here name, may not be very remotely connected with the publication of this exceptionable article. A short time before it appeared we had contracted to sell Br. B. the press establishment. And that too at $100 less than we were offered for it by a responsible person. This we did to favor him personally. (6.) But this is a "personality" of which we have never heard him complain.—We do not, on this account, however, expect any favors. We simply name the fact to shew that we have some claims to courteous treatment.—Now, does not this article above, shew that the editor begins to feel the importance of his new position?

his first number we wrote out with our own hand, the errata, as our friend pointed them out to us, and inserted them at the end of his number 2.—The hands in our office testify that we have repeatedly enjoined that especial pains should be taken with the articles of Brother S. to avoid errors. We have read personally in the proof each of his articles, and marked for correction all the errors we found. Then all is read by a second proof reader. But once in a while, by omission on the part of the correcting hand, an error marked for correction fails to be attended to.

(10.) Our friend seems to doubt the truth of this story, circulated as he says in Meadow Farm neighborhood, and well he may. We do not believe that any living creature male or female ever heard us say such a word in reference to Br. S. We know not where the responsibility of the story should rest. And yet we must congratulate ourself, it even "report" makes us say no worse things than the above.

(11.) Br. S. has substantially acknowledged in the communication now before us, that he has a habit of using severity in writing. Then how can he expect as to exclude others who also may use a little of that same, especially when they do so in reply to his severity? We have not "invidiously inserted" any thing against him. He knows well that it afflicts us to have our writers use personal severity. We have published all that he has required of the kind, and is it reasonable that he should complain when others are admitted to the like privilege?

(12.) Upon this we only have to say, that when we assumed the control of the Western Recorder, it was with the understanding that its founder had pledged himself that it should be a free press. If then, the writer referred to, (we still respect him,) thinks it is unfair to publish both sides of any question, and as a matter of convenience to place articles on the same subject in the same part of the paper, though we have concurred with him in sentiment upon most things, "Restrictive Rule" and all, yet we cannot concur with him in the present instance. We are accused of unfairness, whilst our very fairness itself has occasioned the charge.

(13.) We shall not repeat our all sufficient explanation given in a previous number, in reference to this note to correspondents.

(14.) How very just and generous, to ascribe to us a note, which he knows was not ours! — "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy."

(15.) This question is fully answered in our previous article week before last. If our readers will do us the favor to refer to that, they will see how very generous is the present retort.

(16.) We will not annoy our readers with a repetition of what we said respecting this 1st of June matter, in a previous number. We think that our idea of justice would not suffer in comparison with those of Br. S.

(17.) Why does he repeat a report, which he has acknowledged doubtful? Will it add weight to his argument, or "interest" to this document?

(18.) The injustice of this whole paragraph will at once appear when it is recollected that the terms "interesting, edifying," &c., had respect no more to the articles of Br. S. than to the articles of those against whom he wrote. It was the entire discussion we wished to dispose of, not his articles in particular.

(19.) We cheerfully leave the public to be our arbiters in this matter. The two obnoxious articles are before the reader.

(20.) As to our 'assailing' our correspondent, or 'dictating to him how he ought to act,' the reader can determine whether we have done these things or not.

(21.) This may or may not be an insinuation. We let it pass.

(22.) Only two or three that we knew of.—There might have been more. We gave Br. S. this information. They discontinued on account of our opposition to the use of tobacco. Br. S. is not more friendly to the article than we. One good brother however changed his mind in less than ten days, and requested us to continue sending. Last week he sent us a new subscriber, and stated that he had no objection to our paper, and would do all he could for it. As to the "Steubenville subscribers" not one of them discontinued, though they at first threatened to do so. We grant that we do lose subscribers frequently. Almost every week we take some from our list. But unpopular as we are, we are steadily gaining more than we lose. As to the "score or more" letters, we do not think we should suffer by comparing letters with our friend.

(23.) Our worthy Brother thinks that we have been favored with a "comparatively unruffled sea," during all our "editorial days,—that we have 'met with nothing yet to test our ability to manage our vessel in a storm.' Now in so far as this is correct, we accept his congratulation, and are thankful for providential favors. Yet we feel a privilege to present a few facts. 1. In reference to "financial prosperity." During the summer of 1845, when we made a visit to Meadow Farm, upon the invitation of our Brother, and entered into an arrangement with him to take charge of the paper, we travelled over a large portion of the State, first from Cincinnati north to the Maumee Valley, and thence across the interior and central portion of the State to this place. We found through a great portion of the country the harvest nearly or quite destroyed by the late frosts and other causes. Our friend we have no doubt had forgotten this circumstance when he penned the above. He will certainly recollect, that a large proportion at least of the farming community, suffered pecuniary embarrassment, in consequence of this calamity. We think he will recollect also that many persons wrote to us their apologies that on this account it was out of their power to pay their newspaper accounts until another season. Our Br. will certainly admit that we were essentially limited in our receipts upon this accoun for twelve months or more. 2. In reference to the dying away of the "abolition excitement." The description Brother S. gives of this is truly sublime. We are not sure, however, that there is in it "more truth than poetry." It is highly poetic.—"The abolition excitement which had threatened the destruction of every church in the land, was then, so far as our fellowship is concerned, dying away like the expiring zephyrs upon the mountain heights." Now we crave to ask, was there ever in the history of our community, a period when the "abolition excitement" threatened more seriously the disruption of our church, than for a few months after the General Conference of 1846? We can confidently appeal to many men of judgment and observation, in various Conference Districts, for example, we will name our mutual friend, D. C. Carson, of Bainbridge, and ask whether it was not seriously apprehended during the entire summer of 1846, that we should lose the entire Michigan, Wabash and North Illinois Conferences, half the Illinois Conference, half the Indiana Conference, one third of the Ohio Conference, and one fourth, or at least a less portion of the Muskingum and Pittsburgh Conferences, besides no little in certain Districts at the east? It will be an easy thing to hoot at this as an idle aprehension, or to say that it was but a few unworthy extra abolitionists, who threatened to leave, but we are sure that not a few will bear us witness that there was thought to be reason for such apprehension as above named.—How far the influence of the W. Recorder, under our administration, went to reconcile the minds of brethren, and produce the happy reaction which took place at the ensuing sessions of the Annual Conferences, is not for us to determine. Respecting the M. E. Church, it is as our Br. says.—Except in certain localities, we have had little opposition, of late years from that quarter. As to our 'ability to manage our vessel in a storm,' we make no boast, nor do we wish to court the storm. We had rather use our influence to keep storms away. This we know, the interests of the M. P. Church are dear to us, next to our very life. We need great wisdom and prudence.—May Heaven guide us.

(24.) We have not accused our friend of slander. He charged us with "publishing anonymous slander." We replied: "We regret that any thing anonymous, considered slanderous, should have found its way into our columns.—And we are bound equally to regret, that some things should have appeared, considered by some slanderous, which were not anonymous." Such is the fact, and we deplore it. Some things anonymous, and others not anonymous, we are sorry to say, have appeared in our columns, which have been considered by some, or by some others, slanderous. We regret it all. We but mentioned the fact, whilst we charged no man. But Brother S. considers this an "insinuation," and deems it "peculiarly unkind," coming from a man from whom he had a "right to expect charitable treatment." Will he please pardon then what he has considered an "insinuation," when by way of offset, we remind him that he lately identified us with "barnburners?" Have we on our part no right to expect "charitable treatment?" We are willing that our friend should know that we have some sensibilities in this matter, and that we feel that this is going quite as far as an "insinuation."

We remark, in conclusion, it is no pleasure to us to find ourself brought into any misunderstanding with our respected old friend. As we conceived that he was rather severe upon us in some things, we thought it necessary in our own behalf, to respond with a degree of freedom.—In the present instance, we have been compelled to prepare our notes in too short a time, as Br. S. requested insertion in next paper, and did not find it convenient we suppose to furnish us the document as soon as would have been desirable. We have erased many sentences, and some entire paragraphs of what we had prepared, in view of keeping free, if possible, from any unbecoming or uncourteous expressions. We wish to advance not a word inconsistent with the law of right, and the law of love. If however in the necessary haste of the preparation of these notes, we have advanced any thing inconsistent with the meekness of the Christian or the respect due to a senior and superior, we shall surely regret it, upon the discovery thereof. O for peace, and good will, and good feeling amongst us all, and towards all.

RATHER VEXATIOUS.—We depend upon the Daily Baltimore Sun as one of the most ready vehicles of eastern, southern, and foreign news. We are sorry to say that it comes to us very irregularly, though not we believe by neglect of the publishers. Some numbers miss us entirely, others are delayed several days longer than they should be, and then reach us with evident indications of having been abstracted from the wrapper, leisurely read and afterwards sent along at a late day. Our post master of this place, is our witness, that this is the case. Can it be that some incumbents of post offices on the way, can thus detain our intelligence which is so important to a publisher? Can the "Sun" help us to ferret out this imposition?

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—Two or three excellent brethren will please excuse us that their articles do not appear till next week, for want of room.

MODEL ARTIST TRIAL.—The trial of Lillybridge and Birdseye, for exhibiting "tableaux" of naked females in a room in Canal street, New York, took place in the Court of Sessions, on Wednesday, and the offence against decency and good morals having been fixed upon the accused, they were found guilty, and sentenced to 30 days' imprisonment at Blackwell's Island, and to pay a fine of $50 each.

DROWNED.—A young man named Henry Barnes was accidentally drowned at Havre de Grace, on Monday night last. He was in a scow, and, by some unfortunate movement, fell overboard, and could not be recovered. He was a resident of Havre de Grace, and was highly esteemed by those who knew him.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

BR. BASSETT:

After that of mother Best, the next we propose to notice is our beloved sister

HELEN (or Heelen) McFARLAND.

She was of an excellent christian family. It is enough for those who knew that gracious woman—mother Cuthbertson, to say that Sister Helen McFarland was one of her daughters.

Helen, like the rest of that interesting family, was mild and amiable in her spirit and disposition. But withal, was inclined to be gay, and was fond of similar associates. In this she differed from her beloved sisters. So she continued till the Lord brought her to see that her stay in this pilgrimage-state, in all probability, would be short. That fatal complaint in many families—pulmonary consumption—was giving fearful indications of the inroads it was making upon her constitution; friends saw it and deeply sympathized with her. In the prime of life, and blessed with a kind and doting husband, and a dear little surviving son; with a comfortable place of abode, and affectionate friends;—in a word, every thing to make life desirable; and she loved life. And as she loved life, so she dreaded death, and disliked its contemplation.—But, blessed be God! the gospel of Christ—salvation—delivers—not only from sin, but also from the fear of death. So our dear departed Sister found it; as we shall see in the sequel.

As soon as she was confined to the house, I commenced my regular pastoral visits, and found her not only accessible, but anxious to converse upon the all-important subject of vital Christianity—experimental religion. And her solicitude for its possession increased from day to day.—She had been a member of the church some time, and once received a spiritual manifestation, which she afterwards believed to have been a sign of her acceptance with God. But at the time it was kept secret and neglected, and soon vanished away. Now the necessity of a real change of heart was deeply felt, and earnestly sought. But diffidence and self reproach for procrastination appeared to be against her. She, however, continued to seek, and many friends encouraged her in the search. Still there seemed to be some obstacles in the way of her salvation. Finally, one evening after meeting, Br. F. Morrow, (a brother-in-law to Sister McFarland) and I went again to see her (I had visited her in the morning of the same day.) We both endeavored to explain and illustrate the plan of salvation by grace through faith. Perceiving that she was leaning on her friends and even on their devotions, I told her plainly that she must not have a prayer-book which had been proposed as an help, that she must dispense with my visit next day, and that I must shut her up with the Lord alone, and she must cast herself just as she was, on the Savior:—sink down in his arms, live or die! I begged to pray with her once more before leaving the room. Enjoyed the season; repeated the charge, and took leave of her. Soon after we left, she commenced according to direction; and glory be to God! soon her darkness turned to day. She was abundantly blessed. So that she could not sleep that night for the unutterable joy of salvation. Early next morning my wife was sent for to learn the good news. These details of experience are mentioned, because apparently small matters are of great importance to seekers of religion.

From that time to the day of her death, while she had many cloudy and hazy days; yet her confidence in God was unshaken. To many persons it might appear that she was much disposed to doubt, but upon a closer scrutiny, I think it was attributable rather to self-dissatisfaction at the little progress she seemed to herself to make in the divine life. From keen regret for opportunities in the past mis-spent, with intense solicitude to redeem the time in the future, her ardor of spirit led her to look for rail-road speed on the way to Zion. Hence her general lament was, "I am not growing in grace as I think I should." She seemed to expect each grace of the Spirit to ripen in a day. And when her sanguine expectation was not fully realised, she was inclined to self-reproach. This state of mind, to visitors of a sciolous observation, was easily mistaken for doubtfulness in regard to her acceptance with God. Hence the necessity of constant pastoral attention, instruction, and encouragement. And truly those oft-repeated, and continued, pastoral visits were of a highly pleasurable and profitable character, to her minister at least, and seemed to her also.

As she neared the brink of Jordan, she gave the clearest evidences of a growing meetness to "depart and be with Christ, which is far better" than life below. By this time the fear of death was entirely removed. And she could converse about leaving the world, her kind husband, and dear little boy, without a tear; but let her speak of growing in grace, and her eyes would soon be bedewed with tears of gratitude to God, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Many instances of interesting and satisfactory answers to questions, might be given, but let one suffice.—The evening before her departure, the brother-in-law before mentioned—called to see her again; and in his usually familiar style of address, thus accosted her: "Well, Helen, how are you now?" To which she promptly replied, "I am going to heaven as fast as I can!" Next morning, on hearing that the Doctor had remarked to a member of the family, that she could not last 24 hours longer, and to another, he thought not more than twelve hours; to this intelligence she cheerfully responded, "Bless the Lord!" A few hours afterwards my wife was by her side, and having great confidence in her judgment, she enquired of her how long she thought she would remain here. "Probably not more than two or three hours," was the reply. And as if anxious to step on board and cross the easy ferry, to see the Saviour, and meet her dear departed friends, with a pleasing smile she said again, "Praise the Lord!" I had another good season in prayer with her that morning, and so had my wife.—After dinner we both went again to see her. For some hours she had been apparently in a dying state, but perfectly sensible, and abundantly happy, and in great bodily weakness would exclaim, "Sweet Jesus!" "Precious Savior!" &c. "I shall soon be in heaven." Her voice was almost gone, but she gave signs for me to pray once more. I did so; and the Lord was there. In a few minutes she was observed to be greatly excited, and on listening it was ascertained that she was rejoicing with all her heart, as she was leaving the shore. Signs were given for us to sing; but who could sing then? Some were yet on their knees, and all melted to tears, that had a tear to shed. Determined, however, to gratify her in these her last requests, Sister Ann Greenough and I commenced singing this hymn:

"And let this feeble body fail,
And let it faint or die;
My soul shall quit the mournful vale,
And soar to worlds on high:" &c.

As might have been expected by those who are acquainted with Sister A. Greenough, she started a very appropriate tune, (I tried to sing the bass) and the effect was powerful. And such a conquest over death, I scarcely ever witnessed. She literally raised her dying head from the pillow, when almost gone, and triumphed though she died. I turned to look, and such a sight! This pen cannot describe it. She could not speak, but her face and eyes gave signs of joy, and she earnestly meant what she could not utter. Brother F. M., her brother-in-law, was standing at the foot of the bed, and he said her countenance was like the setting sun, with a peculiar glory covering its face. And he actually shifted his position to behold the radiance in its different phases. We ceased singing before we had finished the hymn, and in a minute or two she ceased to breathe. According to her desire, she left the world shouting, and shouting victory over death.

"O grave! where is thy victory?
O death! where is thy sting?"

So died our dear Sister Helen McFarland, aged twenty-nine years and one month, on Good Friday, near the hour in which our Saviour expired on the cross, for us. And doubtless, she went the same day to Paradise. And, it is believed, she has not left a single human enemy on earth. She was buried on Easter-Sunday, in the afternoon, leaving a blissful hope of a glorious resurrection at the last day. A great concourse of people were present on that solemn and interesting occasion. The writer feels as if a near relative as well as christian friend, is gone. May the Lord sanctify the bereavement to all our good, especially that of Brother Archibald McFarland, whose loss is great indeed! And bless, and spare the dear boy!

W. REEVES.

Pittsburgh, June 11, '48.

P. S.—Since the above was written, Sister Mary Cuthbertson, the faithful attendent upon, and sister-in-law of Mrs. Helen McFarland, has sickened and died. How true the saying—"In the midst of life we are in death.

W. R.

Caution to the Magnetic Telegraph Operators.—On Sunday evening last the store-room of Ausmus Rumbaugh, deceased, in Greensburg, was discovered to be on fire, but was immediately checked. The fire originated from the Telegraph Wire, which had a teminus in the store-room, during a pretty severe thunder storm.—The electricity, in considerable quantities, was observed passing along the wires into the store-room. The damage was quite small.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

Notices.

PORTSMOUTH CT., MUSK. DIST.—Brother Clancy is hereby informed that his visit to this ct. will be expected at Brown's Meeting-house, 15 miles from Jackson, near the Portsmouth road.

W. W. TIPTON.

COSHOCTON CT., MUSK. DIST.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

SUSQUEHANNA CT., PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.—Br. Brown, the President, is notified that his visit is expected at John Dokell's, Indiana County, between the Cherrytree and the Diamond.

M. STEWART.

BELLVUE CT., MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

NEWARK CT., MUSK. DISTRICT.—Br. Claney's visit to this Circuit will be as follows: On Friday evening, at Elizabethtown. On Saturday, 10½ o'clock, at Joseph Blain's Grove, two miles East of Irville, where we contemplate holding a meeting in the woods for a few days.

W. H. MARSHALL.

MORGANVILLE CIRCUIT.—The meeting of Br. Clancy the President, will be at Morganville, 8 miles from M'Connellsville.

H. T. LAWSON.

WHEELING CT. PITTS. DISTRICT.—Br. Brown it informed that his visit is expected at the Johnson's appointment, 12 miles West of Waynesburg, on the waters of Ten Mile.

R. H. SUTTON.

DELAWARE CIRCUIT, MUSK. DIST.—Notice is hereby given to our worthy President, Br. Clancy, that his meeting for this circuit, will be in the town of Delaware.

W. HATFIELD.

To the Superintendents of the Circuits and Stations hereafter named:

DEAR BRETHREN:—Having at length obtained my liberty, by getting through my publication business, which has detained me so much longer than I expected. I propose to be, and to preach within your respective fields of labor (with your consent) on the Sabbaths following:

Mount Pleasant Circuit, June 25th.
Steubenville Station, July 2nd.
Wellsville Circuit, July 9th.
Youngstown Station, July 16th.
Pittsburgh Station, July 23rd.

As I shall travel in a buggy, it is my intention to carry with me a supply of my Vol. of Sermons.

THOMAS POTTER, Conf. Missionary.

Putnam, May 29th, 1848.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.
Onondaga Conference.
LAST ROUND.

Mexico Circuit, June 24th and 25th.
Oswego Circuit, July 1st and 2d.
Central Circuit, July 8th and 9th.
Manilius Circuit, July 15th and 16th.
Cayuga Circuit, July 22d and 23d.
Wayne Circuit, July 29th and 30th.
Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

BR. BASSETT: Please to publish the following appointments which I will attend, by Divine permission:

Clarksburg,	June	4th
Bainbridge,	"	11th
Twin Creek, Jacksonburgh,	"	18th
West Alexandria,	"	25th

I hope the brethren on Clarksburgh, Washington and Bainbridge cts., will let me know through the Recorder, or otherwise, what place in the ct. I am to come.

N. B.—My address, is Waynesville, Warren Co., O.

A. M'GUIRE, Con. Mis.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, March 2d, 1848.

BR BASSETT:—You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, which I will fill, Providence permitting.

Susquehanna,"	25th	"	"
Johnstown, st.	2d	July	"
Home two Sundays,		"	"
Valley mission	23d	"	"
Huntersville, ct.	30th	"	"
Greenbrier, "	6th	August	"
Braxton, "	13th	"	"
Conference, "	22d	"	"

Early notice of the plan of my visit in each circuit, to be given by letter, or in the Western Recorder.

Any camp-meeting arrangements, desired by the brethren, will be published by them, in the Recorder. The Aid Society to be advocated by the subscriber, in all places.

GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15th, 1848.

Newark Circuit,	3d	Sunday of	"	"
Zanesville "	4th	"	"	"
M'Connelsville ct.	1st	"	July	"
Morganville "	2d	"	"	"
Lancaster "	3d	"	"	"
Salt Creek "	4th	"	"	"
Portsmouth "	5th	"	"	"
Columbia "	1st	"	August	"
Woodsfield "	3d	"	"	"

Would be glad to receive due notice of the point at which my meeting will be held on each of the above named circuits.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

BR. BASSETT: Please publish for me the following plan of appointment.

Kalida,	ct.	June	17th	"
Lima,	"	"	24th	"

J. M. YOUNG.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W Hatfield,	O.	J L Berton, 1 sub.,	O.
S Martin, 1 sub.,	"	W Reeves, 3,	Pa.
W W Tipton,	"	J Gay,	Ia.
A Channell,	"	M Stratton,	"
C H Williams,	"	S W Widney,	"
S P Kezerta,	"	S Andrews,	"
W Hamilton, of Gratiot,	"	J C Wright,	"
W Ross,	"	J Scott,	Va.
J B Peat,	"	P M—Richie,	"
J S Hudson,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
S Duling,		10	52	3 00
W Hatfield,	J Westbrook,	9	52	2 00
J L Berton,	Geo. Rumbo,	10	36	2 00
"	Wm. Rumbo,	10	28	2 00
"	Wm. Reese,	10	28	1 00
C H Williams,	Benj. Coe,	10	26	2 00
S P Kezerta,	W Tharp,	9	52	2 00
S Martin,	Mrs. V Sprague,	10	36	2 00
"	Himself,	9	52	1 00
J Gay,	D G Oaks,	10	31	1 00
W H Marshall,	J S Gutridge,	9	26	2 00
Wm. Ross,	J S Hunter,	9	26	3 00
S Andrews,		8	26	3 00
J C Wright,	P Ollom,	10	26	2 00

New Subscribers this week, 4. Discontinuances, 3.

M. Stratton, Ia., makes us pay 10 cents postage, to notify us to discontinue his paper, two weeks after his time is up, whilst his postmaster could have given us word without cost. This is not fair, but we are willing to excuse him, and only mention it that others may not do so, whilst it is the privilege of every postmastor to give notice of a discontinuance, without charging postage.

Br. Hatfield, the paper of J. S. we know is regularly mailed, and we know not why it does not come as regularly to hand. Tell us what numbers are missed, and we will supply them if possible.

Br. J. Cornwell, the inconvenience you speak of shall be remedied if possible.

OUR LIST.

Shortly after the commencement of our present volume, we addressed an appeal to our friends, and especially our agents, in behalf of the Western Recorder. We showed how easily one thousand new subscribers might be added to our list within a short time. Our paper is sent to more than one hundred and fifty travelling ministers, of several Conferences, most of whom have their copy free, for their agency. We remarked that if each of those brethren would obtain for us from five to ten new subscribers, or an average of seven subscribers each, the matter would be at once accomplished. A number of brethren have responded nobly, others have begun well, and will we trust succeed still better, others have not yet reported to us. The Publisher of the Methodist Protestant has also proposed to raise one thousand new subscribers, for that paper, by enlisting two hundred agents to obtain as many as five each. In his last paper he gives the names of twelve brethren, who have thus far complied. We have concluded to give also our list of those who have obtained five or more new subscribers for the Western Recorder since the commencement of present volume.—We are under obligations to numerous others who have thus far procured us, from one to four subscribers, and we are daily expecting to receive further intelligence from them, of encourging character.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta, Bainbridge, O.,	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.,	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.,	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves. Pittsburgh, Pa.	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer. Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5

☞ We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—On the 18th inst., by Rev. Wm. Ross, Mr. JOHN REPARD, to Miss JANE WALLACE.

Advertisements.

Administrator's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of Muskingum County, Administrator of the estate of George Torbert, deceased, late of Newton Township—All persons indebted to said estate, are requested to make settlement immediately. Likewise, all persons having claims against said estate, are notified to present them, legally authenticated. SAMUEL WOOD.

June 17, 1848.

To the Creditors of the estate of ALEXANDRIA McCRACKEN, JUNIOR, DECEASED. The subscribers have been appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of Muskingum County, Commissioners on the estate of Alexandria McCracken, Jr. Deceased, represented insolvent. The creditors of said estate will bring in and prove their claims against said estate. Claims which have been presented to the administrator will also be passed upon.

The subscribers will attend to the duties of their said appointment at the Post Office in Gratiot, on Monday & Tuesday the 26th and 27th of June, 1848, between the hours of 8 o'clock A. M. and 4 P. M. of each day.

WILLIAMS SIMS, Commmissioners.
PETER S. WESTBROOK,

May 18th, 1848.

SACRED MELODEON:

A SELECTION OF
REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.
BY REV. J. DALBY, Jr., & J. B. PEAT.
REVISED & ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public, as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while an addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publisher has received of the "SACRED MELODEON," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalbey, Jr. and Rev. J. B. Peat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist P. Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. * * * * The work is neatly excuted, with fair type & paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hymns, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS:

Per copy,	$00 30
Per dozen,	2 60
Fifty copies or more, per hundred,	18 00

 The above work can be obtained of Rev. A. H. Bassett, Putnam, Geo. Conclin, Cincinnati; or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

JUST RECEIVED
From the Book Concern Baltimore,
A New Supply of
HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH.
DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH:
ALSO A FEW COPIES OF
SNETHEN'S SERMONS,
For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the Office of the WESTERN RECORDER.

THOUGHTS OF AN ITINERANT;
OR BRIEF CHAPTERS ON THE CHURCH OF CHRIST—ITS POSITIVE INSTITUTIONS—ITS MEANS OF GRACE, AND SOCIAL OBLIGATIONS; DESIGNED AS A FAMILY COMPANION FOR METHODISTS. BY REV. LEVI R. REESE.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this Office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!
THIS WAY GENTLEMEN!!

THROUGH this medium we notify the public that we are now prepared to receive customers at our shop, Main Street, Putnam, one door north of Dr. Wm. Milhous's office, and opposite the Post Office, where will the various operations in connection with our business such as Shaving, Hair-dressing, Boot-blacking, &c., &c. will be attended to in the shortest, neatest, and most fashionable style, as we have secured the assistance of O. B. Blackiston, a skilful operator from the City of New York. If gentlemen will give us a call, we doubt not we will secure their patronage, as we are determined not to be outdone by any one either here or elsewhere.

G. HUNNECUTT & A. JACKSON.

Putnam, April 18, 1848.

PROSPECTUS OF THE
Fourth Volume of the American Pulpit.

THE AMERICAN PULPIT is a Monthly Magazine, published in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. It contains thirty-two pages in each number, and will be well supplied with that kind of Literature which is adapted to Ministers and Theological Students, such as Sermons, Sketches, Essays, Biographies, &c. &c.

The leading Sermon, will be of the highest order; and all the Sermons, we intend, shall bear the stamp of superiority. They will be sought, and obtained, so far as it is possible, from the most eminent Divines, on the American Continent. Arrangements are already made to accomplish this end; and no reasonable pains or expense will be spared, to make this department of the Pulpit superior to anything of the kind in existence.

The Sketches will be of the first class. We have accepted the proposals of an eminent minister in England to supply this department, partially—the Rev J BURNS, D. D. of London, author of "Pulpit Cyclopedia;" &c &c. By securing the correspondence of Dr Burns, the patrons of the Pulpit will enjoy a fine opportunity of comparing British and American talent in the same pages.

In the Miscellaneous Department will be found, Essays, Biographical Sketches, Poetry, and such et cetera as shall enhance the value of the work.

The Pulpit is edited by

REV J D BRIDGE,

who will spare no pains to render it not only a welcome visiter to the Minister's study, but a 'profitable' one. The work is evangelical in its character, and will avoid controversy, except with sin and the popular errors of the day.

Its patrons, hitherto, have been gathered from all of the orthodox denominations in the country, all of which the Publisher hopes to return. And we wish it distinctly understood, that Ministers in all the evangelical denominations are invited to become contributors to the pages of he Pulpit. We solicit from them, Sermons, Sketches of Sermons, or Criticisms, on any subject within the compass of Homiletics; and, that no one may feel embarrased in his desire to accept this invitation, we shall dispense with the "List of Contributors" which formerly appeared on our cover. We do this not out of any disrespect to any of the worthy names in that list, but that others may not be deterred from contributing, because not numbered in the distinguished catalogue.

By far the largest amount of matter contained in the Pulpit will be 'original;' but it will also be enriched by choice 'selections' from Books and periodicals.

Terms--One Dollar Per Annum, in Advance.

The Pulpit will be mailed regularly during the last part of the month preceding that of its publication, so that it may reach its destination, in ordinary cases, on the first of each month.

We solicit Agents for the work. We will allow them a reasonable and just compensation for their services, and we authorize all the ministers of every evangelical denomination, and all laymen who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and who desire the extension of his kingdom on earth, to co-operate with us in extending the circulation of this work.

All orders for the work and all remittances for the same should be addressed to

SAMUEL CHISM, Publisher,
Worcester, Mass., U. S.

DR. PEASE'S
VEGETABLE RENOVATING PILLS.

These Pills are composed of the best Medicinal plants in the country, and are so compounded as to possess the most valuable Cathartic, Sudo rific, Expectorant, and Tonic Properties, acting in perfect harmony with Nature's Laws, in expelling from the system all morbific matter, wherever found.—Being well adapted to the constitution, they cleanse the Stomach and Bowels, equalize the circulation, restore the perspiratory action of the skin, excite a healthy actien of the Liver. In short, they correct and regulate all the secretions, thereby restoring the true Physiological action of the whole animal economy.

Could the numerous flattering testimonials of the great success and perfect safety of this Medicine be here submitted for inspection, they would satisfy the incredulous and dispel the doubts of even the most skeptical. These Pills are not injured by age or climate.

For sale at the store of W. Munch & Co.
tn, auOuP: March 30, 1848.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford Collected from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

POET'S CORNER.

I AM WEARY.

I am weary of straying—oh fain would I rest
In that far distant land of the pure and the blest,
Where sin can no longer her blandishments spread,
And tears and temptations forever are fled.

I am weary of hoping—where hope is untrue,
As fair, but as fleeting, as morning's bright dew,
I long for that land whose blest promise alone,
Is changeless and sure as Eternity's throne.

I am weary of sighing—o'er sorrow's of earth,
O'er joy's glowing visions, that fade at their birth;
O'er the pangs of the loved, which we cannot assuage,
O'er the blightings of youth, and the weakness of age.

I am weary of loving—what passes away—
The sweetest, the dearest, alas may not stay!
I long for that land where those partings are o'er,
And death and the tomb can divide hearts no more.

I am weary, my Savior! of grieving thy love.
Oh! when shall I rest in thy presence above;
I am weary—but oh, let me never repine,
While thy word and thy love and thy promise are mine.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MR. EDITOR,—As some of our Choir Singers seem to think, if they spend their time and money to perfect themselves in the science of singing, they must of necessity, sing in the house of God, those tunes they have learned, whether the congregation are thereby excluded from participating in that part of worship, or not. I wish you to publish the article herewith furnished, from the pen of Lowel Mason, the great Professor, Composer, and Compiler of music in Boston.—Our book of Psalms and Hymns, and two books of music, are of his publishing, and now in use in the Presbyterian Congregation here. I hope the opinions he has given on the Congregational Singing, may find a response here amongst the admirers of his music books. A passage also from the celebrated Dr. Baird, you will please append.

A PRESBYTERIAN.

Putnam, Ohio, June 16, 1846.

EXTRACT FROM MR. MASON.

1. Congregational Singing.—As this depends upon the simple element of power—as we look for scarcely anything like expression when all the people sing—the ability merely to open the mouth and speak out the words is almost the only musical qualification required. It is not to be supposed that in congregational singing the four parts will be sustained with any thing like proper balance or proportion, but rather that the people generally, men, women and children, will sing the principal melody (Canto Fermo) of the tune. The keeping of the time, so difficult in choir singing, here becomes easy, since it consists in merely keeping together, and one cannot very easily get away from the current of sound produced by the union of a multitude of voices. It is not supposed that true congregational effect can be generally reached for some generations to come, since old habits have got to be broken up and new ones formed. To our children's children we can only look for that magnificent effect of a great congregational chorus. But it does not depend so much on musical cultivation, as upon the will, or an inclination to engage in the exercise according to one's best ability.

2. Tunes.—The tunes used for congregational purposes should be very simple, that all may be expected to join. Even "The Old Hundredth" can be but with difficulty reached by all voices when sung, as it usually is, in the key of A or G. The key of F (its old key,) seems to be as high as it can be sung by the multitude, When sung in this key, it may be regarded as one of the best specimens of congregational tunes. Canterbury, in the key of F, (as it appears in the Psaltery) is still better, requiring less compass of voice, and being quite within the reach of all. Congregational singing must always fail, and be really frightful, if difficult, or even comparatively easy 'choir tunes' are attempted. St. Martin's, for example, is too difficult for a congregational tune, because of the compass of voice required, and because three or more notes are often required to be sung to a single syllable of the poetry. Modern singing books contain but few tunes sufficiently simple and easy for successful congregational performance. In general, the rhythmic form of such tunes should be confined to equal length, or all except the first and last notes of each line should be of equal length. The rhythmic form of Boylston or Hebron, may perhaps be admitted, provided the tunes be not sung too fast, and especially if the "first two notes in each measure be made as long as the time will permit. But we must not expect an exact division of the time in congregational singers, but only that all may keep together.

EXTRACT FROM DR. BAIRD.

The Rev. Dr. Baird, speaking of a Protestant congregation at Lyons, France, says: "Almost all the congregation took part in singing the praises of God. The singing was good—good enough as to the manner. I should wish for nothing better. And what a contrast between the intelligent and hearty performance of a most important part of God's worship, and that which prevails so extensively in some churches in our large cities—which consists in the whole congregation listening to the choir—just as in a theatre or opera! This is all wrong. It is outrageously wicked, and will attract the frown of God."

Written for the Western Recorder.

Another word upon the Restrictive RULE.

MR. EDITOR,—It seems to be necessary for me to trouble you with a few words more upon this subject. What I have hitherto said, has been dictated by a sense of right, whether it has been "innate" or acquired. I have stated my opposition to this feature of our economy, and given some of the reasons why I am opposed to it.—And I am charged with 'possessing an inveterate hatred of that rule.' I acknowledge that I am opposed to the Rule; and, until stronger arguments for its existance be presented than have been issued from Meadow Farm and elsewhere of late; or have ever appeared to my mind, I pray that I may ever hate it, as we should hate every thing that is wrong. Knowing that it was possible for me to be in error, I asked for reason. Some have attempted to inform, but with the principal advocate of this Rule, the Rev. Br. Springer, the leading object appears to be, to deal in personal detraction, and by it, divert the attention of the people from the subject, and so prevent the investigation. Now, "if a son ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent? or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?" But we ask for the "bread" of knowlepge of this "father," and what does he give us?—A litle enraged, he goes to work to call his boys "out of the bushes," pulls off his coat, rolls up his sleeves, takes down his old scourge, and for six successive weeks, with Herculean strength, applies the unpitying lash to the impudent litle fellows, for the great crime of having so much "arrogance" as to presume to make any inquiry in relation to, or interfere in any way with, the regulations of the fathers. He will teach them sorely, never to doubt the propriety of any thing again, until they become men, and have "beards," for the beard, as well as great age, is a very important part of the intelect!—to receive whatever exists as the work of the fathers as infallible, especially, the work of the members of the Convention that formed the Constitution of the Methodist Protestant Church.—Though they may differ with the Fathers of other churches, never NEVER, with those of their own church!!—And then he thinks that it will be necessary for these "pretty litle priests" to be "blistered" for the simples, and proceeds to spread it on. But so far as I am concerned, Mr. Editor, the Doctor's lash, and blister-plasters, trouble me so litle, that I cannot condescend to make any reply. And if I should, these personalties are not what the people desire to read.—They have nothing to do with the subject in hand, and never serve to impart to the reader profitable information, or to excite pleasurable thought. They generally, too, spread abroad an impression of much more unpleasantness between the parties than really exists, and are consequently injurious.

But there is one thing to which I wish to make a brief reply. It is the idea that the Rule has worked well enough, and why not let it alone? Says Br. S. "first; the old restrictive system has worked admirably well, any man of practical good sense is generally disposed to let well-enough alone. Secondly; this new proposition (an itinerancy without the Restrictive Rule) has, in no instance been acted on. It is all theory." He calls attention to the Methodists in this country. "Have they prospered, with their restrictions? Ah! boys look at that question." Then perhaps we may look at it a litle. First; he states that they have been very successful, in calling sinners to repentance, and also "been the means of reforming every religious fellowship in the country." Admit all of this; but the Br. fails altogether to show that the restrictive feature in their itinerancy had any advantagious influence in the accomplishment of this work. Indeed, he does not attempt such a thing. He knows, too well, that the secret of their success was not in that feature of their economy, but in other things. The doctrines which they held & preached, were held by no other church in the country, except the Protestant Episcopal, whose practice of life, and manner of preaching, rendered them in their hands powerless, but which were, nevertheless, more popular than any other creed in the world. The zeal with which the Methodist preachers delivered their extemporaneous sermons, prompted by holy living, was perhaps the most powerful cause of success.—Their mode of worship and means of grace, were also powerful agents; also, their fervent, extemporaneous prayers, love-feasts, and class-meetings, camp-meetings, &c. In short, their success was the result of the energetic operations of a correct theology and vital piety. And I think that it would be much easier to show that the restrictive feature of the itinerancy, has been a serious embarrassment to the progress of Methodism, than it would be to show that it is the cause of their success. What it, in the abstract, has done for the Methodist Church, it would most surely have done for the Episcopalians, Presbyterians, or any other church. If it is good for one, it is good for all. And what can you conceive would have been the advantage to any of the churches of this country at the time of the rise of Methodism, to have adopted a rule prohibiting a longer continuance of any minister, under any circumstances, than two years, successively, in the same place?—And by what means have other churches, without this restrictive feature, or an itinerancy, spread over the country?

Secondly; it has been urged, that "this new proposition has in no instance been acted upon." And he states a litle above, that "if sober experience, or matters of fact are to settle the controversy, we have no fears as to the issue." Two years ago, he could have no ground for "fear as to the issue," when practical facts are compared, for as yet, there had never been given an opportunity for practical facts, to exist on the other side of the question, though they were abundantly evident in theory. Now a theoretical fact, never can be a practical fact, until it is tried. No wonder then, that he relies so much upon "matters of fact," practically, as to make this his principal argument in the whole series of his essays. There is however, at this time, a litle practical fact beginning to develop itself upon the other side of the question in the Philadelphia Conference. "The last one made."—Palemon tells us, "a Conference in its infancy, with no influence whatever in the Methodist Protestant Church, * * * whose original proprietor has himself abandoned her and gone west, and left her to the fostering care of sponsors and dry nurses." This Conference, it will be remembered, has, in effect, abolished the Restrictive Rule in her own territory. Without the aid of this rule then, and "the fostering care of sponsors and dry nurses," according to the showing of the minutes of the last session, this Conference had, within the last year, very nearly doubled the number of its membership!—and recent accounts show a continuation of unparalleled success. So, if success is to be the argument, "the facts and the figures" begin to speak out upon the other side of the question, and would doubtless speak more of an opportunity were given.

It may be urged, that a ministry, without the Restrictive Rule, has been sufficiently tried by other denominations, and that "if we were to abolish this rule, we should be just like them." So it has been tried. But "they have no itinerancy, as we should have without this rule. And they lack the other efficient instrumentalities of Methodism. So Br. S. makes a just acknowledgment, save in the one instance, that the "new proposition has not been tried." And if it has no practical facts to offer in its support, it has none to offer against it. And our old brother of Meadow Farm may cry out against "speculative reasoning," and yet, all of the reason that he has, or can offer, against this "new proposition," has been, and must be, "merely speculative," or "theoretical." So, in this matter, according to his own showing, after all of his outcry against "theory" and "speculation," he is in the same condition with "the boys."

Mutual rights, and the liberty of speech and of the press, is what Reformers have always contended for. But now see, S. complains in very bitter terms of "the boys," ranging in age, from twenty-five to thirty-five or forty, for the great "outrage" of intruding their views upon the attention of the church, and thinks that if they are so meddlesome, they will be most likely to "be off somewhere else." And it is intimated, by that luminous essayist, Homo, that if the boys 'are not satisfied, they had better leave, and go to another country' [church.] Now what could be more unexpected than this, from the fathers of the Methodist Prot. Church, whose watchword is, Mutual Rights, and the liberty of speech and of the press? Hope we shall not loose our old friends; but really, it would seem from this, that it would be more congenial with their feelings to belong to a church such as that in which they had their early training, where individual perogatives and dictation are acknowledged and cheerfully submitted to. But perhaps this is one of the 'wonders' of the "age we live in."

But it is urged by some, that admitting this rule to be wrong, it is not best to agitate the subject now—that it will not be likely to accomplish any thing, &c. But sir, every thing must have a beginning. It requires two-thirds of all of the Annual Conferences to call a Convention. Let any one of them be the first to pass resolutions expressive of their opinions, invite others to do likewise; and after a frendly consideration of the subject, the required majority may be found, if not between this and the next Gen. Conference, it may be at some period not far distant. But Br. S. gives us to understand that he becomes excited. But where is the necessity of it? can he not reason calmly and yet conclusively?—And will it not be far more edifying to himself and advantageous to his cause? Better keep cool Dr., though the case of the boys is desperate beyond curing, it will not help the matter to become so greatly agitated.

Yours, affectionately,

PRUDENTIA.

At Home, June 9, 1848.

☞ P. S.—Permit me to say to "A Looker on," that according to my understanding of the proposed "new arrangement," every thing thro'out the entire economy of the Methodist Protestant Church, may continue precisely as it is now, with the following words of the 7th Sec. of the 10 Art. of the Con. stricken out. "Or to authorize the Annual Conference to station their ministers and preachers longer than three years, successively, in the same circuit, and two years successively in the same station."

P.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Restrictive Rule—Rev. C. Springer.

NO. III.

MR. EDITOR:—The third number on the "Restrictive Rule," by the Rev. C. Springer, is before me, and demands a short reply. The introductory part of the article I will pass over in silence, for the present, and briefly notice the reasons assigned in support of the Rule, and against a change. Here, I must confess, the confidence of the author is much more easily perceived, than the conclusiveness of his arguments. For the former there may be a sufficient apology, and for the latter, a sufficient remedy.

The first position assumed is, that the "Rule is a great preserver of the harmony of the church." This position is supported by two considerations. The first is that "there are few ministers who get along even one year without difficulties among the people." The other is that "in this case the Restrictive Rule by separating the parties," is necessary to restore harmony. If the author uses the word difficulty, here, in the sense of disturbance, then I deny the assertion, that "there are few ministers who get along even one year without difficulties among the people." I am willing to appeal to facts in the case, and have no doubt that they will sustain me. There may be a few cases where ministers possess unhappy dispositions, and do not get along pleasantly with the people; but this is by no means general. Is it so, brethren in the ministry, that you are so destitute of the spirit of peace and love, that where ever you go you create strife and confusion? Is it so, brethren of the laity, that you are so unlike your Master, that whoever you receive, is so soon involved by you in trouble, and surrounded with disturbance? But even admitting that there are few ministers who get along even one year without difficulties among the people, and that in order to restore harmony, their separation is necessary; it must also be made appear that, without the "Restrictive Rule," their separation cannot be effected, before it can give the slightest support to the position. That the Rule is necessary to their separation, I also deny. What are the facts in the case? Why, plainly these:—Each annual conference has power at the close of every year, to remove any minister, within its bounds, from his charge, if it deem it necessary and proper. If, then, each annual conference possesses sufficient power to separate ministers and people, when such separation is deemed necessary, the existence of the "limitation rule," in that case, is useless, and its repeal can do no harm.

We are farther informed that to "do away this Rule" will "open a wide door for temptation."—And that "in order to increase their influence, one will be tempted to join the Odd Fellows, and another the Free Masons—do almost any thing to hook their anchor fast and firm." The allusion to the Orders named, is fully appreciated.—Neither the merits or demerits of these associations is now under consideration. The author's abstract right of private judgment, appears, however, to be involved. This, with or without a restrictive rule, is every man's inalienable right. To assert that ministers would do almost any thing to hook their anchor fast and firm, can only be done on the supposition that they are corrupt in heart, and "reckless in principle." Surely none of the true embassadors of Christ, would be willing to injure his cause, and endanger the salvation of souls, merely to enable them to enjoy a little ease, and remain safely moored in a 'snug little harbor.'" To all these uncharitable accusations I reply, in the language of the lamented Snethen, "To question a man's motives, is, indeed, infinitely easier than to answer his arguments."

In the next place we are told that to abolish the Restrictive Rule, "would give the death-blow to the itinerant system. The Restrictive Rule is the mainspring in this machinery, break it and the thing is worthless." Those who take the liberty of expressing a different opinion on this point, are represented as doing so either in consequence of "insincerity" or "ignorance." The circumstances under which their opinions have been expressed, attest their sincerity. Their arguments will be sufficient either to confirm or refute the charge, as to their ignorance. The proposition assumes that the "Restrictive Rule" is an essential part of the itinerant system, and consequently inseparable from it, and that its destruction would involve the destruction of the itinerancy. Now I conceive itinerancy to be one thing, and the restrictions of itinerancy quite another thing. Such, also, appears to have been the view entertained on this point by the framers of the Constitution of the Church, if we are to judge from their own productions. The seventh section of the tenth article of the Constitution, contains the law on the subject. It consists of two parts. The first is designed to perpetuate the itinerancy, and declares that "no rule shall be passed to abolish an efficient itinerant ministry."—The second is designed to control and direct the itineracy, and forbids the adoption of any rule "to authorize the annual conferences to station their ministers and preachers, longer than three years, successively, in the same circuit, and two years, successively, in the same station." Did not the framers of the law conceive that the perpetuation of a system, and its particular direction, were two different things? A system must exist before it can receive any particular direction. If to exist before it receive any particular direction, it must exist independently of that direction. If it exist, at any time, independently of that direction, such direction cannot be essential to existence, & consequently the removal of that direction would not destroy its existence.—But our profound author has made the discovery, that unless the itinerancy continue to receive its present particular direction, it will cease to be itinerancy. It may as easily be made appear that unless a man engage in some particular calling, he will cease to be a man. We do not desire the repeal of that part of the law that is designed to perpetuate the itinerancy. With this we are satisfied. We only ask the repeal of that part that is designed to control and direct the itinerancy. And are not the annual conferences, which are made acquainted with the circumstances in every case, by the representations of the ministers and delegates of the churches, better qualified to give the itinerancy a proper direction, than a changeless rule that knows no circumstances?

Again: It is asserted "that the tendency of the new mode is to Congregationalism;" and that this "is evident to every one that is capable of looking beneath the surface." This is nothing more than the repetition of the last proposition, in a different form. But look at it in this aspect. Among independent Congregationalists, there is no ecclesiastical association, that possesses authority to appoint ministers to their charges, or to remove them from their charges. Each congregation chooses its own Pastor, and retains him as long as it sees proper. "The voice of the church must be had in every act of discipline. And a church may dismiss its minister without the advice, or even contrary to the advice of a council." Were the "Restrictive Rule" abolished, would our circuits and stations be free to choose their own Pastors, like Congregationalists, and that, too, for an indefinite period? I answer emphatically, no. The annual conferences would still appoint each minister to his field of labor, and that for a definite period. The increase of power would be upon the part of the annual conferences—not upon the part of individual churches. The churches are free to ask the return of their ministers as long as they desire it; but the stationing authority is not free to appoint ministers, to the same fields of labor, as long as they may think proper. Repeal the Rule; increase the power of the annual conferences; and while the churches and ministers are free to ask, leave the stationing authority free to appoint.

In conclusion, it is asked, "Where has our cause been the most successful?—Such conferences as have the most efficient itinerancy have prospered the most abundantly; while those at the East and South, whose itinerancy is merely nominal, make but little headway, &c." That an efficient itinerancy is the most successful method of directing ministerial labor in Methodist churches, has been admitted; but that the "Restrictive Rule" gives efficiency to the itinerancy, is denied. Every annual conference in the church, is under the control of the same Rule; and if it gives efficiency to the itinerancy, each annual conference must be equally efficient.—Yet we are informed that this is not the case—that at the East and South their itinerancy is "merely nominal"—clearly showing that the efficiency of the itinerancy depends on something else. It is presumed that local causes exert quite an influence on the success of our ministry, in various sections of the country.

Mr. Editor, I must apologize for the length of this communication. I will try and be more concise in future.

Very Respectfully,

JOHN SCOTT.

Fairview, Va., June, 1848.

Miscellaneous.

Tall Oaks from little Acorns grow.

About eighty years ago there lived in England a man whose name was George Guelph, better known in history as George the Third, King of Great Britain. He was a tolerable kind of a man in point of abilities—not, in fact, a bad meaning person. He would have made a better farmer, grocer or tradesman than a King.

But he was born in the "divine rights of Kings." He was a decendant of William, the conquerer of England. William the first was a brave man.—He crossed the channel with his retainers, and on the field of Hastings defeated the Saxons, killed Harold, their king, and took possession of England.

There is a little town called Kew, in Surry, England, and George the Third, after he had been but a few years on the throne, bethought he would like to build a palace in this town of Kew. Parliament had been liberal to him in salary, and he could hardly ask an aditional appropriation for the purpose of building a palace. He suggested the thing to his Prime Minister, who told him the matter might be done by a stamp tax, and a duty laid on tea of two pence per pound in his colonies of America. These duties the toady thought would more than be enough to build a hundred palaces. The king recommended the matter to Parliament, and Parliament passed a law to that effect. The colonies refused to be thus taxed unless they were allowed to send members to the body that passed the law, for the purpose of defending themselves.

Revolution followed—seven years of bloody war was the consequence; but the colonies came out free. In their efforts they were aided by France. This war cost the English government some one hundred and fifty millions pounds sterling, or six hundred millions of dollars—a pretty good price for the palace of George the Third at Kew.

When the French officers returned to their native land, they began to feel a love of republicanism themselves, and they planted the seed in their native land. A few years after, a revolution broke out in France. They all took part in it; but through the wildness of the people the republic which they had formed ended in the military—yet, so far as victories went, glorious—despotism of Napoleon. To drive him from the throne cost England about six hundred pounds sterling. This was rather dear for the palace of Kew.

Within a few brief weeks a monarch of one of the most powerful nations of Europe has been driven from his throne like a vagabond. Half the world is in agitation, and republics are the general cry of the people. But for the palace at Kew, our own country might this day have been a part of the British Empire, France a monarchy still, and England out of debt, comparatively speaking. Kings, as the clown says, are "getting to be tow company." Halleck wrote truly and prophetically some years ago—

"The monarch fears a printer's frown—
A brickbat's range;
Give me in preference to the crown,
Five shillings change."

N. Y. Times.

THE THREE SIEVES.

"But perhaps we ought to think of the three sieves, before we allow ourselves to speak of others," observed the Bishop.

"And what is that story?" asked Mr. Arden."

"It is not a story," he replied, "but a maxim, which all will do well to attend to when they speak of those who are absent. The maxim is this, that before we allow ourselves to find fault with any one behind his back, we should ask ourselves three questions. The first, 'Is it true?' The second, 'Is it kind?' The third, 'Is it necessary?'"

"Admirable!" said Mr. Arden, "a maxim I hope never to forget."

"It will make you, however, Frank," said Mrs. Rushton, "more silent than ever, and add to your long dark moods of taciturnity."

"All the better, dear Caroline; but I fear it will not stop my speaking as sharply as you say I naturally do, to a person's face."

"But would there be any conversation," said Lady Herondale, "if this maxim were rigidly observed?"

"We all talk too much," replied the Bishop, "and much that we say is exceedingly unprofitable often not strictly true, very often unkind, and still more often unnecessary. We are all apt to forget that we shall have, at the great day, to give an account of every idle word that we have spoken."

"And the tongue," said Lady Mary, is we know, 'a member that no man can tame, it is a world of iniquity.'"

"But even that world of iniquity can be controlled, and made an instrument of righteousness" observed the Bishop, "for with God all things are possible. David speaks of it as the best member he had; 'Wake up my glory (that is my tongue.) I will sing and give praise with the best member that I have.'"

"I should have thought," said Mr. Arden, turning to Lady Mary, "that you, at least, had this maxim of the Bishop's ever uppermost in your mind, for no one talks so little as your ladyship, and I cannot remember to have heard you say an unkind word of any one; while I am always struck with your strict observance of truth, even in the most trifling statements."

"So you flatter as adroitly as any one," said Mrs. Rushton, a slight tone of bitterness mingling with her courtly manners.

"Truth, again, dear Caroline," replied Mr. Arden, with a sharp bright glance at his sister; "as for this excellent woman, I rather glorify God on her behalf, and the grace of God which she has sought and He has given her. I do not praise her, but I rejoice to see what watchfulness and prayer can accomplish, and what grace has done."—Lady Mary.

Advertisements.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and pure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed, and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bots superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

SundaySchool Books--New Supply.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF BOOKS suitable for Sunday School Libraries, comprising recent publication of the American Sunday School Union, together with the two cent Hymn Book and the

Child's Cabinet Library,

containing 75 books bound in 50 volumes 32 mo. 32 pp. with morocco backs, lettered and numbered, only $2,50 for the Library, being at the rate of 5 cents per volume

Also, a good variety of books, in plain and elegant binding, selected with special reference to the coming

HOLYDAYS.

For sale at the Sunday School Depository.

J. METCALF, AGENT.

Putnam, Dec. 12, 1847.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT. Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred. Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL
DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c. &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gilt Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages, the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents, and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 39. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, JUNE 29, 1848. WHOLE NO. 455

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,
AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO
OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN McD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

From the Saturday Courier.

OH, DO NOT LET THE HEART GROW COLD.

BY MISS SOPHIA WEBSTER.

Oh, do not let the heart grow cold
Amid the toil of life,
But rouse thee and with spirit bold
Do battle 'mid its strife.

Meet all its dangers and its foes,
With stalwart arm and true;
Nor let its trials nor its woes,
Bring dark despair to you.

What though the sunshine of thy way
Be clouded for awhile?—
The roses from thy path decay,
And friends forget to smile?

We bless the gathering clouds that sail
Along the summer skies;—
The verdure of the earth would fail
Did stormy clouds not rise.

And so the verdure of the heart
Would grow diseased and die;
Kind thoughts would wither and depart
Beneath a cloudless sky.

We need the gentle dew of tears,
The deeper shower of grief;
And if the tempest-storm appears
Pray that its hour be brief.

But do not murmur when the day
Of life is overcast;
The sun will shed a purer ray
When the dark hour is past.

Materials for Thought.

[Furnished by our Philadelphia Correspondent.]

The Politics of Christianity.

NO. IX.

A STRONG GOVERNMENT.

"We must not make a scare-crow of the law,
Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch, and not their terror."

Christianity is always in earnest. The truth she unfolds, whether direct or incidental, whether trivial or important, is gravely and sincerely uttered, and may always be taken for a reality, not a sham. The bright-eyed and clear-complexioned maiden speaks nothing in a double sense — means nothing equivocal — sanctions nothing which merely

"Keeps the word of promise to the ear,
And breaks it to the hope."

Assuredly, to a mind much conversant with the ways of men—the delusive pretences of most—the magniloquent boastings, ending in the silliest performances, of not a few—and the insincerities of custom, place, manner, speech, or countenance—oh, it is reviving, to turn away, at times, from these, and to resign one's spirit to all the pure influences which are exhaled around it by the simplicity of Nature! Thoroughly can we sympathise with the exiled Duke who, when custom had sweetened his exile in the forest of Arden, could welcome

—"the icy pang,
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind;
Which when it bites and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say—
This is no flattering: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am."

Who has ever walked forth in early dawn—who has ever rested him, at midday, in shady haunts of retirement—or has stood, when eve is radiant with blushes, upon the beach of the blue and transparent ocean—without being persuaded and exhilirated by a sense of the unmistakeable sincerity which environs his whole being? All is gentle and noiseless—but every thing does what it promised to do, and, for the most part, something more. The glittering dew-drop trembling and sparkling within the bell of some wayside flower—the scarce visible violet scenting the neighborhood with its sweet perfume—the babbling brook, carrying refreshment with it in all its gamesome doublings and windings, and fringing itself on either hand with deeper verdure—the dark glen, in which, when wandering alone, one breathes thick, oppressed with the feeling of awful solitude, and starts with fluttering pulse at the least appearance of life—the sea, the glorious sea, basking as if asleep under the full moon, or heaving or bellowing defiance to the driving clouds overhead, or frisking among fragments of rock, in all kinds of unexpected swells, like a kitten racing after its own tail—all tell us what they mean—speak without stammering or equivocation, the message they were charged to deliver—boast of nothing—mystify nothing, but do their own work, and, in doing it, have a smile of gladness for all who choose to watch their performance of it.

And this chrystal sincerity of Nature, this universal ascendancy of the real of the merely nominal, in all the visible and material works of God, is but, as it were, a grosser adumbration of what is, perhaps, more delicately, but with equal decision, exhibited in Revelation. The difference between one and the other is but a difference of manifestation. The qualities displayed are the same—bodied forth in one case by matter, and in the other by mind. Perhaps nothing is more characteristic of Christianity than the gentleness, and, if we may be permitted the expression, the coyness, of its power. See how unobtrusively, how like a "sister of mercy," it has gone among the nations, breathing its divine message of love, in glances, and smiles, and gestures of pity, rather than in words—or when it speaks, speaking in whispers of suggestion rather than in tones of authority—and, whereas other systems have professed to discover and to reveal the Unseen Spirit in the "wind," the "earthquake," and the "fire," mark how Christianity delights exclusively in the "still small voice!" But yet the hidden power, the energy—so much only of which has been shown as may serve to impress us with the larger proportion which it has reserved—has done its promised work, if not in the vulgar form in which humanity expected it would be done, in a much more satisfactory and abiding shape. The history of revealed truth, from the utterance of the first words of promise to the present moment, has been one continuous testimony against inefficiency and sham, wherever they might appear; and within the circle of that light which emanates from the Gospel nothing hollow, delusive, or short of avowed purposes, can hope to stand with favor.

With such thoughts as these borne in upon us by all outward objects, physical or spiritual, which acknowledge God as their author, and from that atmosphere of sentiment which such reflections beget, we turn to contemplate the structure of civil government. What, if the form of it is to be in unison with the spirit of Christianity,—what do we expect to find it?—Unquestionably a Sincerity. This characteristic it must have, if no other. Not only shall we, in the light of divine revelation, regard with abhorrence every "organised hypocricy"—but we shall look for truth—fullness and power in the means in which the organization consists, as well as in the end it seeks to accomplish. No form of government can be in keeping with the discoveries of the Bible, which is only, for the most part, form. The machinery must be strong enough for the work assigned to it—and should be strong enough to do that work quietly, without a stunning and everlasting clatter. There is sometimes a bustle in government which is mistaken for vigor—a silence which is construed into weakness. And yet, a really strong government is ordinarily a quiet one,—doing by a word or hint what a feebler organization must have done by a convulsion.

The object of civil government, as we have said, is two-fold—primitive and protective—its structure must be such, as will admit of, and further, the fulfilment of this double end. There may be a form of free institutions, where administration of law, and conservation of social order are utterly unknown—and if the defect, the executive imbecility, the magisterial weakness, can be fairly traced to the form, then, whatever other recommendations such a government may possess, it cannot be said to have a structure approved by Christianity. That State is little better than a sham, the execution of which is obliged to confess—

"Now as fond fathers
Having bound up the threatening twigs of birch
Only to stick it to their children's sight,
For terror, not to use; in time, the rod
Becomes more mocked than feared; sour decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead;
And liberty plucks justice by the nose;
The baby beats the nurse, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum."

We need not cite historical illustrations, for our space will hardly admit of it—much less shall we adduce modern instances, which might appear invidious. But we look upon all those embodiments of the democratic principles, in which, jealously for the popular power, cripples the execution of law, as essentially unsound, insincere, and anti-Christian. The ordinance of civil government was never intended to be other than a grave reality—the "power" was never consecrated to "bear the sword in vain." There are few sights more pitiable, as there are few over which Christianity more unfeignedly, and we may add more indignantly grieves, than that of civil government cited, at every step it takes in the independent discharge of its duty, before its own subjects, to be reminded that it is servant, not master, and that its administration of law must be in the spirit of a slave, rather than that of a judge. From such a condition of things, we pray evermore to be delivered.

It is not the less true, however, although many are anxious to overlook the fact, that the chief danger from which civil government has to apprehend the frustration of its object, springs, not from the people, but from elevated and favored classes. It is not so much in the executive, as in the legislative, that we are likely to find forms overlaying and destroying realities. A State should be strong, not merely against insubordinate subjects, who seldom complain without reason, but also against encroaching and insidious factions, whose influences result in any thing rather than "praise to those who do well." A machinery deliberately put together, with a view to the political ascendancy of any one order—an external form which is meant to give expression to the will of one class as paramount to that of all others—a structure which practically excludes the influence of the poor, and, which consequently, leaves them unprotected from the oppressive habits and exactions of the rich—legislation which is sure to side with property against labor—magistracy, which must needs be partial to the wealthy—institutions and forms of rule which help the powerful to crush the weak, instead of sheilding the weak from the aggressions of the powerful—these are far more common, and are little less to be dreaded, than those overbearing popular interferences of which we just now spoke. Compelled to succumb to such influences, civil government is merely a pretence—professes to do what it has not power to accomplish—exhibits on its brow a purpose which either its heart repudiates or its hands refuse to ratify. To be driven from its legitimate object, whether by the factions of the few, or the threats of the many, is bad enough—but to make provision in its constitutional frame-work for being so over-ruled is a disgrace to any government, and brands it as hostile in its very form to the first principles of Christianity.

Ministerial.

Anecdote, by Dr. Merle D'Aubigne.

Suffer me to relate an espisode from one of my tours in Switzerland.

In 1846, after the Evangelical Alliance had closed its sittings in London, I left the Baths of Allisbrum, and went into the Grisons to see some friends. On the steamboat of the Lake of Zurich, I found myself in the midst of strangers, but I soon noticed two persons whom I took to be Quakers. I believed there would be doubtless between them and me some points of friendly religion. I addressed them and soon found in them two Christians—sincere, enlighted, lively. We travelled together two or three days, and we enjoyed all that time true Christian union. I remember well the moment of parting. We were on the mountain not far from the beautiful convent of Pfeffers. To the right the path descended to the Grisons and the via Mala. To the left, a road opened towards the Tyrol. My course was along the first, my friends were to take the other. We were in the deep gully of a ravine. A mountain stream falling behind us crossed our road, and then made a second fall immediately below. Some boulders of rocks rolled together without order, formed a sort of bridge. We were seated on one of these stones; one of these friends who had been an Advocate, and was now a Minister in his community; grasped my hand at the moment when we were about to part, and without saying a word, knelt down on one of the fragments of rock, I knelt down beside him. After some moments of profound silence, during which no sound was heard but the calm and majestic fall of the waters, my friend began to pour forth his soul unto God. He prayed for me as if he had been one of my oldest friends or my own brother. I had unfolded to him some of the wounds of my own heart, he asked the Lord to heal them. I have seldom enjoyed an hour of such entire Christian union. We rose and parted. I passed rapidly down the mountain on the side of Creugnon, following the guide who carried my bag.

N. B. The two friends were (I believe) John Hodgkin and Robert Foster, of London.

T. F.

[Lon. Evan. Chris.

Gems for Ministers.

The sacred ministry is not a state of idleness or of pleasure, but a holy warfare, in which there are always toils and fatigues to be endured.—Whoever is not resolved courageously to maintain the interests of Christ, and to labor continually to enlarge his kingdom, is not fit for his warfare.—Quesnel.

You are shepherds, and must know all your sheep, and what is their disease, and mark their strayings, and help to cure them, and fetch them home.—Baxter.

Let us speak to our people as for their lives.—Baxter.

"Do write to me when you have a moment, and stir me up. You know a word to a minister is worth three or four thousand souls sometimes. * * * * Go on, dear brother; but an inch of time remains, and then eternal ages roll on forever—but an inch on which we can stand and preach the way of salvation to a perishing world."—McCheyne.

"Remember, Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone. Looking at our own shining face is the blaze of spiritual life and of the ministry. Oh, for the closest communion with God, till soul and body—head, face, and heart, shine with divine brilliancy; but oh, for a holy ignorance of our shining!"—McCheyne.

Western Sketches.

Oh! Oh!!

The State of Ohio grows! grows! The progress is wonderful—nothing like it can be found where slavery has foothold.

Nor does a full population stop her growth. From 1830 to 1840, she grew as fast as from 1820 to 1830. The old rule was set aside.—There was no diminution as population increased. Thus is the ratio set down:

From 1820 to 1830,	60 per cent.
" 1830 to 1840,	62 " "

But let us look a little further. The growth of cities depends on the increase of population around them. Now look at the results, as regards the cities of Ohio, as given by competent authority:

	1840.	1848.
Cincinnati and Suburbs,	50,000	90.000
Cleveland,	6,000	13,000
Columbus,	5,000	12,000
Dayton,	6,000	13,000
Pomeroy,	300	2,000
Total	68,300	130,000

Ninety per cent increase in these five cities in eight years!

This is all in sight of Kentucky. Does she not see it? Does she not know the cause of it? And will she consent, for the support of slavery, to sacrifice all hope of similar vitality, and as sure a growth?

Let us hope not.—Louisville Examiner.

Youth's Department.

Memoranda for Boys.

Seven classes of company to be avoided.

1. Those who ridicule their parents or disobey their commands.
2. Those who profane the Sabbath or scoff at religion.
3. Those who use profance and filthy language.
4. Those who are unfaithful, play truant and waste their time in idleness.
5. Those who are of a quarrelsome temper, and are apt to get into a difficulty with others.
6. Those who are addicted to lying and stealing.
7. Those who are of cruel disposition: who take pleasure in torturing and maiming animals and insects, and robbing birds of their young.

What every Child ought to be.

A	Amiable.	O	Obedient.
B	Benevolent.	P	Peaceable.
C	Chaste.	Q	Quiet.
D	Diligent.	R	Reverent.
E	Exact.	S	Sincere.
F	Forgiving.	T	Trustworthy;
G	Gentle.	U	Useful.
H	Holy.	V	Virtuous.
I	Industrious.	W	Wise.
J	Just	X	Xemplary.
K	Kind.	Y	Yielding to good counsel.
L	Lovely.	Z	Zealous in a good cause.
M	Meek.
N	Neat.

Miscellaneous.

The Pyramids of Egypt.

The principal pyramids are situated about 3 hours' sail up the Nile, near the place where the ancient Memphis stood. The four most remarkable fabrics of this kind are nearly on the diagonal line, and about four hundred paces from each other—the four faces exactly correspond to the four cardinal points. The two most northern are the largest, and their perpendicular height has been calculated at 500 feet. The bottom of the first is exactly 693 feet each way (that is square) and therefore covers more than eleven acres of land. The inclined plane is equal to the base, and the angles and the base form an equilateral triangle. The number of steps have been variously computed; but they are between 207 and 212; these steps, or layers, are from two and a half to four feet high, and are broad in proportion to their height. The other two pyramids are much less in magnitude, but they have some peculiarities deserving notice. It appears that the rock at the foot of the mountain has been smoothed with a chisel, and that this rocky plain is about eighty feet perpendicular above the level of the ground overflowed by the Nile. Yet in this space we find a number of shells and petrified oysters among the sands which cover the rocks, and, in this quarter, too, are picked up the beautiful flint stones which, on account of the singularity of their colors, are more esteemed than agate for snuff boxes and the handles of knives.

From Godey's Lady's Book.

A RACE FOR LIFE.

Prairie fires always run before the wind, with an advanced tongue or fork in two receding flanks, and in a high wind so rapidly do the dancing, curling, careering flames leap from point to point of the dry grass, that it is sometimes difficult for the swiftest horseman to escape. The sight, especially in the night, is always beautiful, and at times grand beyond description. But after a while we become familiarized to it, and look upon it without emotion, as all of us learn to do upon the glorious sun, the most splendid object in nature.

At the time I refer to, I had been two or three days' drive from the town of C———, with my horse and buggy, and was on my return home. All day I had noticed signs indicating fire on the prairie—masses of smoke in the distance, lying like white clouds upon the horizon, and a hazy atmosphere—but these gave me no trouble so long as they were far away; and, busy with my own thoughts, for hours I would pay no attention to them whatever. At length, after some period of abstraction, I observed with some apprehension that the conflagration was drawing nearer, and had actually worked around in my rear, until it had crossed the path by which I had travelled; that all behind me was fast becoming a smoking sea of fire, and for the first time the thought of danger, that I might be overtaken or possibly surrounded, occurred to me.

My horse was a powerful one, but not very fleet, nor yet fresh; but without the loss of a moment I applied the whip, and quitting my direct route bore to the left, because that placed me more squarely before my enemy.

Soon the tongue of fire, the advance guard of my foe, became distinctly visible on my right, at about two miles distance, as near as I could judge, stretching on with a speed that was really frightful. I knew the struggle was to be with that, and pushing my horse to the utmost, kept my eye fixed upon it, like the wily racer, intent on measuring the power of his antagonist before the final effort. For a few minutes the result was in doubt, but not long. Sinews of flesh were no match for the wings of the winds which bore on that fleet and terrific column of fire, and I became satisfied that it was outstripping me, and almost with a feeling of indifference; for I thought for a moment that my last hope was gone, and was bracing my heart and nerves for the final event of life.

It was now twilight, and as the day departed, and the shadows of night fell around, the cordon of fire seemed to magnify its splendors and its terrors, and like a vast serpent, to extend itself behind and on both sides, and to be closing up its folds to encircle me.

I was no stranger on that part of the prairie; its general localities, though one portion is very much like another, were familiar to me; and in recalling them to mind, I recollected a little rugged mound or hill, some twenty or thirty feet in height, and was satisfied that I was no great distance from it. With my hopes revived a little, I taxed my sight to the utmost on every swell of ground that I passed, and at length detected the faint outline of the eminence in advance.—But the fire was making for it too, and the subtle leaping tongue on my right, now quite ahead of me, already seemed almost between us, and prepared with a single leap to cross my path and secure its victim. Still, with my almost exhausted horse, I pressed on, with an energy and despair so mighty as almost of themselves to wreck the powers of life. I have not recovered from the effects of that mental struggle to this day—but, as you have already no doubt concluded, the mound saved me. In the race for life, I was obliged, as it were, to place myself, side by side, with that giant and awful sword of flame, and for the last half mile, the contest was doubtful, hopeless, dreadful. But God nerved my horse with an unnatural strength, as it seemed to me, and guarded his footsteps so that every effort told; and at last I dashed on the bare side of the mound, where there was no fit substance for the devouring element to follow, and was safe.

The flames swept by with a dull heavy roar, and a hot, sweltering, suffocating breath, burning with an intensity and grandeur which realized to the imagination my ideas of the final catastrophe of nature, encircled and passed the little eminence on which I stood, and stretched off in two long lines as far as the eye could reach. I fell upon my knees; and since that terrible night, I trust I have been a more thoughtful and thankful man.

From the Louisville, (Ky.) Examiner.

Heroic, if Tragic! The Question.

May 19. A scene occurred at Covington, which shocked the community, and made the blood of thousands run cold.

A man named Rush, had purchased up the Licking, a 'negro fellow, wife, and child.' The slaves objected. Both the negro and his wife protested against being separated, or sent South. But the sale was made; they were brought to Covington, and, for safe-keeping, lodged in jail, until they could be shipped for Louisana.

While in jail, the negro man resolved, first, that he would not go South. His wife said, "rather than do that, and be separated, I wish you to cut my throat." Both then resolved upon self-destruction. But the child! Could they consent to imbrue their hands in its blood?—"Aye," was the mother's response—"rather than it should go South, and be separated from us, let it be done." Deliberately did that mother do the deed—deliberately offer her throat to be cut by her husband, who made the fatal gash, and as deliberately did he attempt to take his own life.

They are all dead. These three slaves, father, wife, and child, nameless, unknown, lie under the cold earth, and the event is with God.—We cannot justify any human being in taking his own life, or the lives of others. The bare idea of a father coolly killing his child, wife, and then himself, shocks us. Yet on hearing of this tragic scene at Covington, and the cause of it, we could not but feel and say, "there was a wild heroism in the act, which robs it of its horror." If such a deed had occurred in old Rome, and in the best days of Roman manhood, the doers of it would have been heralded forth, and handed down to us, in song, story, and historic description, as among their greatest, loftiest characters. Christianity teaches us other views, and a higher duty. But even Christianity while condemning the act bids us sorrow over, and sympathise with, the dead, who for love of home, who rather than be torn from each other, died thus by their own hands.

How stirringly does this fatal act appeal to every man, woman, and child in Kentucky to protest against the separation of families.

There be those who say, "slaves care very little about such separation." We know better, all of us. We know that their feelings are kind, their attachments strong, their love of kindred and home abiding. True, these feelings and attachments, and this love, are weakened, sometimes deadened, because marriages are not legalized, and because they dare not fix them. But despite of this, there is not a plantation not a neighborhood, not a county, in which slaves do not show the highest, holiest affection, when torn from their families, or driven away from the old homestead. Have you, reader, attended an administrator's sale, when old settled families were put up for sale, and not heard the wail, and shriek of women, or witnessed the grief oppressing and crushing stout men? Have you never been at the court house, when under legal action, the father was about to be borne away forever from wife and children, and seen the unutterable anguish which overwhelmed them? They do love each other. They love kind masters. And no Southern man at all conversant with the negro's nature, or familiar with his habits, will pretend to deny the fact. What, then, can we say in defence of a law which allows family ties to be broken at any moment? What plea put in, what justification offer for a code which annihilates at one blow the marriage rite, and all the sacredness of home? What say, when death is deliberately sought by slave husband, and slave wife, rather than submit to separation, or endure the pangs which such separation would inflict?

Now the reason of the case demands of us, as men and christians, the instant cessation of any and all such barbarity.

Narrative.

From the Methodist Protestant.

THE ANSWERED PRAYER.

A few evenings since we found our way to the basement of one of the sister evangelical churches in this city, where a protracted meeting was in progress. A stranger was to preach. At the appointed hour he arose, and delivered an impressive address on the efficacy of prayer. The chief point intended to be illustrated was this, that we are not to infer that God does not hear prayer, because our prayers may not always be answered at the time, and in the manner which we may prescribe.

After the close of the sermon, a tall and somewhat elderly gentleman walked from the congregation to the pulpit, and desired the attention of the audience. He said he had been forcibly reminded during the delivery of the sermon, of a real occurrence which came under his own observation, and which strikingly illustrated the doctrine which the preacher had taught. We listened and were instructed; and for the excellence of the lesson, have determined to narrate as well as we may be able, the substance of the incidents he so feelingly mentioned.

In the year 18—, said the speaker, I had occasion to visit the town of my nativity. Absence had not obliterated the memory of departed joys, and though changes had passed over all things around me, it was pleasant, once more, to look upon the scenes of my childhood. Many were the enquiries prepounded in relation to the past. After one and another of my old friends were these enquiries made. Some were dead. Some were far absent. Among others, I enquired with some interest after my old school-fellow, Samuel Willis.

'He is a desperate man,' said the lady to whom I addressed myself—"a swearer—a gambler—a drunkard—and is now some where far in the South."

I was astonished. I knew that his parents were strictly religious people, and that Samuel had not needed for parental advice. I expressed my suprise, when my friend rejoined—

'That is not all, sir. His old mother, once so pious, has become quite skeptical about religion. She says she has prayed for Samuel until she is quite satisfied that God does not hear her prayer. The more she has prayed, the more wicked has her rebellious son become. Once she had felt assured that her prayers would be answered, & that her son would be converted; but now her faith has been too strongly tested. She thinks God has disappointed her, and despite the promise to the contrary, that her trust hath been confounded.

'What a pity she should so soon doubt God's goodness.'

'Nor is that all, sir.' continued she. 'His two younger brothers, impressed with what the mother openly declares, are quite disposed to infidelity. The whole family seem to be on the verge of spiritual ruin.'

My heart was sad with the recital. It cast a gloom over my spirits, which for days could not be penetrated. I felt that "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform;" yet I was assured that in his infinite wisdom all would yet be made plain.

A few years after the above interview, I was one day seated in my study, when my attention was arrested by a tap at the door. I walked to the entry and opened it. A stranger stood before me.

'How do you do, my old friend,' said the stranger—a tall, graceful, and elegant looking man.

'I do not know you, my dear sir,' said I. 'Possibly we have met before, but I cannot recall your appearance.'

"Look at me attentively,' said the stranger.

I did look, but not the slightest trace of recognition was the result. He perceived my embarrassment.

'I am your old school-fellow, Sam Willis,' said he.

We embraced. For some moments not a word was spoken by either of us. At length, recovering from my surprise and emotion, I invited my old friend into my study.

'My dear sir,' said I, 'I hope there was some mistake, but I had heard a bad account of you.—Your personal appearance does not credit it, but I had heard that you were a gambler & a spendthrift.'

'I was worse,' said he.

'Then you are so no longer, I trust.'

'No, thanks be to the Almighty, he gave me to see the error of my way. I had gone very near to the pit of Hell. But his mercy was greater than my sin. I am no longer, I hope, 'numbered among transgressors;" but I am an unworthy, though sincere, elder in the Presbyterian church at———.'

Our interview was delightful. I found my old friend to be a man of fine accomplishments, sterling intelligence and devoted piety. Before we parted I desired him to give me some account of the wonderful change that had been wrought in him.

'I was,' said he, 'indeed a very wicked man. I had gone far in the ways iniquity. Having married a Roman Catholic lady. I became acquainted with the priest, her confessor; and many a time have I played cards and drunk wine with him until midnight, after his religious visitations to my lady. This gave me additional contempt for religion. I became an open infidel. I despised what I believed to be arrant hypocrisy, or ignorant delusion in all professions of a religious character. It so happened, however, that the Rev. Mr. B———, a distinguished revivalist of the Presbyterian Church, passed through the place where I lived. He held a protracted meeting during his stay. It was said that he was powerfully eloquent: and I determined to go to hear him, for the sake of his reputed oratory. I went and listened. His voice was charming, his gesticulation scrupulously correct; but I soon lost sight of the speaker, and forgot his oratory, in the alarm with which he filled me. He spoke as one having authority. He seemed to feel his mission to be divine. As he presented the terrors of Sinai, and dwelt upon the inflexible justice of Jehovah, I saw my sins with fearful distinctness, and I trembled before the majesty of the Law. Presently he held up Jesus as the Great Sacrifice. Oh, how wretchedly I was oppressed with my shameful ingratitude. I remembered my home. The instructions of my early life, the advice of my father, the prayers of my mother, the pleadings of God's ministry—all contributed to my affliction. In short, 'God was dealing with me. I became a penitent. I sought mercy, and God, for Christ's sake, did not reject the prodigal.'

It was some time after the above interview, that I again visited the place where the parents of Samuel Willis resided. I fell in once more, with my female friend, of whom I had learned the sad course of life which he had led. After some conversation I mentioned his case, and stated that I had seen him.

'Yes,' said she, 'he has become quite pious.'

'And his mother—what of her?' I enquired.

'Oh,' said she, 'she has been dead for some months. Her history is full of warning and encouragement. She continued to be skeptical in reference to the efficacy of prayer, until she was taken sick. Many of the sisters in the church called upon her, and exhorted her to prayer, but she declared it to be useless. She had once believed, she said, in its power; but her own case proved that she had been deluded. Every effort was used to awaken her to a sense of its necessity, but all seemed in vain. At length she was requested to allow a few of her female friends to hold a prayer meeting in her chamber. With reluctance she consented. About half a dozen Christian women, full of faith, assembled; and God, true to his promise, met with them. The Spirit was indeed there; and its operation touched the heart of the mother. She had been elevated in the bed, and seemed at first insensible to any impression. But as the prayer meeting progressed, an overpowering sense of the presence of God came upon the little band. Tears and strong entreaties were not disregarded by the Being who hears and answers prayer. The Spirit of God was doing its office in the heart of the backsliden mother, and presently tears indicated that even in her hardness of heart, Jesus had touched her. It was a time "long to be remembered."

Now she began to pray—to pray for forgiveness. Oh! how bitterly she reproached herself for her inconstancy and infidelity. Oh, how sincerely did she lift her eyes and her hands & her voice before her Maker and plead with him for acceptance. And the Lord heard and answered her! Who shall describe the thrilling emotions that filled every heart when the enfeebled and afflicted one cried out in transport, "Oh, Lord I will praise thee, for though thou wast angry with me, thine anger is turned away, and now thou comfortest me." Verily, it was good to be there.

Nor was the son forgotten. Once more was that little room made vocal with the voice of the mother pleading with God for her rebellous son. All present joined in her supplication, and responded, Amen. At that moment—far, far away, the heart of a strong man was trembling under the preaching of Christ crucified!

It was but a few days afterwards that a letter reached the village, addressed to this mother. It was from a minister in the south. Brief was it, but to the purpose. It brought to her the glorious tidings that her "son once dead, was alive again—once lost, was found."

Madam—Allow me to break to you "glad tidings of great joy." Your son, Samuel, for whom you have prayed many years to God, has "become partaker with us of like precious faith.' I rejoice to inform you of his hopeful conversion. On last evening he presented himself at the anxious bench, and God was pleased to grant him the forgiveness of his sins.

Yours, in Christ,

The effect of this news arrested the attention of the skeptical brothers. They now felt that there was something in prayer. That prayer was heard and answered. They renounced infidelity; they became Christians; they are this day pious and influential members of the church.

What a lesson does this narrative teach to parents—to children—to all! It is unquestionably the Christian's privilege to expect immediate answers to his prayers; but if our heavenly Father see that it is better for us that the answer should be delayed, let us not falter, but lean upon him with unwavering confidence.

We might moralize an hour upon this point, but the moral will be seen and read of all. It needs no amplification. Reader art thou a parent? Hast thou prayed for thy lost child? Despair not. Jesus hears prayers. Continue to look to him. He will do right—and "in due season thou shalt reap, if thou faint not!"

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Newark Circuit, Va., June 19, 1848.

Br. Bassett: As iron sharpneth iron, so does the countenance of a man his friends, and as cold water is cooling to the thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country. It is always consoling to me to hear from the brethren the state of Zion, through the medium of the Recorder. I have delayed writing till this late hour, yet it is not too late, I hope for me to say a little also. I came to this circuit the first Sabbath in Sept., preached at Zion Meeting House, called a Quarterly Conference and found the membership few and very much disheartened, being cut off from their old (Harrisville) Circuit. They feared that they could not sustain me, but said I. brethren let us go to work, taking our weapon for labor in one hand and the sword of the Spirit with all the panoply of God in the other, so we went to work as giants refreshed with new wine—and blessed be the Lord, our feeble labor has not been in vain in the Lord; for though we have our difficulties to encounter yet he is still with us. We have gotten up four new classes, and they are in peace. and a goodly number of them are trying to do the best they can for me and the Church. We have two very large Sabbath Schools, a considerable interest taking in our cause, and I think that the Methodist Protestant Church will yet live on Huse's river and Kanawha. On this day three weeks past we had a good time. Brs. Holland and W. Betts aided me in holding a protracted meeting on the Little Kanawha. Sinners were made to feel the power of God, and saints rejoiced in the Lord. May the Lord reward these faithful brethren for their labor of love, but I must not forget to say that our old venerable Br. Brown visited our circuit—but in consequence of the high waters, his meeting was not so well attended as if it had been otherwise. A great many of the friends were very much disappointed on account of the great freshet, yet his labor with us was not in vain. We hope that the Lord our God will abundantly bless our dear old fellow laborer in Christ. Permit me to say to my brethren in the Lord Jesus, that I am now old and gray-headed; much of my time is gone past, and I soon expect to lay by my labor and toil here and go home to Jesus. But the Church of Christ lies near my heart, for which I am willing to spend and to be spent. It has generally been my lot to take the circuits "the other side of where the bears live." Well—perhaps this is all right, though it may be hard. I hope that all things will come right, so that the church may still grow up in Christ the living Head. I hope that the slave question will no more trouble our Zion, and in regard to the Restrictive Rule that has taken up so much time and paper and all to no particular profit, I hope that my Brethren will be mild, and talk as brethren in Christ. A travelling itinerancy my soul delights in. This is the bone and sinew of Methodism in our land. Now I will close with lifting up my soul to the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, that he would grant unto his Church, according to the riches of his grace, the abundance of his Spirit, that we may grow up into him in all things, which is the head over all, and blessed forever. Praise the Great God. O my soul, and all that is within me, laud his holy name forever and ever. Amen.

W. G. WILLIAMS, Supt.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Gilboa. O., June 16, 1848.

Br. Bassett: Permit me to inform the friends of Zion, that the Ohio Conference is prospering gloriously. More than one thousand members have been received in the present year. It has been my privilege to see nine revivals, which resulted in three hundred additions to the church. I have just closed a protracted meeting, at Mt. Blanchard. Twenty seven joined on probation. This church has enjoyed a very extensive revival this year, under the labors of Br. T. Graham, Supt. More than one hundred have professed conversion.

It will be seen by my plan of appointments, that I shall spend the balance of his Conference year, in the north. I am prompted to this course from a sense of duty.

It is made my duty by the action of the last Annual Conference, to make provision for a discourse on the opening of our next Annual Meeting to be held in Lebanon Station, September 6, 1848. Br. T. H. Stockton, of Cincinnati is invited to deliver said discourse. I hope he will find it agreeable, as well as convenient, to comply with our request.

J. M. YOUNG.

Bainbridge, Ohio, June 24th, 1848.

Br. Bassett: I will make my third quarterly report to our worthy President, J. M. Young, through the Recorder, knowing your affinity for these old customs, Brother Bassett, (and I hope the ——— custom will be kept up,) I have not any thing of great interest to write, but such as I have give I unto thee. Since our last, we have had some very good meetings, the circuit is doing as well as we could expect at this time of the year. Harvest is now on hand, our men are engaged in that. The class at this place has increased in interest and number since its organization. Our friends are going ahead with their meeting house here. The Quarterly Conference have gone in for the purchase of a Parsonage in this place. Our third quarterly meeting closed last Monday night. We had a very good meeting, one joined on probation. We were favored with the very acceptable labors of Br. C. H. Williams. Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Cove Spring Meeting House, commencing the 19th of August, to which we invite ministerial aid. Will Brother Warrington come over and see his old friends at that time? Come Brother, try. Our friends at this place expect to entertain the next Annual Conference, & accommodate its sittings in their new Methodist Protestant Church. I presume the friends will say, Amen. Brethren pray for us.

Your Brother in Christ,

S. P. KEZERTA.

INDIANA DISTRICT.

Freeport, Ia., June 3d, 1848.

Br. Bassett: I have just returned from quarterly meeting on Tanners Creek Ct. Br. T. Shipp was also in attendance. We held a meeting of four days, embracing last Sabbath. It was a time of deep interest with nearly all in attendance. Whilst the members of the church attested the depth of their feelings in the subdued sigh, the suppressed groan, accompanied by the quiet flowing tear. Backsliders were reclaimed, sinners brought to the mourner's bench, and penitents comforted. Several professed to find peace in the belief of the truth. (The numbers not definitely known.) Five offered themselves as candidates for church membership. May the Lord continue his blessings on this kind people. Br. Edmonson has been released from this ct., and a brother Sibley employed by the President.

S. MORRISON.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, June 29, 1848.

To Correspondents.—We acknowledge the receipt of an article by Br. J. B. Peat, in reply to Br. C. Springer. A communication from Br. G. Clancy shall appear in our next. Our Restrictive Rule discussion, we believe, is nearly through. Br. J. Scott has one more article to come. Br. Springer has heretofore intimated an intention to pursue the subject a little further. And Br. W. Reeves, gave us notice before the 1st of June, that he desired to furnish a few numbers on the subject. These brethren, if they still wish to fulfil their intentions, will please furnish us without delay what they desire to have published. We have received No. 1, of Br. J. Gay in reply to Br. W. M'Gwigan on the subject of slavery. Br. M'G. proposes furnishing another communication on the subject. If it suit the convenience of brethren, who write a series of numbers, we should like to give them consecutively without interval, whenever practicable.

Rev. S. Elliott.—We have received from this brother a response to the communication of "A Member." He denies the charge of having endeaved to 'discourage and tear down Columbia Circuit,' and demands the proof. Br. E. also denies that he is fond of promotion, as alleged by "A Member," and states that all the promotion he ever received, he received without asking for it. We have received also another communication from a responsible individual in Columbia Circuit, stating that the Quarterly Conference unanimously confirms the correctness of the letter of Br. G. M. Scott. We think best not to publish either of the articles now received, and trust we shall be excused from publishing any thing further on the subject.

Errata.—Rev. W. M'Gwigan of Lynchburgh, Va., requests us to publish the following corrections of typograpical errors which appeared in his communication published in our paper of the 1st inst.

In second column, of the letter, line 69 from top, for "securing pepetuity," read, "seeming pepetuity." Same column, line 102, for "give by inspiration," read, "given by inspiration." Same column, line 110, for "words of the Devil," read, "works of the Devil." Same column, line 118, for "changeable," read "chargable."

In third column, line 46, for "they exist," read, "thy exit." Same column, line 54, for "yes, O Abraham," read, "yet, O Abraham." Same column, line 58, for "shall ultimately," read, "shalt ultimately."

In fourth column, last paragraph, near the close, for "God intended," read, "God intends."

Juvenile Concert.—We take pleasure in announcing that Mr. Munson will give a Concert with his Juvenile Class, at the Seminary Hall in this place, on Thursday evening next, July 6th, at early candlelight. Let all who wish to have a real treat, turn out. If the Concert should be but half so good as the last one, we would not wish to miss it.

Ladies' National Magazine.—The July No. is before us, opening the 14th volume. It contains, besides a colored fashion plate, a fine mezzotint engraving, representing Judith and Holofernes. Edited by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, C. J. Peterson, Publisher, Philadelphia. $2 per annum.

Peace.—Official Announcement.—The following official Despatch from our Commissioners in Mexico, has been received and published at Washington City. Whilst there are great rejoicings in Mexico upon the ratification of the Treaty it is suprising that there is so little demonstation in this country in reference to the long prayed for return of Peace.

City of Queterato May 25, 1848,
9 o'clock, P. M.

Sir: We have the satisfaction to inform you that we reached this city this afternoon, at about 5 o'clock, and that the treaty as amended by the Senate of the United States passed the Mexican Senate about the hour of our arrival, by a vote of 33 to 5. It having previously passed the House of Deputies, nothing now remains but to exchange the ratifications of the treaty.

At about four leagues from this city we were met by a Mexican escort, under the command of Col. Herrera, and were escorted to a house prepared by the government for our reception. The Minister of Foreign Relations, and the Governer of the city called upon us, and accompanied us to dinner, which they had previously ordered. So far as the government is concerned, every facility and honor have been offered us, and Sr. Rosa, the Minister of Foreign Relations, desires us to state he feels great satisfaction in meeting the ministers of peace from the United States.

We will write to you again shortly, and more at length, as the courier is on the point of departure.

The city appears to be in a great state of exultation, fire-works going off, and bands of music parading in every direction.

We have the honor to be, your obedient servants,

A. H. SEVIER.
NATHAN CLIFFORD.

Hon. James Buchanan, Secretary of State.

☞ The following is the Form of Thanksgiving for Peace, appointed by Bishop Potter to be used in the Churches of the Diocess of Pennsylvania, during the present, and the next following months, as published in the Episcopal Recorder.

"O Eternal God, our Heavenly Father, in whose hand is all power and might, we praise and magnify thy glorious name, that thou hast been pleased to restore to our land the blessings of peace. Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us but unto thy name be all the praise. Give us, we beseech thee, grace to improve this great mercy to thy glory, the advancement of thy Gospel, the honor of our country, and as much as in us lieth, to the good of all mankind. Bestow upon us, also, such a just sense of all thy great and manifold favors to our land, that it may appear in our lives by an humble, holy, and obedient walking before thee all our days, through Jesus Christ our Lord, to whom with thee and the Holy Spirit as for all thy mercies, so especially for this our deliverance from the evils of war, be all honor and glory, world without end. Amen."

Rev. C. B. Parsons.—Editor Stephens, of Zion's Herald, has been publishing in his paper sketches of leading personages at the late General Conference in Pittsburgh. The statement he gives of Parsons the present pastor at Soule Chapel, Cincinnati, (Church South) is quite interesting. We give it entire.

"Mr. Parsons has been with us occasionally at the St. Charles. He is a famous man in all the West, having been eminent once, I learn, as an actor. I had by some means received an impression that Mr. Parsons was one of Mr. Maffit's converts, and addicted to theatrical airs in the pulpit—in fine, that there was something not very substantial about his character or talents; but I make confession to all his friends that I was most egregiously mistaken. There may be something theatrical about his pulpit performances—it would be wonderful were it otherwise, after his theatrical education—but he is really a most solid, sensible looking, good natured, moderate minded, Christian gentleman. He is tall and corpulent, with a face expressive of benevolence and repose. His style of preaching is quite the antipodes of that of Maffitism or Bascomism, which has obtained so much among us. It is simple, practical, and evangelical. Mr. Parsons was awakened unto God on this wise: While passing through this city some years since after the recent death of one of his family, he paused over the Sabbath, and attended, in the morning, one of the Presbyterian churches. It was announced that in the afternoon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper would be administered;—Christians were invited to attend and partake of it, and others to witness the solemnities. He was suffering under anguish of spirit, and resorted to the temple again in the afternoon, as the most appropriate place for his relief. The assembly was not large, as there was no sermon; he was the only one present in the pews on the left aisle of the church. As he sat there in comparative solitude, his thoughts were painfully active; the devout pressed to the altar, but he was left behind; the enquiry pressed upon him, whether he should at last be separated from them, & cast off on the left hand of the Judge of the quick and dead; he went away an awakened man, & afterwards being converted to God, entered the Methodist Ministry. He preached here last Sabbath in that very church, and at the conclusion of the sermon related the fact as of a third person; but when he pointed to the pew where he had sat, referred to the pastor in the pulpit as the one who ministered that day at the altar, and himself as the young man awakened, the sensation in the audience was thrilling; there was an instantaneous outburst of feeling and tears, and the good pastor, who had never heard of the circumstance before, rose and expressed his emotions. Mr. Parsons' sermon was universally considered one of the best yet delivered here.—He is the pastor of the Methodist E. Church South, in Cincinnati. I heartily wish he were in a better position."

M. E. Church, South.—We find in the Nashville Christian Advocate a statement from the "Minutes of the Annual Conferences, for the year 1847—48," embracing the following statistics of the M. E. Church South.

Number of White members,	334,859
" Colored "	127,249
" Indians "	3,445
" Itinerant Preachers	1,403
" Superanuated "	97
" Local "	3,142
Total, members and preachers	470,195
Increase the past year	10,726

Would the Editors of the Advocate, please favor us with a copy of their "Minutes?"

The Right Spirit.—The subjoined article from the Lutheran Observer, an excellent religious paper published in Baltimore, will be read with interest by our friends. Rev. Dr. Kurtz, a man of the most liberal feelings, is editor of the Observer, and is doubtless the Lutheran minister spoken of. As the soul of that excellent man was lately refreshed, in preaching for a Methodist Protestant congregation, and in administering the Lord's supper to its communicants, at the request of its pastor, we are happy to be able to give the following circumstance, which we lately witnessed, as a counterpart. A Methodist Protestant minister was invited by the pastor of the English Lutheran Church of Zanesville, on last Sabbath, to preach for his congregation, and assist him in the administration of the supper of the Lord. The said pastor of the English Lutheran Church, is a man of the right spirit, and so far as we could discover, it was "like pastor, like people." The scene, we thought was worthy for angels to look upon. And we could not help thinking with the editor of the Observer, that whilst we contemplate such a circumstance as of "rare occurrence," it should be subject of regret and mortification amongst Christians of the various evangelical denominations, that such occurrences are not of "frequent repetition."—Should not Christians cultivate 'brotherly love' amongst all and towards all who "love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity," and thus hasten the advent of the period when the "Watchmen shall see eye to eye?"

"An Unusual Occurrence.—Last Lordsday morning the pastor of a respectable and prosperous Methodist Protestant Church in this city, found himself so unwell as to be unable to occupy his pulpit for that day. He accordingly applied to a neighboring Lutheran minister to fill his appointments. The notice was very short, but as it appeared to be a case of emergency and there was a strong predisposition to accommodate so estimable a man, the Lutheran minister readily assented. But on further inquiry, he learned that the Eucharist was to be administered on that day, and this produced some hesitancy in his mind. To preach the gospel to his brother-Methodists would be a very pleasant duty, but to dispense the Supper to them in their own house of worship, inexperienced as he was as to their mode of procedure on such occasions, in the absence of their pastor, and unassured as he felt whether his humble services would be acceptable, was to him an embarrassing consideration. He faltered, and would fain have escaped the dilemma. But having been requested by the Methodist Protestant pastor to officiate, and aware of his enlarged and truly catholic views,—and presuming morever, on the principle expressed in the well-known proverb: "like pastor, like people," that his church must have imbibed from his excellent example and instructions, the same liberal sentiments, the Lutheran minister at length determined, at all hazards, to "go forward."

The house of God was well-filled; want of time had rendered due preparation for the pulpit impossible; but the preacher did as well as he could under the circumstances, and angels can do no better. But, however deficient his services, the congregation were indulgent and attentive, solemn silence and an impressive appropriateness of procedure characterized the whole of the exercises. A Lutheran pastor stood within the balustrade encircling the altar, in a Methodist Protestant Church;—called on the Methodist membership to approach the table, and receive at his Lutheran hands the Lord's Supper; they promptly and numerously complied; aged fathers and mothers in Christ whose "hoary heads are a crown of glory," and young men and maidens who had been early taught by divine grace to "give themselves away to the Lord," prostrated themselves before the God of their salvation, and with deep humility and absorbing devotion, strongly marked in their countenance and all their demeanor, received the sacred emblems of the "the broken body and shed blood" of our adorable Lord,—the crucified and now exalted Redeemer of an apostate and rebel world.—O it was a delightful scene!—a spectacle for angels to look upon!

But here it may be asked, is this an occurrence of sufficient importance to call attention to it, or to dwell upon with any degree of emphasis? Is not Christ the common Lord of all? his Supper a provision in common for all christians? and his ministers the common servants of all his people? Why should not those towering partition-walls which separate and cut up into small compartments the spacious temple of Jehovah be demolished? why should not sectarianism yield to catholicity, and bigotry to benevolence and liberality? why should not God's people and God's ministering servants mingle freely, especially when they celebrate that ordinance which is emphatically "a feast of love" and the glorious wreath of brotherhood?

This is all true, and viewed in this light, it is all most natural, most proper, most congenial with the spirit of Christianity; it is just as it should be; and instead of referring to it as an incident of rare occurrence and a subject for special congratulation, we should hang our heads in shame that it is not one of frequent repetition, and mourn over the melancholy contraction of mind and character as exhibited in the strongly marked lines of demarkation between the different branches of the great family of God's believing people.

A New Movement.—We have been requested by sundry gentlemen, subscribers, who were in attendance, to state that a mass convention was held last week, in the State House, Columbus, without respect to party, the object of which was to take a stand against the further encroachments of slavery and the slave power in our country. The sittings of the convention were numerously attended, by delegates from 20 out of the 21 Congressional Districts of the State.

Amongst the speakers, as we learn, were prominent gentlemen of the Democratic and Whig parties, as well as of the Liberty party, who seemed united in their one grand object. It was determined that a weekly paper be commenced at Columbus, the leading object of which shall be "to use all constitutional means for the overthrow of the slave power, and of slavery," and to advocate the position that there be "no more Slave States," and "no more Slave Territory." E. S. Hamlin, formerly Congressman from this state is to be Editor, assisted by J. C. Vaughan, formerly of the Louisville Examiner. The paper is to be called "The Standard."

We announce the above, rather as a moral and literary movement, than as a political one.

U. S. CONGRESS.

Monday, June 5, House.

W. P. Linde, a Representative from the State of Wisconsin, appeared, took the oath of office, & took his seat. Adjourned to Friday next.

Senate.

Resolutions of the General Assembly of Rhode Island were presented, in favor of abolishing slavery in the District of Columbia, or an act for the immediate removal of the seat of Government to some free State.

The Senate held a session on Thursday, but not another till the following Monday.

Friday 9, House.

M. C. Darling, Representative from the State of Wisconsin, appeared, was qualified and took his seat.

Monday 12, House.

The 17th day of July was fixed upon for the final adjournment of Congress. The Senate refused to concur.

Thursday 15, Senate.

A resolution was adopted, which had previously passed the House, regulating the discharge & payment of temporary troops returning from the Mexican war. It provides that the military forces, to be discharged at the close of the war, "be transported or marched, with the least practicable delay, to such posts or places in the United States, most convenient to the troops, and that at such places they shall be discharged from the service of the United States; and that until they shall respectively reach such places and be discharged, the officers and men shall be considered, paid and treated as in the service of the United States, in the same manner as if the war had not closed."

Evangelical Preacher.—We have received the June number. It contains a Sermon by Rev. Dr. Sprague, of Albany, New York, on the Love of money, a most useful topic for the times. Covetousness is shown to be the root of a contracted mind, of oppression, dishonesty, flagrant crime, disgrace, poverty, suicide and an undying death, to those who are the subjects of it. The evils the love of money brings upon those thrown within the range of its influence, as heads of families, members of civil society, and members of the church are also exhibited. The number contains also a Sermon by Rev. Dr. Church, of Rochester, New York, from Phil. 4. 8. The "Preacher" is a good publication, at $1 per year. Rev. N. N. Wood, Editor, Zanesville, Ohio.

Sears' Magazine.—The numbers for June and July are just received. They are filled with valuable and instructive articles and embellished with numerous engravings. Those who want a monthly worth reading should send for Sears'. $2 in advance. R. Sears, Publisher, Nassau St., New York.

Lady's Dollar Newspaper.—We see by the last number of this Journal, that Grace Greenwood has retired from the editorship of it. The reason she gives is a sudden failure of her health—requiring her to seek the fresh air remote from city life. The Publisher however has the promise of her contributions hereafter.

The Baptist Recorder, published at Fairmont, in West Virginia, has recently been enlarged, and furnished with new type. Published by D. S. Morris, & Co.

Correspondence.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Mr. Editor:

Will you have the goodness to publish the following facts respecting the Slave Trade? They are from the pen of the Rev. John Leighton Wilson, than whom there is not a more competent witness on this subject, he having served for many years as a Missionary on the Western coast of Africa. They will serve to correct the statements which are frequently made, that this trade is carried on as extensively as ever, and that nothing but colonizing the coast of Africa can put an end to the traffic.

A FRIEND TO AFRICA.

"The opinion is common that little or no impression has as yet been made upon this trade; and there are not wanting those who confidently affirm that all that has heretofore been done is little else than a waste of life and money, and that all future efforts must prove equally futile and chimerical. But we as confidently affirm that this opinion, whether it be regarded with reference to what has already been achieved by the English navy single handed, or what is likely hereafter to be effected by a combination of other navies with hers, is utterly unfounded.—We do not mean to affirm that the Portuguese have less disposition to carry on the slave trade now than they have always had; nor would we intimate that a naval cordon has been drawn along that coast so strong and so compact that it is impossible for a vessel to escape with a cargo of slaves. Undoubtedly, the means of the Portuguese to carry on this trade have been greatly diminished; and the embarrassments thrown in its way are so numerous now, that but few other capitalists like to venture largely in so uncertain an enterprize. But these are not the special tokens of encouragement. There is a movement going on in the affairs of Africa itself, in the minds of her people, which furnishes a much surer pledge of the extinction of this trade, as well as her general amelioration. On all the principal rivers of the Bight of Benin, on the Ivory coast and along the whole of what is called the Gold coast,—formerly the most extensive slave marts on the Western coast of Africa,—that trade has been entirely and completely suspended by lawful commerce; and so decided have been the advantages reaped from this change in their commercial affairs, that it is doubtful whether the people would ever again return to it, even if all outward restraints were removed.

"Similar changes, it is believed, are silently but steadily going forward in the views and feelings of the majority of the nations of that country, so that it seems necessary only that present efforts be continued a while longer to effect a complete triumph over this demon of darkness. Especially may this boon be permanently secured to Africa, if the church of Christ will do her duty, by following up this undertaking with the blessings of christianity. The restraint imposed upon the slave-trade has given rise to an amount of lawful commerce that is almost incredible. We have no statistical information by which we can give certain results, but it is perfectly safe to say that it has more than quadrupled itself in fifteen years: and we scarcely know any assignable limits to its future developments. An important crisis has thus been formed in the affairs of Africa, not more remarkable for physical improvement it will be likely to introduce, than for the moral and intellectual influence which it is destined to exert upon the character of the people. Incentives to industry, activity and fair dealing are felt now, that never could have been experienced by those who trafficked in their own flesh and blood. Sentiments of holy respect, the endearments of kindred ties and feelings of patriotism, have recently sprung up in hearts that were once wholly given up to the most unnatural and ferocious passions that ever agitated the human bosom. The introduction of law and commerce has brought the nations in contact with a better class of foreigners, and in many instances has awakened laudable desires to adopt the habits and conform to the usages of civilized life. In short all their dormant energies have in some measure been called into life, so that the people begin to feel that they have almost emerged into a new state of being."

"Now the most casual observer cannot fail to perceive that this crisis is eminently favorable to the cause of missions. The African mind is fairly awake and is now better prepared than it ever was before, to examine any topic of interest that may be submitted to its consideration."

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett:

One more beloved christian friend has recently made a happy exit from this vale of tears, to the heavenly Jerusalem.

BR. WM. OLIVER,

brother of Thomas Oliver of this station, departed this transitory life, 'full of immortal hope,' on May 17th, 1848, in the 36th year of his age. The same insidious and deadly disease which took away our beloved Sister Helen McFarland, carried off our dear Brother William Oliver also—pulmonary consumption. They both laid for months in full view of their fell destroyer—who never left the castle a day during the fatal siege, and yet they both triumphed over his awfully majestic terror, though nature finally yielded to dissolution. Happy conquest over the fear of death, in both cases. I visited them both regularly, and as they were mutually interested in each other's experience, their pastor became a kind of internuncis—to bear dispatches between them—informing them of the advancement the adversary was making upon their frail forms, and of the state of their mind in view of the fall of their tabernacle. What an amount of moral magnanimity in both these soldiers of the cross! They were armed with the panoply of God, and they feared no evil, even when passing the gloomy vale of death, and in sight of the 'insatiate archer' who drinks up the spirits of the world! Knowing in whom they believed, and having committed their all into His hands, at times these two precious saints manifested a kind of holy daring, as if they would challenge death to do his worst, rejoicing at every new symptom of approaching dissolution. And they were evidently brought to

"——————————dread
The grave as little as their bed."

How instructive, encouraging, and profitable, to visit such death-beds! Are not such chambers the best kind of colleges for ministers of the gospel? And it should be remembered that these two members were not like mother Best—she had been a noted, zealous, and devoted Methodist—for many years. These—though they had for awhile belonged to church, yet when they were low by affliction, were far from being prepared to die. How striking, therefore the change, accomplished by grace, in both!

Brother William Oliver had made some slight profession of religion some time before; but being—as he said—constitutionally changeable in his character, going on the river, he lost what little he had. Last summer he began to feel that, in all probability, he would not remain long in this world, symptoms of decline indicated to him the importance of a preparation for the approaching event, fraught with such infinite moment to man. Accordingly he again presented himself as a candidate for membership in the church.—Soon after—he went into the country for a season, thinking a change of air might be of service to him. But in the fall, he came back to the city, lodged with his Br. Thomas—where he well knew he would receive and enjoy every comfort and attention that could be rendered him, in his declining days.

In the early part of the winter, he was chiefly confined to the house, and soon after, I commenced my regular pastoral attention to him. He was gradually brought to enjoy higher and happier ground in religious experience. And then, how thankful did he appear to kind Providence, for granting him a lingering disease, to afford him the needful opportunity to prepare for his latter end, which was coming on apace. Again and again did he express to me—the gratitude he felt to God for his goodness in this respect. Also that he was not confined to his bed down the river, where he probably would have received but little attention among strangers at a tavern, either for body or soul. But kind Providence had placed him among his friends—with an affectionate family at the house of his Brother Thomas, where he enjoyed every temporal & spiritual comfort his heart could desire. He was from the Emerald Isle, and he felt the gushing gratitude that a pious and favored Irishman can feel and shew. Happy young man! Though taken away from the pleasures of life in the prime of his days.

His disease advanced with steady and unfaltering step, and he as steadily advanced in the divine life. As his outward man decayed, his inward man was renewed, day by day. How many blessed seasons did I enjoy with him, when none were with us in the room but the Lord!—And when he grew worse, we had the presence of his faithful attendant, who waited on him day and night. He too witnessed what blessed soul-refreshing times we enjoyed, like Peter, James and John, with their Lord upon the Mount. May his greatest reward be the salvation of his soul! And on leaving my afflicted friend, to shew his whole-hearted affection, he would give me both his hands. Sweet is the memory of those heavenly seasons of devotion by his bedside! This moment the eyes of the writer are filled with tears of grateful remembrance of those soul-refreshing visitations, from the presence of the Lord. But these emotions must be checked, or I shall write a book instead of a brief obituary.

About two weeks before he died, on Monday morning—early, a messenger came for me, Br. Wm. Oliver was thought to be about to leave the world, and he desired his pastor to be present 'to see how happy he could die!' Blessed state of mind. Presently I was by his side; he was still rejoicing in God his Savior, expecting soon to leave the world, to live in heaven. Friends gathered in to witness his departure, and were delighted to behold his triumph over the king of terrors. By his request we had another season of prayer. In a few minutes, his soul seemed as if she eagle-like—was trying her wings before she took her flight to the bright world of bliss! Brother Thomas—standing by his side—eagerly watching for the signal of the Pilot, to leave this 'mundane shore;' and ruminating upon the great things God had done for them as a family, without father or mother:— The parents both died when the children were quite young,—while the friends were waking their father in one room, their mother expired in another—shouting the triumphs of redeeming grace, and exclaiming she 'would rather die than live; for she was going to heaven, and as she knew the Lord would take care of her dear children!'—"And so he has," shouted Thomas—whom—though but a baker's boy, Providence had placed as a parent over his orphan brothers; & whose industry and economy the Lord had blessed, so that in due time these parentless children were safely brought from their own native Erin, to this great and plentiful country, where they have acquired a competency and live in plenty.—In full view of what the Lord had done for them as a family under such peculiar circumstances, Thomas saw as by the light of heaven, the full answer to their mother's prayers, and he shouted out the praises of the Lord; and gratefully owned before God, that He had "taken care of them," according to the dying declaration of their dear mother. And rising to a rapture he said to his Brother William, as he seemed about leaving the world, "William," said he, "you will soon be in heaven;—you will see dear mother there, and tell her that her prayers have been answered, and the Lord has taken care of us indeed, &c., &c., —she will see you are saved; and tell her Thomas is coming too!" &c., &c. Shall I ever forget that thrilling address to a dying brother?

Brother Oliver, however, did not die that day, but revived and lingered better than two weeks longer with us. In one respect, at least, the writer is glad of that; for a day or two after, while sitting by his side, we had had another sweet season of devotion, and were conversing very freely, when Brother O. observed, "Brother Reeves, to be candid with you, when you commenced your visits here, I did not think much of them. Indeed," said he, "to tell you the whole truth, I hated to see you come into the room!" This was good news indeed. For at that time, it seemed, as St. Paul said of the friends in Galatia, he was ready to 'pluck out his own eyes, and give them to me.' This is mentioned to show the benefit of pastoral visitation among the sick. In about a week after this, I went down three times one day to see him leave the world, but he revived again and lingered on till Wednesday morning, May 17th, when he slowly and safely sank down into the arms of the Savior, sweetly to sleep in him till the morning of the resurrection. And "blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power."

In the experience of these two christian friends, Sister Helen McFarland, and Brother William Oliver, we may behold what great things the Lord can do by his Spirit, in a short time! We also see the sufficiency of His grace in the trying hour. And not only for the aged, but for those in the full bloom of life! How encouraging for us to trust in the Lord, for all that is to come.—The importance and benefits resulting from punctual and faithful pastoral attention to the flock, especially in sickness and death. Also the ardent religious attachment produced by doing good and getting good.

To both these dear departed saints, when they were in a suitable state of mind, on Sabbath afternoon, in company with a few select friends, I administered the solemn ordinance of the Lord's Supper; and found them very impressive and profitable services to us all, especially the sick. The Lord bless and save all the surviving relatives and connexions: Amen.

W. REEVES.

Pittsburgh, June 16, 1848.

RAILROAD WEST.—A meeting of the citizens of Wheeling was held on the 15th instant, William Shriver, Esq., Mayor of the city coporation to subscribe $300,000 to the stock of one of the companies chartered to construct a road from Wheeling to Columbus.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MRS SARAH GANT.

BR. BASSETT: It is made my duty to record the death of Sister Sarah (the wife of Br. John,) Gant, who departed this life on the 5th of this month, at the residence of her husband, about 1 mile north-east of Fredericktown, Knox county, O.

Sister G. was 36 years of age, and had been an highly esteemed member of the Methodist P. Church for nine years, and it may be said in truth of her, that those who knew her best, only knew her best to love her most.

Her loss is not only felt by her husband, who is bereft of a loving and a long beloved companion, and those five lovely children who stood with streaming eyes and throbbing hearts by their father's side, while they together took the last look and bid the last farewell to the affectionate wife and tender mother, whose smiles had so long been their happiness; but by the church which has been robbed of one of its most devotedly pious and spiritual members; we therefore feel deeply to sympathize with the afflicted family and friends of the deceased.

Sister G. died of the Consumption, of which she had been the subject for many years, yet notwithstanding her protracted illness, the grace of God was her support till the last, and those who looked on as she took her departure from this world of care and pain to the spirit-land, were furnished with an additional evidence of the truth, that, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. May she rest in peace until the resurrection morn. Amen.

J. S.

Knox, O., June 22, 1848.

News of the Week.

Rail Road to Newark.—The company that has been engaged in surveying a route to Newark, has got through and returned. They of course examined several locations, and we are pleased to learn that they found in some places, better ground than that examined by Mr. KNIGHT. Every step taken shows more clearly the importance of the enterprize.—Z. Gaz.

Zanesville Cotton Mill.—We understand that the managers of this company are about to put in motion double the amount of machinery hitherto running. The new machinery was received at the mill on Thursday last, will be set up immediately, and will be in operation by the last of July.—Z. Cour.

Telegraphic.—The work of putting up the second wire on the Pittsburgh and Louisville line is progressing rapidly. The party coming westward will reach Wheeling in a few days, and Zanesville in a week or ten days at furthest.

From Wellsville to Pittsburg the line has been re-constructed, on the south side of the river, and that portion of the old line has been transferred to the Lake Erie Line which thus possesses an independent connection directly with Pittsburgh.—Z. Cour.

All Lotteries expired in New Jersey on the 10th inst., in consequence of Legislative interference.

When will it be Open!

Numerous persons have asked us, when will the Railroad to the Lake be open—at the same time referring to our statements some time since that such would be the case on the 1st of July.—We learn now that it will be the 15th of July before the cars run through to the Lake. The delay has been unavoiable in the progress of the work.—Cin. Com.

DIFFICULTY AMONG THE WINNEBAGOES.—REFUSAL TO EMIGRATE.—Mr. J. B. Henion, of this city, has just returned from a trip to Fort Atkinson, and through him we learn that very great opposition was manifested by the Winnebagoes to emigrating to their new home. Stormy interviews were held with the sub-agent, General Fletcher, on Thursday and Friday of last week, and severe threats were made by the Indians, in view of force being used to compel their removal. On Saturday morning, when Mr. Henion left, the Indians had taken down nearly all their wigwams, and all the squaws and most of the male Indians had left for parts unknown. Little Hill was addressing those who remained behind. Baptiste, a chief deeply hostile to removal, was just starting for the Agency, his countenance filled with indignation. Capt. Morgan was apprehensive he should be compelled to send to Fort Crawford for reinforcements.

From Ezekiel Dougherty, Esq., recently from Fort Atkinson, we learn that the principal reason of the refusal of the Winnebagoes to remove to their new home is, that they have not received a certain sum of money from the Government, which they were promised should be paid to them before they were called upon to emigrate. —Dubuque (Iowa) Tribune.

U. S. SENATOR.—The Governor of Michigan has appointed Thos. Fitzgerald, Dem., U. S. Senator, in place of Gen. Cass.

The Legislature of New Hampshire on Thursday, elected Moses Norris, Jr., Dem., Senator in Congress for six years from the 4th of March next, in place of Mr. Atherton, whose term then expires.

ARRIVAL OF THE PRESIDENT OF LIBERIA IN BOSTON.—His Excellency J. J. Roberts, the President of the new Republic of Liberia, with his wife and daughter, arrived at Boston, on Friday morning, in the barque Nehemia Rich, Capt. Carlton, from Liberia, April 21, via St. Thomas and Turks Island.

RETURNING FROM THE WAR.—Thirteen vessels have been taken up at New York and Boston, by the Government, for the transportations of the New York, Massachusetts and New Jersey regiments from Mexico. The whole force to embark from Vera Cruz, it is said, will be 1,100 officers, and 26,000 rank and file, and 5,000 teamsters, &c.

A train of freight cars from Albany to Boston while passing through a deep cut between Chester village and Chester factories, came in contact with a large rock, which had fallen from the height, by which the locomotive was knocked bottom side up, injuring it badly, and several of the freight cars were smashed. A large number of flour barrels were smashed and the flour scattered to the winds. The loss in flour is estimated at $20,000 to $30,000. The engineer and fireman were injured but not dangerously.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Patriot.

Destructive Conflagration in Allentown, Pa.--80 Houses Destroyed.

PHILADELPHIA, June 2, 2 P. M.

A most destructive fire occurred in Allentown, Pennsylvania, yesterday afternoon, by which eighty buildings, situated in the handsomest portion of the town, were destroyed. The fire commenced in a stable, which was set on fire by some boys playing with fire crackers. The following buildings were among those destroyed.—The splendid new Odd Fellows' Hall, partly occupied by Messrs. Weiss & Lochman as a shoe store; Reck's tailoring establishment; H. Nagle's oyster cellar; Gwinn & Tinninger's and Sefringe & Wilson's stores; James Trexler's Hotel; Teager & Werdner's store; Jos. Weiss' jewelry do; Thos. Gingkingeo's stove store; Gangweis' millinery establishment; Newharp's tailor shop; D. L. Donnosky's store; Metsz & Weaver's do; Wagner & Hoover's do; Edward Newhart's hardware store; the Post Office; George Lucas' store; Nathan Hersh's do; Mrs. Brown do; J. Q. Cole's do; J. F. Cashes' do; Reuben Rice's do; Chas. Showll's do. The following are among the private residences destroyed. Dan. Kelper's, Mrs. Kelper's, Peter Hoover's, Joshua Hains', Mrs. Heckman's, D. R. C. H. Martin's, Jos. F. Newhart's, Mrs. Cach's, E. Groff's, Dortha & Woodring's, and Mrs. Mover's, and a granary belonging to Peter Hoover.

In New York on Saturday afternoon last, Edward Wesley and his sister, by the accidental ignition and explosion of some powder and other materials which they were using in making fireworks, were so dreadfully burned, that their lives are despaired of. The explosion tore out the whole side of the building and set fire to the premises, which was extinguished by the exertions of the firemen.

Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

A strong move is now making to push this enterprise forward, and under circumstances that augur a favorable result. The company has been organised under the charter granted by the State of Indiana last winter, and steps have been taken to secure a complete survey of the entire route, together with an estimate of the cost of construction, and an accurate collection of the statistics of the counties and towns through which it will pass, and the probable amount of the trade and profits of the road when constructed. It is the intention of the company to engage an eminent engineer for this purpose as soon as possible. To defray the cost of survey and estimates, the directors have made an estimate on the counties through which it is expected to pass, and on the cities of Cincinnati and St. Louis, which assessments have been more than raised in every county in which the attempt to raise them has been made. The whole country interested in this work appears alive to its importance, and we trust and believe, when the books are opened for subscriptions to the stock, it will be taken in a very short time.—Cincinnati Commercial.

A magazine at Monterey, California, Feb'y. 2d, had blown up, and killed four New York Volunteers.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We learn from the York (Pa.) Republican, that on Thursday last, Dr. Friedman, of York Haven, was riding in a carriage with his only son, a boy about 6 years of age, when the horse became unruly, and ran off, breaking the carriage into fragments, and so severely injuring the child externally and internally, as to cause his death on Monday morning last.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—We learn from the York, (Pa.) Republican, that Mr. Samuel Callehan was kicked on Thursday morning last by a horse in Messrs. Smalls' stable, in that Borough, so severely that his jaw-bone was broken—his teeth nearly all knocked out—his nose mashed, and a large effusion of blood occasioned by the blow. He laid some time insensible, but it is thought he will recover.

STAGE ACCIDENT.—The Troy (N. Y.) Whig mentions the upsetting of a stage on the Bennington road, the other day. Mrs. Kimble had her jaw broken in two places, her teeth knocked out, and her head injured. Mrs. Pratt and a Miss Gage, of Bennington, also injured, but not dangerously. There were fifteen passengers in and on the stage.

Col. Seaton, editor of the National Intelligencer, has been elected Mayor of Washington city.

In Randolph and the adjoining counties of North Carolina, there is a great excitement in consequence of large quantities of gold being found. There is but little doubt but the deposites of gold in our Southern States, are extensive, but whether these deposites will add to the wealth of the country, is more doubtful. In searching for gold, more labor may be expended in the bowels of the earth, than would raise from its surface produce of more value than the gold.

The Extent of the Telegraph.—Within a few minutes after the nomination of General Taylor for the Presidency, in the Whig National Convention, on Friday morning, June 9th, the result was known from Portland on the extreme eastward, to Macon on the South, and from Montreal and Kingston on the north, to St. Louis and Memphis in the West! All this was effected thro' the agency of the various telegraph lines, which now over run the country, as it were, like so much complicated net-work. We have received responses to the nomination from nearly all quarters of the Union, dated on the evening of Friday, in the shape of editorial articles dated hundreds and thousands of miles afar off from Philadelphia, simultaneously with others that were written on the very scene of action. The telegraph well did its duty on the 8th of June.

Deaths from Intemperance.—Of 38 inquests by the coroner in Philadelphia, during the month of December, 27 were cases of intemperance, neglect and exposure.

Fatal Accident.—A recruit, named Dawson, a native of North Carolina, was killed at Carlisle, Pa., on Monday morning, by a kick from his horse while leading him to water.

Death from Lightning.—An elderly lady named Woods, was killed in Philadelphia by lightning, during the storm on Monday.

The National Road.—The Express lines from Cumberland to Pittsburgh and Wheeling, have withdrawn from the road, in consequence of its bad condition, and run their wagons over another route. It is also stated by the Cumberland Civilian, that the Stage Companies are about to make similar arrangements. The abandonment of the road altogether is feared. Its present condition is owing, no doubt, to the neglect of the State authorities of Maryland and Pennsylvania. Z. Cour.

Rules for Walking.

In London, walking is a police regulation, & the rules are as follow:—"1st. Always keep next to the wall when it is on your right hand, and not otherwise; your left hand should be next to the left hand of the person you meet. 2d. When you overtake and try to pass any one, go out of the line and with the right hand next the person's left. 3d. When the footway is too narrow for two people, that person must keep on whose right hand is next the wall." In this city we get along as we can, jostling each other in the street, to the great annoyance of every person. All who have walked along our thoroughfares, must have often experienced the inconvenience of some regulation on this point. At almost every step, we with difficulty avoid running or being run against by some person, and our progress is a continual dodge. This inconvenience might be in a great measure remedied by a regulation similar to that of London. We are not such admirers of English laws as to ask an ordinance on the subject, but we are perfectly willing to adopt from the English or any other people, whatever may be to our advantage in any way. We would, therefore, suggest that the order-loving portion of our citizens adopt and practice the principles of the London law. Were this done by the better class of community, the rules would soon be better observed than if enforced by an ordinance, because but few persons would be willing to show bad breeding in the street. In such matters, fashion is more potent than law. An ordinance regulating such a matter, like an ordinance regulating any of the minor matters which go to make up the aggregate enjoyments and miseries of life, would be laughed at and disregarded, whereas fashion would be omnipotent. We submit to our readers whether it would not be well to introduce, by custom, the regulations enforced in London by law. To this rule, we will make this exception —when going through the markets, get along the best way you can.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Great Fire in Norfolk, Va.

On Wednesday, of last week, the city of Norfolk was visited with a fearfully destructive fire. It was the work of an incendiary, who fired a mass of dried lumber in the most populous district of the city. Sixty-two houses were destroyed, the entire loss being about two hundred thousand dollars.

The fire spread from the lumber-yards to the adjoining tenements, and thence, as the current of the air directed, east to Woodside's Lane, devouring the building on either sides, to its southern terminus; west, to Fayette street, heaping in continuous ruins both its sides, to its southern terminus — save only buildings occupied by Messrs. Williams, Staples & Williams (which were rescued by the exertions of the men and officers of the navy-yard, and the merchant marine in our port, with their crews,) thence northwest across Water street—sweeping its northern side from Woodside's Lane to Washington street, defying in its march every human effort, until it had devastated every lane and street intervening to Main street—and thence down Main street from Washinton street to the residence of Mrs. Chapman, where its further progress was stayed, but not until it had crossed Main & destroyed the frame tenement owned by Gov. Tazewell.

Great Fire in Akron, O.

A most disastrous fire broke out in Akron on the night of the 8th inst., destroying property to the amount of $30,000; some $25,000 of which was covered by insurance. The buildings destroyed extended from Ransom's corner to Christy's building, north, and on Howard street, and to the city factory, on Market street, without including the factory. This corner is the most business part of the town. Those who suffered the most are L. Eggleston & Co., map publishers, $8000, insurance $4000; Kilbourne & Baldwin, $7000, insurance $2800; Ransome, Thayer & Co., $2000, insurance $2000; J. A. Bebee, $2200, insurance $2500; Beckwith & Brickwell, $1200, insurance $800; Mrs. McArther, $1500, no insurance; and others of less amount. Portage Mutual, loss $9800; Stark Mutual, $2200; Columbus, $2700; Medina, $300; Summit, $1,800. Democrat printing office was almost totally destroyed; Beacon saved press, and perhaps two-thirds of their materials, in a damaged condition.

A Memorable Year.

An exchange paper says that the year 1782 gave birth to the following politicians: Daniel Webster, born 18th of January; John C. Calhoun, 18th of March; General Lewis Cass, 9th of October; Martin Van Buren, 5th of December.

Caution to the Magnetic Telegraph Operators.—On Sunday evening last the store-room of Ausmus Rumbaugh, deceased, in Greensburg, was discovered to be on fire, but was immediately checked. The fire originated from the Telegraph Wire, which had a teminus in the store-room, during a pretty severe thunder storm.—The electricity, in considerable quantities, was observed passing along the wires into the store-room. The damage was quite small.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

Notices.

COLUMBIA CT., MUSK. DIST.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

PORTSMOUTH CT., MUSK. DIST.—Brother Clancy is hereby informed that his visit to this ct. will be expected at Brown's Meeting-house, 15 miles from Jackson, near the Portsmouth road.

W. W. TIPTON.

COSHOCTON CT., MUSK. DIST.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Fergusen's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

BELLVUE CT., MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Saudusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

MORGANVILLE CIRCUIT.—The meeting of Br. Clancy the President, will be at Morganville, 6 miles from M'Connellsville.

H. T. LAWSON.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please to publish the following plan of appointments:

Maumee,	July 30th.
Portage,	August	5th.
Mt. Blanchard,	"	12th.
Kalida,	"	19th.
Lima,	"	26th.

Lebanon, September 2d. J. M. YOUNG.

To the Superintendents of the Circuits and Stations hereafter named:

DEAR BRETHREN:—Having at length obtained my liberty, by getting through my publication business, which has detained me so much longer than I expected. I propose to be, and to preach within your respective fields of labor (with your consent) on the Sabbaths following:

Steubenville Station, July 2nd.
Wellsville Circuit, July 9th.
Youngstown Station, July 16th.
Pittsburgh Station, July 23rd.

As I shall travel in a buggy, it is my intention to carry with me a supply of my Vol. of Sermons.

THOMAS POTTER, Conf. Missionary.

Putnam, May 29th, 1848.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Oswego Circuit, July 1st and 2d.
Central Circuit, July 8th and 9th.
Manilius Circuit, July 15th and 16th.
Cayuga Circuit, July 22d and 23d.
Wayne Circuit, July 29th and 30th.
Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, March 2d, 1848.

BR BASSETT:—You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, which I will fill, Providence permitting.

Susquehanna,"	25th	"	"
Johnstown, st.	2d	July	"
Home two Sundays,		"	"
Valley mission	23d	"	"
Huntersville, ct.	30th	"	"
Greenbrier, "	6th	August	"
Braxton, "	13th	"	"
Conference, "	22d	"	"

Early notice of the plan of my visit in each circuit, to be given by letter, or in the Western Recorder.

Any camp-meeting arrangements, desired by the brethren, will be published by them, in the Recorder. The Aid Society to be advocated by the subscriber, in all places.

GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15th, 1848.

Newark Circuit,	3d	Sunday of	"	"
Zanesville "	4th	"	"	"
M'Connelsville ct.	1st	"	July	"
Morganville "	2d	"	"	"
Lancaster "	3d	"	"	"
Salt Creek "	4th	"	"	"
Portsmouth "	5th	"	"	"
Coluumbia "	1st	"	August	"
Woodsfield "	3d	"	"	"

Would be glad to receive due notice of the point at which my meeting will be held on each of the above named circuits.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Jos White	O	Wm E Martin	Ill.
A K Earl	"	J Clarke	"
J M Young	"	J Gay	Ia.
T Foster	"	S Morrison	"
J S Thrap	"	H Palmer	Pa.
G M Scott	"	W Reeves 2	"
S P Kezerta	"	W G Williams	Va.
H Rowan, 1 sub.	"	W McGwigan	"
		Jas Smith 1 sub.	N. Y.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
W E Martin			34	1 00
H Palmer	Jacob Dull	10	13	2 00
T Foster	G W Farmer	9	26	2 00
"	J Vermillion	7	52	2 00
"	Eli Looman	8	26	3 00
Jas Smith	Isr Cook	10	38	2 00
"	B Bort	10	33	1 00
Wm Reeves	T Oliver	10	35	2 00
S Morrison		9	52	1 00
J S. Thrap	Jas Hull	7	52	1 00
S. P Kezerta	Jos Rockhold	10	52	2 00
J Clarke, jr	T Wilson	9	52	2 00
"	J Beatty	9	52	1 00
J Casteel		9	44	50

New subscribers this week, 2. Discontinuances, 3.

Brother J. S. Thrap, the whole of volume 7 was sent to J. H.

Br. J. Clarke, J. W. K.—Jerseyville, owes us for about one year.

Br. Falkinburge, please keep your eye on that claim of ours at Jamestown, and collect it as our agent.

OUR LIST.

Shortly after the commencement of our present volume, we addressed an appeal to our friends, and especially our agents, in behalf of the Western Recorder. We showed how easily one thousand new subscribers might be added to our list within a short time. Our paper is sent to more than one hundred and fifty travelling ministers, of several Conferences, most of whom have their copy free, for their agency. We remarked that if each of those brethren would obtain for us from five to ten new subscribers, or an average of seven subscribers each, the matter would be at once accomplished. A number of brethren have responded nobly, others have begun well, and will we trust succeed still better, others have not yet reported to us. The Publisher of the Methodist Protestant has also proposed to raise one thousand new subscribers, for that paper, by enlisting two hundred agents to obtain as many as five each. In his last paper he gives the names of twelve brethren, who have thus far complied. We have concluded to give also our list of those who have obtained five or more new subscribers for the Western Recorder since the commencement of present volume.—We are under obligations to numerous others who have thus far procured us, from one to four subscribers, and we are daily expecting to receive further intelligence from them, of encourging character.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta, Bainbridge, O.,	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.,	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.,	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves. Pittsburgh, Pa.	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer. Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements.

Administrator's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of Muskingum County, Administrator of the estate of George Torbert, deceased, late of Newton Township—All persons indebted to said estate, are requested to make settlement immediately. Likewise, all persons having claims against said estate, are notified to present them, legally authenticated. SAMUEL WOOD.

June 17, 1848.

To the Creditors of the estate of ALEXANDRIA McCRACKEN, JUNIOR, DECEASED. The subscribers have been appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of Muskingum County, Commissioners on the estate of Alexandria McCracken, Jr. Deceased, represented insolvent. The creditors of said estate will bring in and prove their claims against said estate. Claims which have been presented to the administrator will also be passed upon.

The subscribers will attend to the duties of their said appointment at the Post Office in Gratiot, on Monday & Tuesday the 26th and 27th of June, 1848, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 4 P. M. of each day.

WILLIAMS SIMS, Commmissioners.
PETER S. WESTBROOK,

May 18th, 1848.

SACRED MELODEON:

A SELECTION OF

REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.

BY REV. J. DALBY, Jr., & J. B. PEAT.

REVISED & ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public, as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while the addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publishor has received of the "SACRED MELODEON," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalbey, Jr. and Rev. J. B. Peat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist P. Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. The work is neatly excuted, with fair type & paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hymns, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS:

Per copy,	$08
Per dozen,	2 60
Fifty copies or more, per hundred,	18 00

 The above work can be obtained of Rev. A. H. Bassett, Putnam; Geo. Conclin, Cincinnati; or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern Baltimore,

A New Supply of

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

SNETHEN'S SERMONS,

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the Office of the WESTERN RECORDER.

THOUGHTS OF AN ITINERANT;

OR BRIEF CHAPTERS ON THE CHURCH OF CHRIST—ITS POSITIVE INSTITUTIONS—ITS MEANS OF GRACE, AND SOCIAL OBLIGATIONS; DESIGNED AS A FAMILY COMPANION FOR METHODISTS. BY REV. LEVI R. REESE.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this Office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

THIS WAY GENTLEMEN!!

THROUGH this medium we notify the public that we are now prepared to receive customers at our shop, Main Street, Putnam, one door north of Dr. Wm Milhous's office, and opposite the Post Office, where all the various operations in connection with our business such as Shaving, Hair-dressing, Boot-blacking, &c., &c will be attended to in the shortest, neatest, and most fashionable style, as we have secured the assistance of O. B. Blackiston, a skilful operator from the City of New York. If gentlemen will give us a call, we doubt not we will secure their patronage, as we are determined not to be outdone by any one either here or elsewhere.

G. HUNNECUTT & A. JACKSON.

Putnam, April 18, 1848.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

Fourth Volume of the American Pulpit:

THE AMERICAN PULPIT is a Monthly Magazine, published in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. It contains thirty-two pages in each number, and will be well supplied with that kind of Literature which is adapted to Ministers and Theological Students, such as Sermons, Sketches, Essays, Biographies, &c. &c.

The leading Sermon, will be of the highest order; and all the Sermons, we intend, shall bear the stamp of superiority. They will be sought, and obtained, so far as it is possible, from the most eminent Divines, on the American Continent. Arrangements are already made to accomplish this end; and no reasonable pains or expense will be spared, to make this department of the Pulpit superior to anything of the kind in existence.

The Sketches will be of the first class. We have accepted the proposals of an eminent minister in England to supply this department, partially—the Rev J BURNS, D D, of London, author of "Pulpit Cyclopedia;" &c &c. By securing the correspondence of Dr Burns, the patrons of the Pulpit will enjoy a fine opportunity of comparing British and American talent in the same pages.

In the Miscellaneous Department will be found, Essays, Biographical Sketches, Poetry, and such et cetera as shall enhance the value of the work.

The Pulpit is edited by

REV J D BRIDGE,

who will spare no pains to render it not only a welcome visiter to the Minister's study, but a 'profitable' one.—The work is evangelical in its character, and will avoid all controversy, except with sin and the popular errors of the day.

Its patrons, hitherto, have been gathered from all of the orthodox denominations in the country, all of whom the Publisher hopes to return. And we wish it distinctly understood, that Ministers in all the evangelical denominations are invited to become contributors to the pages of he Pulpit. We solicit from them, Sermons, Sketches of Sermons, or Criticisms, on any subject within the compass of Homiletics; and, that no one may feel embarrassed in his desire to accept this invitation, we shall dispense wish the "List of Contributors" which has formerly appeared on our cover. We do this not out of any disrespect to any of the worthy names in that List, but that others may not be deterred from contributing, because not numbered in the distinguished catalogue.

By far the largest amount of matter contained in the Pulpit will be 'original;' but it will also be enriched by choice 'selections' from Books and periodicals.

Terms--One Dollar Per Annum, in Advance.

The Pulpit will be mailed regularly during the latter part of the month preceding that of its publication, so that it may reach its destination, in ordinary cases, by the first of each month.

We solicit Agents for the work. We will allow them a reasonable and just compensation for their services, and we authorize all the ministers of every evangelical denomination, and all laymen who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and who desire the extension of his kingdom on earth, to co-operate with us in extending the circulation of this work.

All orders for the work and all remittances for the same should be addressed to

SAMUEL CHISM, Publisher,
Worcester, Mass., U. S.

DR. PEASE'S

VEGETABLE RENOVATING PILLS.

These Pills are composed of the best Medicinal plants in the country, and are so compounded as to possess the most valuable Cathartic, Sudorific, Expectorant, and Tonic Properties, acting in perfect harmony with Nature's Laws, in expelling from the system all morbific matter, wherever found.—Being well adapted to the constitution, they cleanse the Stomach and Bowels, equalize the circulation, restore the perspiratory action of the skin, excite a healthy action of the Liver. In short, they correct and regulate all the secretions, thereby restoring the true Physiological action of the whole animal economy.

Could the numerous flattering testimonials of the great success and perfect safety of this Medicine be here submitted for inspection, they would satisfy the incredulous and dispel the doubts of even the most skeptical. These Pills are not injured by age or climate.

For sale at the store of W. Munch & Co.

tn,wmOuP: March 30, 1848.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford Collectep from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

POET'S CORNER.

HYMN.

Approach not the altar
With gloom in thy soul,
Nor let thy feet falter,
From terror's control.

God loves not the sadness
Of fear and mistrust;
O serve him with gladness,
The Gentle, the Just.

His bounty is tender,
His being is Love,
His smile fills with splendor
The blue arch above.

Confiding, believing,
Oh, enter always
His courts with thanksgiving,
His portals with praise!

Nor come to the temple
With pride in thy mien;
But lowly and simple,
In courage serene.

Bring meekly before him
The faith of a child;
Bow down and adore him
With heart undefiled.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

PROPOSED COLLEGE.

Mr. Editor: I learn that pursuant to notice, a public meeting took place in the Methodist P. Church, Brownsville, on the 27th of last month, whose principal object was to settle the site question of the proposed college. A chairman and secretary being duly elected, the minutes of last meeting were called for and read by the secretary, the subscription papers were then called for, handed in, and footed, when it appeared that the subscription in favor of the college being built in Gratiot was the largest; being unavoidably absent myself I cannot give the exact sums, but such are the facts. The public in general felt unwilling to subscribe until the villages themselves settled the site; hence the subscription was not sufficiently large to warrant immediate procedure, so that it is likely the matter may rest till we get the advice of our Annual Conference on this all important subject. Meantime, permit me in all kindness but plainness to address a word to two classes of my friends.

1st. Property holders in Gratiot and especially you who have made fortunes from the custom of the farmer and mechanic and whose real estate must unavoidably be greatly enhanced in value by the proposed institution—if you ever expect to see a college built in Gratiot, lay a willing shoulder to the wheel yourself. See that you spread upon the Muskingum Annual Conference table a subscription proffered and good, that will do honor to yourselves and the village you live in, and be worthy of the object it is intended for. Friends of the college everywhere, speedily identify yourselves with the college enterprise, change the they do to we do. The brother or sister who gets up an independent subscription, heads it, and carries it round to their neighbors and friends, and then directs it to us, shall have our acknowledgment of the same through the Recorder, or by private letter as they choose.—May we venture to expect several such? We want an independent college or no college. By this we mean a college when finished, free of debt. Upon no other terms can we agree to accept of it; and if our well-wishers would all become willing actors, how easily would our terms be complied with.

To stimulate you all to action let me inform you there is a town of much more renown than ours that already has its proposals not yet lying on the conference table, but taken up and in the hands of a committee of the Muskingum Conference, for our college to be placed there.—Think not that our beautiful site in Gratiot, high and healthy as it is, in the centre of a triangle of three flourishing county seats, surrounded by a country just entering upon its first stage of conveniencies, refinements, and luxuries, with travelling accommodations to suit the most fastidious, think not that all these and many more we might add, without your warm welcome, exhibited by your liberal action, will outweigh in the minds of the learned faculty that must live here the polished society of Steubenville. But

2d. A word to the officiary of the Muskingum Conference. Brethren, we have once and again appealed to you, and entreated a word of counsel from you in this college matter, but from some unknown cause, still "dread silence reigns." Your apparent apathy hath done us great injury: it would be a kindness to the church if some brother would show to the world that we, and not you, are to blame, for it is better that one member perish than the whole body should be cast into———. We unhesitatingly in plain prose repeat our sentiments to you on this subject, the time is arrived when you must either act or retract. As a church, you must patronize Education or as a church like one of old, "Go into the wilderness." The boys of thirteen here tell us "it is time for quack preachers to move farther west."

We covet your patronage for our college, (if we get one,) because your field of operation is so extensive, no other church without a college occupies one-third of the ground that you do. We covet your patronage, because your republican church government is in full accordance with our civil institutions, common-sense and christianity, (the very essence of which, is that individual voluntaryism be co-extensive with individual accountability:) We covet your patronage because many who are not professors of religion would prefer rather to have their sons educated under your liberal and republican principles than any other. But we covet no passive patronage, active or none. You can if you will come to conference prepared, one and all of you, to speak decidedly upon this matter, and oblige your brother,

WM. HAMILTON.

Crofthead, June 12, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A CHAPTER ABOUT NOTHING.

Mr. Editor,—The spirit of scribbling is upon me. Write I must—and write I will; and as I have nothing particular to write about, I shall write particularly about nothing. And if you should consider my article worth nothing you may let it go for what it is worth.

Well, a great deal of labor is spent in doing nothing. A great deal of breath, in saying nothing. And a great many hours of close application, in learning nothing. And the benefit arising out of all this labor, Nihil est.

For instance. There is my neighbor Mr. Bustle, who upon the death of his father come in possession of a very good tract of land—partialy improved. Splendid plans of improvement filled his mind and employed his tongue, nor was this all. A marsh upon his premises must be drained. To work he went with several hired hands and commenced a broad, deep ditch. After several days of hard labor he happened to think that as harvest was approaching it was important that he should have a better barn. Well, the ditch was abandoned never to be resumed. The woods resounded with the sound of axes, and in a short time the timber was hewn ready for the building. Just at this time, the stock broke into his crop, and it was necessary to build a new fence. At it he went, and the timber of his barn lies rotting on the ground till this day. After splitting a quantity of rails he concluded as his other work was pressing him he would patch up the old fence, so that it would do for the present, and so it has done ever since. Thus it is with my friend Mr. Bustle. Beginning many impsovements and finishing none, so that after several years and many hard days labor he has really done just nothing.

Again. There is our good brother Loquacity, quite a fine man in his own way, but whose organ of self-esteem is very largely developed.—He is a licensed preacher and (in his own opinion at least) is a most splendid orator. A Whitefield, Chalmers or Stockton could'nt hold a candle to him. Listen what a text he takes. That passage has puzzled critics and divines for ages, but it is nothing hard for a man of his abilities to make it as plain as A. B. C. Now he commences his introduction. The steam is soon raised and he is in full head way. Long hard words, half finished sentences and broken paragraphs are piled upon one another in sublime confusion, and all uttered with an impetuosity and vehemence of gestures and utterance becoming so great a subject and so great a man. After having thus spent at least an hour, he lowers his voice. Tells his audience that this short introduction must suffice as he intends brevity, and must proceed to present the principal features of the subject. Now he is under full blast again, presenting the important features of the text, but Lavater himself would have been puzzled to have told any thing about its physiognomy, such a mixing up of features is perfectly bewildering. Now he's done—and when the hearer comes to reckon up the amount of all these three hours' hard talking he finds it to be just about nothing.

Once more.—There is the beautiful and accomplished Miss Romance Reader, who from her thirteenth year has been most assiduously engaged in perusing works of fiction, night after night she sat in almost breathless interest by the wasting taper till the midnight hour. Thus all her leisure hours were passed away for five years. When the learned and pious Mr. Consideration hearing of her beauty and intelligence paid her a visit thinking she would probably be a very desirable companion for life. But after a few hours conversation with her he discovered that notwithstanding all her reading she knew little or nothing.

Many more examples might be given, but my time and space will not admit, so I must close by saying—nothing.

S. W. W.

Boxley, Ia., June 2nd, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett: With others we regret the condition of Columbia Circuit, but surprised to learn that we are considered in part as the cause of it. A contributor to the columns of the Western Recorder, of June 1st, over the signature of "A Member" (whether designedly or not we cannot say) is the author of the charge. In his communication we read as follows: "Those acquainted with Columbia Circuit know that there is a diversity of sentiments respecting some subjects in common agitation, especially slavery, and it would need but little investigation by the unprejudiced to decide that those that have had the charge of this circuit for the last two or three years have not always remembered the injunction. 'Be ye wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.'" It has not been quite two years since the writer of this took leave of Columbia circuit. He therefore wishes to know of "A Membe" if there is an allusion to him in his communication: if so requests him over his proper signature to point out those indiscretions of which he has been guilty and he will try to avoid them in the future.

W. W. TIPTON.

Portsmouth Circuit, June 7th, 1848.

[We shall sympathise with the feelings of our brother, but take for granted that allusion was not made to him by the above mentioned writer. Any further explanation we trust therefore will be made in private correspondence. Ed.]

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett: While the brethren have been discussing the propriety of the distruction of the "Restrictive Rule," I have been reading their arguments, hoping to be able to ascertain who is dissatisfied with the present rules of the Church. Are the membership weary of having a change of ministers, as the rule provides, or are the ministers becoming weary with having to remove once in two or three years to different fields of labor? If this is the cause of the dissatisfaction, is there not danger of prizing ease more than the promotion of the cause of Christ? How unlike our venerable fathers who brooked difficulties of the most trying nature in order to preach the gospel & establish the principle of Mutual Rights. Would it not be well for us to remember how the Church was agitated by the perplexing subject of slavery, and shall we begin anew to agitate a subject that bid fair to injure if not to rend the church asunder! O, when will the time come when the "watchmen shall see eye to eye," and when riches shall have no charms to attract the minds of men from virtue and truth?

Yours,

J. L. BORTON.

Lima, Ohio, June 8, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A Word from the West on the Restrictive Rule.

Br. Bassett: Dear Sir.—I wish to inform you that we are knocking along tolerably here. Protestantism is rising gradually. The Harvest is great, the laborers are few. May the Lord send forth more laborers into his vineyard. The discussion on the Restrictive Rule is doing us no good in the far west. The opponents of our church point to the dissatisfaction among us on the above named rule with satisfaction, as affording evidence that our Itinerancy will eventually die. And should the time ever come when the Restrictive Rule will be done away, then as a church we will go into non-existence, or at least within its precincts. I go in for a thorough Itinerancy. And think we should be a little more strict on the Restrictive Rule. Whenever a minister is not willing to move once in two or three years for the good of the cause, something with him is wrong. The talents of our ministry should be as widely spread through our Conferences as possible, and experience as well as observation teach us that it can extensively spread alone by adhering to our Restrictive Rule.—Should our rule be done away, popular ministers would get the popular places, and a fat salary would constitute a popular place. Then farewell to Itinerancy. Should the time ever come that a minister can stay as long as he and the flock can agree, then all those ministers who did not agree to stay a long time in a place, would soon have no place, and thus the ministry of the Church would be a congregational ministry, and there is where the matter would end.

WM. E. MARTIN.

Honey Creek, Ill., June 8, 1848.

From the N. Y. Evangelist.

FRANKING, &c.

A friend of ours has put into our hands a duodecimo volume of 540 pp., entitled "The Constitution of the United States of America, with an alphabetical analysis: the Declaration of Independence; the prominent political acts of Geo. Washington; electoral votes for all the Presidents and Vice-Presidents; the high authorities and civil officers of government, from March 4, 1789, to March 3, 1847; Chronological Narrative of the several States, and other interesting matter; with a descriptive account of the state papers, public documents, and other sources of political and statistical information at the seat of government. By W. Hickey."—With the exception of the decorations, consisting of two engraved title pages (additional to the title page which we have just copied) and a caricature likeness of President Washington, the volume is well got up, both to the mechanical part as well as to the editing. It is a compilation, in a small compass, of important documents and facts: and as a book of reference it must be very useful to lawyers, statesmen and political editors, and indeed to intelligent persons generally.

Our object, however, in thus noticing the volume before us, is not merely to commend it.—We would call public attention to the manner in which the work is published and distributed, and to the illustration, thus afforded, of the recklessness with which our public men at Washington spend money which is not their own.

The book is formally 'inscribed' on the third page, "to George Mifflin Dallas, Vice-President of the United States, and President of the Senate;" and on the next page are printed the following resolutions of the Senate, bearing date Feb. 18, 1847:

"Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to procure for the use of the Senate. two thousand copies of the authentic copy of the Constitution, with an analytical index, and compilation of other public documents, recently printed and placed in the hands of the members, provided the price shall not exceed the sum of one dollar and twenty-five cents per copy.

Resolved, That ten thousand additional copies of the authentic copy of the Constitution, &c., be procured for the use of the Senate, provided they will be furnished at a deduction of 20 per cent. on the price above stated."

To these resolutions, is appended an extract from an act of Congress entitled "An act to establish certain post routes, and for other purposes," which act was "approved 3d March, 1847," a few days only after the passage of the resolutions; and the extract is given by the editor for the sake of showing to all persons having any scruples on the subject, "the provision under which this book may be transmitted by mail free of postage." That our readers may not lack so important a piece of information, we give them the "provision" as we find it:

"Such publications or books as have been or may be published, procured, or purchased by either House of Congress, or a joint resolution of the two Houses, shall be considered as public documents, and entitled to be franked as such."

The plain English of the resolutions is, that the Senate agrees to purchase of 'Col. Hickey,' by whose personal endeavors the votes appear to have been procured, twelve thousand copies of his useful compilation, and to pay for the same the aggregate sum of twelve thousand and five hundred dollars;—a very neat operation, undoubtedly, for the aforesaid "Col. Hickey," to whom the twelve thousand copies could not have cost more than 4,000 & five hundred dollars, unless, indeed, his printers and bookbinders have taken him in almost as badly as the munificent Senate have taken in the people. The two resolutions of the Conscript Fathers were in fact a donation of not less than eight thousand dollars to the meritorous "Col. Hickey," whose book is dedicated to the President of the Senate. Let it no more be said that republics have no patronage for men of letters, when we see a single dedication rewarded in a style so princely.

The law by which these books, purchased "for the use of the Senate," are made "public documents," and are allowed accordingly to be sent by mail, without charge, to all parts of the United States, under the frank of any member of Congress, has the appearance of being a part of the same piece of business with the purchase of books from 'Col. Hickey.' The Senate could not possibly have turned their purchase to any account, nor could they have made any show of doing so, if the Senators had not taken care at the same time to provide for the enlargement of their franking privilege. Twelve thousand "copies of the authentic copy of the Constitution," &c., had they been designed simply, and bona fide "for the use of the Senate," might have lasted, with reasonable care in the use of the books, a thousand years at least, which is quite as long as the Constitution itself is likely to endure.—The obvious fact is that the books, instead of being purchased "for the use of the Senate," in any honest sense of the word use, were purchased for distribution. It is somewhat remarkable that men who hold the entire government of the United States have no power to appropriate money for the improvement of the harbors of our great Northern Lakes, or for increased facilities of communication along the mighty rivers of the West, do not sometimes think of protesting against appropriations of money by a single House of Congress, for the wholesale purchase and distribution of books which the members of that House can never use. In what section of the Constitution is the Senate invested with power to purchase books for distribution?

We have had the curiosity to estimate the postage of the volume as postage is charged upon pamphlets. The weight, without the envelope, is 41 ounces; and but for the frank of the Senator, the postage would have been 42½ cents. Admitting, then, that two thousand copies out of the twelve thousand have been, or are to be, distributed without the agency of the Post Office Department, the postage on the ten thousand that have been or are to be conveyed in the mails, will amount to $4,250. Add this to the $12,500 paid for the books, and we have the sum total of $16,750, which this little operation on the part of the Senate is to cost the country.

Such are some of the abuses which grow out of the franking privilege, and will continue to grow out of it till it shall be abolished. Had it not been for that mischievous and demoralizing privilege, the Senators who participated in the transaction we have been exposing, would never have thought of making such a purchase; nor could the unworthy idea of thus enriching himself at the public expense ever have occurred to "Col. Hickey." All honest men, who desire to see honesty in high places, must unite in demanding an entire reform in our Post Office arrangements. Let us claim, with voices too many and too loud to be resisted, that "cheap postage," which cannot be had but by the abolition of the franking privilege. Let us demand it in the name of all those moral and religious interests, as well as in the name of those commercial interests, to which the reform will be so manifestly subservient.

Geological Surveys of the Government in the Northwest.

Through the kindness of a friend who is attached to the survey, we are in possession of the following details of the operations for the coming season.

The Government has ordered, in addition to the usual lineal surveys of the public lands, a survey of all the region of Lake Superior and the waters of the Upper Mississippi, with reference to minerals.

This great work is carried under the supervision of Dr. D. D. Owen, of New Harmony, for the Chippeway land district, embracing Northern Wisconsin, Iowa and Minesota, and of Dr. C. T. Jackson, of Boston, for the Lake Superior land district, which includes the Northern part of Michigan. The principal geologists have each a corps of Assistants.

Dr. Owen has for 1st assistant Dr. J. G. Howard, of Madison, Indiana, and assistants, Dr. B. F. Schumorf, of Louisville, Mr. A. Randall, of Cincinnati, Col. Charles Whattlesey, of this place, Dr. Litton, of St. Louis, and Mr. B. F. Macy, of New York, Mr. Evans, of Washington City, Secretary and Assistant.

Mr. Bartlett, of Cincinnati, accompanies Mr. Randall, as naturalist. Mr. Henry Patton, of Mt. Vernon, Indiana, is the ornithologist. Mr. Parry, of Davenport, Iowa, goes out as botanist. Mr. Meeks, of Owenboro, Ky., and Mr. Haines, are attached as field explorers.

Five parties will be formed, who will travel partly by bark canoes along the streams, and in part by land. A reconnoisance of the region was made last year, and a report made by Dr. Owen to the Secretary of the Treasury, to whose department the survey belongs.

Departing from St. Anthony's Falls one party will ascend the St. Peters, another the Mississippi, and a third Rum river. One is already on the Des Moines, approaching its source, and another on the tributaries of the Mississippi below the Falls on the west side.

It is a part of the duty of these parties to report upon the agricultural value of the country. If portions of it are found to be rich in minerals, by a law of Congress such sections when surveyed are to be reserved from sale, and when sold, to bear a higher price. Where lands are so poor as not to be sectionized, and the expense of the line surveys will be saved.

A general report upon the natural history of the Upper Mississippi will be required of the expedition. Their explorations will extend northward to the British line.—Cleveland Herald.

Fire at Brooklyn.—A destructive fire in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Monday night, destroyed eight buildings, rendering houseless thirty-five families. The buildings destroyed were a frame dwelling of Mr. Dougherty; five houses owned by Farrell and Monhon, a large four story brick owned by Mr. O'Brien, occupied by upwards of twenty-four families, with a two story brick belonging to the same gentleman. The buildings were all partially insured.

Accident.—A drayman by the name of Charles McShane, living on Maddocks Alley, was badly hurt yesterday, near the corner of Penn and St. Clair streets. His horse became fractious, and in trying to hold him, the bridle broke throwing Mr. McS. upon the ground, cutting his face and head in a shocking manner. Before he could regain his feet, the horse started, and one of the dray wheels passed over his leg, above the knee, and fractured it very badly. He was immediatly carried home.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

Earthquake.—The town of Siena, Tuscany, on the 12th and 13th ult., was thrown into great alarm by a succession of earthquakes, each more violent than the preceding, affecting the surrounding country to a considerable distance.—The direction of the shock was southwest. On the night of the 13th the agitation of the earth was so violent, that the whole population of the town quitted their houses and bivouacked in the open air. Experiments made in the Cabinet of Natural Philosophy of Siena have shown that the electric fluid had acquired a most extraordinary intensity.

Absolution of Murderers.

Some thirty years since there lay a regiment in Malta, formed chiefly of Irish. Repeated cases of assassination had occurred; at last there was one in which the culprit was taken with "red hands." He was put under arrest, with positive orders that no one should be allowed to visit him. He was tried, convicted, and condemned. The priests went and were excluded under the general order. They urged their office, but were still refused, and the affair looked very serious. They reported it to the bishop; and the bishop went to the governor; he said simply, that his orders were definitive. The day of execution arrived; the man was led out. The governor, Sir———, was on the ground. The priests again urged their suit that they might administer the rites of religion. The man threw himself on his knees, and besought that he might not be sent out of the world without absolution. The governor said, "You sent your comrade so, and you go too." The man was executed, and from that day the regiment lost its murderous character.

Great Hurricane.—The Detroit Advertiser of the 31st ult. says that the violent gale which visited that town a few evenings previous, was felt in all parts of the State. A young lady, about sixteen years of age, named Margaret Dyer, residing on the south side of Beardsley's Prairie, was instantly killed by the falling of a tree.—Several houses were blown down.

Shortening the Mississippi.—When we speak of shortening the Mississippi we mean what we say. It has actually been shortened 25 miles or more, near Point Coupee, La., as it will be seen by the following extract from the Point Coupee Echo. "The Raccourci Cut Off is now complete. The largest class of steamboats pass thro' up and down without any difficulty. It is about 400 yards wide and the bank constantly caving. We have been told by an eye witness that the largest trees in the forest will go down root foremost and the tops of them entirely disappear. The Natchez in passing through on Thursday, threw her lead and could not find bottom. This is truly a work of astonishment, and the State, in fact the inhabitants of the valley of the Mississippi, are greatly indebted for this great improvement to the indefatigable exertions of our State Engineer, Colonel H. T. Williams, and the Colonel Daniel Hoard, whose skill has already been tested as an engineer, in putting in operation the Feliciana railroad. The distance, say 28 miles, in the old channel, a common running steamboat would be three hours in going round, and now, we are told, that a fast boat can run through the Cut Off in ten minutes and in one or two minutes down, thus saving two hours and fifty minutes, and the wood that a large steamboat would burn in the difference of the time would be nine cords, which at $2.50 per cord would amount to $22.50, so that every large steamer will save that amount at least. The expenses of a large boat are about $5 per hour.

Telegraph in South America.—An electric magnetic telegraph apparatus had arrived at Lima, Peru, and the account of it, and the various details of this great invention, are copied into the 'Mercurio' from the Peruvian papers. It is proposed to erect a telegraph line between Lima and 'Callao,' and the 'Mercurio' recommends the Chilian government to establish lines between the principal cities. It is Morse's telegraph which is now in Peru, and the account of it gives him full credit for the invention.—Anglo Saxon.

The Sabbath in New Jersey.—John Randolph, of the Mercer county court, has called the attention of the Grand Jury to the constant violation of the various railroads and canals in the State. The law, he says, for the due observance of the Sabbath, is applicable alike to all, and if the moral sense of the community require that it be enforced alike on all, it will be done and the evil will cease. Morse's Telegraph, he thinks, supersedes the necessity of cars running on Sunday with the mails, but this will compel the telegraph operators to continue their Sunday labors.

Homeward Bound.—The barque Warwick, Capt. Lowry, and the barque Gen. Jessup, Capt. Anthony, have been chartered at Philadelphia to the government to bring home the volunteers now in Mexico. Negotiations are in progress for other vessels, but the number unemployed in New York occasions so much competition, that they can be obtained cheaper there than the ship owners of Philadelphia are willing to accept.

Honorable Testimonial.—The Council of the Royal Geographical Society of London have awarded one of their gold medals this year to Capt. Wilkes, of the United States Navy, for the talent and zeal he has shown in his conduct of the scientific expedition entrusted to his care during five years.

Horrible Accident.—On Monday afternoon a shocking accident took place on the premises of Mr. Samuel Jackson, Pyrotechnist, in Philadelphia, by which a young lady named Mary Ann Jenkins in the seventeenth year of her age, was burned to death, and a boy named Edward Bowman, of the same age, was also shockingly burned. The accident resulted from the boy too quickly ramming a rocket upon which he was engaged. It ignited from friction, and the combustible materials contained in the shop became instantly ignited also. The clothing of the young lady was soon enveloped in flames, and before she could be rescued from the building was dreadfully burned from head to foot—her clothing being burnt to a tinder, and even her shoes shrivelled up to half their original size. She died after dreadful suffering, about half past 8 o'clock. She was shortly to have been married.

Spare Minutes.—Spare minutes are the gold dust of time; and Young was writing a true as well as striking line, when he taught that "sands make the mountain, moments make the years." Of all the portions of our life, the spare moments are the most fearful in good or evil. They are the gaps through which temptations find the easiest access to the garden of the soul.

Dreadful Steamboat Explosion.

We learn by the steamboat J. W. Russell, the particulars of a dreadful steamboat explosion of the boilers of the steamboat H. Kinney, C. Miller, Captain. The sad event occurred on Sunday, at one o'clock, P. M., at Wilkins' woodyard, which, we believe, is not far from Bladon Springs, on the Tombigbee River. Both boilers were burst tearing the boat in all directions, and sinking her within a short time after the accident.

There are eight persons killed or missing and twelve scalded or otherwise wounded.

He who, with a consciousness and acknowledgment of great imperfection, trusts in the righteousness of Christ, is a better Christian than a more perfect man who trusts in his own.

Advertisements.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

Dr. Le Roy has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED.
READ AND BE WISE.

All those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

This establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

SundaySchool Books—New Supply.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF BOOKS suitable for Sunday School Libraries, comprising recent publication of the American Sunday School Union, together with the two cent Hymn Book and the

Child's Cabinet Library,

containing 75 books bound in 50 volumes 32 mo. 32 pp. with morocco backs, lettered and numbered, only $2,50 for the Library, being at the rate of 5 cents per volume

Also, a good variety of books, in plain and elegant binding, selected with special reference to the coming

HOLYDAYS.

For sale at the Sunday School Depository.

J. METCALF, Agent.

Putnam, Dec. 13, 1847.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,00. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT. Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

Office Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gilt Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an Education wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St., New York City.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 40. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, JULY 6, 1848. WHOLE NO. 456

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,
AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO
OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

THE SHOWER.

BY REV. RALPH HOYT.

In a valley that I know—
Happy scene!
There are meadows sloping low,
There the fairest flowers blow,
And the brightest waters flow,
All serene:
But the sweetest thing to see,
If you ask the dripping tree,
Or the harvest hoping swain,
Is the rain!

Ah, the dwellers of the town,
How they sigh,
How ungratefully they frown,
When the cloud-king shakes his crown,
And the pearls come pouring down
From the sky!
They descry no charm at all
Where the sparkling jewels fall,
And each moment of the shower
Seems an hour!

Yet there's something very sweet
In the sight,
When the crystal currents meet,
In the dry and dusty street,
And they wrestle with the heat,
In their might!
While they seem to hold a talk
With the stones along the walk,
And remind one of the rule,
To 'keep cool!'

But in that quiet dell,
Ever fair,
Still the Lord doth all things well
When his clouds with blessings swell,
And they break a brimming shell
On the air;
There the shower hath its charms,
Sweet and welcome to the farms,
And they listen to its voice,
And rejoice!

A Sermon.

Written for the Western Recorder.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD, NOT AN ARTICLE OF NATURAL RELIGION.

1 Cor. 15, 20 and 21.—But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.

For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

In the discussion of this subject we propose in the first place to notice some of the opinions held in the ancient world respecting man's destiny,—and secondly to consider the doctrine of the text;—the cause of the resurrection.

I., Then, the opinions of the ancients.

It is known that many speculations were entertained by the Sages of Antiquity respecting the present condition, and the final destiny of man. Many believed that his existence was really prolonged after death; but where, or in what manner, were to them, mysteries the most profound. Some were led by observing the operations of nature in one department of her extensive work to adopt the doctrine of transmigration, or the passage of souls from one body to another. Others, among whom were Epicurus and his followers, losing all hope of the continuation of their existence, entertained the idea that the soul was the body, and the body the soul; and that death was a slumber from which they would never awaken,—and that the Eternity unto which they were hastening, was similar to that from which they had come forth; and as they recollected nothing in the depths of the far off past, when as yet they had no being,—so they concluded that the future would bring for them no conscious existence; and, that therein would be found no substance, no shade, no sun, no star to illume its gloomy depths;—in short—they regarded the Eternity awaiting them, as a realm where utter nothingness held its court and reigned without a rival.

Believing this, and dreading the long dark night into the gloom of which they must shortly plunge;—many, to snatch their names from oblivion, and to hand them down to time's latest generation, were led to put forth their mightiest effort; and with that effort Empires arose, or were dissolved, philosophy and science shed forth their light,—art came forth in its beauty, and spoke from the lips of the almost breathing marble—and those noble monuments of man's power sprang into existence, which are destined to brave every storm, survive every shock, and preserve the memory of their builders until time itself shall end, though their names be buried in the oblivion of swiftly rolling years. Whilst this class were thus engaged,—others on the wings of imagination explored Elysium, proclaimed its attractions, filled it with Gods and Demi-Gods, and a splendid Mythology at once had existence, whose admirers were held entranced in a glorious day-dream, gazing enraptured on the glittering panorama spread out before them. Their mythology was indeed splendid,—but it wanted life; and destitute of life, it could edify its votaries but for a season. The mind sought perpetually for something more tangible; desired continually a more sure foundation whereon to build the superstructure of hope than was therein presented. Gods pertaking the lowest vices of the human race, being jealous, malicious and cruel; delighting in war, rapine and blood, could not long hold man's free enquiring spirit in subjection; and, consequently, investigations began to be made into the nature of matter and mind, in order to find out, and be assured of the existence of, and to become acquainted with the character and attributes of the Great God. Zeno, and his disciples, imagined the true light had dawned upon them; imagined they had found the object, and end of their investigation—God, referred the creation of the world to his power;—received the doctrine of providence, general and special;—and believed he would perpetuate the soul's existence after its departure from the body; but as to the manner of its existence, they had no knowledge; and the doctrine itself was far from being demonstrated to their minds as truth. At best, it was a bright hope fluttering amid the surrounding darkness.—It was a fond desire, that whispered peace amid contending emotions in their hearts, and they suffered it to remain, nor sought to drive it forth. With all the research upon this subject, the soul's immortality was not brought to light, nor had a thought once entered human heart, that the body, the tenement of the soul was destined to be rebuilt—revived—and that the soul and body of man should be reunited and flourish in an indestructible union for ever. These great principles of Christianity were too noble, too sublime, too mighty, to be grasped, to be simplified, and made plain by unassisted reason; and, consequently, mind and body were weighed downward to earth under the contemplation and sense of their own weakness, and in most minds gloomy forebodings of annihilation found a place in spite of all philosophy could do. Hence we find the doctrine of the soul's immortality, a doctrine of natual religion, was doubted after reason had striven her utmost to confirm and establish its truth.

II. We now come to the consideration of the second part of the subject. The doctrine of the text—the cause of the resurrection.

Man's immortality was doubted, his destiny was enshrouded in the most profound mystery. The age preceding that in which hope dawned upon the world; this age with all its learning,—its art, philosophy & science; this age with all its glories, may fairly be styled the age of sadness & of gloom, of darkness and distress. The hope of Israel was departing; the law had lost its power to edify, being contaminated and defiled by the traditions of men. All were seeking with avidity the bubbles of worldly honor and fame. For fame the priest sought the altar, the soldier the field, and statesman the Forum. God was forgotten, the soul was forgotten, all worthy to be remembered was forgotten; men thought of nothing so much as to engrave their names on fame's proud roll, that after generations might behold their mighty deeds and shed a tear to their memory.

"Darkness indeed covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people;" but, then "the word was made flesh." Then a star arose, whose bright effulgence streaming o'er the darkened world would light the straying sons of time to immortality in realms of bliss. Then a bubbling fountain of free grace bounded from the earth, at which mortals might quench their thirst, and thirst no more forever. Then a Son was given; his name, Emanuel—"God with us." Jesus, arrayed in mortal flesh to save his people from their sins; Christ the anointed—sent to lead his creatures forth from the dark prison-house of Satan, where, bound in chains of ignorance and sin, they had lain for ages without one single ray of hope, or gleam of that day that knows no night. Aye, sent to break the bands of the captive, to say unto him, Go forth, be free; to enlighten his understanding, impart to him a hope of blessedness and life to come, and to enable him to rejoice with joy unspeakable, "the Holy Ghost being given unto him." This light was dispensed, this knowledge imparted, and this hope, "the anchor of the soul," conferred by his teaching. Yet this was not all—man covered by defilement as with a garment, and entirely undone through transgression, original and actual, was unfit, and so long as he should remain in this condition must ever have remained unfit for heaven and its glorious society.

This unfitness was not the effect of any constraining influence exerted upon man by his Author, for he disclaims exerting such an influence upon him; nor was it the effect of external objects on his mind that led him to the act of rebellion by which he lost his purity, neither was his mind forced by the devil. Satan could tempt, but could not force man to sin. It follows, then, through his own will, man violated the law that had been given alike as the seal of his agency and the test of his obedience. That man had will, and that will is free, is sufficiently evinced to us in that God made him subject to law.

A law is a rule of action given from a superior to an inferior being, and being a rule of government, of conduct, a power is recognized as existing in the ruled, by which he is enabled to keep or violate the rule at pleasure. As law may be given either naturally, i. e., by way of internal impression upon the mind, or constitution of the ruled; or positively—that is by external revelation to his senses, so any constraint exercised upon man must have been through one of these channels, and if God exercised such constraint, He by this constraint "vetoed" the first act, and instituted a second, by which the thing that before was unlawful to be done, was now by the latter act made perfectly right and fitting in the sight of the Lawgiver. In that case, then, there was no transgression from the fact there was no law violated. And if no law has been violated, man is not fallen, is not depraved. But we cannot receive these conclusions. We cannot think man occupies the high and honorable position in which he was originally placed by his Creator; and therefore we conclude that God never constrained man to an evil act; and, also, that man by his own act, through his own mutable, self-determining will, violated God's law, and that thus, "by man came death." Good and evil were presented before man, and being free and unbiased in his choice, he chose evil, with all its fearful concomitants. Through this act he became a debtor unto God. A claim was held against him which he was utterly unable to liquidate. The penalty of the law that he had violated was, "dying thou shalt die!" Now, his transgression must be atoned for, his debt must be liquidated, or the law in the case repealed by which he was condemned, before he could receive assurance of life. Until repealed, or satisfied, the condemning principle must remain in full force. Were it repealed without receiving due satisfaction, the repealer would have sanctioned its transgression; and, if a power equal to law, can alone suspend, or repeal law, then God by his act of repeal would have recognized vice, as virtue, and sin, as righteousness. But all God's laws are based on the principles of holiness and justice, which principles are as eternal as He in whom they have their origin, and he knows no change whatever. What then? It follows that either the penalty be inflicted upon the transgressor, or, that an atonement be provided, of sufficient worth to meet the exigency of the case. Who shall make this atonement? Shall man? Can the transgressor of the law restore its sanctity? If so, how? by his future obedience? Behold, "man is carnal, sold under sin, to be carnally minded is death. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to his law, neither indeed can be."—What then? It follows that they that are in the flesh cannot please God. But may not some be found free from this perversion, this carnality? "There is none that doeth good, no not one; all we like sheep have gone astray," saith the Scriptures. Then it follows that "no man can redeem his brother; or give to God a ransom for his soul, that he should live forever and not see corruption." Therefore he by whom the atonement can alone be effected must be free from the transgression of the law. Again, if a power equal to the law alone can suspend law; it follows that the atonement must be effected by a power equal to the lawgiver in the case. But God was the author of this law, and He hath no equals; if no equals, therefore if an atonement be made it must be made by God. But here seems to be an objection. It has been declared that "without the shedding of blood there can be no remission" of sins. Then as God is a Spirit, how is man to be redeemed? Who shall become surety for him? and by tasting death in his stead, thus meeting and satisfying the claim of justice, give to him the assurance that he shall not die eternally? Who will solve the problem how God may be just, and yet the justifier of the ungodly? Would we see it solved? Angels sang, "To you this day is born a prince and Saviour, which shall be unto you and all people." The character we have hitherto briefly noticed, appears in Bethlehem. See his birthplace. See the manger; the babe smiling, the incense rising, the sages worshipping! A new star marks the spot, and thither directs his worshippers. Trace him as he passes up to man's estate. Behold him there as he stands in his Father's temple! with what majesty he disputes with, and confutes the learned Scribes, and doctors of the law! as a son in his own house he appears, and speaks as one having authority there!

THETA.

CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.

Ministerial.

DON'T WAIT.

Not a moment! Go to work, read, give out the hymn, sing, pray, preach, don't wait for this man or that man, this woman or that woman, preach, preach to the walls. If you have a time, have it, keep it, hold on to it, be punctual. It is shameful, wicked, for hearers to come in, and come in, clatter, clatter, clatter, till the sermon is well nigh closed! Preach, pray, hear?—Who can? Break up this bedlam business, break it up, it is the work of Satan, souls are lost!—Stop it; can't? Lock the door. Does the man or woman, who comes lounging into church when the sermon is half ended, want to hear the gospel? No such thing. Conscience is seared, keep sentinel, God's house is a place of order.—As a general thing every one may be on the spot, some rare exceptions, to be sure. But the man who is punctual, is known as such. A city on a hill cannot be hid. Drones are drones and will be drones.—Golden Rule.

Pungent Preaching.—We verily believe that to "prophesy smooth things" is as contrary to the general wishes of hearers, as it is incompatable with ministerial duty in our promiscuous assemblies, of which sinners constitute so large a portion. The following facts, we doubt not, express the feelings and judge of all wakeful persons:

"An old man having been asked his opinion of a sermon, replied, 'I like it very well, except there was no pitch to it. I always like to have a pitch to every sermon.' I was reminded of this anecdote by a remark of a son of Neptune from Nantucket, whom I met in the gallery of a crowded church last Sabbath evening. He said it was a handsome sermon but he would have liked it better, if it had stuck the harpoon into the conscience of the sinners.—Religious Herald.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

LETTER FROM MR. HITCHCOCK, MAY, 1847.

Temperance—The King and Chiefs.

I know not that I have any where mentioned our juvenile temperance anniversary, which took place on the first of January last. It was altogether the most interesting and profitable occasion of the kind we had ever known in Molokai.

Months had been spent in previous preparation by the people, and the meeting satisfied their most sanguine expectations. Two or three days were spent in the examination of all the schools on the Island, and the result was, the conviction that education was plainly on the advance.

On New Year's day, all the children, amounting to about one thousand, assembled in the school room. Each school by itself marched out of the room, and all formed a procession nearly half a mile long. The procession was preceded by a flag, bearing the words "Wai Wale no;" and from one end to the other rang the chant from a thousand voices, "Aole au e inu rama, aole inu waina hou," and many other appropriate hymns. The procession ended by the whole company marching into the meeting-house, which fairly shook with the roar of voices rolling out the resolutions of the infant army in favor of cold water. All being seated, or rather packed, on the clean mat floor, as hundreds of spectators could not get in, the exercises commenced with prayer, and singing, by the well trained choir of Mr. Andrews. After this a speech was made by His Majesty, the King, in which he exhibited great pleasure at the scene before him, and strenuously urged the children to go on. He was followed by the premier of the nation, whose speech would have ranked well among speeches at more enlightened and favored meetings at home. He was truly eloquent, and made a deep impression on the assembly.—He was followed by Paki, high chief and member of the privy council, and he by the governor of Maui, both of whom did honor to themselves, and justice to the occasion. The remainder of the time was occupied by Mr. C. B. Andrews, and Mr. Richards, the minister of public instruction. The latter gentleman having learned that the children of one of the schools had been industrious in manual labor, and had repaired their own school-house, presented them with eight dollars, with which to purchase a clock.

After the addresses, each separate school rose and renewed their pledge to total abstinence from all intoxicating drink, and from the use of tobacco. During this, inquiry was made of each school if any one of the members had broken the pledge during the year, but few or none were known to have done so. After the renewal of the pledge, the hymn, burst simultaneously from a thousand voices.—The procession was again formed and moved on half an hour or more, to our lot where they found a feast prepared by their parents, and of which both parents and children partook, with as free a "flow of soul" as you would find at any feast in any land.

"Aole ou inu rama Aole Inu awa hou,"

We spread and furnished our table for about one hundred guests, among whom was the king and suite, the principal officers of the Island, the teachers with their wives, and strangers from other islands.

On the whole, this anniversary has created a deep sensation in favor of temperance and edution thro'out the Island, & has already abundantly compensated all the trouble and expense attending it. I am certain that the popular sentiment in favor of schools has more than doubled within the year past throughout the Island. The schools are now full. Much better order prevails. The teachers are better qualified, and the foundation of a better character in the rising generation is rapidlyly being laid.

Revival—Awakenings and Conversions.

We have held protracted meetings at Kalaupapa, at Halawa, and at the station, all of which have resulted in great good, and no doubt in the conversion of sinners. As the already visible effect of these meetings, there are now at least, two hundred who profess to be seeking the salvation of their souls. Many of these were very hopeless characters. Many who had formerly been awakened, but relapsed into stupidity, are now engaged in attending on the means of grace. A few of the number have either been received into the church or propounded. Many of the church members have been awake, and exhibited a pleasing concern for the salvation of their fellow men. The congregations throughout the Island are well filled on the Sabbath. And the Sabbath schools, both for children and adults, are full. The children, thro'out the Island, have the past year been more affected with religious truth than ever before, not excepting the great revival of 1837. And we are sanguine in the hope that not a few of them have become true Christians; small, weak, fallible Christians, to be sure, still Christ's lambs, and therefore Christians. Some few of these have, after long trial, been admitted to the privileges of the church, and others stand propounded for the same.

Ecclesiastical Arrangement.

Molokai is now divided into four divisions, in each of which is a branch of the church. Each of these branch churches has its own set of officers and overseers; and two of them have native teachers, or, if you please, preachers, who have been chosen by the people and set apart to the work of superintending the interests of the church and teaching the people in their separate fields. One of these we have tried for several months, and so far as we have been able to discover, with good results,—so good, that had we more men like him, we should proceed forthwith to commit to them so much of the responsibility of the ministry as in our opinion they could sustain. I said that both had been chosen by the people. Kanakaokai the other one and who has the care of the Kalae church, has had the office of deacon there for a long time. His responsibilities have been increased, and as he has been instrumental in effecting much good in his former sphere, we hope his usefulness will increase in the one he now occupies. It is the duty of these branch churches to manage their own affairs, if they can, so far as discipline is concerned, with the exception of suspension and cutting off. They are not empowered to receive into the church. We find that they settle many difficult cases, and manifest no little readiness in the management of offenders. And we feel confident that in time they will be prepared to be entrusted with the entire management of their church affairs.

General View of Progress and Prospects—New Houses of Worship—Meetings for Women.

On the whole, I know of no former time since our residence on Molokai, when we had more to encourage us than we now have. In many respects the pleasure of the Lord is prospering in our hands. We are gratified and praise God, when we contemplate the present circumstances of our people, compared with what they were when we arrived, whether religious or moral, social or civil. The disparity between that time and this, it would be in vain to endeavor to draw out. No one can comprehend it, who has not been familiar with that dismal state of a people which borders on the worst of heathenism, and who has not watched its progress up to a point approaching civilization. Unworthy though we are, our blessed Master has permitted us not only to plant this nursery—this fruitery—this garden, but he has given us the exalted pleasure of walking among full grown trees, laden with the fruits of the Spirit, and to enjoy the fragrance of the flowers.

The church has become large. Nearly one in five of the whole population are members.—And it may be said with truth, that few churches can be found in any land, where the word of God or the authority of religion has a more commanding influence. Education is on the advance. The superintendent of schools is well fitted for his office, and under his management they must prosper. The people are fast increasing in the acquisition of the comforts of life, and though their taxes are enormous, yet they are unspeakably better off in all respects than they were under the mildest form of despotism they ever experienced.

I am happy to say that since I last wrote you, a good substantial meeting-house has been finished by the congregation at Moakea, about one and a half hours' ride from the station. The dimensions are twenty-eight by sixty or seventy feet. We preach there every third Sabbath, and have nearly two hundred church members. It is one of the most encouraging parts of our field.

At Kalapapa, about thirty miles from the station, and where there are nearly two hundred church members, they are nearly completing a meeting house of the same kind and about the same dimensions as that at Moakea. In this congregation we endeavor to preach once in six weeks, besides several Sabbaths in succession when we reside on the mountain.

At Kamaloo, about five miles west of the station, they will, I hope, have a new meeting-house, ready to assemble in, in a week from this time. In this district we have preaching every week on Thursday and frequently on Sabbath afternoon. About the same distance east of us, we hold meetings each Friday, as also frequently on the Sabbath. The people of both these districts attend meeting statedly at the station, and with a punctuality which would surprise those in the United States, who live so far from the house of God with no way of getting there but walking.

Owing to the almost unexpected recovery of Mrs. H. from an illness which had continued for years, she has been able to devote much time to the women, and has held several meetings with them each week. You would be delighted to see the general turn-out of the women at these meetings, and the delight they seem to manifest in having the presence of their teacher. These meetings are a powerful means of good.

Ladies' Department.

The Sandwich Islanders and the sharks.

The grand recreation of the natives is the constant habit of swimming. In fact the Sandwich Islanders are all but amphibious, and seem to be as much at home in the water as on the land; and at all times of the day, men, women, and children are sporting about in the harbor, or even beyond the reef, with shoals of sharks, perhaps as their play-fellows. These varocious creatures, however, are far less likely to meddle with the aborigines than with foreigners, not that they prefer white meat to brown but because they have been taught by experience that one Hawaiian has more of the Tartar in him than a score of Europeans. There is scarcely an instance on record in which a native has suffered any serious injury from a shark. If, at any time the latter take the preliminary step of turning over on his side to get a mouthful, the former is sure at least to elude the attack by diving below the monster; while if he has a knife or similar weapon he seldom fails to destroy the enemy by carrying the war into the interior.

To return to the swimming; it was a part of our dialy amusement to watch the rapid evolutions of the performers, more particularly of the ladies, who; in the great majority of cases excelled their lords and masters in agility and science. Even in the point of strength and endurance, one woman, a short time before our arrival, had carried off the palm from her husband. The whole story is well worth telling, as illustrative of something better than toughness of muscle or supleness of limb. A man and his wife, both Christians, were passengers in a schooner, which foundered at a considerable distance from the land. All the natives on board promptly took refuge in the sea; and the man in question, who had just celebrated divine service in the ill-fated vessel, called his fellows, some of them being converts as well as himself, around him to offer up another tribute of praise and supplication from the deep in which they were struggling, to tarry, with a combination of courage & humility perhaps unequalled in the world's history, in order deliberately to worship God in that universal temple under whose restless pavement the speaker and most of his hearers were destined to find their graves.

The man & his wife had each succeeded in procuring the support of a covered bucket by way of buoy; and away they struck with the rest for Kahoolawe, finding themselves the next morning along in the ocean, after a whole afternoon and night of privation and toil. To aggravate their misfortunes the wifes bucket went to pieces soon after daylight, so that she had to make the best of her way without assistance or relief; and, in the course of the afternoon, the man became too weak to proceed, till his wife to a certain extent restored his strength by shompooning him in the water. They now had Kaloolawe in full view, after having been about four and twenty hours on the dreary voyage. In spite, however, of the cheering sight, the man again fell into such a state of exhaustion that the woman took the bucket for herself, giving him at the same time, the hair of her head as a towing line. And, when even this exertion proved to be too much for him, the faithful creature, after trying in vain to rouse him to prayer, took his arms around her neck, holding them together with one hand, & making with the other for the shore. When a very trifling distance remained to be accomplished she discovered that he was dead, and dropping his corpse, reached the land before night, having passed over upward of twenty-five miles, during an exposure of nearly thirty hours.—Simpson's Overland Journey Round the World.

Reformatory.

Sheepish, O How Sheepish!

His very walk is mean. See him—see him, how he looks; talk to him—can he hold up his head—look you in the face? What's the matter? He's a thief, sir, a thief: the meanest kind of a thief; he defrauds his neighbor, lies to him, cheats him; borrows money, promises to pay: borrows it? nay, he steals it; he never intends to refund it; he steals it: the very worst kind of theft. A common thief, a highway robber, is a gentleman, compared to this snake in the grass. Hold him up as a beacon: warn your neighbors of the scamp: benevolence demands it—the well-being of community. Such a man is a nuisance, a pest, a gangrene upon the body politic; a curse to himself, to the world; a tool of Satan. Is such a being, (call him not man,) happy? Is the devil happy? Is hell a happy place? A man that is a thief and a robber, is in hell already; a burning hell is within, and the intensity of the unconsuming flame will increase as eternity rolls on. God save the wretch! O, save him; snatch the firebrand from infinite wrath.

"Which way he flies is hell; himself is hell;
And in the lowest depth, a lower deep
Still threatens to devour him, opens wide,
To which the hell he suffers seems a heaven."
Golden Rule.

Always Late.

Late to bed, late to rise, late to prayers, late to work, late to breakfast, late to church, late to heaven. A wife chained to such a drone?—Shocking! Here the Olive Branch:

"Ye always late and slow molded carcasses, listen to us one moment if you dare. What can you be thinking of to move along at such a rate? Up from the mud—brush the barnacles from your water-logged limbs—tear the cowebs from your eyes, and scrape the thick rust from your skin. Do not stop to look and enquire and dream about it—but go to work now. It may not be too late. Beneath the rubbish, we may find something to polish, that will be of service in this mundane sphere. That is it—work away—you look all the better. The eye begins to brighten, the lip and cheek to show signs of life, and the legs fairly move. You will soon have the appearance of men."

A Word to the Wise.

"Sandwich Islands.—Temperance.—The temperance societies of Hamakua embrace all the churches and all the schools. The pledge precludes the use of Tobacco, as well as intoxicating liquors."

Reader, did you ever glance at the history of the Sandwich Islands? Never, since pentecostal day, has there ever been triumphs of grace more glorious. How came it? was the church door opened wide for the frogs of Egypt—every migratory brood of filthiness? They took high and holy ground from the first. To all "filthiness of the flesh and spirit"—what the response? "Back, back, keep back."

The Rev. Mr. Coan states that 5000 souls were added to the church in one year. This glorious revival followed immediately after the natives of these Islands had publicly abandoned the use of tobacco, by burning thousands of their curiously wrought and costly pipes in one common fire. This must have been a great conquest. At the commencement of this reform, tobacco was grown unblushingly in all the land through his route, a distance of 100 miles; but since, he has travelled the whole distance, and has not been able to fasten his eye on a single tobacco plant,—such has been the change, and the sanctifying grace of God who bringeth salvation. Glory to God.

What harm, ever, from this test? Glad tidings of great joy even now are wafted on every breeze. Sinners continue to flock to the standard of King Immanuel. Where, in all Christendom, is there a church more highly favored of God, diffusing light, life, and glory?

"The Isles of Hawaii are blessed of the Lord,
Once they were heathen, deprived of his word;
But now they are saved in Jesus's name,
And all the glad Islands rejoiced in the same."
Golden Rule.

Knock, Ring the Bell!—The door bell; ring it hard, give it a good twitch! Won't they come? Ring it again, harder, harder, fairly jerk it!—What! keep a man waiting at the door! Is this dignity? We have known some quite big sort of folks keep an individual waiting at the door or in the parlor, in suspense, some ten or fifteen minutes! Shameful!! Go, quick, dispatch the man, dispatch him, let him off! soon as possible! Time is gold, doubly precious! Keep the golden rule before you, hang it up.—Golden Rule.

An apple has been produced near Ticonderoga, having neither core nor seeds, by the following method. The experiment is worth repeating, as it may lead to important results:—"The top of a young tree was bent over and covered with earth, which took root. The tree was then cut asunder, which stopped all connection with the natural root of the tree, and, by sprouts which sprung from the top portion of the body, a regular top was formed, which produces this fine fruit—a beautiful red, good sized, very pleasing table apple in the fall."

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Connellsville, Pa., June 17th, 1848.

Br. Bassett: Having to write on business to you, we would say that we are trying to do the very best we can on this Circuit, and thank God we have not been forsaken by the Lord. We commenced a protracted effort at Munroe appointment the 15 of last April, and it continued from day to day, till the seventh of May, embracing four successive Sabbaths; it was one of the best meetings I ever was at, a deep religious excitement (without wild-fire) prevailed the whole time, twenty valuable members were added to the church, and over that number converted to God, to Him be all the praise. The toils of an Itinerant on a circuit as large as this my brother, are great, and his anxiety of mind is still greater, but when he gets into a work such as we had at Munroe, and souls are converted to God, his soul says enough, Lord, let me live and die labouring in thy vineyard. Munroe is now one of the best appointments on this ct., the membership has increased within the last two years from 14 to 46, and in proportion have they increased in bearing their part in meeting the expenses of the circuit. Please publish in your paper when Conference meets; there is a week between you and Br. Brown in your publication. You publish in your Almanac, that it meets the 29th of August. Br. Brown in his list of appointments that it commences the 22d, which is correct.

Yours in love,

HENRY PALMER.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Gilboa, Kalida Ct., June 23, 1848.

Br. Bassett: I feel myself extremely happy to have it in my power to contribute something to the great amount of revival intelligence which has appeared in the columns of the Western Recorder, during this Conference year. Since my last communication, we have held three protracted meetings, which resulted in much good. The first embraced our third quarterly meeting, which commenced the 20 of May. Here we were favored with the valuable services of Br. T. B. Graham, who labored with his usual zeal & ability, and notwithstanding the rains fell fast, and circumstances appeared unfavorble, yet we were abundantly blessed by waiting upon the Lord in the means of grace; the membership were much revived, and three united with us in church fellowship.

Our second meeting commenced on the 10th inst., five miles northwest of the town of Gilboa, and though we were entirely disappointed with regard to ministerial aid, yet the Lord met with us at our second coming together, and the voice of rejoicing was heard in the assembly of his saints. Throughout the entire meeting we were favored with refreshing seasons, and what was most affecting, was to see parents and children all starting together in the cause of Christ, and whilst bound together by the endearing ties of christian affection, greeting each other with the prospect of meeting where parting will be no more. This meeting resulted in the organization of a class of 27 members, and they are now going on in good spirits, erecting a house of worship, the frame will be raised in a few days.

Our Presidential meeting commenced on the 19th inst., and has now closed with an accession of two to the church. Br. Young is in good spirits and his labors have not been in vain, for we have had a pleasant season together. Sixty-one have united with us in church fellowship this Conference year, 15 from the M. E. Church, and 46, from nature's quarry. Prospects are fair for many more accessions, and I think that with a little care and proper exertions the time will soon come when the cause of our little republican Zion will be more prominent on these northern circuits. Brethren pray for us, that the cause of Christ may still prosper in our midst.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Supt.

From the Family Quarto.

The General Assembly of 1848.

This body, which is the highest judicatory of our Church, met in Baltimore on the 18th of May, in the first Presbyterian Church, and was opened with a sermon by the Moderator of the last Assembly, Rev. J. H. Thornwell, D. D., Professor in the South Carolina College. His text was Act xvii. 37: "And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked, and others said, we will hear thee again of this matter." The sermon is said to have been both able and lengthy, but listened to with profound attention.

After the Assembly was organized, Rev. A. T. McGill, D. D., Professor in the Theological Seminary in Allegheny city, was chosen Moderator. The ordinary routine of business consists in reviewing the records of the Synods, hearing the reports of the several Boards of benevolent operations, and of Theological Seminaries, and electing members of the Boards, and of Directors of Seminaries. Besides these, the following are the chief items of business which came before the body.

The overture sent down to the Presbyteries by the last Assembly, asking whether they would vote for an alteration in our Constitution, so as to admit of the divisions of the ministerial office, was answered by the Presbyteries, as follows: In favor of the alteration 25 Presbyteries; opposed 61; from 36 no action. Consequently there is to be no alteration of our book on this subject.

This meeting of the General Assembly was distinguished for the announcement of the death of the oldest minister in the Church, Ashbel Green, D. D., of Philadelphia; as also the decease of Dr. Matthews, professor in the Theological Seminary at New Albany, Indiana.

Two Foreign Ministers were permitted to address the Assembly. Rev. Dr. Bridell, of Paris, in France, made statements and an appeal in behalf of the evangelization of France. He spoke in the French tongue which was interpreted by Dr. Baird. At the close of this Address, a collection was taken up to aid the Evangelical Society of Paris, which amounted to $547. Dr. King, from Ireland addressed the Assembly on the religious condition and prospects of that afflicted island.

An overture came up from the Presbytery of Montgomery, in Virginia, asking whether church sessions have the power under the constitution to allow members of the church to withdraw who are not guilty of any immoral conduct, and who manifest no intention to connect themselves with any other Church. This question, it is said produced an animated discussion which, however, was choked down by the previous question, and the overture was answered in the negative. We have not discovered, from the papers, what was the precise point of this question. If the question was "Shall members be allowed to absent themselves from the church, and in consequence, the session strike their names from the church Register, we think the Assembly passed a righteous decision, in answering, no. But if that body meant to say, that in no case ought a session to give a letter of dismission to a church member, unless he manifests an intention to unite with some other church, we beg leave to say, that we hope that question may come up again; for it seems to us that such a decision contradicts the fundamental principles of church membership, & smells a little of Popery. When we get the printed minutes, we shall see what the precise question was.

The leading article of business appears to have been the appeal of Rev. Dr. Skiner against the decision of the presbytery of Lexington, Va., for suspending him from the ministry on the following charges; viz: 1. Libel and defamation. 2. Palpable misdemeanor and falsehood. 3. Manifestation of unchristian conduct. This case occupied many days with intervals of other business. The final issue was that the appeal was sustained, and Dr. Skiner was restored to the work of the ministry. Dr. Skiner is a Scotchman, not many years a resident of this country; having a peculiarity and bearing in manners which tend to involve him in difficulty with native Americans; but said to be a learned and a strong man.

Another marriage case was brought before the Assembly. J. Cathay, a lay member of the church, appealed from the decision of the Synod of North Carolina, which body had confirmed the decision of Pan Creek Church Session, suspending him from the sacraments for marrying his deceased wife's sister. This was disposed of in a short way, by referring to the previous decision in the case of Rev. A. McQeen, and the appeal was not sustained.

Some resolutions were adopted relative to the cause of Colonization in Africa, in which the churches are recommended to take collections in favor of this enterprise about the 4th of July.

The dividing line between the Synods of Cincinnati and Indiana, was so altered as to coincide with the State line.

A committee was appointed last year, of which Dr. Plumer was chairman, to report on the economy of our Boards. This report caused some discussion, and elicited some feeling on the part of the officers of the Boards who were present. The report was not adopted; but in its place, a resolution of entire confidence in the economy of the Boards. Dr. Plumer's report, however was ordered to printed in the Minutes.

Dr. McGill delivered an able discourse before the Assembly on Popery, according to the appointment of the last Assembly. It is to be published. Dr. Murray, of New Jersey, the reputed author of Kirwan's letters to Bishop Hughes, is appointed to preach the sermon on this subject next year, and Dr. Hoge of Columbus, O., his alternate.

The overture from our Synod (of Ohio) produced considerable discussion. It was voted that "where one minister is supplying two or more congregations, whether as pastor or stated supply, all such congregations shall have but one ruling Elder to represent them." But as the vote was a close one, and the house thin, many members having gone, and a dissent about being offered, it was agreed to lay the subject over to the next Assembly.

After the docket was gone through, there were two resolutions offered affirming the duty of christian masters to have their servants "born in their own house, and bought with their own money" baptised and instructed in the scriptures, and the Catechism. But they were indefinitely postponed. We are sorry for this; for it is a most plain Bible principle, and Presbyterian in particular.

After an arduous Session of fifteen days, the Assembly was dissolved; and another required to meet in May 1849 in Pittsburgh. One Hundred and one Presbyteries were represented by 113 Ministers and 76 Elders. Total 189, 13 Presbyteries not represented.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, July 6, 1848.

General Assembly, Presbyterian Church, (O. S.)—We copy this week from the Family Quarto, a condensed statement of the proceedings of this body, which may be considered, at least semi official, as it is from the same side of the house.

Foreign News.—The Zanesville Courier has intelligence by Telegraph, of the arrival of the Cambria at Boston on the 1st inst. She brings word that serious apprehensions are entertained of civil war in France. An effort had been made to place Lewis Napoleon on the throne. Six thousand mercantile houses had failed at Paris. A hundred thousand troops had been concentrated there. Two thousand rioters had been invested.

Not Losing.

We are under obligations to our worthy friend of Coal Run for the following, and especially for its accompaniments. Br. M. is a lay brother, and a regularly paying subscriber. He sends us a new subscriber with the cash in advance, accompanied with the subjoined statement, for all which we are very thankful to him.

Coal Run, Ohio, June 12, 1848.

Br. Bassett: Enclosed I send you two dollars in advance, with the name of a new subscriber which I have procured, and which I wish you to put in the place of one of those who discontinued their paper in consequence of some pieces which have appeared in your paper, against the use of that filthy weed, tobacco. All I regret is that the war was not declared long ago against it. I think it would have saved a great many young men from becoming almost, if not quite, nuisances in society. I am of the opinion that if every subscriber for your paper, that dislikes tobacco as I do, would make the effort, they might each obtain one new subscriber, which would make up, ten to one all you have lost in that way. SAMUEL MARTIN.

Concert.—Do not forget the Concert to be given this evening at the Seminary Hall, by the Juvenile Choir, under direction of Mr. Munson. Let there be a good turn out. It will be something fine.

Putnam and Zanesville.—Flour $4,50.—Wheat, 75. Corn, 25. Oats, 20, @ 25.

Cincinnati.—Flour, $3,65. Wheat 65c.—Corn, 27 @ 30c. Oats, 25 @ 28c.

Pittsburgh.—Flour, $4,00. Wheat, 81c.—Corn, 30 @ 35. Oats, 25 @ 28.

Baltimore.—Flour, $5,62. Wheat, $1,10 @ 1,15. Corn, 40 @ 44. Oats, 30 @ 38.

Constitutional Question.

In our paper of March 16, we inserted a short article from a worthy brother, signing himself, "Enquirer." That writer asked information of some one of the men still living who were members of the Convention of 1830, which formed the Constitution of the Meth. Prot. Church, in reply to the following question.

"Suppose any number of believers in Christ, should unite together as a religious society, or church, and embrace the principles of religious truth held by the Methodist Protestant Church, and adopt her Constitution, and desire to conform to her book of discipline, and means of grace, but not at the present time wish to be a component part of any circuit. Suppose they should request the superintendent of some circuit, or station, near by, to recognize them as a Methodist Protestant Church, or society, and present them to his Quarterly Conference, for its concurrence on the question of recognition. Could it be done in accordance with the said 1st item of the 4th Article of the Constitution? Or must the question of recognition, and reception, as a competent part, of some circuit or station go together?"

As no one of the senior brethren referred to, has, up to this time, responded to the enquiry, our brother has written again, requesting us to give our views upon the point.

It will be observed that Article 4, of the constitution, referred to, is headed, "On Receiving Churches." It would seem therefore that the act of recognition by a President or Superintendent, and the subsequent decision of the Quarterly Conference thereon, constitutes the process of "receiving" a society into the "Association" of the Methodist Protestant Church.—After the "decision" of the Quarterly Conference, it is the prerogative of the Annual Conference, in defining & regulating the boundaries of Cts., Stations & Missions, to determine, in what Circuit, Station or Mission the newly acquired Society shall be embraced. As however, it may best suit the convenience or wishes of the said society to be constituted a separate station or mission, rather than to be embraced in any previously existing Circuit, Station or Mission, we do not see that the society, in the interval of the Annual Conference, should necessarily be embraced, (by the act of recognition) as a component part of a particular Circuit or Station. The President has authority, (See Dis. page 60,) to appoint a missionary, in any such case, "to render service in any place not already included in some other Circuit, Station or Mission." But the matter must necessarily be disposed of by the ensuing Annual Conference. After that period, we conceive, the society cannot be considered as a component part of the M. P. Church, unless it be definitely comprised in some particular Circuit, Station or Mission, as determined by the Annual Conference.

Western Christian Journal.—This paper we consider one of our best religious exchanges. It is the chief western organ of the Baptist denominatien, published weekly at Columbus, Ohio.—We have admired the manly independence of the editors, in their opposition to the various prevalent sins and errors of the day, their zeal in behalf of the various benevolent enterprises, and their usually liberal bearing towards cotemporaries of other denominations. A few weeks ago however, we were considerably surprised to find in the leading editorial of a certain number of their paper, what seemed to be a denominational boast of the accession to their ranks, of a minister from the Methodist Protestant Church. The expression we allude to, was given in displayed letter, as introductory to a communication from Mt. Vernon, giving account of the recent revival in that place. This was the heading—"Glorious work of grace in Mt. Vernon.—Eighty-five additions to the Baptist Church in that place, one of whom was a minister in the Methodist Protestant Church." Now, we may remark, that occasionally a minister of some other denomination, sees proper to unite with our branch of the church. But in such cases we make it a point ever to refrain from making any public statement thereof that would have the appearance of boasting. And if any of our correspondents choose so to express themselves, it is done without our approval, for we dislike any thing of the kind in any quarter. When we first met with the above announcement in the columns of our respected exchange, we felt inclined to say pleasantly to the editors that there had been several instances within our knowledge in which a Baptist minister had united with our branch of the church, but unfortunately the good brethren did not remain in our connection but a very few years, though in some instances we were sorry to part with them. But that we should flatter ourself, that our Baptist brethren would find their new accession at Mt. Vernon, a man of stability. We however concluded to let the matter pass, without making any reference to it in our columns, certainly thinking, as we still do, that the editors of the "Journal" did not intend a sectarian boast, but that they only inadvertently did what has the appearance of being such. The displayed heading above referred to, has the appearance of being editorially prefixed to the communication, which also appeared under the editorial head. If we thought that the heading was given by the Journal's correspondent, we should not for a moment hold the least reflection against the editors therefor. For we should be very unwilling to take the responsibility of the terms used in some instances by some of our own correspondents. We should not have made any reference to this matter in our columns, but that the President of our Muskingum Conference, has thought it necessary to furnish us a communication, which will be found in this week's paper, chiefly in vindication of himself, in reference to the testimonial said to have been furnished by him to the seceding brother, the purport which seems to have been misapprehended, (as he thinks) by the Journal's correspondent. Our object in making this statement in connection with the communication of our friend, is to assure our worthy exchange, that we have a high respect for the Baptist denomination, that we sympathise and rejoice with them in every "glorious work of grace" wrought amongst them, and that we bid them God speed in their labors to promote the blessed interests of the glorious cause of our common Savior.

U. S. CONGRESS.

Monday, Jnne 19, House.

The Memorial of the Chicago Convention in behalf of the River and Harbor Improvements was presented, ordered to be printed, and was referred to Committee on Commerce. Mr. Crowell, by general consent, introduced the following bill.

"Be it enacted, &c., That the first section of an act concerning the District of Columbia, approved Feb. 27, A. D. 1801, and all other acts and parts of acts that in any manner interfere with, regulate or sustain the institution of slavery in said District be, and they are hereby repealed."

A bill was passed regulating the postage on newspapers. The following is said to be the substance of the bill.

The first section provides that after the first of July, all newspapers of no greater size and superfices than 1900 square inches, may be transmitted through the mail by the editors and publishers thereof to all subscribers or other persons within the county, or within 30 miles of the city, town, or other place in which the newspaper is or may be printed, free of any charge for postage whatever.

Sec. 2. All newspapers of the size aforesaid, sent from the office of publication, and which shall be conveyed in the mail any distance beyond the county, or beyond 30 miles from the place at which the same may be printed, and not over 100 miles, shall be subject to and charged with a postage of one half cent, and of one cent for any greater distance, provided that the postage of a single newspaper of the size aforesaid from one place to another in the same State shall not exceed one half cent.

Sec. 3. Upon all newspapers of greater size than 1900 square inches, sent from the office of publication, there shall be charged & collected the same rates of postage as prescribed by this act to be charged on magazines and pamphlets; and upon all newspapers of a less size or superficial extent than 500 square inches, sent from the office aforesaid, there shall be charged and collected, a uniform rate of one-fourth of a cent for all distances within or without the State in which they may be published.

Sec. 4. All printed or lithographed circulars and handbills or advertisements, not larger than foolscap, unsealed one cent a sheet.

Sec. 5. Pamphlets, magazines, and periodicals, two cents for each copy of no greater weight than one ounce, and one cent additional shall be charged for each additional ounce in the weight of any such pamphlet, magazine, matter or thing which may be transmitted through the mail, whatever be the distance the same may be sent; and any fractional excess of not less than one-half of an ounce in the weight of any such matter or thing above one or more ounces, shall be charged for as if said excess amounted to a full half ounce.

Sec. 6. Papers sent by others than publishers, two cents, pre-paid, etc.

Senate.

Mr. Webster presented the Chicago Memorial, and on his motion, it was referred to a select committee, and ordered to be printed.

Tues. June 20, Senate.

Mr. T. Fitzgerald, appointed by the Governor of Michigan to supply the place of Mr. Cass, resigned, appeared, was duly qualified, and took his seat.

American Pulpit.—The June number is received, having been somewhat delayed by the absence of the Editor, Rev. J. Bridge, in attending the Gen. Conference of the M. E. Church. It contains a sermon by Rev. Dr. Bates, on the Character, Public services and death of John Quincy Adams. Also, Several Sketches of sermons. Published at Worcester, Mass., by Samuel Chism, at $1 per year.

Potter's Sermons.

Resolution adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Pleasant Hill Circuit.

Resolved, That the series of Sermons proposed to be published by Rev. Thomas Potter, be recommended to the patronage of members of the Methodist Protestant Church, and that Br. Case be requested to transmit a copy of the above resolution to the Editor of the "Recorder" for publication.

BASIL LONGSWORTH, Chr.
J. N. Roberts, Sec.
May 13th, 1848.

News of the Week.

Wisconsin.—The Legislature of this new State have adopted resolutions instructing their Senators and requesting their Representatives in Congress to use their influence to engraft upon the institutions of all new territories the provision for freedom contained in the Ordinance of '87. There were only three votes in the Senate and five in the House, which were cast against these resolutions.

The Southport Telegraph, publishes a correspondence in which Messrs. Walker and Dodge, the new Senators, avow themselves to be "uncompromingly opposed to the extension of slavery" into any U. S. Territory.—Zanesville Courier.

Wonderful Sagacity.—When the crowd of fashionables was greatest at an exibition of animals, a girl, who had fed the elephant with sundry cakes and apples from her bag, drew out her ivory card case, which fell unobserved in the saw-dust of the ring. At the close of the ring performances, the crowd opened to let the elephant pass to his recess, but instead of proceeding as usual, he turned aside thrust his trunk in the midst of group of ladies and gentlemen, who, as might be expected, were so much alarmed that they scattered in every direction. The keeper at this moment discovered that the animal had something in his trunk. Upon examination he found it to be the young lady's card case, which the elephant had picked up, and was only seeking out the fair owner.

Mrs. Ann Eliza Archer, residing at Mount Holly, N. Y., on the 19th inst., while surrounded by her children (six) was killed by lightning almost instantly. No other person in the room was injured.

From the Cumberland Presbyterian.

Itinerancy.

The Assembly, by resolution, recommended to the Presbyteries to take measures to raise again the plan of itinerancy. This is by no means an unimportant resolution. We have greatly neglected, in many portions of our church, this means of doing good. The history of our operations in past years proves the utility of this plan. For a good many years we had but few, if any, settled pastors, and during that time the prosperity of our church was as great as it is now, and perhaps greater. We do not undervalue the pastoral relation: it is so important that it cannot be dispensed with. But so many are the circumstances under which it cannot be established in many places, that it is necessary to have a system to supply the want of it. There are many congregations not able to support a stated pastor; but they must have the preached gospel, and how shall it be given to them if the itinerant plan is not kept up? And there are numerous openings for us where we have no churches and where stated pastors cannot be sustained; and if we would extend our bounds these fields must be occupied. The faithful itinerant is the man to go and break up the ground, and plant churches there. He usually passes through an extensive portion of the country to preach to the small congregations scattered here and there. In this way he may become acquainted with the spiritual condition of the people on the borders of his own operations, and spy out other openings where churches may be planted. By this means our borders have been, and will continue to be extended yearly, if the system is kept up, as the churches thus planted grow up and become able to call settled pastors, and this they will do. We have need of itinerants to open the field, and settled pastors permanently to occupy it. One is just as important as the other: we cannot dispense with either; and we would be rejoiced to see the itinerant plan in successful operation wherever it is needed.

Freeport Aqueduct Rebuilt.—The aqueduct at Freeport, Pa., which was recently burned down, is now rebuilt, and the water let into it.

Wisconsin.—The Senate of this young State passed, on the 14th inst., a resolution instructing their Senators & Congressmen in favor of a Wilmot Proviso, in any new territorial bill that may be brought before them.

Liberated Slaves.—A number of liberated slaves, men, women, and children, passed thro' this city yesterday, in Carolina wagons, filled with babies and other household trumpery.—They are on their way to Indiana, where lands are provided for them.—Cin. Com.

Crash in Boston.—Remarkable Preservation of Life.—We have already given a brief statement in regard to the fall of the floors of a store in the Dearbon block at Boston, last Saturday forenoon. We now learn from the Traveler that in the afternoon, about 4 o'clock, the back wall of the building, which had been cracked by the previous crash of the floors, fell out, carrying with it the remains of the upper floors of the store, making a complete wreck of that portion of the building. At the time of the occurrance, there were unfortunately, quite a number of persons in the store, engaged in removing goods, or drawn thither by curiosity. Of these, five at least, were considerably injured.

Among them L. S. Cragin, of the firm of Cragin, Greenleaf & Co., who fell some forty or fifty feet, dislocating his hip and suffering other injuries, which it is feared will prove fatal. Abijah Spofford, a laborer, was badly jammed, and it is feared seriously injured internally; John Hunter and Henry Hayes truckmen, were also badly bruised, though no bones were broken.

Charles Pierce, a clerk in Waterson's & Pray's store, was in the fourth story of the building, and was buried beneath the ruins. It was sometime before it was ascertained that he was alive under the rubbish; when this was discovered, a band of brave men, headed by the City Marshall commenced operations amidst the tottering walls and overhanging ruins, at great personal hazard, for the purpose of removing the superincumbent mass of merchandize, timbers and flooring. It was not, however, until after 8 o,clock that young Pierce was relieved from his perilous position, his pulse had nearly ceased to beat, and it was thought that he could not have lived another hour.

On Monday morning young Pierce was much better, and would probably be able to go out in a day or two. Mr. Cragin is very badly hurt, & at the least will not escape with less than a month or more of confinement & suffering. The others hurt are all doing well. The building has been securely shored up, and platforms built even with each story, so as to get at the goods.

In reference to the young clerk, Pierce, the Atlas says:

His life was saved in consequence of two beams having fallen in such a way as to form an angle over him. At the time of his fall, the folds of his coat were thrown over his face in such a manner as to impede his respiration, and he was in danger of being suffocated; but he succeeded in getting a pair of scissors from his pocket, and with them he cut away the cloth so that he was enabled to breathe, and thus survive until he was extracted from his perilous situation.

On Wednesday last, a man named Gimpler fell from the steamer Uncle Sam, laying at New Albany. On Thursday while his brother and two nephews were searching for his body, one of the nephews fell out of the skiff and was drowned. neither of the bodies had been recovered. It has been well said that "in the midst of life we are in death."

Stock to the amount of $100,000 has been subscribed for a branch of the State Bank of Ohio, to be located in the town of Athens. The stockholders have chosen their Directors and officers, and an application will soon be made to the Board of Control, after which, it is expected, that the Bank will immediately go into operation.—Cin. Com.

A young man named Peter Callagus, recently took passage at Evansville for St. Louis, on the steamer Phœnix. He was soon discovered to be laboring under an alienation of mind, and two men were detailed to take care of him, but he eluded their vigilance, and his mangled body was found in the hold of the boat. Having as is supposed been crushed to death between the pitman shaft and wheel.

The American Tract Society recently remitted $800 to aid the Paris Tract Society, in addition to numerous other grants to various foreign missions. During the month of May the same Society granted 1,653,000 pages of instructive reading for 'gratuitous' circulation, in various parts of the United States. Since the opening of the financial year, in April, 87 new colporteurs have been commissioned, and 87 commissions renewed.

Later from Africa.

The Mission of President Roberts.

HORRORS OF THE SLAVE TRADE, &C.

The ship Madonna, Lawlin, arrived at New York on Wednesday morning, from Monrovia, after a passage of 39 days. The New York Commercial has the Liberia Herald of April 18, and the Africa's Luminary to the 10th May, inclusive, besides later verbal accounts:

When the Madonna left, the U. S. brig Porpoise was at Monrovia.

The U. States sloop of war Decatur, Captain Byrne, touched at Monrovia the 18th of May, and sailed on the 19th, on a cruise. Officers and crew all well.

Intelligence of the revolution in France was received at Monrovia near the end of April, and caused, of course, no small sensation.

Noticing the departure of the American barque Nehemiah Rich, on the 4th of April, with President Roberts and his family on board, the Herald says the President, after his visit to the United States, will go to England. Hundreds of friends and spectators, of both sexes crowded the wharf.

The French brigs of war "Bougainville," Captain Chaigneau, and "Dupetit Thouars," Captain Protet, remained in port some two or three days, for the purpose of escorting the President and his friends on board the bargue.

Of the mission with which President Roberts is charged, the Herald speaks as follows:

President Roberts left our shores clothed with certain powers, the amicable arrangement of which, in the United States, England, and with other powers, will raise our spirits and infuse new energies into every citizen. The Legislature, knowing full well the importance of having at the earliest day, foreign governments to acknowledge the independence of the Republic, and at the same time having no available resources wherewith to send commissioners to foreign courts for the purpose, found itself in rather an awkward position.

The President, though disposed to do all in his power to forward the affairs of the State, was unwilling to be burdened with matters of so much importance, when his object in going abroad was to seek health. But after considerable reasoning, the President said he would no longer consider himself at liberty to decline performing any duty, however arduous, that the representatives of the people might be inclined to authorize him to attend to.

No delay took place before the Legislature passed resolutions clothing him with such authority.

For the last seven years he has been the chief executive officer of Liberia, and as such, has been obliged to carry on correspondence with the representatives of the government of Great Britain, of a very important character, which to us seemed to wear a very threatening aspect.

And it is not improbable that some of the subjects embraced in that correspondence, may be forced up for discussion in England, when that Government is called upon to acknowledge our independence. It is from that Government more than any other, that we expect to receive the most friendly assurances.

The Rev. George Thompson and Anson J. Carter, who sailed from this country on the 8th of April, reached Africa on the 9th of May.—These gentemen are missionaries to Kaw-Mendi, in the interior. While they were at Sierra Leone a captured slaver was brought in. Mr. T. went on board and thus describes the scene:

"Ten of the poor captives had already died.—The deck was literally covered with men, women and children, some lying down, some sitting, some standing. Many of them were quite small boys and girls; many of them were mothers and all quite naked. Below were crowded two or three hundred, between floors not exceeding 2½ feet apart. Men sitting flat on the floor cannot sit up straight, and they are crowded in as close as they can be jammed; the first row sitting on the floor with their backs against the side or end of the vessel, then another row sitting in the same way crowded close in between their legs, and so on as many as they can crowd in. There they sit week after week in all their filth, and stench, and sickness and death."

The outlay upon steamships America, Niagara, and the new class of Royal Mail Steamers, has been very great, their engines alone costing £45,000 each.

Great Fire at Patterson, N. J.

Church Burnt.—Loss of Life.—An extra from the Guardian office, Patterson, N. J., June 28, says:

The most extensive fire which this place has ever been visited by, commenced this morning, between 1 and 2 o'clock, and continued until 6, before it was fully subdued.

It originated in the Patterson machine-works, an extensive establishment, which was wholly consumed, together with a great amount of machinery and tools, involving a loss of 50 or $60,000—$40,000 of which was covered by insurance.

Three dwelling houses, together with the spacious hotel Congress Hall, and the Episcopal Church, were also consumed. While the latter was on fire, one of our most estimable citizens, Mr. Henry Johnson, proprietor of the flax mill, lost his life in endeavoring, with others, to rescue the organ from the flames.

Some 4 or 5 others were more or less injured, but not seriously. The remains of Mr. J. were rescued from the smothering embers this morning. A few bones were about all.

The aggregate loss is estimated at about $100,000.

The church (St. Paul's) was insured for about $3,000—about one-third of its cost.

Horrible Developments.

The fate of the Manchester (N. Hampshire,) Factory girl, Miss Sarah Furber, whose mysterious disappearance some time since created considerable excitement, has been ascertained.—She was the victim of seduction, and placed under treatment of the father of her seducer, Dr. McNabb, of Manchester, and died in consequence. The body was then placed in a box while yet warm, taken to Boston by the Doctor himself, and sold to a physician with the assurance that all was right. When the body was taken to a disecting-room, it was ascertained by the surgeon, from the appearance of the body, that there was foul play in the matter, and he ordered Dr. McNabb to take it away immediately. The Dr. then went to the porter of the Hospital and offered him five dollars to dispose of the body, and suggested the expediency of cutting it to pieces and throwing it into the vault. To this he pretended to consent, but embalmed the body, and informed the police. Dr. McNabb, his son, and a portrait painter, named Ingalls, have been arrested as implicated in the affair. The body was packed in a box two and a half feet square, and was sold for seven dollars. The porter has in his possession the $5 bill paid to him by Dr. McNabb. This is awful indeed.—Cin. Commercial.

From the Baltimore Sun.

From Mexico.

Departure of American Troops.

By the arrival of the royal mail steamer Trent at Ship Island, below New Orleans, on the 19th ultimo, we have received later intelligence from Mexico.

When the last of the troops, under General Worth, left the city of Mexico, Herrera's officers were escorted into it by the National Guards.

Capt. Tilghman's Light Artillery was to have left for New Orleans on the 16th inst.

The health of Vera Cruz has improved.

Many of the invalid officers and men are represented to have died on the march from the interior.

Col. Dominguez and staff, of the Mexican Spy Company, formerly in the employ of Gen. Scott, had also arrived at Vera Cruz, and were to leave on the Maria Burt. His soldiers, 125 in number, were anxious to come to the United States, as they had been maltreated, and feared the vengeance of their countrymen.

Com. Perry has declared the blockade of the Mexican ports at an end.

It is said that four regiments of Mexican infantry, three companies of cavalry, a company of artillery, and the Legion of St. Patrick, were to leave Queretaro to attack Parades.

Father Jarauta and a man named Martinez Negrete, at the head of a small force, surprised, on the 1st instant, the garrison at Lagos. They made the Prefect prisoner, and proclaimed a "plan disavowing the present Mexican Congress, and declaring that the States would resume their sovereignity for the continuation of the war.

A letter from Queretaro, dated 4th instant, says that this movement of Jarauta is directed & controlled by Parades, who is determined to effect a revolution in favor of his monarchical schemes.

The Siglo says that more than thirty American soldiers (300?) have determined to remain in Mexico, and with them many officers, who have offered their services to the Mexican Government.

The sessions of Congress were to be suspended at Queretaro on the 13th, to be resumed in the city of Mexico on the 15th.

Gen. Kearney's division marched from the city of Mexico the morning of the 6th instant.

El Monitor Republicano of the 6th, says it has received information that the Supreme Government had appointed Gen. Romulo de la Vega, Gen. Jose Maria Jarero and D. Juan Dosamantes, as Commissioners to receive from the American army all the material of war which is to be given up in accordance with article 4 of the Treaty.

A proclamation has been issued declaring that foreigners may enroll themselves in the National Guard.

Gen. Arista was expected to arrive in the city of Mexico during the present month.

Sr. Herrera, after having twice refused the presidency, was induced to take the oath of office on the 6th inst. The following is an extract from his speech on taking the oath:

"The treaty which has put an end to this disastrous contest, places the peace entered into with the United States of N. America under the guarantee of the Law of Nations. Our friendship with that Republic will be cultivated by my Government in a manner becoming a civilized people, just in its policy, and frank in its designs. I hope that the administration will be able to preserve the dignity of the Republic, and the harmony of its relations with all nations. The principal support of the constitution will govern them, as the representatives of the nation."

Sudden Death.

Mr. Clements, brother of the Superintendent of the L. M. Rail Road, and of the firm of Bruce, Steiner & Clements, Produce Merchants, corner of Sycamore and Columbia streets, was found dead in his bed on Saturday morning. He had gone to bed the night previous apparently in good health, at about ten o'clock. Not appearing at the usual time in the morning, his room was entered, and the young man was found, with no feature distorted, in the quiet, calm, eternal sleep of death. An inquest was held upon the body by the Coroner, and a verdict rendered. "Death by visitation of God." He is supposed to have died from enlargement of the heart.—Cin. Commercial.

DROWNED.

During the downward trip of the steamer "Financier," on Monday a serious accident occurred near Maysville. A German girl, a passenger, aged about fourteen years, while in the act of drawing up a bucket of water, slipped, fell overboard, and perished before assistance could reach her. She is said to have been an interesting girl, and her untimely death cast a gloom throughout the boat.

On Tuesday evening, after the boat had landed at our wharf, a boy about twelve years of age, brother to the steward, named Moore, fell over board while attempting to draw water with the same bucket! During yesterday, unsuccessful exertions were made to recover the body with grappling hooks.—Cin. Com.

Shocking.

A horse in the Fly Market, on Thursday, took fright, and started off at a furious speed, breaking his way through the crowd, but, luckily, without injuring any body. The progress of the frantic animal was checked by his attempting to jump over a dray, and being impaled upon one of the pins, which pierced his body and scattered his entrails in every direction. After writhing for some time the poor brute was put out of his misery. The horse belonged to a man from the country, who had borrowed him from a neighbor to make out his team to come to market. Thro' the exertion of Market Masters, Jones and Moody, who kindly interested themselves in the matter, a sufficient amount was made up on the spot to indemnify the unfortunate man for his loss.—Cin. Com.

IMPORTANT TO MEDICAL MEN. An important case to medical men has just been decided in New York.

A physician was attending a sick man, and after prescribing for him, he called a day or two afterwards to see the effect of the medicine.—The patient, in answer to his inquiries, said he thought the recipe prescribed was not strong enough, therefore took a powerful dose of calomel himself. Oh, very well said the doctor, if you prescribe for yourself, there is no use in my attending you any further.

The Doctor did not again attend, and the patient recovered, and sued the docter for negligence, laying his damages at five thousand dollars. The Judge decided that a doctor when contemplating discontinuing his attendance on a patient is bound to give him formal notice thereof, and the jury, under the circumstances, and for the purpose of establishing a precedent, rendered a verdict of six cents damages.

Death of Chief Justice Archer.

It is with unfeigned sorrow that we announce this morning the decease of Sevenson Archer, Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals of the Western Shore of Maryland, and of Baltimore County Court. He died yesterday morning at about 5 o'clock, at his residence near Bel-Air, in Harford county, after an illness of but a few days, during which, however, we learn that he suffered considerably, yet was sustained by an unwavering Christian fortitude, up to the period of his dissolution.—Baltimore Sun.

Revolting Spectacle.

The Mayor of New York, on Monday last, sent in to the assistant Aldermen, a statement setting forth that twenty-eight dead bodies had accumulated in the dead house, at the foot of 26th street, from the preceding Wednesday. That there were fifteen or more coffins laying outside of the building exposed to the burning sun.—That the bodies contained in these coffins were in a state of most loathsome putrefaction, having in many cases swollen so as to burst the coffins. Among the bodies thus exposed were some who had died from small pox, and from a number blood was oozing. In consequence of the effluvia the Mayor said he found it impossible to enter the dead house. This is a wretched picture of the manner certain institutions in New York, designed for philanthropic purposes, are kept.—Cin. Com.

Destructive Fire.

The chemical and drug warehouse of Allen & Co., on Fifth street, near the corner of Main, was almost entirely consumed by fire, on Monday night, and but for the daring exertions of our noble firemen, thousands of property might have been destroyed. The fire is said to have been the work of an incendiary, communicated in the cellar, in the rear of the building. When first discovered, about 8 o'clock, smoke was seen to issue from the cellar windows, and it was, as thot', extinguished; but at a later hour in the evening, it again broke out, and spread with such rapidity that the flames, aided by turpentine, alcohol, and other explosive liquids, extended to every part of the building, and before they were suppressed some $20,000 worth of drugs, glass, &c., were either damaged or destroyed, on which there was an insurance of about eight thousand dollars.

The buildings on the east side of the alley were saved from total destruction only by the exertions of the firemen, and the iron window-shutters of the drug warehouse; but as it was, the roof of Mr. S. Holmes' paper factory was burnt off, and most of his unfinished stock injured by water. He luckily saved from injury his beautiful stamps, and will therefore be ready to recommence operations in a few days. None of the stock in his store below was damaged, and his loss altogether is about $1000.

It fortunately happened, in connection with the above disaster, that about $25,000 worth of combustible drugs, brimstone, &c., which had been expected, did not arrive in time for storage, else the consequences might have been more serious.—Cin. Com.

From the New York Courier.

The Pope and the Papal States.

The question between Austria and the Papal See increases every hour in interest. I shall give you a short outline of the circumstances connected with it. The people of Rome, dissatisfied with the uncertain policy of Pius IX, in regard to the war of Italian independence, have, for some days past, been urging him to declare war against Austria.

From this he dissented, and alledged that he had permitted the formation of volunteer corps to join the army in Lombardy, only in pursuance of the Memorandum of 1831; and that, as spiritual Head of the Church, it was impossible for him to take up arms against his children in Christ beyond the Alps. But the Roman patriots were not satisfied with this reply. The people rose en masse, and threatened to depose him and establish a Provisional Government, if he did not within twenty-four hours accede to their wishes. It is expected that he will have no other alternitive than to yield. He has already conceded, perhaps too much, to his people, and they have shown their gratitude!

His position is certainly a most embarrassing one; and let him take which course he may the downfall of his spiritual empire appears inevitable. If he makes war on Austria, Austria will cease to own his supremacy; if he refuses to do so, his own people will cast him off; and in either case, the vast, but worn out fabric of the Papacy must fall to the ground—and fall, "like Lucifer, never to rise again."

The fact is, Pius IX, had already virtually declared war on Austria, but having, as it is said, received intimation from the German Bishop, that in case of his persisting in these demonstrations of hostility, they would at once separate from Rome, he was induced to adopt an opposite policy. This view receives confirmation from a paragraph in a Breslau journal of the 3d inst., which declares that if Pius IX, advances one step further into the affairs of Lombardy, or if he interferes with with them in any way as a mediator, then Austria will saparate herself wholly from all spiritual connexion with the See of Rome. (dass sich Oesterreich auch in geistlicher Beziehung ganz vom Roemischen Stuhl losagen wird.) Such a secession as is here threatened, would almost inevitably be followed by the emancipation of all the other Catholic States from the Pope's supremacy.

While writing the above, intelligence has reached me to the effect that the Pope has yielded to the persuasions of the "patriots," and that the ministers who had signed have returned to their places, and have promised to co-operate with the other Italian states to drive the Austrians out of Italy. The Austrian minister was to be summarily sent home.

The patriot Matriana harangued the people at some length and concluded with the following declarations:

1st. No Priest shall be appointed to fill any public office.

2d. War shall be formally declared.

3d. Pius IX is the head of the government.

4th. A daily official bulletin shall be published of the great war.

5th. Encouragement shall be given to the Roman youth to arm, and proceed to drive the barbarians from Italy.

I omitted to mention just now the remarkable and very ominous fact, that of the nitches constructed in the Cathedral of St. Peter, for the reception of the statues of the successive Popes there remains only the one destined to receive that of the present occupant of the papal chair a circumstance which seems to say that St. Peter will own no more successors, and that the series of the spiritual occupants is filled up.

"It is easier to bring up a dozen children right, than to reform one blockhead." The truth.

A Wonderful Phenomenon.

A singular phenomenon was brought to light a week ago yesterday, in the township of Greenfield, about eight miles from this city. The facts are very nearly as follows. the Messrs. Grangers in boring to find water to supply their steam saw mill, sunk a four inch hole to the depth of 70 feet, when they struck a vein or cavity. As they withdrew the augur from the hole, to their great surprise, it was followed by a violent current of air, and threw up stones as large as hen's eggs, ten or fifteen feet high. For a few moments when the hole was first opened, the air was accompanied by a stream of water which was thrown ten or twelve feet high. The water, however, soon ceased coming, and the air gushed out with such force that the roar could be distinctly heard fifty or sixty rods distant. On touching fire to the air it caught, and the flames flashed twenty feet high, and came near burning the building covering the machinery where it is located. They finally succeeded, with considerable difficulty, in stopping it, by forcing down blankets, and driving a spile into the hole, which was their only means of stopping the air or gas, and extinguishing the flames. For several moments after the hole was stopped, the earth trembled and shook for some distance around, as though an eruption was about to take place. The people, who by this time had gathered to the number of about a hundred were greatly alarmed at these symptoms, and scattered with all possible rapidity, supposing that "Millerism" was about coming to a focus, or that they were about to be blown up sky high by an earthquake. From the time it was opened till it was thus closed, was about six hours, and the air gushed out all the time with unabated force.

It has been opened several times since with the same effect. The power and force of the air does not sedm to diminish in the least. The Messrs. Grangers are proposing to secure it with aparatus so as to shut it off and and let it out at leisure, and test its real qualities. The people in that vicinity are all confident now, that it can be conveyed here in pipes, and successfully used for lighting the city with gas, from this great natural, underground Barometer. We learn that several scientific gentlemen of this city intend visiting it soon.—Detroit Advertiser, June 20.

Treaty with New Granada.

A treaty between the United States and New Granada, negotiated by Mr. Bidlack on the part of the United States, and M. M. Mallarine on the part of New Granada, has been signed by the President of the U. States, and approved by the Senate. Having been previosly signed by the Government of New Granada, and the ratifications duly exchanged at Washington on the 10th inst., it is now obligatory on both nations. The treaty exempts our commerce from the discriminating duties in the ports of New Granada, which have depressed it for the last twenty years. It prohibits privateering in case of war between the two republics.—Cin. Com.

Notices.

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August next. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected, and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local; together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst., to prepare the ground. E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt.

To the Ministers of the Wabash District, M. P. Church:

You are hereby notified and requested to turn your attention to a settlement about 8 miles South West from Plymoth, at Wolf's Mills, for the purpose of raising an M. P. Church. Enquire for Br. MATHEW WILSON. He is a young man of fine talents and has been a very good and always an acceptable member of our church on this Circuit. He is anxious, having taken up his residence there, to have our ministers and a church established. Come dear Brethren crowd up this way that we may be neighbors.

JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Laporte Ct, June 19th '48,

KALIDA CT., OHIO DIST.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton, of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Borton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

COLUMBIA CT., MUSK. DIST.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

PORTSMOUTH CT., MUSK. DIST.—Brother Clancy is hereby informed that his visit to this ct. will be expected at Brown's Meeting-house, 15 miles from Jackson, near the Portsmouth road.

W. W. TIPTON.

COSHOCTON CT., MUSK. DIST.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Fergusen's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

BELLVUE CT., MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

MORGANVILLE CIRCUIT.—The meeting of Br. Clancy the President, will be at Morganville, 6 miles from M'Connellsville.

H. T. LAWSON.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, March 2d, 1848.

BR BASSETT:—You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, which I will fill, Providence permitting.

Johnstown, st.	2d	July	"
Home two Sundays,	"	"	"
Valley mission	23d	"	"
Huntersville, ct.	30th	"	"
Greenbrier, "	6th	August	"
Braxton, "	13th	"	"
Conference, "	22d	"	"

Early notice of the plan of my visit in each circuit, to be given by letter, or in the Western Recorder.

Any camp-meeting arrangements, desired by the brethren, will be published by them, in the Recorder. The Aid Society to be advocated by the subscriber, in all places.

GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15th, 1848.

M'Connelsville ct.	1st	"	July "
Morganville	" 2d	"	" "
Lancaster	" 3d	"	" "
Salt Creek	" 4th	"	" "
Portsmouth	" 5th	"	" "
Columbia	" 1st	"	August "
Woodsfield	" 3d	"	" "

Would be glad to receive due notice of the point at which my meeting will be held on each of the above named circuits.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please to publish the following plan o appointments:

Maumee,	July 30th.
Portage,	August 5th.
Mt. Blanchard,	" 12th.
Kalida,	" 19th.
Lima,	" 26th.

Lebanon, September 2d. J. M. YOUNG.

To the Superintendents of the Circuits and Stations hereafter named:

DEAR BRETHREN:—Having at length obtained my liberty, by getting through my publication business, which has detained me so much longer than I expected. I propose to be, and to preach within your respective fields of labor (with your consent) on the Sabbaths following:

Wellsville Circuit, July 9th.
Youngstown Station, July 16th.
Pittsburgh Station, July 23rd.

As I shall travel in a buggy, it is my intention to carry with me a supply of my Vol. of Sermons.

THOMAS POTTER, Conf. Missionary.

Putnam, May 29th, 1848.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Central Circuit, July 8th and 9th.
Manilius Circuit, July 15th and 16th.
Cayuga Circuit, July 22d and 23d.
Wayne Circuit, July 29th and 30th.
Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Dr P M Johnson	O	"A Layman"	Pa
G W Thornburgh	"	M. Shuster	"
G Conclin	"	J Scott	Va
T H Scott	"	C S Callihan	"
G Clancy	"	P M—Morris	Ill
O P Stephens	"	J Gay	Ia
J B Peat 1 sub	"	J M Byarlay	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts.
M Shuster			10	9	4 00
Jas Gay	C Spear		9	52	1 00
J M Byarlay			9	26	2 00
O P Stephens	S Haines		9	45	1 00
J B Peat	J Stout		9	26	1 00

New subscribers this week, 6. Discontinuances, 6.

Brother Peat, our old friend Stout, commenced with vol. 7, and has now paid $5 to middle of vol. 9.

Will our friend Dr. Dorsey please now respond to a little enquiry we made some months ago?

OUR LIST.

Shortly after the commencement of our present volume, we addressed an appeal to our friends, and especially our agents, in behalf of the Western Recorder. We showed how easily one thousand new subscribers might be added to our list within a short time. Our paper is sent to more than one hundred and fifty travelling ministers, of several Conferences, most of whom have their copy free, for their agency. We remarked that if each of those brethren would obtain for us from five to ten new subscribers, or an average of seven subscribers each, the matter would be at once accomplished. A number of brethren have responded nobly, others have begun well, and will we trust succeed still better, others have not yet reported to us. The Publisher of the Methodist Protestant has also proposed to raise one thousand new subscribers, for that paper, by enlisting two hundred agents to obtain as many as five each. In his last paper he givos the names of twelve brethren, who have thus far complied. We have concluded to give also our list of those who have obtained five or more new subscribers for the Western Recorder since the commencement of present volume.—We are under obligations to numerous others who have thus far procured us, from one to four subscribors, and we are daily expecting to receive further intoligence from them, of encournging character.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	15
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta, Bainbridge, O.,	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.,	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.,	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves. Pittsburgh, Pa.	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer. Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements.

LIST OF LETTERS remaining in the Post Office at PUTNAM, Muskingum County, Ohio, July 1, 1848.

B
Burnett, Miss Ann 3

C
Culbertson, Miss Eliza Jane
Cowen, Robert
Cable, Rev. J.

D
Dawson, N. B.
Dunn, Charles

E
Ellis, Miss Amanda
Evans, Robert

F
Fairman, Mrs Jane

G
Grant, Sarah
Giffin, Mary Ann
Gafney, Milton

H
Hart, William
Harper, John 3
Hudson, Elijah
Haiff, Austin
Helmick, George
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.
Hesler, Miss Ann
Highfield, Esq., Inn Keeper

J
Jackson, George William
Jenkins, Mr G
Jordan, Miss Mary S
Jackson, Mr Andrew
Joslin, Abraham

K
Kruger, Roselia

L
Lewis, William

M
Mosely, Miss Bethe
Mechling, J J
Morris, John
Miller, Sarah
Milliana John
Mooney, Miss Mary

N
Nesbaum, Mrs Catharine

P
Putnam, John 2
Puff, Jacob 2
Price, William
Palmer Samuel

R
Rebarge, Benjamin
Riley, J W
Rees, Arthilla J Ann
Richards, Jacob
Ripley, William

S
Stainbrook, Phebe Ann
Stainbrook, Nancy
Sniff John
Stainbrook, Joseph
Smith, Ezra
Swingl, Maria B
Smith, Miss Fanny
Springer, Miss Ellen
Sweny, Cornelius
Sloan, Mr G

T
Tobin, Mr William

W
Wilson, Rev John
White, Samuel
Wickham, Salathiel
Welsh, J W
Watson, Miss Emily
Weaver, Mrs Jacob

JER. ELDER, P. M.

Administrator's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of Muskingum County, Administrator of the estate of George Torbert, deceased, late of Newton Township—All persons indebted to said estate, are requested to make settlement immediately. Likewise, all persons having claims against said estate, are notified to present them, legally authenticated. SAMUEL WOOD.

June 17, 1848.

To the Creditors of the estate of ALEXANDRIA McCRACKEN, JUNIOR, DECEASED. The subscribers have been appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of Muskingum County, Commissioners on the estate of Alexandria McCracken, Jr. Deceased, represented insolvent. The creditors of said estate will bring in and prove their claims against said estate. Claims which have been presented to the administrator will also be passed upon.

The subscribers will attend to the duties of their said appointment at the Post Office in Gratiot, on Monday & Tuesday the 26th and 27th of June, 1848, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 4 P. M. of each day.

WILLIAMS SIMS, } Commmissioners.
PETER S. WESTBROOK, }

May 18th, 1848.

PHYSICIANS

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disordere, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epilepsy, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm. Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England, Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, and medical advice and attendance. I was advised to take a tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visited England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case:—they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be over grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years. Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Bertholf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HART, New York.

☞Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, Post paid.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O

SACRED MELODEON

A SELECTION OF

REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.

BY REV. J. DALBY, Jr., & J. B. PEAT.

REVISED & ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public, as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while an addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publisher has received of the "SACRED MELODEON," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalboy, Jr. and Rev. J. B. Peat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist P. Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. * * * * The work is neatly excuted, with fair type & paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hymns, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS:

Per copy, : : : : : : : : : : : : $00 75
Per dozen, : : : : : : : : : : : : 7 60
Fifty copies or more, per hundred, : : : : : 18 00

 The above work can be obtained of Rev. A. H. Bassett, Putnam; Geo. Conclin, Cincinnati; or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern Baltimore,

A New Supply of

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

SNETHEN'S SERMONS,

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the Office of the WESTERN RECORDER.

THOUGHTS OF AN ITINERANT;

OR BRIEF CHAPTERS ON THE CHURCH OF CHRIST—ITS POSITIVE INSTITUTIONS—ITS MEANS OF GRACE, AND SOCIAL OBLIGATIONS; DESIGNED AS A FAMILY COMPANION FOR METHODISTS. BY REV. LEVI R. REESY.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this Office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

GREAT EXCITEMENT!

THIS WAY GENTLEMEN!!

THROUGH this medium we notify the public that we are now prepared to receive customers at our shop, Main Street, Putnam, one door north of Dr. Wm. Milhous's office, and opposite the Post Office, where all the various operations in connection with our business such as Shaving, Hair-dressing, Boot-blacking, &c., &c will be attended to in the shortest, neatest, and most fashionable style, as we have secured the assistance of O. B. Blackiston, a skilful operator from the City of New York. If gentlemen will give us a call, we doubt not we will secure their patronage, as we are determined not to be outdone by any one either here or elsewhere.

G. HUNNECUTT & A. JACKSON.

Putnam, April 18, 1848.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

Fourth Volume of the American Pulpit.

THE AMERICAN PULPIT is a Monthly Magazine, published in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. It contains thirty-two pages in each number, and will be well supplied with that kind of Literature which is adapted to Ministers and Theological Students, such as Sermons, Sketches, Essays, Biographies, &c. &c.

The leading Sermon, will be of the highest order; and all the Sermons, we intend, shall bear the stamp of superiority. They will be sought, and obtained, so far as it is possible, from the most eminent Divines, on the American Continent. Arrangements are already made to accomplish this end; and no reasonable pains or expense will be spared, to make this department of the Pulpit superior to anything of the kind in existence.

The Sketches will be of the first class. We have accepted the proposals of an eminent minister in England to supply this department, partially—the Rev J BURNS, D D, of London, author of "Pulpit Cyclopedia;" &c &c. By securing the correspondence of Dr Burns, the patrons of the Pulpit will enjoy a fine opportunity of comparing British and American talent in the same pages.

In the Miscellaneous Department will be found, Essays, Biographical Sketches, Poetry, and such et cetera as shall enhance the value of the work.

The Pulpit is edited by

REV J D BRIDGE,

who will spare no pains to render it not only a welcome visiter to the Minister's study, but a 'profitable' one. The work is evangelical in its character, and will avoid all controversy, except with sin and the popular errors of the day.

Its patrons, hitherto, have been gathered from all of the orthodox denominations in the country, all of whom the Publisher hopes to return. And we wish it distinctly understood, that Ministers in all the evangelical denominations are invited to become contributors to the pages of he Pulpit. We solicit from them, Sermons, Sketches of Sermons, or Criticisms, on any subject within the compass of Homiletics; and, that no one may feel embarrased in his desire to accept this invitation, we shall dispense with the "List of Contributors" which has formerly appeared on our cover. We do this not out of any disrespect to any of the worthy names in that List, but that others may not be deterred from contributing because not numbered in the distinguished catalogue.

By far the largest amount of matter contained in the Pulpit will be 'original;' but it will also be enriched by choice 'selections' from Books and periodicals.

Terms--One Dollar Per Annum, in Advance.

The Pulpit will be mailed regularly during the latter part of the month preceding that of its publication, so that it may reach its destination, in ordinary cases, by the first of each month.

We solicit Agents for the work. We will allow them a reasonable and just compensation for their services, and we authorize all the ministers of every evangelical denomination, and all laymen who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and who desire the extension of his kingdom on earth, to co-operate with us in extending the circulation of this work.

All orders for the work and all remitt

POET'S CORNER.

Consolations for the Lonely.

BY MARY HOWITT.

There is a land where beauty cannot fade,
Nor sorrow dim the eye;
Where true love shall not droop, nor be dismayed;
And none shall ever die!
Where is that land; O where?
For I would hasten there!
Tell me—I fain would go,
For I am weary with a heavy woe!
The beautiful have left me all alone;
The true, the tender, from my path have gone!
O guide me with thy hand,
If thou dost know that land,
For I am burthened with oppressive care,
And I am weak and fearful with despair;
Where is it? Tell me where.

Friend, then must trust in him who trod before
The desolate paths of life;
Must bear in meekness, as he meekly bore,
Sorrow, and pain, and strife!
Think how the Son of God
These thorny paths hath trod;
Think now he longed to go,
Yet tarried out, for thee, the appointed woe.
Think of his weariness in places dim,
Where no man comforted or cared for him!
Think of the blood-like sweat,
With which his brow was wet;
Yet how he prayed unaided and alone,
In that great agony, "Thy will be done!"
Friend, do not thou despair! [Prayer!
Christ, from his heaven of heavens, will hear thy

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REV. J. M. WINN.

Br. Bassett: I have this day read, in "The Baptist Recorder," of the 20th April, 1848, a letter from 'E. T. Brown,'—which bears date, Mount Vernon, April 3d, 1848, and is copied from the Western Christian Journal.' This letter, which reports, 'Glorious work of Grace in Mount Vernon,' holds the following language, to wit: "There have been 85 additions to our number. One of whom was a minister of the Gospel in the Methodist Protestant Church in this place, Rev. J. M. Winn. He has produced testimonials of his good standing in that body from the time he was licensed to preach being 6 or 7 years, down to the present time—the last being a release from his charge, signed by the President of this Conference," &c.

With all good feelings to this "E. T. Brown," (whom I personally do not know,) and the Baptist Church, whose prosperity he reports; and free from any feelings of unkindness or severity towards said Rev. J. M. Winn, I feel it my duty to say a few things, touching the case of said J. M. Winn, which may not be so agreeable to all concerned.

1. But for meeting with the above letter, I should not have made any public statement of the facts in the case of Rev. J. M. W. the until examination of character, at our next An Conference, which will necessarily call forth such statement. This letter, not only exhibits a spirit of sectarian boasting, by giving to the character of said Winn, an undeserved degree of importance, but it also, does injustice to "the President of this Conference," in saying, touching 'the testimonials of good standing' which were 'produced' by Rev. W. 'The last being a release from his charge, signed by the President of this Conference. What other 'testimonials of good standing,' &c., 'down to the present time,' they were, which Rev. W. 'produced,' E. T. Brown does not state, and as it regards 'the last,' &c., the President denies it to be a 'testimonial of good standing.' It was simply a release from his official relation to the Licking Circuit.

2d. The Law reads, "No minister or preacher appointed to a circuit or station, shall cease from the labor assigned him by the stationing authority, until his time of service shall have expired, except by consent of the President, for reasons by him deemed sufficient." (Dis. page 52) 1st. The release which Rev. J. M. W. received, was an expression of the 'President's consent' for him to cease from his labors in the Licking Circuit. 2d. The President is the judge as to what are 'sufficient reasons' for granting a release. And in the case of Rev. W. there are two. 1st. He requested a release, under date of February 7th, 1848, grounded upon the fact that the Licking Circuit, "was not willing to pay a sufficient amount for his support," & his Quarterly Conference, in view of this fact, agreed for him to be released. See his request in W. R. Feb. 17, 1848.

This is pecuniary reason, and of itself might have been 'deemed sufficient,' but at that same time I had another reason, which is explained in the following statement of facts. When upon the Belmont Circuit, the first of January 1848, the field where Rev. W. labored last Conference year, a number of very responsible persons (who are by no means personal enemies of Rev. W.) informed me that many things were reported of him not very creditable to the character of any person, & that both the interests of the church & the character of Winn, if innocent, required a vindication against such reports. As these reports related to a number of complaints, and a number of complainants, some members of the church, and some who are not members, and as each one felt a delicacy about assuming the responsibility of becoming prosecutor, in view of the desired vindication, I requested Brs. S. W. Laishly, W. Remsburg and D. Gardner, to act as a committee of inquiry, by way of examining & reporting to the President the facts in the case, as they found them to exist.

Accordingly, they forwarded to me, at Cleveland, Ohio, a report, which set forth that they found 'ground for judicial investigation. This report, which contained a charge for 'immorality' and for imprudence, clearly stated, was nevertheless, not sufficiently definite in its specifications. This informality induced me to return the report to said committee, for the purpose of having its specifications definitely stated. During the interval which elapsed, between returning the report to the committee, and receiving it again, with the desired corrections, I saw in the 'Western Recorder,' of the 17ht Feb. 1848, his request to be released from the Licking Circuit, and well knowing that he of necessity would have to be called to trial; and being well aware of the unpleasant influence it must have upon the Licking Circuit, for their superintendent to be called to a distant point to answer to charges seriously involving his moral character, I readily embraced the opportunity of removing him from his official relation to said circuit, before it was necessary to cite him to trial; and thus save his charge the injury which otherwise his citation might do it.

Had not this error existed in the first report, of said committee, as stated above, a copy of 'charges with specifications,' as required by law, would very certainly have been forwarded to the Rev. W., and a citation to trial, before I ever saw his request to be released, or had any means of knowing any thing about it. Now these facts show that 'his standing' was not 'good' when his release was 'signed by the President.' And because it was not 'good,' the President did not write him a release according to the form prescribed in the discipline. (See page 136.)

3d. I do not in these statements, say that the Rev. Winn, was guilty of the things with which he stands charged. An investigation has not been had in his case. I have stated the facts in his case, as they existed, down to the time of his release from his charge upon the Licking Circuit which was about the first of March. I now state a few facts in his history 'down to the present time,' (April 3d, 1848.)

I forwarded to him per hands of Rev. J. Lamb, a copy of charges for 'immorality' and 'imprudence,' with specifications, and a notice to appear for trial at 10 o'clock, A. M., 19th April, 1848, at the Gardner Meeting House, three miles west of Fairview, Guernsey County, Ohio. This notice was served upon him the 20th of March, 1848. At which time he stated to Rev. J. Lamb, as he informs me by letter, that he "would not attend trial."—"That he would leave the church," &c., &c. Also 'requested Lamb to keep the matter secret,' &c. About the first week of April, I received from him, at New Alexandria, a letter bearing date of March 20th, 1848. Which he thus commences, "Rev. G. Clancy, Sir: I have just received yours of the 10th March, from the hands of Rev. J. Lamb in which I am charged with sundry things on the Belmont Circuit, to which I am summoned to answer." His letter is too long to insert entire. He says his wife is sick and he cannot attend at the time I have fixed, &c. He pleads his right to have his trial at Mt. Vernon. He agrees to have for a committee, Nichols, Maynard and Catlin. This letter shows that he was regularly charged, and acknowledged his obligations to meet the charges, by asking a postponement. Asking a change of place, & agreeing upon a committee. His reason for a postponement, induced me to consent to it, and as I was then circumstanced, I could not then set another time for trial. But without waiting to hear from me, and before his letter ever reached me, the 'Rev. J. M. Winn' was among the 'number of 85,' reported by E. T. Brown, April 3d, 1848. A letter from Rev. J. Lamb, since, says "he joined the Baptists the next Saturday after I served that notice upon him, and on the next day was immersed,' &c. This would be about the 25th of March. The notice being served on the previous Monday. And it is stated that he had an appointment to preach in the Methodist Protestant Church, in Mt. Vernon, the very day he was immersed. In conclusion, I repeat it,—only for meeting with the above letter of E. T. Brown, in which I am referred to, I should not have noticed the case of Rev. J. M. Winn, in this manner, but, 'what is written, is written,' and I am quite willing for all to judge.

1. With what propriety and justice E. T. Brown, boasts of the "testimonials of good standing," &c., "down to the present time," (April 3d, 1848,) which "Rev. J. M. W. produced." 2d. I am quite willing for all to Judge as to the arguments and motives which changed the faith and practice too, of Rev. J. M. W. at that particular time, and in such a hasty manner. The facts in his case cannot well mislead. 3d. As to the loss sustained by the Methodist Protestant Church, and real gain on the part of the Baptist Church, in the church changing of Rev. J. M. W., the facts in his case readily decide. 4th. As the only advantage which can result from a church trial, is by way of either protecting the innocent, or putting away a disorderly and unworthy member, and, as the Rev. J. M. W. has irregularly fled from his church, under regular charges, and is now a minister in the Baptist Church, from which fact the M. P. Church would be embarrassed in attempting the adjudication of his case, under such circumstances, and believing the character of the M. P. Church as fully vindicated in his case, without a trial, as it could be with one. Therefore, unless he shall request a trial, I shall report his name to the Annual Conference, as the truth in the case requires.

GEO. CLANCY, President,
Muskingum Annual Conference.

Putnam, Ohio, June 23, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Restrictive Rule—Rev. C. Springer.

NO. IV.

Mr. Editor: I wish to offer a few remarks on the fourth number of the series of articles of which I have been taking some notice.

The reformers in the Meth. Episcopal Church, were told that if laymen were "admitted into the councils of the church, the itinerant system could not be maintained." Laymen were, however, admitted into the councils of the new church, and contrary to the predictions of the opposers of reform, the itinerancy was maintained. This shows that some things that were considered necessary to the perpetuity of the itinerant system, were not really so; and it is well calculated to produce inquiry when similar assertions are made by the friends of established usages, without any better reasons to justify them.

It is said that "we are only at our outset, as a church, and have not had time to establish a permanent character;" and to see "our attempt at self-government—put in jeopardy, before sufficient time has been afforded to test the efficiency of the enterprize—is an outrage," &c. To the declaration, made by the adherents of the old establishment, that the enterprize of the reformers had proved a failure, has it not been replied again and again, that the new system has been sufficiently tested, and that the experiment has been entirely successful? Let us be consistent. If in reply to those who represent our effort as a failure, we assert that our system has been sufficiently tested, and has proved successful; let us not say to those who seek a further reform, that "sufficient time has not been afforded to test" its "efficiency."

An instance is given wherein a worthy gentleman attached himself to our infant church, because of her liberal principles, and the advantages of a "circulating ministry" enjoyed by her. If the Rule were repealed, the principles of the church would be no less liberal, nor would our "circulating ministry," as I think has been heretofore clearly shown, be destroyed; so that the case adduced affords no argument in support of the Rule.

The intimation that if even a majority of the church should favor a repeal of the Rule, the minority might not be able to "submit with any degree of complacence," does not look very republican. But it is presumed there is not much danger to be apprehended, from the "aged and experienced," on this score. It is hoped "the fathers of the system" will set a good example before the young, and endeavor to restrain their "sensitive" feelings, and present their strong arguments without giving way to "excitement."—The "keen lashes of irony" are enjoyed very much. They afford us quite as much amusement as they did the writer gratification. It is supposed that they sustain about the same relation to the argument, that "fox-fire" does to the "light of the sun."

As the succeeding numbers are dedicated especially to Prudentia, I will close with this article, for the present, as I do not wish to deprive him of the privilege of defending his own positions.

Very Respectfully,
JOHN SCOTT.

Fairview, Va., June 29, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REPLY TO THE REV. W. M'GWIGAN, ON SLAVERY.

NO. I.

Br. Bassett: It appears from the 35th No. of your paper, that the Rev. W. M'Gwigan has entered the field of Controversy, for the purpose of putting to silence myself, and the Abolitionists in general, and of establishing the Divine origin of Slavery, as it exists in these United States. In his first communication, he informs us, that he "has very great, and very serious objections to Slavery," and that "a free discussion on the subject, if conducted in a right spirit, would doubtless do good." And in his second article he takes the position, that Slavery is of God, and the warrant by which slaves are held, is from the mouth of God. That is, God has established Slavery. He is its author—the title deed comes from his mouth, and yet this Rev. Sir has very great, and serious OBJECTIONS to it. Has he become more holy, wise, and more benevolent, than the Almighty God, that he should have very great, and serious objections, to what "God has not only tolerated, but positively sanctioned, and ratified?" It will not now answer for him to evade this absurdity by saying, that his great, and serious objections are to the abuses of Slavery. By his own assertions then, we have the confession that he is calling in question God's sanctions. It possibly may be that this Rev. Sir, is a slaveholder, and that his objections to Slavery consist in the want of a clear title to his human goods, and chattles, and thinks that if God has only given him such a warrantee to the souls, and bodies of the poor slaves, that his own conscience would always be quiet, and that he might put to silence the ultra Abolitionists, then it would have been all right. The great points of controversy between this advocate of Slavery, and myself are these: He thinks God and the Holy Ghost, have ratified, sanctioned, confirmed the institution of Slavery, and that Abolitionists are guilty of blasphemy, by ascribing the work of the Spirit of God to the Devil, and according to some Theologians, and Commentators have committed 'the sin against the Holy Spirit,' and can never have forgiveness in this world, nor the world to come, but are in danger of enternal damnation. And I most sincerely believe that Slavery, as it exists in our own country, is of the Devil, and that all who are engaged in supporting that system, are so far serving the Prince of Darkness, and that all real Slave holders at heart, who do not repent of the wrongs they have, and are doing to the poor suffering slaves will, and must find their way to perdition, and that I can see no use for a Devil unless it should be to treat slave holders as they have treated their slaves.

I will now proceed to give a few of the many reasons why I have been led to embrace such a belief in regard to Slavery and real Slaveholders and Slave breeders. And if the Rev. W. M'Gwigan, or any other advocate of Slavery, will candidly, and fully answer my arguments, and remove the objections I have to the institution of slavery, I will lay down my pen, and let them entirely alone, and if they have the truth, I will try, and overcome the dictates of my very nature, or being, & say God is not the being I thought He was.

1. The first question to be settled in our view is, What is Slavery? Or What are we to understand by the institution of Slavery? As the controversy, is, in relation to slavery in our day, and in our land, it will be proper to go to the slave laws, and authority, for our answer, to the above questions. The cardinal principle of slavery according to said laws, consists in making articles of property, goods, and chattels, of persons. Judge Stroud, in his "Sketch of the Laws relating to Slavery," says, "The Cardinal principle of Slavery, is that the slave is not to be ranked among sentient beings, but among things—obtains as undoubted law in all of these (the slave) States." The Law of South Carolina says, "Slaves shall be deemed, held, taken, reputed, and adjudged in law to be, chattels personal in the hands of their owners, and possessions, and their executors," &c., "to all intents, construction and purposes whatsoever." In Louisiana "a slave is one who is in the power of a master, to whom he belongs; the master may sell him, dispose of his person, his industry, and his labor, he can do nothing, possess nothing, nor acquire anything, but what must belong to his master." This is slavery making merchandize of the souls, and bodies of men, women, and children—reducing them to articles of property. This principle is maintained by all slaveholders, who hold their slaves, as their property, and claim it their right to buy, and sell their fellow beings, as goods or cattle, whether they profess to be the friends of Christ, and wear the title of Rev. or, whether they deny God, and Christianity, and glory in their shame, the principle is the same. The principle is not at all altered by treating the slaves well or ill—the foundation of slavery remains the same. Whatever be the abuses of slavery the foundation or corner stone, essential element remains the same. A human being, converted into a thing, real estate, and there to remain forever, or at the will of the pretended owners. Slavery is trampling under foot the eternal distinction which God has set up between a person, and a thing—also upon the rational, immortal principle, consecrated by God the universal homage, in a baptism of glory, and honor, by the gift of His Son, His Spirit, His word, His presence, Providence, and power. With reference to this question there can be no difference of opinion between the advocates of slavery, and the Abolitionists. We all must go to the instruments or acts by which slaves are made and held, to determine the first question.

2. The second question—Is Slavery as there defined by the slave laws, and exists in the slave States, of God or of the Devil? There the Rev. Mr. M'G. and myself are at issue. He says "the slavery of the United States, and that which obtained among the Patriarchs, and other of God's people are based upon the same principles." And that slavery has been tolerated, positively sanctioned, and ratified by, and is not repugnant to the will of God. All this I sincerely disbelieve, and call upon that Rev. gentleman to introduce the proof. His bare assertions, without proof will never answer. Show us, Sir, in the first place that the slavery of these United States, is the same in its fundamental principle with the system of servitude among the ancient Patriarchs. Secondly, show us where God has ever ratified, or sanctified that principle of slavery, so as to justify, or warrant any Gentile of any age, in converting a human being, created in God's image, into an article of property. Until this is done, Sir, I shall turn all of your sayings respecting blasphemy against yourself. That Abraham ever held a slave on the above principles, I deny, much less, "inflicted wrongs upon his poor slaves, and then went to heaven without repenting of those wrongs. That unwarrantable assertion or insinuation of Mr. M'G. in relation to Abraham we can but regard as virtually a slander, both of the character of Abraham, and God.

In my next No., I will offer some of the reasons why I believe slavery to be of the Devil.

JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Ia., June 14th, 1848.

Miscellaneous.

BASH-BISH,

OR CATARACT OF THE TAGHCONIC MOUNTAINS.

The sudden and extensive spread of the east end of the Massachusetts to the south, taking in sundry islands of the sea, is happily balanced on the western portion by huge swells of the earth upwards towards the sky: so that the state maintains her equilibrium. Among the mountain-masses of the extreme south-west corner, in the Berkshire town of Mt. Washington, within a mile of the Empire State, lies the natural curiosity to which the name at the head of this article belongs. It is a water-fall issuing from as silent a glen, and dashing through as curious a ravine, and overhung by as bold a precipice of rocks, and surrounded by as imppressive mountain scenery as can be matched in any quarter of the globe. Nestled in its hidden nook, it has lain until within a very few years almost unvisited and almost unknown even to the towns which border it around. But now it is the admiration of multitudes of visiters.

A mountain lake, 3,000 feet above the level of the ocean, and mirroring forth the tops of the pines, hemlocks and firs, by which it is skirted, form the fountain-head of the Bash-bish.—These waters first—down the mountain's side a mile or so, and then amuse themselves with an additional two miles of meandering and bubbling sportings, ere they appear on the stage of their greatest display. The secluded glen above mentioned then comes, in which the liquid element is basoned awhile in rest, before it leaps its confines and hastens to the sea. Next follow a most remarkable succession of cataracts, one facing this way & another that, which whirl & plunge the foaming water down a descent of 300 or 400 feet, and through every imaginable discription of scrimped and pinching channels, as though resolved to torture it to its utmost point of endurance, until they give it a happy release in the more horizontal channel below. Over the highest of these cataracts, a magnificent cliff hangs to the east, 200 feet in elevation, & under which the visitor is safe from the casual shower of rain. The view either from the foot or from the top of this cliff is unrivalled.

In the summer of 1846, four ministers of the Gospel visiting this remarkable locality; lay stretched out upon the table rock of this cliff, with eyes peeping over the awful verge, with hearts beating with wonder at such a manifestation of the strength of God, and with ears long deaf to the hints of their attendant, that it was time to go. An old man of the mountains was their guide and began to speak of the geological character and names of the rocks that were about them. "Not a word," returned one of them; "all I want to know is what I see; that they are rocks, that God made them; and that they have been here since the flood. I want to hear the voice of nature here, and not of man. I want to listen to the mountains. All geology to me to-day is nothing."—N. E. Puritan.

The Last Days of Howard.

On the 4th of July, 1789, Mr. Howard accompanied by a single servant, quitted England on his last philanthropic journey. He passed through Holland, part of Germany, Prussia, and several cities of Russia, examining the state of the hospitals; and about the end of the year had reached Cherson, a new settlement of the Russian Empress at the mouth of the Dnieper.—This was destined to be the closing scene of his labors. Visiting, according to one account, the Russian hospital of the place, according to another, a young lady, whose friends were anxious that he should prescribe for her, as he had done successfully in many similar cases, he caught a malignant fever, which, after an illness of twelve days, carried him off on the 20th of January, 1790, in the sixty-fourth year of his age. On his death-bed he showed the same calm and Christian spirit which had distinguished him through life. To Admiral Priestman, who resided at Cherson, and who visited him during his illness, and endeavored to amuse and cheer him by his remarks, thinking to divert his thoughts, he said, "Priestman, you style this a dull conversation, & endeavor to divert my mind from dwelling on death; but I entertain very different sentiments. Death has no terrors for me; it is an event I always look to with cheerfulness, if not with pleasure; and be assured the subject is more grateful to me than any other. I am well aware that I have but a short time to live; my mode of life has rendered it impossible that I should get rid of this fever. I have no method of lowering my nourishment, and therefore I must die. It is such jolly fellows as you, Priestman, that can get over these fevers." Then alluding to the subject of his funeral, he continued—"There is a spot near the village of Daughigny; this would suit me nicely. You know it well, for I have often said that I should like to be buried there; and let me beg of you, as you value your old friend, not to suffer any pomp to be used at my funeral; nor any monument, nor monumental inscription whatever, to mark where I am laid; but lay me quietly in the earth, place a sun-dial over my grave, and let me be forgotten." These directions were in spirit; though not strictly complied with; and on the 25th of January, 1790, the body of Howard was buried in the spot which he had chosen near the village of Daughigny, a little distance from Cherson. The authorities and the inhabitants of the place testified their respect for him by attending his remains to the grave. Instead of the sun-dial, a small brick pyramid was erected on the spot.—In Cardington church, according to his directions, a plain slip of marble was erected by his wife's tomb, bearing this inscription:—"John Howard; died at Cherson, in Russian Tartary, January, 1790. Aged 64. Christ is my hope." A more stately monument was soon afterwards erected to his memory, in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Touching Anecdote.

At a Teachers' Convention in Springfield, Mr. Sweetzer, in an eloquent speech, illustrated the force of example by the following striking anecdote:—

A painter, while journeying, accidentally fell in with a most beautiful child, and was so enraptured with its countenance that he immediately resolved to paint it, and carried his determination into execution. Hanging the painting in his studio, he made it his guardian angel, and when he was desponding, or angry, sought encouragement and calmness in gazing into its beautiful face. He thought that if he could ever meet with its counterpart, he would paint that also. Years passed away, and the painter succeeded in finding no one so infernally ugly-looking as to satisfy his idea of an opposite to his darling picture; but by chance while visiting a prison, after having almost given up in despair, he saw a young man stretched upon the floor of his cell in a perfect paroxysm of rage. This struck him as his desideratum, and he lost no time in transferring the face to canvass, and placing it side by side with his ideal of purity, innocence, and beauty. And who, think you, was the original of his last painting? The same that when a child, had furnished him with his long-cherished & beautiful picture, "the innocent, happy babe. The change had been wrought by the teachings he had been subjected to, and the examples set before him." "Let us," said Mr. Sweetzer, "take warning from this lesson; and do what we all can to rescue angels from becoming fiends." [Springfield Republican.

Religious Differences.

In alluding to the invitation extended to the Rev. Bushnell, of Hartford to address the students of the Divinity school at Cambridge, the Christian World remarks:

"That the great body of the Orthodox are gradually becoming broader, deeper, more liberal, and more rational in their doctrinal statement; that they adhere less to the letter of creeds, and dwell more on the essence of Christian experience, there is no doubt. As little can it be questioned that the Unitarians, as a body, are more disposed to find truth in the leading tenets of Orthodoxy, which they once denounced as pure error. Many of our Unitarian societies would as willingly settle an Orthodox man as a Unitarian, provided he was really liberal, that is, really rational—provided he knew what Orthodoxy means, and did not insist on his hearers swallowing the burr with the chestnut. We are glad that the theological students at Cambridge (for it was their doings,) have invited Dr. Bushnell to address them. Such things do all parties good.

Pleasure of Paying Debts.

What a pleasure it is to pay one's debts! It seems to flow from a combination of circumstances. In the first place, it removes that uneasiness which a true spirit feels from dependence and obligation. It affords pleasure to the creditor, and therefore gratifies our social affection. It promotes that future confidence which is so very interesting to an honest mind; it opens a prospect of being readily supplied with what we want on future occasions; it leaves a consciousness of our own virtue; and it is a measure we know to be right, both in point of justice and sound economy. Finally, it is the main support of simple reputation.

Advertisements.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheesman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

SundaySchool Books--New Supply.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF BOOKS suitable for Sunday School Libraries, comprising recent publication of the American Sunday School Union, together with the two cent Hymn Book and the

Child's Cabinet Library,

containing 75 books bound in 50 volumes 32 mo. 32 pp. with morocco backs, lettered and numbered, only $2,50 for the Library, being at the rate of 5 cents per volume

Also, a good variety of books, in plain and elegant binding, selected with special reference to the coming

HOLYDAYS.

For sale at the Sunday School Depository.

J. METCALF, Agent.

Putnam, Dec. 13, 1847.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT. Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received fer it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he 'offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 41. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, JULY 13, 1848. WHOLE NO. 457

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SEE THE MISER AT HIS CHEST.

See the Miser at his chest,
Doating on his treasured wealth;
Gold above all things the best—
Wife, or child, or blooming health.

Clasps it fondly to his arms,
Beam with joy his raptured eyes;
Sells his soul for paltry charms,
Yet despised and poor he dies.

Lo! the Drunkard at his cup!
Quaffing mis'ry from the bowl;
Drinks the pois'nous bev'rage up—
Drinks and ruins mind and soul.

O! bewitching folly this!
Madness high above dispute!
Dashes down immortal bliss—
Sinks the man below the brute!

Hear the man with oaths profane—
Man who boasts of learning's rays—
With his lips blasphemes the name
That designed them for his praise:

Curses God who gives him food,
Who bestows life's fleeting day;
Blesses him with earthly good—
Turns the bolt of wrath away.

And the gay and sprightly see,
Flut'ring in the giddy throng;
Charmed with daz'ling gaiety,
Raptured with the Siren's song:

Chasing through the glit'ring maze,
Fashion, as she gaily lies;
Heeds not that her flowry ways,
Gild the path where ruin lies!

Miser! leave thy doated wealth;
Drunkard! waste not blooming health;
Swearer! cease thy oaths profane;
Gay one! break the Siren's chain!
Listen! from her golden throne,
Wisdom sweetly bids you come:
"Miser! look for pearls on high,
Brighter than the sunset sky!
Drunkard! take salvation's cup,
Filled with sweetest nectar up!
Swearer! praise Him who has spread,
Gems of beauty overhead!
Gay one! fond of earthly shows,
Heaven with lustre ever glows!"
And to all, again, she cries—
"Come where glory never dies!"
Proffers you undying joy,
Raptured scenes without alloy!

Banks of the Scioto, July 1848.

A Sermon.

Written for the Western Recorder.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD, NOT AN ARTICLE OF NATURAL RELIGION.

1 Cor. 15, 20 and 21.—But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.

For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

CONCLUDED.

The time approaches in which the Savior shall more fully enter upon the duties of his mission. To "fulfil all righteousness," he goeth forth to John baptizing in Jordan, to be baptized of him. Let us go forth and behold the wonders of the scene. The city gates are open, and her thousands pour forth in a mingled mass. They throng the river and banks; men and women of every age, of every circumstance, stand in silent awe. The scene begins;—is accomplished—completed; they come up from the water. Why look the spectators so amazed? Is yonder dove the object of their attention? See! it lights on Jesus, 'tis God's Spirit, and God's voice proclaims, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Here then is the Redeemer, very God, and very man. Finite, blended with the infinite: In the guise of a creature, yet Creator of all things; exposed to suffering, ignominy and death, yet governing by the word of his power worlds, and creatures innumerable! He it was who was set apart from the beginning, & sealed to the work of man's Redemption. Who being very man—partook of our infirmities, sin excepted; was subject to hunger, thirst, heat, cold, and all the vicissitudes of mortal life; was tempted and despised, buffeted, spit upon and rejected. He was indeed "as a root out of dry ground, having no form or comeliness, that when he should be seen of us he should be desired by us." He was indeed "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him." Yet being God as well as man; having two whole and perfect natures;—as God—we behold him holding nature in abeyance in the performance of works independent of her laws, which so confound his enemies, that even they, hardened as they are in sin, are forced to admit his divinity. How could they resist this conclusion?—— In their presence the sick were healed, the leper cleansed, the deaf heard, the blind saw, the lame resumed their wonted activity, the multitude were fed in a manner not to be accounted for upon natural principles; at his bidding the winds subsided, and the sea was becalmed, and all the powers of life returned to them that were dead! Did not these works directly evidence his divinity?

God created, and impressed on nature the laws that govern her, which laws he alone could suspend. But these laws were suspended by Jesus Christ in the performance of his works, for to heal the sick no medicine was given: in the restoration of sight and activity, no operation was performed; and to bring back the soul to its clay prison, no agent was employed other than his own voice and will. What follows then? This—if God alone could suspend nature's laws, Jesus Christ was divine, for he suspended them at pleasure! Hence we are warranted in the conclusion that Jesus Christ was possest of two natures; and, that those natures were whole, and perfect! Some may enquire, wherefore the necessity of this union? We answer, God is, and ever shall be; knows no increase or diminution of his existence. God is spirit; and spirit as it exists in him, is life and power; is excellence and perfection of the most exalted kind; may not be degraded, or cease to be what it is, the pure & holy fountain of uncreated good, and peace, and happiness. Being life and power, it is the cause of all cause, cause of all effect; itself uncaused, self existent, eternal! Spirit as it is in God is light without mixture, knows no defect, and hence it must ever be light. Death is darkness; death is a defect, a blemish on, and in God's work of creation, at least so far as earth is concerned.—Death is the effect, the child of sin; had there been no sin therefore, there had been no death! God is free from sin, for He is above all law save that of His own nature. His nature is perfect! His character on the whole, as well as His being, is an unbounded, unfathomable—unimaginable sea of perfection, known thoroughly to Himself alone. And therefore, if only by the shedding of blood there could be remission of sins; if only by the gift of life, redemption could be effected; God, as God alone could make no atonement. And whilst God, as God alone could not suffer the penalty, neither could man, as man alone, restore the sanctity of the law. To restore this, there must have been on the part of him by whom it was to be accomplished a strict obedience to all its parts; a freedom from all transgression, combined with perfect purity and holiness. This could be but through the miraculous interposition of the Almighty; nature's law must be suspended. In the generation of Jesus Christ this was done. God was incarnate in him; and there being in his person a strict and complete union of Deity and manhood, he was eminently qualified to be a propitiation for sin, and to make intercession for transgressors; for as man, he was "touched with the feeling of our infirmities:" As man he is finally arraigned, and brought before Pilate; is tried; condemned; led forth, crucified, embalmed, entombed! As man he suffers, as man sustained by God, he makes atonement for man's transgression; as man, he pays the price of man's redemption by giving up his life, by shedding his own blood, thus opening a fountain in which all may wash, and cleanse their garments from the stains of sin, and thus prepare their souls for heaven and eternal joy. As God and man combined, he opened up a new and living way in which poor, fallen man, restored, may securely travel to the realms of ineffable bliss! It is not in the power of mortals to strip this subject of mystery, and thereby thoroughly explain the nature of the union of the two natures, or double nature of our glorious Redeemer. Respecting this union we have sufficient knowledge for all the purposes of salvation. "Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness;" and redemption is a mystery into which angels desire to look! We only know, that the more we understand of this subject, the more like God's greatest, most stupendous work it seems! Then readers—haste to embrace the great and rich provision offered here; scorn it not, reject it not, for on it rests your all in life, in death, and in the eternal world! An atonement has been made for you, for me, for sinners; for all the world.—A full, a free, and abundantly sufficient salvation provided! Our redemption has been effected by one in every way fully qualified to effect it; Jesus Christ. Whose divinity is fully attested by prophecy, and the strict accordance of history therewith, in his birth, life, teaching, works, sufferings, and death! It was not merely necessary for Christ to die in order to redeem man;—he must arise from the dead before his work was or could be complete. Had death retained dominion over him, had the grave forever held its victory, the hope of his followers was vain; they were yet in their sins, yet under the curse of a violated law which doomed to hopeless and remediless ruin all mankind. But, exclaims one, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." He died; he arose as the first fruits of his own glorious harvest, and as our forerunner passed within the vail, and

> "Then first humanity triumphant
> Passed the crystal ports of light,
> And seized eternal youth!"

There is no fact in history more fully confirmed than this. Jesus did suffer, and did truly die, and arose from the dead on the third day as he had before declared he would do.

Before Christ came, men anticipated immortality. And now those who have never heard his name anticipate a life that shall be manifested after death. From the universality of this idea, it having found a place in the religious system of nearly every nation, we are forced to admit the doctrine of the immortality of the soul to be an article of natural religion. Man was created for immortality, nor could the sense or recollection of this be withdrawn from him. That the soul was indestructible was argued from the almost illimitable extent of its powers, from its fond desires, and bold imaginings by which it may take in at a glance, or reach at a bound the universe; or more deliberate, wander from plain to plain; from mountain to mountain; from sea to sea; from island to island; from continent to continent; and from pole to pole! Or soaring from planet to planet; from star to star; from system to system, scanning the universe.—Or forgetful the mortality with which it stands connected, meditates a nobler flight, spreads forth its wings, leaves suns, stars, systems, all below, nor pauses in its course until it gains the presence chamber of the King of Kings; before whom angels and arch-angels bow, while perfect service flows unbidden from the hearts and lips of untold millions who surround the blazing throne, ever exclaiming, "Holy! Holy! Holy Lord God Almighty!!! heaven and earth is full of thy glory!!—This is its disposition; these are its aspirations.—

From its nature we are almost led to think it a spark of Divinity, a part of God himself. The language of the soul, its aspirations all whisper to us its immortality, its high destiny! On the part of the body there are no such whisperings, such aspirations. It is of the earth, earthly; and thither it tends at all times. No voice of nature tells us it shall be rebuilt. Plato, in his boldest imaginings, never fancied the great God possest of a power by which to bring bone again to bone, nerve to nerve, ligament to ligament; supply all the nice arterial apparatus, clothe all with flesh and restore the vital principle; thus forming a new creature from dust that for ages had slumbered forgotten within the lonely tomb.—Generation after generation, like the waves of Ocean wrecked upon the beach, had reached the shores of time, and then, with all their hope and fear, their sorrow and their joy past from mortal sight. Race after race had past, nor reason's utmost effort, nor imagination's boldest flight could ever behold them rise again, or fancy them arisen. The resurrection of the dead is altogether supernatural. It is not accountable on any natural principle, and we can only regard it as a stupendous miracle, consequent upon redemption. Christ is its author. Had he not undertaken our cause; had he not undertaken our redemption by giving his body to be bruised, and stripped, and mangled for our infirmities; nor poured forth his soul an offering for sin; whatever had become of the soul, whether it existed, or ceased to exist after the relation it sustains here has terminated, the body must ever have remained under the curse of the violated law; for we cannot suppose the death of the body would allow of its resurrection again unto life. Life belongs peculiarly to the soul; man's body lived not in the beginning until by the Divine inflatus he received the breath of life. When the soul departs, the body dies, and dying, moulders back to dust. Mere atoms cannot have life inherent in them—No matter what their form, or size, or number, they cannot form a rational soul. Hence we infer, in order to resuscitate the body it was necessary nature's law should be repealed, that her order should be rolled back, and that the condemning principle, the violated law of God, should be met and fully satisfied.—This has all been accomplished. "For now is Christ risen from the dead." And it is because and only because the Son of God took our nature into union with his own, & endured therin the curse provoked by our disobedience; solved therein the question how God could be just and justify sinners, that a time will come when the many millions that have been swept from time, and consigned to the tomb shall burst their fetters, and arise in triumph from death's long, dreary sleep. Only because Christ hath once suffered, the just for the unjust, and arisen from the dead; that a time will arrive, when this mortality, shall become immortal; and this corruptible body, incorruptible forever. Jesus saith, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. This is the will of him that sent me, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day." Upon this distinct promise, so often repeated in the Scriptures, the christian rests his confidence, and grounds his hope; for here the Savior pledges himself as strongly to guard his dust, as he hath elsewhere done to keep his soul. Matter as well as spirit has been redeemed. Therefore may the christian be confident and exclaim with Paul, "I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded he is able to keep that I have committed unto him against that day;" or with Job, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth, and though after my skin worms destroy this body; yet in my flesh shall I see God!"—How wonderful does this subject appear to us!—How sublime, and august will the consummation be. Christ, its author has already arisen. The great object for which he came has been accomplished; man has been redeemed, death has been met and vanquished in his own domain, the Serpent's head has been bruised, bruised too by the woman's conquering seed. The sun is growing old in the heavens and the earth in her orbit.—Her days are numbered in heaven, and are passing rapidly away. "Passing away" is written upon all things on the plain and mount, on land and sea, on all the works of nature and art, and on the visages of all men. The seed of death is sown within us; the flower thereof has opened, the fruit thereof is ripening, the grave opens before us, and we fly towards it as on the wings of thought. Our places will soon be vacated by us, and filled by succeding generations. Soon it will be said of us, "they are gone!" And if perchance the men that come after us shall discover our mouldering skeletons, they will turn therefrom with loathing, and disgust, as we ourselves have turned from the poor remains of those that have gone before us. A century hence and our history may be summed up thus: they lived—they died—and are now forgotten. Who among us hope to be retained in the mutable memory of man? Alas! alas! it is our destiny to be forgotten—forgotten too by our kindest, dearest friends. Yet there is one by whom we shall never be forgotten; one that shall keep a constant vigil over our ashes; one who shall guard every portion of matter that now makes up our frame, guard it too so strictly, that although "the fires may have consumed us, and the wind scattered our ashes over earth; though ocean's bed may have received us,—though we may repose in silence beneath the ground or our bones bleach upon its surface, yet shall He gather our dust together, separate it from other and grosser matter, and give us bodies fashioned after his own glorious likeness, if we love and serve him here.—All in that day shall arise, but some shall awaken to everlasting shame and contempt. Some shall go away into everlasting punishment, while others shall be called to inherit eternal life! We now enjoy a state of probation, with all the privileges thereof. This state must shortly terminate. Our present day will speedily close. How important then that we should be prepared, that we should have on garments of righteousness and be fully ready for the solemn and awful scene that shall break in upon the world in the last day of Time!!!

THETA.

Pleasant View, Pa.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

CONSTANTINOPLE.

LETTERS FROM MESSRS. HOMES AND DWIGHT.

Recognition of Protestantism in Turkey.

Under date of December 15, 1847, Mr. Homes writes as follows:—

The supporters of the Mission to the Armenians of Turkey will rejoice to learn, that the Sultan has now, by a written official act, recognized Protestants as constituting a separate and independent community in Turkey. He has given to the brethren who compose the Evangelical Armenian church all the rights and privileges possessed by the most favored of the Christian denominations in Turkey.

Rarely have the calculations of enemies been so singularly disappointed, as have those of the individuals who prophesied that our native brethren would be crushed in their avowal of the truth as it is in the Gospel. And indeed, unless the Lord had been on their side, they would have been swallowed up. After two years of patient endurance of the persecutions of their countrymen, especially ecclesiastics: after four petitions to the Sultan himself that they might be free from their embarrassments, their faith is rewarded by a comparatively speedy civil emancipation, and a complete freedom from the persecuting tyranny of their Patriarch.

In the title given to the translation of this document, you will see that it is said to have been obtained by Lord Cowley, the British Ambassador. God turneth the hearts of men as he pleaseth. There have been times when the British Government has utterly refused to concern itself in the persecutions sustained by evangelical men in Turkey. But at this juncture, more critical than ever, God raised up the British Government as their most effectual friends; and in Lord Cowley they found one who not only moved in the same magnanimous course as Sir Stratford Canning, but who also with the warmest personal zeal, exerted himself to put them on the footing of a separate community. For this act, coming generations shall hold him in honor. His name will always be associated in the first recognition by the Government, of the Protestant church in Turkey.

Translation of an Order, obtained from the sublime Porte by the Right Honorable Lord Cowley, in favor of the Sultan's Protestant subjects.

"To His Excellency, the Pasha Comptroller of the City Revenue.

"Whereas the Christian subjects of the Ottoman Government professing Protestantism, have experienced difficulty and embarrassment from not being hitherto under a special and separate jurisdiction, and naturally the Patriarch and the heads of the sects from which they have separated not being able to superintend the affairs; and

"Whereas it is in contravertion to the supreme will of his Imperial Majesty our Gracious Lord and Benefactor, (may God increase him in years and power!) animated as he is with feelings of deep interest and clemency towards all classes of his subjects, that any of them should be subjected to grievances: and

"Whereas the aforesaid Protestants, in conformity with the creed professed by them, do form a separate community.

"It is his Imperial Majesty's supreme will and command that for the sole purpose of facilitating their affairs and of securing the welfare of said Protestants the administration thereof should be henceforward confined to Your Excellency, together with the allotment of the taxes to which they are subjected by law: that you do keep a separate register of their births and deaths in the Bureau of your Department, according to the system observed with regard to the Latin subjects that you do issue passports and permits of marriage: and that any person of established character and good conduct chosen by them to appear as their agent at the Porte for the transaction and settlement of their current affairs, be duly appointed for that purpose.

"Such are the Imperial Commands, which you are to obey to the letter.

"But although passports and the allotment of taxes are placed under special regulations which cannot be infringed upon, you will be careful that, in pursuance of His Majesty's desire, no taxes be exacted from the Protestants for permits of marriage and registration; that any necessary assistance and facility be afforded to them in their current affairs: that no interference whatever be permitted in their temporal or spiritual concerns on the part of the Patriarch, Monks or Priests of other Sects; but that they be enabled to exercise the profession of their creed in security and that they be not molested one iota, either in that respect, or in any other way whatever."

(Signed) "Reshid, Grand Vizier.

November, 15, 1847.

After granting this Order, the Porte still further graciously ordered, at the benevolent suggestion of the same noble friend of the Protestants as before, that letters should be sent to five different Pashalics, where there are Protestants, requiring them to act on the same principles as in the firman which we send you.

I would be glad to make many reflections on these important documents, but must refrain for the present. Our brethren held a special season of prayer, both for thanksgiving at thus obtaining something like chartered rights, and to supplicate the guidance and the blessing of God upon themselves in the new and important position in which they are placed.

Mr. Dwight, writing the same day, adds the following remarks:—

It is noticeable that throughout the two documents that have issued from the Porte on this subject, nothing is said of the Protestant Americans,— but simply of the Prostestant rayahs or subjects; and of course, whoever of the Greeks, Jews, or any other class, shall become a protestant, he is entitled to the protection which this new arrangement gives. To us who live in Turkey, and who know something of the mighty influences that are always at work here against the spread of Protestantism, and the difficulties in the way of its former recognition by the Turkish government, it appears but little less than a miracle, that this thing has been effected in so short a time. To God be all the praise.

We desire ever to remember, however, that external prosperity, instead of securing the true spiritual growth of the church often acts as a canker-worm; gnawing at its roots, and destroying its vital energy. I confess that my anxieties for the churches of Christ in this land, are now just commencing. I pray God that he may interpose his effective grace, to prevent these churches from being ruined by worldly ease and enlargement, as he has not permitted them to be injured by affliction and persecution.

I wish you not to infer that I see any thing in the actual dispositions of the native brethren that is calculated to excite alarm. On the contrary, I am greatly encouraged by what I observe of their temper and spirit under the trial of prosperity thus far. But, looking at human nature, and at the history of the church in all ages, we certainly have grounds for serious apprehensions of evils that may result from sudden external prosperity. There is no fear, however, as to the final result, and I see it written in broad and legible characters on every providence of God in regard to these people, that the triumph of the Gospel in this land shall be complete and glorious, Let us have your unceasing prayers.

Miscellaneous.

From the Presbyterian.

Appeal for Six Hundred Persecuted Portuguese.

On the Island of Trinidad are about six hundred Portuguese, who have fled from the persecutions of the Romish Church at Madeira.—They are converts from the Church of Rome. For reading the Bible and embracing the Protestant faith, they were thrown into prison, and finally released on condition they would leave their native country. They went to Trinidad, where, under the British flag, they have liberty of conscience. During the past winter, the American Protestant Society sent their Portuguese missionary, the Rev. Mr. Gonsalves, (who is a native of Madeira, and was educated there for the priesthood of the Roman Church) to preach to these persecuted converts in Trinidad. There he found about six hundred of them organized into a church, with Mr. De Silva, a native convert, for their pastor. They are farmers and mechanics, and industrious and virtuous people, who have literally sacrificed friends, property, and country for the sake of the Gospel and freedom to worship God. While they have religious freedom in Trinidad, that was denied them in their own country, they have no employment, and hence are now in a suffering condition. They have made an appeal to the Executive Board of the American Protestant Society, and through them to Protestants in the United States, to give them a home in our happy country. We here publish the letter of Mr. De Silva to the Board, which is of itself enough to awaken the sympathy and benevolence of the Protestant community. Of the character of Mr. De Silva, the Rev. Mr. Kennedy, the pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Trinidad, speaks as follows:

"I have had the privilege of knowing him intimately ever since his arrival in this Island, and I am happy in being able to say without reservation or hesitancy, that his diligence and faithfulness as a minister of the Gospel are most exemplary. I may also mention that Mr. De Silva is characterized by great judiciousness, and is able to give wise counsel in things temporal to his expatriated countrymen, as well as to act as their spiritual instructor and guide."

TRANSLATION OF MR. D. SILVA'S LETTER.

"Finding myself constituted the pastor (tho' unworthy of so great a trust) of a church of nearly six hundred persons, it is not only my duty to feed them with spiritual aliment, but also to seek prayerfully their temporary good; endeavoring to keep them together in the faith and enjoyment of their daily bread.

"And that they may be able to hear the word of God with profit on the days appointed, I do not see here the prospect of keeping this people in the midst of the present distress, as their labors are not paid as they should be; for in this sickly climate when the husband and father is taken to the hospital the wife and children are left destitute, and not being able to pay the house rent, they are turned into the streets to beg from door to door. This state of things led me to solicit of the governor of this Island (Lord Harris) a portion of land to be divided amongst the Portuguese, that they might on the same build their cabins, provided they could receive some aid in advance to be paid by them in the course of time. But although the governor is friendly to us, yet in his official capacity, he said he could not comply with our request. I have also written on this subject to the Rev. Mr. Hewitson, of Scotland, who answered that we should find it difficult to obtain lands for our families in these Islands. And finally, in the midst of these efforts, the Bank of the West Indies failed, and sugars came down in price, and business was prostrated to the ruin of many households.—Government works were stopped, and laborers can find little or nothing to do. And worse than all, our children, whose morals should be preserved at every expense, are mixed with a low, profane, wretched Roman Catholic population. I have consulted also the Rev. Mr. Kennedy, pastor of the English Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Messrs. Boodie, Banks, Kerr, Black & Berry, on a visit from the United States to this Island. I said to these brethren that I believed that God would, in his way, prepare a place for his people in some country where I might retire with the whole church, and that he would open the hearts of the faithful, that they might bestow upon us the requisite aid. These gentlemen thought the United States of America offered advantages greater than any other country for a Bible-reading, spiritual, virtuous, industrious people—that a people persecuted for the Gospel's sake, could not fail of finding sympathy in the hearts of the friends of Christ in America. I have also written to the friends of Christ in Scotland, that they might still feel for this people, who must receive immediate aid or many of them will perish with misery. I do not ask for money, but for lands. I ask what God has given to man, that he might earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. Our people are mechanics and farmers, virtuous and industrious; they will soon rejoice in abundance, for they hate vice, and love virtue. All these things I made known to the Rev. Mr. Gonsalves, and he, seeing the desire of all the Portuguese to depart for the U. States, for they were ready to fly, offered to take with him a small number, believing that the excellent American Protestant Society and the Christian community would assist them with all the aid in their power. But on the whole, I thought we should wait until we should receive advice from the American Protestant Society, and the friends in Scotland, who, under God, have granted us so many blessings, & to whom we feel greatly indebted. And as the Rev. Mr. Gonsalves was about to return to his field of labor in the United States, I have taken the liberty, in the name of a persecuted and suffering people, to write a letter to the Protestant friends of Christ in America, through the American Protestant Society, that they may pray for us, and come to some holy and charitable determination in our behalf. For I am ready to depart to any part of the world where this people of the Lord may enjoy the blessings of God's grace and leave the same to their children. Farewell. The God of peace bless you, my friends, and all America with the riches of his grace. Your affectionate brother in Christ,

ARSENIO NICOS DE SILVA."

We add only a few words. Such an appeal has never been made to us. Six hundred persons, recently from the persecution and prisons of their native country, ask a home among us. Shall they be denied? They ask not for money, but for land. Shall we refuse it? We have frequent appeals for Missionaries and Colporteurs at the West. Here is an opportunity of sending six hundred at once, all converts from the Church of Rome, who will be faithful witnesses for the truth in the midst of Romanists on our new lands. The expense will be much less than is required to send out individuals from time to time by different societies. It will be such a colony as has not been planted in the West. Who can tell the result of it? Shall there be a response to this appeal, or shall we say, "Stay and suffer in Trinidad, or return to the persecutions and prisons of Madeira?" Shall we, who enjoy the luxury of freedom, thus trifle with the sufferings of the oppressed? Shall we thus shut off sympathy for the persecuted, and benevolence for the destitute?

Among these persecuted people are Mrs. Alves, her husband, children, and sister. Mrs. Alves was sentenced to suffer death by the Papal Court at Madeira, because she would not say that the wafer, in the hands of the priest, was God. She and her sister were confined about three years in the dungeons of Madeira.

We call upon Protestants to furnish the means of defraying the expenses of the passage of these homeless people to our shores, and of purchasing new lands for them. Their condition is such that there should be no delay. Literally, they are strangers and pilgrims, having no certain dwelling-place. Shall this be to them the land of promise, where they may find rest from the persecutions of their enemies?

Money may be remitted to the Treasurer of the American Protestant Society, M. De Motte, Esq., 150 Nassau street New York.

By order of the Executive Committee of the American Protestant Society.

HERMAN NORTON, Cor. Sec.

A thought—think of it.

A seed, buried in the earth for centuries, may contain the power of vitality, and by the action of light and heat, spring up and yield an abundance of fruit. A thought casually dropped—in the corner of a letter—at the bottom of a newspaper column—or amid a crowd of juveniles—may remain unproductive for years, and at last spring up to gladden and refresh thousands. A thought may be remembered forever Think of this, ye who are feeding the immortal mind, and stamping its destiny. Let not an impure sentence go forth from your pen or your lips. Drop everywhere the good seeds of truth, and they will not be lost. The word of reproof—the judicious counsel—the pleasant suggestion—the earnest advice—will be recalled at a future day. Think right, and scatter broadcast the thoughts that will spring up to everlasting life.—Portland Umpire.

Freeport Aqueduct Rebuilt.—The aqueduct at Freeport, Pa., which was recently burned down, is now rebuilt, and the water let into it.

Religious Intelligence.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Greenville Mission, June 22, 1848.

Br. Bassett: We wish to say a few things through the columns of the Recorder. Although we cannot give the cheering news of a number of revivals, and the conversion of scores of souls; yet we do not feel like desponding at the providence of God. We have had to labor under the influence of a liver complaint for the last three months, so that it was with the greatest difficulty that I could make my appointments. Beside, my family was very much afflicted through the winter, and on the 24th of March I was bereft of my companion by death. However, we feel somewhat encouraged: We have had some accessions to the church.

We would say our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Brother Dunlap's meeting house, four miles west of Troy, in Miami county, Ohio, commencing three o'clock on Thursday the 31st of August, and continuing until Monday night, the 4th of September, to which we invite the brethren from the north to attend as they are on their way to conference.

Brs. D. Moore, G. W. Thornburgh, J. L. Borton, T. Graham, W. Chapman, C. Carter, L. Ensminger, A. Bessy, with any others that can come, as it probably is as nigh from the north to come this way as any. Come, brethren, and help us, and we will go to conference with you.

I. C. HUNT, Sup.

ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

From the Methodist Protestant.

Payson, Ill., June 13th, 1848.

Dear Bro. Reese.—Knowing that intelligence from a far country is, generally, gladly received and having a mite of glorious news, I will now chronicle it for the edification of the readers of your excellent paper.

Through the kind providence of God we were permitted to commence, in the village of Lima, Adams Co., Ill., our third Quarterly meeting for the Mississippi Circuit, on the 19th of May, and closed it on the 12th of June; but owing to an error in a communication sent to or received from bro. John Clark, our worthy President, we were deprived of his valuable labors. However, we were assisted for six days of the meeting by bro. R. F. Shinn, of the Springfield Circuit, who labored to general acceptablity. He will doubtless be remembered for his kindness by many of the friends. May the Lord reward him for this labor of love. The venerable Levi Shinn, local minister on this Circuit, rendered very efficient services for ten or twelve days. This father in the ministry is one of the poineers of Methodist Protestantism in the West; his head is truly gray in the service of the Lord, as he has been a minister for more than forty years. He now but waits for his appointed time. Oh, that the Lord would call some young man to fill his place on the wall of Zion, when he goes to Mount Zion.

Our meeting resulted, I believe, in the reformation of from fifty to sixty souls. There were 46 accessions to the M. P. C. I think that there are more who will unite with us. The brethren have purchased a house & lot for a tabernacle for their Master—they are preparing to fit it up in a neat style.

This meeting was held in the vicinity of where the house-burning first commenced among the Mormons, & in a community that has been very reckless and generally regarded as very immoral; but more orderly congregations, I must say, I have never seen in any community, than we have had here during the entire time of our meeting. Our little Church had long struggled in this place for an existence. It might truly have been said, 'Jacob is little, by whom shall he arise?'

We had here a few faithful members, who were determined to cleave to our principles, if they never obtained more than a nominal existence; but glory to God, the set time, the favored time to visit Zion, has at last come. God has done wonders in our midst, whereof we are glad, yea, he has saturated our thirsty souls with a copious shower of Divine grace! Oh, let thy truth continue to spread, & as it spreads, be glorified in the salvation of sinners.

I know not how to express my gratitude to our heavenly Father for his mercy & kindness to this people, & more especially to his servant & your brother in Christ, J. P. JOHNSON, Supt.

P. S. Since the above was written I have organized a new Class, of six members, one of whom is a local preacher, and all of them from the M. E. Church. There is a very flattering prospect of a number more uniting soon with this Class. I have rode this Ct. four years out of nine that I have been in the travelling connection, & I have never seen or known it be in as healthy and prosperous a condition as it is at this time.

J. P. J.

Sic transit Gloria mundi.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Observer states a fact that illustrates the fleeting character of human glory, more than anything that has lately come under our notice. It is this. When Wirt died at the national metropolis, in the prime of his powers, and zenith of his popularity, his political friends solicited of the relatives of the deceased the privilege of retaining the body in the Receiving Tomb, until they could erect a suitable marble monument.—The request was granted. But perhaps some who talked most in fact of the enterprise were not equally forward in contributing toward it.—At any rate the body was left in the public tomb, despite many notices from the sexton, until the period limiting the time of such deposits, as established by the law, had expired. Shortly before this period the gentleman who had been most prominent in the measure, died; and the sexton removed and interred the remains of Wirt; but as he himself soon after died or disappeared, no one can point out the spot where the dust of the talented, christian statesman reposes. He has, indeed, in the hearts of thousands of his countrymen, a monument more enduring than brass or marble, but his history affords one instance more of the neglect that is apt to follow the services of the worthiest public servants.

DON'T YIELD TO SIN.

Are you tempted to turn one moment aside from the path of virtue? Look at the red blood before you of those that have perished, and do not go.

Is the pleasant wine put to your lips? See beneath the rosy brim, a serpent that has proved fatal to thousands like yourself, and do not touch it.

Are you enticed to the house of forbidden pleasure? Read the history of the human wreck on the down-hill of life, ere age has touched the heart, and turn away with all your strength.

Are you tempted to swear? Listen to the dying groans of those who fall deprived of their senses, and not for the world permit your lips to utter an oath.

Whatever shape temptation may come in, have the courage to resist it. If you yield, you may destroy a life of true enjoyment, for a moment of fancied pleasure. There is nothing like decision. Put your foot down and keep it there, and the enemy will assail you in vain.—N. Y. Organ.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, July 13, 1848.

Rev. S. W. Widney.—This brother, a member of the Wabash Conference, is favorably known to our readers as a writer of no ordinary gifts, especially in the poetical line. We are sorry to learn that he has recently met with a serious misfortune in the loss of his dwelling house with all its contents, by fire. This took place on a Sabbath, whilst himself and family were absent at a meeting. Our brother writes us that he was left even destitute of his Bible and Hymn Book. These we would be happy to replace, had we means of sending. We hope that the friends of Br. W. will remember him substantially, in this time of his destitution. His post office address is Boxley, Hamilton county, Ia. We shall be glad to have Br. W. favor us with communications, frequently as convenient, at our expense of postage. His articles are generally well appreciated.

Pittsburgh Gazette,—Erastus Brooks, Esq., has retired from the editorship of this paper, and D. N. White, Esq., the former Editor and Proprietor, has resumed the control of it. After a relaxation of fifteen months, he re-enters upon his editorial toils with improved health. The Gazette is a very prosperous Journal, and Mr. White is a good Editor. Welcome back.

Out West.—Br. J. R. Johnson, now of Knox county, Illinois, formerly of Ohio, writes us under date June 27, as follows: "We have now got a comforable house of worship, and are building a house for our preacher in Abingdon. As a people, we are few in number, and rather limited in circumstances, but not wanting, we trust, in zeal. We are still striving to promote the cause of God, and the interests of the Methodist Protestant Church. Our superintendent, Br. Bagley, is a workman, highly esteemed both by the church and the world." We are glad to hear such good word from our old friends.

THE MARKETS.

Zanesville and Putnam.—Flour, $4,50.—Wheat, 75c. Corn, 25c. Oats, 20.

Cincinnati.—Flour, $3,62. Wheat, 70c.—Corn, 27 @ 30. Oats, 24 @ 28.

Pittsburgh.—Flour, $4,00 @ 4,25. Wheat, 80 @ 85. Corn 33. Oats, 27.

Baltimore,—Flour, $5,62. Wheat, $1,12 @ 1,25. Corn, 40 @ 44. Oats, 30 @ 35.

REV. C. SPRINGER, AGAIN.

We give place to the subjoined communication, as requested by our old friend, availing ourself of the privilege to append such notes as we deem necessary in self defence. We have been advised by various brethren of age, as well as prominent standing in the Church, to cut this personal matter short, as unprofitable and injurious in various respects, publishing no more upon either side. But upon reflection, we concluded we could not now for the first time, decline a request of our Brother, though we cannot conceive how he should ever have got it into his mind that we are deserving of the treatment he is administering to us.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Dear Brother Bassett: I ask the privilege of writing one more communication for your valuable paper, and then I shall redeem my pledge of not "troubling you shortly again."

Before I proceed I will take occasion to remark that in reviewing your numerous commentaries on my last article I had very forcibly brought to my mind an anecdote of a non-professor of religion and a Presiding Elder of the M. E. Church. I believe in my heart, said our hero, Mr. Jones never did acknowledge, but once, in all his life, that he did wrong. When he got religion he did confess to God he had been a Sinner. This case fairly illustrates the spirit of your annotations before us.

You have told us, in substance in your paper, by a hand in your office, that our communications were "uninteresting," "unimportant," & "soiling" to your "type," and in your commentaries now under notice, you seek to evade responsibility by denying that you did the deed. (1.) You have more recently informed us, in an editorial note, that our correspondence was neither "interesting or edifying." (2.) This you justify by saying you alluded to others as well as ourself, as though an offence were lessened by increasing the number of persons against whom it was intended. You have admitted into your columns invidious and slanderous communications against us, (3.) which had no connection, whatever, with the controversy on hand, but the express object of which was to criminate, and now you plead justification on the ground of "free discussion." You have insinuated, or indorsed the insinuations of others by publishing it in your paper, that I was guilty of slander, and when I called on you, as matter of "justice," to either take back the allegation or give me specifications of the slander, so that I might have an opportunity to defend myself against the charge, you have done neither, (4.) but still continue to endorse the intimation, and seek to lose the subject in the dust of recrimination. For all these things you make not the least apology, in your last, but justify yourself as above stated.

Now, the main object of this communication is to say to you, Mr. Editor, and to the public, that I can no longer, consistently with my views of propriety, correspond for a Journal which will thus treat me; that I am excluded from your columns by every principle of self-respect. (5.) So that the editor can introduce as many revolutionary schemes, into his paper, as he pleases, and insert any invidious reference to me he thinks proper, and all shall pass without any notice on my part. But this we think he will reply is a matter of very little consequence. (6.) very well, be it so.

As to your notes and commentaries on my last, I have to say, in general terms, that I consider them a tissue of evasions and misrepresentations. (7.) But they are so numerous that I would no more undertake to examine them individually than I would discuss the merits of a swarm of bees separately. But, as a specimen of the manner in which we are misrepresented take the following. Speaking of our article to Brother Gay, in his paper of July 30th, 1846, he says:

"In that article, among other like things, he said of the signers of the Protest, of whom was such a man as the Rev. D. H. Stephens, then president of the Indiana Conference, but now, we doubt not, in the Paradise of God, they were "not fit to belong to any decent community. If they were it should be to some hierarchy where a bishop had the power to kick and cuff them to their proper places."

Although lengthy (8.) we shall be compeled, in self defence, to insert this quotation with its connection, so that the reader may see whether or no we have been guilty of speaking so vilely of the sainted Stephens as here represented:

As stated above we do not feel called on to follow this sage thro' all his pitiful allegations in the article under review. What we have noticed is a fair specimen of the balance. But as Br. Gay has given us the credit of being a "plain" man, we shall take the liberty to say to him "plainly" that we consider him a disputatious and troublesome man in community. And we have heard many others refer to him with the same sentiment. In proof of this we will give the character of his communications in the Recorder in general, and the following resolution in particular:—

Whereas, it appears that a large number of the members of the Methodist Protestant Church, in some portions of our beloved Zion, hold slaves. And whereas, this Gen. Con. has solemnly declared that 'holding slaves, under many circumstances, is a sin against God.' Therefore,

Resolved, That the following item be added in the Discipline, after the 10th item on page 39. 'Should it be ascertained that any of the ministers, preachers or members of our Church have engaged in the traffic of buying or selling human beings as property, or holding them in slavery otherwise than with a view to manumit or to benefit the enslaved, the proper authorities of the Church shall proceed to the investigation and trial of such person or persons, as in other cases of immorality—Provided, That no slaveholder of a similar character be permitted to sit as a committee man on the trial.

J. GAY.

Now it will be recollected the circumstances under which this resolution was offered. The Conference at the instance of Br. Gay, and a few others of a similar stripe, had listened near a week principally to such sickening stuff as the communication under notice, from its philanthropic members. It then deliberately and understandingly decided the slavery question, & determined to attend to important business, much of which remained unadjusted. Then the dear abolition brethren began to hatch new resolutions on slavery to harrass and vex the business of the Conference. Among the rest Br. Gay must show his zeal by boring that body with the one we here give, which was very promptly laid on the table.

Every member of a deliberative body, whether he be right or no, is at liberty to do, respectfully, what he can to secure such measures as he may think right & proper. But after he has been permitted to say and do all he is able, in favor of a question, if the majority decide against him, then to vex and teaze the body with new resolutions involving the same principle, evinces, in our estimation, a spirit the most contemptible. And men who will thus act are not fit to belong to any decent community. If they are it should be to some hierarchy, where a bishop has the power to kick and cuff* them to their proper places.

We consider this resolution of our worthy brother, discloses the very spirit of mobocracy, and any man who would offer it, under the circumstances, would join a "row" to carry his point. And for the life of us we can have little more respect for any one who will lend himself to such practices than we can have for a mobocrat.

Here it may be seen that not even a remote reference is had to Br. Stephens & the Protestors—(9.) we admit they had both a legal and an equitable right to Protest provided they did it in truth and soberness.—But our allusion is solely to Br. Gay and such agitators, who although they had a legal right to offer resolutions, had no equitable one to do so under the circumstances named. What could have been the motive of our brother, by this misrepresentation and holy cant, to endeavor to excite against us the prejudice of Stephens' friends and others, God only knows. I would readily feel disposed to attribute it to inattention if there had not been so many of the same kind of misrepresentations in the same paper. (10.) And I am still willing to account for it on some other principle than a wilful intention to injure an old friend.

There is one feature in the manner of this quotation our brother has made from us, to which we desire to call attention. Whenever a man allows himself to recite the actions, or give the words of his neighbor, without giving the circumstances which gave rise to them, he scarcely ever fails to slander those of whom he speaks, for, probably, nine cases out of ten, it is the circumstances which constitute the merit or demerit of the action. For illustration, we will suppose it is reported, in truth, that A. H. B. has killed a man. From this announcement the shout of murder! murder! gallows! gallows! would be re-echoed from every nook & corner of society. But let the public be informed that this act was done in self defence, and this supposed henious crime is at once transformed into a merit. We ask then, as matter of justice, if ever our brother should have occasion to quote from us, again, another text, with a view to our injury, as in the present case, that he would give the context also. (11.) For when that is given, in the case before us, it is seen the man we were discoursing of, was not the saint in heaven, but the man on earth, who is one of the most conceited, troublesome, and factious men with which any deliberative body could be bored. (12.) And that our language, though "plain," is not very inappropriate at last. At least it is the only language he would be likely to understand. And this, by the way, is about a fair specimen of our manner of "slandering" men. When we are provoked to it, in self defence, we endeavor to use them up in "plain" style, wishing to say nothing about them facts do not justify, and this is "slandering" them.

As to our "substantially acknowledging" that we were in the "habit of using severity in writing" we have never "acknowledged" "substantially" nor otherwise, that we have used greater "severity" than yourself, of which we gave a specimen or two, and can give more if you desire it. Nor do we acknowledge that we are in the "habit" of using more "severity" than the case calls for. Our greatest severity most generally consists in our facts. "Joking on facts is the severest kind of Joking." And that principle is the thing which makes you feel so very sensitive (13.) in regard to our reference to the 'Barnburners.' Conscious guilt has a blustering that very often betrays itself.

I might multiply remarks to an indefinite extent, but shall conclude by subscribing myself Yours, &c.,

C. SPRINGER.

Meadow Farm, Ohio, June 30th, 1848.

* This figure we borrowed from our old friend, Rev Geo. Brown, who often utters forcible truths in forcible style. If the young editor had only been schooled awhile where Br. B. and myself were, he would have had such facts as would have enabled him to appreciate the appropriateness of this imagery.

(1.) Those who have seen the previous part of this correspondence need not be told that reference is here made to a circumstance which occurred nearly two years ago. A short note signed "Printer" found its way into the paper, requesting certain writers who used severe personalities to "get through with their uninteresting controversies" before the next volume should commence. Finding that Brother S. was far from being well pleased with the appearance of the note, we made apology to him for having permitted it to be inserted by our foreman, tho' on his own responsibility, and offered to make the same public, but he did not desire it. He states in his communication in Western Recorder of June 22, that he 'agreed to be satisfied with our apology, and that with him the matter was buried forever, unless dug up by us, by similar acts,' which he considers we have now perpetrated. If we are guilty of this, we see not wherein. Our readers who have seen what has passed upon both sides, can judge between us.—As to the communications being "uninteresting or unimportant," some idea can be formed from a specimen given by our Brother in his present article, being taken from the same number of the paper containing the note of "Printer."

(2.) Finding that there was no little dissatisfaction amongst our patrons with the continuance of the controversy on the "Restrictive Rule," by reason chiefly of severe personalities used, and that still other writers were disposed to enter the field of discussion, we thought best some time ago to give notice of our wish to have the controversy brought to a close. We therefore gave a short notice to Correspondents, desiring "that those who wish to write further on the subject would please send us all they design to forward us, by the 1st of June, for we learn," it was added, "that a large portion of our readers would prefer to have the present discussion give place to something more interesting or edifying."—How little did we think that any one of the various writers concerned, would apprehend any occasion to be displeased with us on this account. Brother Springer, it seems, took it all to himself, and concluded that we wished to get rid of his correspondence. Yet in his two former communications, he speaks of receiving a note we sent him, before he had made any complaint, in which in view of his serious domestic afflictions in which we sincerely sympathised, we took pains to assure him that it was not our design to press himself in particular under the circumstances to close his series of articles, by the time specified, but that we wished him to feel at liberty to use his convenience as to time, in preparing what he had it in view to publish. But though we have repeated this assurance in our response to his first communication, we are sorry to find that he cannot be dissuaded from his first conclusion. He speaks of this matter as an "offence," whilst most assuredly we intended "giving none offence to the Jews or to the Gentiles." We intended but a mild, friendly & modest hint to brethren, that it would be agreeable to us to have the controversy alluded to, brought to a close before long, because we were sufficiently advised that it was the wish of a great portion of our patrons. We had a right to make this announcement, because we thought it best. And we still think so.

(3.) The plural is here used, as though more than one such communication had appeared, whereas, we do not recollect that our Brother has specified any one which he considers slanderous, save the article of J. B. Peat, which appeared in our paper of May 11th, to which he has heretofore replied through our columns.—As he has pronounced that article slanderous, & has censured us so severely for publishing it, we deem it our privilege in defence, to state that Brother Springer has seen proper, in various instances, to use personal severity in stricturing or castigating others, and we have to this day published all that he has required or requested. It has been duly indicated to us by expressions from many quarters, that it is at least a very general opinion, that his manner is too severe. A number of writers had sent us articles rebuking him therefor, in terms they considered to be required. Various articles, and parts of articles to this effect, we suppressed, out of respect for our friend. But continuing to receive such communications, when the article of Brother Peat was received, we concluded that it would be right to publish it, as one specimen of opinions abroad, that he might be apprised that others as well as we thought him too severe. If Brother P. used some severity, we had no apprehension that Brother S. could complain, seeing he had dealt out as much of that same to others as he saw good. And we still less apprehended that he would take umbrage at us for publishing it, seeing he would of course have the privilege to reply.

(4.) This charge seems to us to be rather farfetched. And as we so fully answered it in our reply to his last article, we should not have thought he could bring it up again. He charged us with publishing anonymous slander, alluding to the article of Brother J. B. Peat. Our reply was, "We regret that any thing anonymous, considered slanderous, should have found its way into our columns. And we are bound equally to regret that some things should have appeared, considered by some slanderous, which were not anonymous." We did not undertake to say who the writers might be, nor did we charge that the things alluded to were slanderous, but only that some considered them such, and that we regretted the appearance of such things on either hand. Upon this, our friend says in his last: "This, if we understand it, is a plain intimation that you charge us with slander." Please observe how doubtful he is of its application. Yet, what is first taken for an "intimation," and then an "insinuation," becomes, it seems an "allegation" and a "charge." As it is so evident that the matter does not apply to Brother S. why does he apply it exclusively to himself? As to "insinuations," we do not think it worth our while to call for specifications in reference to several he has favored us with, in his communications.

(5.) To use the language of our friend, we cannot help thinking that this is "seeking to lose the subject in the dust of recrimination." Have we not as above stated, published every thing our Brother has ever requested or required? and have we not repeatedly expressed our willingness still to publish whatever he may further wish to send us? And whenever he has thought himself injured or assailed by any one in our columns, has he not had the privilege to reply, in his own way, to his heart's content? As to this matter of "treatment," we heartily leave the public to judge between us. We first publish for him all that he offers, including the severest personal strictures. But in all this, no man must whisper slander, unless he will 'take back the allegation, so far as he is concerned.' And if any one should use the same privilege which our friend has been using, why, that is slander. And not only does the writer receive according to his demerits, but the editor, too, must be severely rebuked for admitting to his columns slanderous communitions. A hard case, this, we do think. We must receive rebukes from many persons throughout the country for admitting into our columns the severities of Brother S., and now if we permit a writer to rebuke him, we must have Brother S. himself down upon us, with the force of unsparing displeasure. Not a very pleasant thing to be an Editor, sometimes.

(6.) This is a mistake. We certainly appreciate the "knowledge and experience" of our friend, and his abilities as a writer. And if he would indulge us in requesting but one modification of his manner to avoid the exceptions alluded to, we should be happy to have the continuance of his correspondence. But a "young editor" must not "dictate."

(7.) This is quite an easy way of disposing of facts. "Misrepresentations!" until quite recently, we believe, such a charge was never advanced against us. Sorry we should be retrogading rather than improving in our latter days. But indeed, as our brother says of his severity, that it 'most generally consists in his facts,' precisely such we conceive is the character of our alleged "misrepresentations." For example, some dozen or more clever things which we stated in those "notes" in reference to our friend, to do him honor, we still insist that they are true, and that no "misrepresentation" or "false coloring" enters into them. The "misrepresentations" he considers too numerous to be examined individually, therefore he gives but one as a specimen. Had he really found any other things which could have been so construed, we are confident that they too would have been forthcoming. We are glad however that he has given one, and glad especially that he acknowledges that one to be a specimen.

(8.) Not too lengthy, by any means. We wish our brother had given a little more of that same. The extract serves our purpose quite as well as it does his own.

(9.) "Not even a remote reference to Br. Stephens and the protestors." Let us see. The article of Brother S. from which this extract is taken, is headed "The Protest." The "protest" is the express topic of the article. It did not suit our brother to prolong the extract, to embrace one more paragraph which immediately follows. Let us have it.

"Br. Gay must not complain that he is assailed in this case. We were implicated in that pitiful Protest to which he lent his name, and had a right to defend ourself against its slang. And if he sees proper to continue this discussion we shall deal plainer with him."

Now, we affirm that Br. Stephens was one of the principal getters up of the Protest, that he principally made exertions to obtain signatures to it, that he was the member who presented the document to the Gen. Conference & asked that it be entered on the Journal, and that he was one who took most pains, without our seeking or even desiring it, to have us furnished with a copy for publication. Yet our brother adds, "our allusion was solely to Brother Gay and such agitators." "Such who, but such as Brother Stephens? In the extract he gives, we have the following.—"Then the dear abolition brethren began to hatch new resolutions on slavery to harrass and vex the business of the Conference. Among the rest, Brother Gay must show his zeal by boring that body with the one we here give," &c. 'Among the rest,' and yet here is "not even a remote reference had to Brother Stephens and the protestors!" whilst we do not see it possible that any others but "protestors" could have been alluded to.

After all, the question of Brother Stephens' being embraced in the condemnation is of no consequence. We named him as one of the leading abolition brethren, to show that even they were entitled to a degree of respect. We could have spared the name of Stephens, and given the names of several protestors of unimpeachable standing in other conferences, though in the estimation of our friend, "not fit to belong to any decent community." As however he disclaims the intention of including Br. Stephens, we yield him the benefit of that explanation, though his terms, as seems evident to us, do not admit of the exception. We had no desire or intention to influence the friends of the departed brother, by our previous reference to his case, and we trust those surviving friends will take special notice, that his memory stands acquitted, by the declartaion of Brother S., of the severe imputation made use of in the extract.

We were not disposed to enter into a canvassing of our brother's article in the case. He made it necessary thus far, by publishing the circumstance of our evident reluctance to publish an article of his (we presume the same one above referred to) stating that at the time we "seemed to be much excited," and "paced back and forth in front of our residence with a rapidity rather unusual," &c. We have acknowledged that it gave us pain that our friend should wish us to publish such unbecoming severities against any. And did he not decline to accommodate our feelings by modifying a single phrase?

(10.) If the rest are "of the same kind of misrepresentations," it does not yet appear that there is any misrepresentation at all.

(11.) If it will at all compensate for our delinquency in not giving 'the context' we will now give another passage from the same article from which he takes the "lengthy extract," and we will insert the whole paragraph, so as to have "the context."

"One of Brother Gay's reasons for giving us the lie, is, that "the reporter" took no notice of our resolutions. The reader is here left to infer that the conference had a "reporter," and this reporter made no allusion to our resolves. Now what will he think when he is told that the conference had no "reporter"—that there were a number who reported proceedings of that body, on their own responsibility—that, among them was the Secretary, Rev. James Wilson, (the only reliable reporter,) who after we read our resolutions, as we before stated, took a copy of them, and had them inserted, next morning, in the Cincinnati Commercial. If any one has philanthropy enough to still doubt our assertion here repeated, he can be satisfied by examining the file of that paper, or by writing to the above named gentleman at Xenia, O.

Now, it was known to Br. S. and to all who were readers of the Recorder in 1846, that we were a "reporter" on our own responsibility, at the General Conference, that we reported the entire proceedings of that body for the Western Recorder. But Rev. J. E. Wilson, meanwhile was reporter, for the Cincinnati Commercial, (under pay it may be.) We had all the facilities for accuracy in our reports which Br. Wilson possessed, being one of the Secretaries as well as he. Yet a very few weeks after the publication of our reports of the proceedings in our paper, Br. S. announces in effect to the thousands of our readers, that those reports which they had just been perusing were not to be relied upon!—that Rev. James Wilson was "the only reliable reporter,"—that he might be addressed at Xenia, O. Whereas, the said Wilson had about that time taken his leave of the Meth. Protestant Church. Now we do not charge our brother with making this announcement, "with a view to our injury," (though it would necessarily tend to our injury.) We considered it at the time a strange inadvertency, unless indeed he judged us lacking of capability or honesty to make out correct reports. His attention was called to this matter shortly after the circumstance, but he has not to this day published one word of correction, or offered one word of apology, in reference to the matter.—We passed this thing in silence at the time, and would not now advert to it, but for the anecdote of "Mr. Jones," and the rebuke of our friend for not giving a larger extract, or the "context" of his article.

(12.) It will now be understood that these epithets do not apply in the present case to Brother Stephens, but to a certain member of the Michigan Conference, who is "of good report," at least in his own country. And that brother must take it all, and not for a moment think of "slander," it is only a way our brother has of "joking on facts."

(13.) "Sensitive." We acknowledge that we were surprised at the sensitiveness manifested by Brother S. in reference to the article of J. B. Peat. Suppose however, that the present rule does not apply in that case, as it is not on our side of the house.

We have now done with this matter, Brother Springer having announced his intention, no more to correspond with our Journal. We are fully conscious that we have done nothing to provoke this determination, as we confidently believe our readers generally can bear us witness. Moreover, in regard to this whole misunderstanding which has unfortunately occurred between us, we are ready confidently to appeal to the public, who have seen what has passed upon either side, that we have done him no wrong, as we can appeal to our heart, and reverently to its Omniscient Searcher, that we have not aimed at, intended, or desired his injury. Did he not assail us in an uncalled for manner, in his communication published in our paper of the 8th ultimo? Did he not renew and prolong the attack, in his communication published in that of the 22d ultimo?—What we have written in reply throughout, we have written in self defence, as required by the principles of self respect, and by the respect we have for our Journal. And it has been painful to us that we have been under the necessity to do this. We regret, deeply regret, the whole affair. If we have unwittingly, in any particular, done injustice to our worthy senior, we stand ready to retract it, and to make restitution. It has rarely in our whole life, been our misforune to have a misunderstanding with any man. In the present instance it is exceedingly afflictive to our feelings. We would charitably trust he has not intended to do us wrong, but has been thus misled by a wrong impression.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Pittsburgh Conference.

Persuant to the call of the President, who states that a difference of opinion exists on the District in regard to time of the session of our next Anual Conference, the publishing Committee hereby announce that the Pittsbutgh Anual Conference will hold its next Session in Fairmont Virginia, to commence on Tuesday morning nine o'clock August 29th 1848.

Pittsburgh July 1848.

W. REEVES, Sec. Com.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The News by the Cambria.

It was with much regret we received on Saturday, and spread before this community, the intelligence brought to our shores by the Cambria.—In every respect it is rather unpropitious, and were it not for a sort of confidence not easily prostrated, we should really begin to despair of all Europe. The climate of France is yet charged with elements of political insanity, and the fever of Bonapartism, which some fancied had become entirely subdued by time, threatens to break out again with malignant fury. It is now impossible to form any reliable conjecture, whether those who would give their lives for the preservation of the republic, will be able to accomplish the purposes of their devotion and zeal. We can only hope. It is a consummation devoutly to be wished that France was relieved forever of every individual bearing the name of Napoleon, however worthy any or all of them may be. It is a name to which the enemies of France can ever resort with a sure prospect of rallying a party imposing in numbers and formidable by reason of their energy and violence of purpose. Notwithstanding all that France suffered under the dynasty of Napoloon, she recurs to it in vain admiration as the culminating point of the glory of the nation, and seems to entertain a sort of wild prescience that from the ashes of "the Emperor" a spirit is to arise invested with power to elevate the nation to an eminence it has never yet attained. There are multitudes in France who believe that a work was left unfinished by the discomfiture of Napoleon at Waterloo, and that an important feature now added to that unfinished work, is to avenge his fall. In the re-ascendancy of Bonapartism, therefore, should it occur in France we have the first step towards a war with England; and if France could, by such a war, afford to the British and Irish people an opportunity to overthrow the government of England, she would in all probability, do more for them than she has been able to accomplish for herself. The future seems yet to be pregnant with startling events, and the danger enlarges of a general European war, in which it is not possible but England will have a hand.

The news from Great Britain indicates the effectual maintenance of government authority.—The iron which only encircled the person of poor Mitchell, seems so have fettered the very souls of his countrymen. His great crime was, he had a spirit above his fellows; his offence to the majesty of England was, that he was the noblest of them all. Could his gallant spirit but diffuse its influence throughout the men of Ireland, they would speedily celebrate the day of their complete redemption. The chartists of England are evidently depressed; they are receding probably to another night of despondency; they must bide their time—wait upon the accident—unless truer and more determined leaders spring up amongst them. The issue of their efforts has been a most impotent conclusion—"a gag law."

In the markets there is no improvement. Cotton continues quite inactive, & prices depressed. The prospect of the harvest continuing to be unusually good, grain and corn are of course without amendment.—Balt. Sun.

From the S. E. Post.

The State of France.

Upon careful reading of the news as respects France, we do not think the facts of the case bear out the strong statements of the English journals, as to the danger of a reaction in favor of Louis Napoleon and an empire. Louis Napoleon himself and the rest of the Bonapart family, profess the utmost devotion to the Republic; and as to the admission of Louis Napoleon to the seat of the Assembly to which he had been elected, we think this was only just, and perfectly right. We do not believe, and we shall not believe, until we see certain evidence of it, that the great mass of the people of France are willing to abandon the Republic, and choose any man, a Bonaparte or anybody else, Emperor.—We are strengthened in this opinion by the fact that the same Assembly which voted Louis Napoleon into his seat by a large majority also voted a bill for secret service money, which was considered in the light of a vote of confidence in the Government, by a vote of 509 ayes to 112 nays.

The second edition of The London Times, of the 16th ult., says, that the draft of the French Constitution was supposed to be ready for presentation. Rumor stated that it would recommend a president who would hold office for four years, and that M. Arago would probably be selected for the post. Prince Louis Napoleon was also spoken of, but only, it is believed, to bring him into discredit,. A very strong petition to the Assembly was in course of signature, recommending M. Caussidiere for the office. "Strange to say," observes the correspondent of the Times, "neither M. Lamartine nor M. Ledru Rollin are mentioned as candidates.

The Committee appointed by the National Assembly to report on subjects of legislation was occupied in examining petitions. A most singular petition was presented from Citizen Barete, residing at 25, Faubourgh Mantmartre, demanding that a plurality of wives should be permitted in marriage.

The following an extract from the address of Louis Napoleon to his constituents, upon hearing of his election.

"The people have been free since February 25th. They can obtain all they want without having recourse to brute force. Let us, then rally round the altar of our country, under the flag of the Republic, and give the world the grand spectacle of a people, who have regenerated themselves without violence, civil war, or anarchy.

"Receive, fellow citizens, the assurance of my devotedness and sympathy.

"LOUIS NAPOLEON BONAPARTE."

Mexican intelligence.

The New Orleans Delta has received its files of newspapers from the City of Mexico to the 17th inst.

The Registro official of Victoria de Durango, states that more than one thousand Camanches had made their appearance in the vicinity of the Paso Del Norte. A force of three hundred Mexicans were about to sally forth to attack them.

It was reported in the city Mexico that a revolution would, upon the conclusion of peace, break out in Vera Cruz, and that the intention of those who would participate in the movement was to establish a new Republic out of the States of Tamaulipas, Coahulia, Zacatecas, and San Louis Potosi. The co-operation of the Americans was confidently relied upon. This, we take it, is the proposed Republic of Sierra Madre.

Six hundred government troops, under the command of Senor Yanes, had taken up the line of march to suppress the insurrection set on foot by Padre Jarauta 2,000 men, with fourteen pieces of artillery, in case the former should not succeed in putting down the revolt.

The Monitor advises the Government to take into its service all the deserters from the American army.

Senor Pena Pena had left Queretaro with an escort, accompanied by twenty-five coaches, containing many Congressmen, officers of the government, and their families, with the hope of deterring the robbers from attacking them. But the hope was not realised, for the guerilleros fired upon the party and then robbed them, without encountering any resistance. The party of the Ex-President were then allowed to proceed on their journey.

The Monitor states that Gen. Worth was to remain in Puebla until transports were ready at Vera Cruz for the rear division of the army.

The Monitor advocates an extensive system of colonization, as absolutely required by the peculiar situation of Mexico.

Gen. Minor, at the head of the government troops, had desisted from besieging the rebels in San Juan de los Logos, and had fallen back on the town of Leon, not having more than 400 men to oppose to the 800 under Jarauta and Negrete.

The Legion of St. Patrick was destined to escort the government officers from Queretaro to the Mexican capital.

Many of the journals appear to despair of the country. The Ingenuo of Morelia, after discribing the repeated robberies and revolutions, and dwelling upon the unsatisfactory and insecure state of affairs, exclaims: "Vain indeed are the sacrifices and efforts of virtuous Mexicans: we may as well bid adieu to our country."

The family of the new Minister of Justice was robbed by guerilleros on the road from Queretaro.

The Cabinet of Herrera commenced its sessions in the palace, in the city of Mexico, on the 19th ult.

The Yucatan Commissioners had addressed an able communication to the Mexican Government; dated the 17th June, at the city of Mexico, detailing the attrocities in that unfortunate Peninsula, and imploring aid from the parent country.

Aid to Yucatan.

Justa Sierra, now on the eve of his departure for Yucatan, to share the common fate of his countrymen, has written a most pathetic and powerful appeal to the people of the U. States, for aid to the whites of that unfortunate country. He repudiates the charge that has been flippantly thrown out by some in this country, that the Yucatecoes are cowards. He sets forth their distress, which is doubtless real, in terms that may well touch the heart. One-fourth of the white inhabitants of Yucatan have already fallen by the hands of the murderous savages, and the remainder are driven to the ocean, and placed between that element and their unpitying foes, where they must perish unless they receive aid. Speaking of the enormities committed by the savages, he says: "Acting under the influence of a demoniac spirit—murder, violation and extermination are their chief aim. Every vestige of civilization has been destroyed by their frensy. Many cities, towns and villages have been burned. Innocent virgins have been publicly violated, to the sound of rude music and obscene songs, and then murdered in the most cruel manner. Tender infants and young children have had their brains dashed out against walls and rocks: the aged and invalid murdered without pity; many of them hung upon their own fruit trees. In short, all that vast, rich and flourishing country, is converted into a scene of blood, pillage and destruction." To the people of the United States he appeals for aid in the name of humanity, christianity, and all the most noble and sacred ties of our nature. In his appeal for aid, he says, "come to the rescue of Yucatan. There, our fertile fields, our houses, our cities, our lands, shall be yours; not at the price of an action noble and inestimable in itself, but as a bond of union and fraternity between you and us, between your children and our children, which shall be indissoluble."—Cin. Com.

News of the Week.

Shocking.

A gentleman informed us yesterday morning, that Wm. Kinner, an old and respectable citizen, of Butler county, was killed on Tuesday night a week ago, under the following melancholy circumstances. On the night of the burning of Allen's Drug Warehouse, the huckster wagon of the unfortunate man was stationed immediately in front of the burning building, and he was obliged to sit up watching the whole night. On the next night, when within a few miles of home on the great Miami Turnpike, between Bethany and Monroe, it is supposed that he fell asleep, and his horses being left to themselves, walked off the road and upset his wagon, throwing a bar of iron, of which his load consisted, upon his head, killing him upon the spot. He was found the next morning with the bar lying across his head. The deceased is represented to have been a temperate, honest, industrious man and a good citizen.—Cin. Com.

Death of Captain Niles.—Captain Niles, formerly of the Cincinnati Cadets, who was wounded at the battle of Monterey, and went to Mexico a second time, in the 4th Ohio Regiment of volunteers, died at Jalapa on his return to Vera Cruz, on the 29th of May.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The Catholics have purchased the country seat of Maj. Daniel Gano, on the northern boundary of the city, where they intend to establish a female Seminary of a high order, to be under the care of the Ursulines.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The wool trade of Michigan has increased with unexampled rapidity. In 1841 the quantity exported did not exceed 20,000 pounds. Last year the quantity exported was estimated at 1,000,000 pounds, and the surplus this year is estimated at 1,500,000 pounds. During this time the home consumption has been greatly increased.

The Soap Plant.—At a late meeting of the Farmers' Club in New York, Lieut. Washington A. Bartlett, U. S. N., presented two bulbs of the Amole or Soap Plant, of California. The bulbs are used throughout California, for washing every description of clothing, in cold running water.—In using them as soap, the woman cut off the roots from the bulbs and rub them on the clothes and a rich and strong lather is formed which cleanses most thoroughly. To propagate the plant, the bulbs are set in a moist, rich soil, and grow most luxuriantly in the soft bottoms of valleys bordering on running streams.

Muncie.—We could but remark, while travelling through the shire towns of some of our neighboring counties, within the last few weeks, that none seemed more thriving, or improving as fast our own town, Muncie; and we beg leave here to say, that there is not another inland town within our acquaintance, so distant from market, and without the advantage of some public internal improvement, that can vie with Muncie, in size, population, neatness of appearance, and the enterprize of its citizens. No town can boast of a more flourishing Seminary, more industrious mechanics, more thriving farmers, more moral, generous hearted citizens, than this county or town. —Muncie Signal.

Marietta Mail.—This mail which has been heretofore carried tri-weekly, is hereafter to be carried daily, except on the Sabbath. The importance of the route fully justifies the change, and we hope the anticipated advantages may be fully realized. The new arrangement commenced on the first instant. Mr. H. Bradshaw is the contractor.—Z. Gaz.

Telegraphic.—The party now engaged in putting up a second telegraphic wire between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati has reached Zanesville on its way westward. The new wire is for the "through" business, between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati; though connected with the instrument here, and perhaps elsewhere, for the purpose of detecting the location of breaches, should any occur; and perhaps for us, in case of accidental injury to the "way wire. As the caps were constructed original for two wires, the additional one cost only the wire and the putting up. The great extent of this line and its numerous ramifications through the west, must necessarily cause a large amount of business to be done upon it.—Z. Gaz.

Dr. Boisson, a Frenchman, says that a vapor bath is a sure remedy for hydrophobia. The virus escapes in the perspiration. Dogs and other animals in which this disease originates, never perspire.

Fugitives,---Triumph of Right!

We learn that fifteen citizens of this State have been arrested on a warrant issued by a Justice of Warren county, and held to bail in the sum of $4,000 a piece, to await the answer of the Governor of Ohio to the requisition of the Governor of Kentucky, for their presence at the Court of Common Pleas, of Campbell Co., Ky., to answer to the charge of stealing five slaves, the property of citizens of that county. This affidavit upon which this warrant was issued, was made by Gen. Taylor of Newport.—If we mistake not, every thing now depends upon Gov. Bebb. They cannot be compelled to appear in Kentucky, but upon his answer to the requisition. Will he deliver them up? They cannot be charged with having committed the crime in Kentucky, except constructively, by aiding & abetting, after the escape of the slaves. The example of Gov. Shunk will recur to every one. He refused to comply with the requisition of the Governor of Maryland, founded on an indictment, for the reason that no such constructive presence could be admitted in law. We do not think that Gov. Bebb would deliver them up even if they 'really' had been in Kentucky.

We understand that Corwin and Giddings have been retained to manage the suit. The arrested persons are residents in various parts of the State, on the line from here to Sandusky City, and are all of them of high respectability.

Since the above was written, we learn that Governor Bebb has begged to be excused from complying with the polite request of the Governer of Kentucky, on the ground that Ohio laws do not recognize property in man.—Cincinnati Herald.

Disastrous Inundation.—A heavy fall of rain caused an overflow of Chautau's Pond, near St. Louis, on the 22d instant, inundating all the low ground between the pond and the river. The houses were either overturned or swept from their foundations by the force of the water, and many families lost their all.

The Washington National Monument.—Nearly $80,000 have been already received towards the erection of the National Washington Mouument at Washington; It is contemplated to rear this structure, eventually, to the height of five hundred feet.

There are 218 newspapers published in Pennsylvania, exclusive of miscellaneous publications. It is said that this exceeds the number published in any other State in the Union. Ohio boasts of 174, and New-York of about 200.

Arkansas Lead Mines.—We have heretofore noticed the discovery of lead mines in the neighborhood of Little Rock, Ark. Recent assays have detected silver in the lead ore, equal to $112 12 in every ton of two thousand pounds of ore. The proprietors of the lands in which these minerals have been found are pushing their discoveries with the most sanguine expectations of opening up rich mines of hidden wealth. A private letter informs us that shipments of lead will shortly be an important item in the trade between that section of the country and the city of New Orleans. Samples of pure lead ore yielding from 75 to 90 per cent., have been met with.—The Little Rock editors are felicitating themselvs upon the prospect of their city becoming the centre of a large mineral trade.

Killed by the bursting of a Soda Fountain —On Saturday afternoon, at Asa White's establishment, in Boston, Leander Washburn, aged 19 years, was instantly killed by the bursting of a soda fountain, which he was charging.

A Clergyman Killed.—A lamentable accident, resulting in the death of a worthy minister of the Methodist persuasion, lately occurred near the Roxbury mill, in Howard District, Md., according to a letter in the Patriot. Rev Mr. Linthicum, aged 88, had his neck dislocated and his skull fractured by being precipitated from his buggy. He was then dragged by the horse with the fore-wheels, the coupling pin having broken. The aged wife was the first to reach the spot, but he had ceased to breathe. The first husband of the bereaved widow was killed near the same spot by being thrown from a horse.—Baltimore Sun.

Dreadful Occurrence.—Two brethren of the 'Presentation Order' of the Catholic School at Saint Paul's Pittsburgh, Pa., were killed on Sunday afternoon, by lightning. Their names were Messrs. Carey and Ryan.

Fatal Accident.—Seven Persons Killed.—A few days ago some men were engaged in raising a frame of a house near Spring Water, Livington county, N. Y., when two boys began wrestling, and one, a son of a man engaged in raising the frame, was thrown and killed. The father of the boy, shocked at the death of his son, let go his hold of the frame, and others of the party going to his assistance, the frame fell, killing six persons on the spot.

Melancholy Intelligence,—Alex. Forbes, Esq., who was deputed by the N. Y. Common Council to bring on the bodies of Col. Baxter, Capt. Van Olinda, and other officers who fell in Mexico, arrived in New Orleans on the 15th, with the bodies, where he was attacked with the yellow fever, and died. Thus he himself will return a corpse with the very corpse he was to bring home.

Missionaries in China.—The Boston Advertiser derives the following information from a late private letter, received from Canton. A few days previous to the date of the letter, three Roman Catholic missionaries arrived in Canton, where, on Dr. Parker's requesting their liberty, and giving Msi-Yeng a receipt for them, they were liberated on the 7th of March. Two of them were Italians, and one a Spaniard; one of them, Bishop Bizzolati, had resided in the interior twenty years, Bishop Novella five years, and Priest Narvoo three years. The former conversed in the Mandarin with all the ease and fluency of his native tongue, and it was interesting to see these men and Dr. P.—all having been born on the other side of the world—using the Chinese language as the medium of communicating with each other, interspersing their conversation where Latin where they could not make themselves clear in the Mandarin.

The Telegraph.—The party engaged in putting up the second line of wire on the Pittsburgh and Louisville Telegraph reached town on Monday evening, and remaining over yesterday, kept on westward this morning. They expect to reach Columbus by Saturday night. The second wire is connected with the office here, being the first connection West of Pittsburgh. The wire is to be used only by the terminal stations, but the connection here is to serve a useful purpose in case of accidents to the line.—Z. Cour.

Drowned.—We learn, from the Marlboro' Gazette, that Captain McDaniel, of Bristol, Anne Arundel county, was drowned off Thomas' Point, in the Chesapeake bay, on the 19th ultimo, by falling overboard, whilst laboring under mania a potu.—Balt. Sun.

Adulterated Medicines.

A bill has passed both Houses of Congress providing that a competent Chemist shall be appointed for each important port, at a salary of $1,600 per annum, whose duty it shall be to examine all medicine imported, and condemn all that is impure. The facts as fully set forth, by the committee which reported the bill, show that a very large portion of the medicine imported into the United States, is impure, and that the West has been, more than any other part of the Union cursed with this worse than worthless trash, which has probably been the death of thousands. The evil is a most crying one, but we fear the remedy will not reach the disease. Examiners to inspect medicine are to be appointed only at the important ports, while the unimportant ports are free for the importation of adulterations called medicines. In addition to this, men base enough to vend adulterated medicine, are base enough to adulterate it themselves.—Con. Com.

The Kilbourne Family.—A reunion of the scattered members of the Kilbourne Family took place in the city of New York, on the 15th Apr. at which a society was formed for the purpose of collecting genealogical and historical information in relation to the family. The Hon. James Kilbourne, of Worthington, Ohio, was chosen President of the society.

The State Bank of Ohio has become the most important money institution in this continent.—With thirty-seven branches, covering the whole State—all bound together by one common interest, and in all important respects all governed by one head, the Board of Control. It now issues five and a half millions of currency—sustains an accommodation line, in the way of notes and bills discounted, of several millions; holds two millions of specie, and has a cash capital of $3,400,000. These facts we gather, through Thompson's Bank Note Reporter, from a statement made up to the 5th of June.

A SIN OR A SIGN.

Some young ladies feeling themselves aggrieved by the severity with which their friends animadverted on their gay plumes, necklaces, rings, flounces, ect., went to their pastor to learn his opinion. "Do you think," said they, "that there can be any impropriety in wearing these things?" "By no means," was the reply. "When the heart is full of ridiculous notions, it is perfectly proper to hang out the sign."

The pastor took a right view of the matter.—These outward ornaments are the signs of the "ridiculous notions" within; and, until these notions are crowded out by the mighty power of the gospel, entering into the soul, and filling it with the nobler ideas of love towards God and man, we shall have but little success in our endeavors to reform the external person.

To carry out the idea of plumes; when a young lady's mind comes to be filled with the high and glorious objects of contemplation and pursuit which the gospel brings to the soul, she will naturally shed her gay plumage, as we see certain birds do in the spring of the year. Her gaudy ornaments will fall off without a struggle. But if we pluck them off by main force, we shall produce a great outcry, and our work will be in vain, for they will soon be grown again.

Notices.

Newark Circuit, Musk. District.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Irville, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in August next. Any ministering brethren who can do so, are requested to attend and assist us on the occasion. W. H. MARSHALL.

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August next. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected, and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local; together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst., to prepare the ground. E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt.

To the Ministers of the Wabash District, M. P. Church:

You are hereby notified and requested to turn your attention to a settlement about 8 miles South West from Plymoth, at Wolf's Mills, for the purpose of raising an M. P. Church. Enquire for Br. Mathew Wilson. He is a young man of fine talents and has been a very good and always an acceptable member of our church on this Circuit. He is anxious, having taken up his residence there, to have our ministers and a church established. Come near Brethren crowd up this way that we may be neighbors.

JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Laporte Ct, June 19th '48,

Kalida Ct., Ohio Dist.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton, of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Borton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

Columbia Ct., Musk. Dist.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

Portsmouth Ct., Musk. Dist.—Brother Clancy is hereby informed that his visit to this ct. will be expected at Brown's Meeting-house, 15 miles from Jackson, near the Portsmouth road.

W. W. TIPTON.

Coshocton Ct., Musk. Dist.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

Bellvue Ct., Musk. District.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend. A. S. ROBISON.

Morganville Circuit.—The meeting of Br. Clancy the President, will be at Morganville, 6 miles from M'Connellsville. H. T. LAWSON.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, March 2d, 1848.

Br Bassett:—You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, which I will fill, Providence permitting.

Johnstown, st.	2d	July	"
Home two Sundays,		"	"
Valley mission	23d	"	"
Huntersville, ct.	30th	"	"
Greenbrier, "	6th	August	"
Braxton, "	13th	"	"
Conference, "	22d	"	"

Early notice of the plan of my visit in each circuit, to be given by letter, or in the Western Recorder.

Any camp-meeting arrangements, desired by the brethren, will be published by them, in the Recorder. The Aid Society to be advocated by the subscriber, in all places.

GEO. BROWN.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15th, 1848.

M'Connelsville ct.	1st	" July	"
Morganville	" 2d	" "	"
Lancaster	" 3d	" "	"
Salt Creek	" 4th	" "	"
Portsmouth	" 5th	" "	"
Coluumbia	" 1st	" August	"
Woodsfield	" 3d	" "	"

Would be glad to receive due notice of the point at which my meeting will be held on each of the above named circuits.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please to publish the following plan appointments:

Maumee,	July 30th.
Portage,	August 5th.
Mt. Blanchard,	" 12th.
Kalida,	" 19th.
Lima,	" 26th.
Lebanon, September 2d.		J. M. YOUNG.

To the Superintendents of the Circuits and Stations hereafter named:

Dear Brethren:—Having at length obtained my liberty, by getting through my publication business, which has detained me so much longer than I expected. I propose to be, and to preach within your respective fields of labor (with your consent) on the Sabbaths following:

Wellsville Circuit, July 9th.
Youngstown Station, July 16th.
Pittsburgh Station, July 23rd.

As I shall travel in a buggy, it is my intention to carry with me a supply of my Vol. of Sermons.

THOMAS POTTER, Conf. Missionary.

Putnam, May 29th, 1848.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Central Circuit, July 8th and 9th.
Manilius Circuit, July 15th and 16th.
Cayuga Circuit, July 22d and 23d.
Wayne Circuit, July 29th and 30th.
Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

1 C Hunt,	O.	T Finkbine,	O.
D C Carson, 3.	"	T Hanna,	"
T Potter,	"	E Shepard,	"
W L Baldwin,	"	G G Collins,	Va.
W Hamilton, of Gratiot,	"	J H Johnson,	Conn.
J Q A Yonkey,	"	J R Johnson,	Ill.
J F Bane,	"	W Reeves, 2.	Pa.
P M—Jefferson,	"	S Solomon,	Ia.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts.
J H Hamilton,	T Taylor,		9	52	2 00
W Duling,	J R Williams,		9	52	2 00
W H Marshall,	H Fairbank,		9	52	6 00
E Y Reese,	N M Edwards		10	35	1 00
T Finkbine,	J H Carver,		9	52	2 00
E S Seborn,	S Hicks,		10	11	2 00
H D Munson,			10	5	1 00
S P Kezerta,	N Maddux,		10	11	1 00
S Solomon,			9	35	1 00

Received for Rev. C. Springer.

W H Marshall for H Fairbank, Hanover, $1,00

OUR LIST.

Shortly after the commencement of our present volume, we addressed an appeal to our friends, and especially our agents, in behalf of the Western Recorder. We showed how easily one thousand new subscribers might be added to our list within a short time. Our paper is sent to more than one hundred and fifty travelling ministers, of several Conferences, most of whom have their copy free, for their agency. We remarked that if each of those brethren would obtain for us from five to ten new subscribers, or an average of seven subscribers each, the matter would be at once accomplished. A number of brethren have responded nobly, others have begun well, and will we trust succeed still better, others have not yet reported to us. The Publisher of the Methodist Protestant has also proposed to raise one thousand new subscribers, for that paper, by enlisting two hundred agents to obtain as many as five each. In his last paper he gives the names of twelve brethren, who have thus far complied. We have concluded to give also our list of those who have obtained five or more new subscribers for the Western Recorder since the commencement of present volume.—We are under obligations to numerous others who have thus far procured us, from one to four subscribers, and we are daily expecting to receive further intelligence from them, of encourging character.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta, Bainbridge, O.,	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.,	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.,	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves. Pittsburgh, Pa.	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer. Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements.

LIST OF LETTERS remaining in the Post Office at Putnam, Muskingum County, Ohio, July 1, 1848.

B
Burnett, Miss Ann 3
C
Culbertson, Miss Eliza Jane
Cowen, Robert
Cable, Rev. J.
D
Dawson, N. B.
Dunn, Charles
E
Ellis, Miss Amanda
Evans, Robert
F
Fairman, Mrs Jane
G
Grant, Sarah
Giffin, Mary Ann
Gafney, Milton
H
Hart, William
Harper, John
Hudson, Elijah
Haiff, Austin
Helmick, George
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.
Hesler, Miss Ann
Highfield, Esq., Inn Keeper
J
Jackson, George William
Jenkins, Mr G
Jordan, Miss Mary S
Jackson, Mr Andrew
Joslin, Abraham
K
Kruger, Roselia
L
Lewis, William
M
Mosely, Miss Bethe
Mechling, J J
Morris, John
Miller, Sarah
Milliana John
Mooney, Miss Mary
N
Nesbaum, Mrs Catharine
P
Putnam, John 2
Puff, Jacob 2
Price, William
Palmer Samuel
R
Rebarge, Benjamin
Riley, J W
Rees, Arthilla J Ann
Richards, Jacob
Ripley, William
S
Stainbrook, Phebe Ann
Stainbrook, Nancy
Sniff John
Stainbrook, Joseph
Smith, Ezra
Swingl, Maria B
Smith, Miss Fanny
Springer, Miss Ellen
Sweny, Cornelius
Sloan, Mr G
T
Tobin, Mr William
W
Wilson Rev John
White, Samuel
Wickham, Salathiel
Welsh, J W
Watson, Miss Emily
Weaver, Mrs Jacob

JER. ELDER, P. M.

Administrator's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of Muskingum County, Administrator of the estate of George Torbert, deceased, late of Newton Township—All persons indebted to said estate, are requested to make settlement immediately. Likewise, all persons having claims against said estate, are notified to present them, legally authenticated. SAMUEL WOOD.

June 17, 1848.

SACRED MELODEON

A SELECTION OF

REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.

BY REV. J. DALBY, Jr., & J. B. FEAT.

REVISED & ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while an addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publisher has received of the "Sacred Melodeon," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalbey, Jr. and Rev. J. B. Feat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist P. Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. * * * * The work is neatly excuted, with fair type & paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hymns, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS:

Per copy,	$00 75
Per dozen,	9 00
Fifty copies or more, per hundred,	18 00

 The above work can be obtained of Rev. A. H. Bassett, Putnam; Geo. Conclin, Cincinnati; or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern Baltimore,

A New Supply of

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

Also a few copies of

SNETHEN'S SERMONS,

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the Office of the Western Recorder.

THOUGHTS OF AN ITINERANT;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. Levi R. Reese.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this Office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

To the Creditors of the estate of ALEXANDRIA McCRACKEN, Junior, Deceased. The subscribers have been appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of Muskingum County, Commissioners on the estate of Alexandria McCracken, Jr. Deceased, represented insolvent. The creditors of said estate will bring in and prove their claims against said estate. Claims which have been presented to the administrator will also be passed upon.

The subscribers will attend to the duties of their said appointment at the Post Office in Gratiot, on Monday & Tuesday the 26th and 27th of June, 1848, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 4 P. M. of each day.

WILLIAMS SIMS, } Commis-
PETER S. WESTBROOK, } sioners.

May 18th, 1848.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

Fourth Volume of the American Pulpit.

The American Pulpit is a Monthly Magazine, published in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. It contains thirty-two pages in each number, and will be well supplied with that kind of Literature which is adapted to Ministers and Theological Students, such as Sermons, Sketches, Essays, Biographies, &c. &c.

The leading Sermon, will be of the highest order; and all the Sermons, we intend, shall bear the stamp of superiority. They will be sought, and obtained, so far as it is possible, from the most eminent Divines, on the American Continent. Arrangements are already made to accomplish this end; and no reasonable pains or expense will be spared, to make this department of the Pulpit superior to anything of the kind in existence.

The Sketches will be of the first class. We have accepted the proposals of an eminent minister in England to supply this department, partially—the Rev J Burns, D D, of London, author of "Pulpit Cyclopedia;" &c &c. By securing the correspondence of Dr Burns, the patrons of the Pulpit will enjoy a fine opportunity of comparing British and American talent in the same pages.

In the Miscellaneous Department will be found, Essays, Biographical Sketches, Poetry, and such et ceteras as shall enhance the value of the work.

The Pulpit is edited by

REV J D BRIDGE,

who will spare no pains to render it not only a welcome visiter to the Minister's study, but a 'profitable' one.—The work is evangelical in its character, and will avoid all controversy, except with sin and the popular errors of the day.

Its patrons, hitherto, have been gathered from all of the orthodox denominations in the country, all of whom the Publisher hopes to return. And we wish it distinctly understood, that Ministers in all the evangelical denominations are invited to become contributors to the pages of he Pulpit. We solicit from them, Sermons, Sketches of Sermons, or Criticisms, on any subject within the compass of Homiletics; and, that no one may feel embarrassed in his desire to accept this invitation, we shall dispense wish the "List of Contributors" which has formerly appeared on our cover. We do this not out of any disrespect to any of the worthy names in that List, but that others may not be deterred from contributing, because not numbered in the distinguished catalogue.

By far the largest amount of matter contained in the Pulpit will be 'original;' but it will also be enriched by choice 'selections' from Books and periodicals.

Terms--One Dollar Per Annum, in Advance.

The Pulpit will be mailed regularly during the latter part of the month preceding that of its publication, so that it may reach its destination, in ordinary cases, by the first of each month.

We solicit Agents for the work. We will allow them a reasonable and just compensation for their services, and we authorize all the ministers of every evangelical denomination, and all laymen who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and who desire the extension of his kingdom on earth, to co-operate with us in extenhing the circulation of this work.

All orders for the work and all remittances for the same should be addressed to

SAMUEL CHISM, Publisher,
Worcester, Mass., U. S.

DR. PEASE'S

VEGETABLE RENOVATING PILLS.

These Pills are composed of the best Medicinal plants in the country, and are so compounded as to possess the most valuable Cathartic, Sudorific, Expectorant, and Tonic Properties, acting in perfect harmony with Nature's Laws, in expelling from the system all morbific matter, wherever found.—Being well adapted to the constitution, they cleanse the Stomach and Bowels, equalize the circulation, restore the perspiratory action of the skin, excite a healthy action of the Liver. In short, they correct and regulate all the secretions, thereby restoring the true Physiological action of the whole animal economy.

Could the numerous flattering testimonials of the great success and perfect safety of this Medicine be here submitted for inspection, they would satisfy the incredulous and dispel the doubts of even the most skeptical. These Pills are not injured by age or climate.

For sale at the store of W. Munch & Co.

tn,mwOuP: March 30, 1848.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford Collectep from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is profixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the Life of Rev. Charles Wesley, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

Author of the Discourse delivered at Mr. Wesley's Funeral.

A supply of the American edition of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

POET'S CORNER.

The following noble poem is by a younger brother of William C. Bryant:—Lady's Dollar Newspaper.

LINES.

BY JOHN H. BRYANT.

As when on Carmel's sterile steep
The ancient prophet bowed the knee,
And seven times sent his servant forth
To look toward the distant sea.

There came at last a little cloud,
Scarce broader than the human hand,
Spreading and swelling till it broke
In showers on all the herbless land;

And hearts were glad, and shouts went up,
And praise to Israel's mighty God,
As the sere hills grew green again,
And verdure clothed the naked sod;

Even so our eyes have waited long,
But now a little cloud appears,
Spreading and swelling as it glides
Onward into the coming years.

Bright cloud of Liberty, full soon,
Far stretching from the ocean strand
Thy glorious folds shall spread abroad,
Encircling our beloved land.

Like that sweet rain on Judah's hills,
The glorious boon of love shall fall,
And our bond millions shall arise,
As at an angel's trumpet call.

Then shall a shout of joy go up,
The wild glad cry of Freedom come
From hearts long crushed by cruel hands,
And songs from lips long sealed and dumb—

And every bondsman's chain be broke,
And every soul that moves abroad
In this wide realm shall know and feel
The blessed liberty of God.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder

"WORTHY OF HIS HIRE."

Mr. Editor,—In looking over your welcome weekly visitor of June the 8th, I noticed a communication over the signature of "MUTUAL RIGHTS," which no doubt, was designed to stir up our members to a sense of their duty; and as I am in favor of Mutual Righteousness, I thought that it might not be amiss to say a few words on the duties of ministers, that both members and ministers may do right, enjoying as they do, equal rights. While it is true that the laborer is worthy of his hire, it is also true, that he should be paid according to his labors; and what is the hire of the ministers, in the Methodist Protestant Church? according to our discipline, it is two hundred dollars for a man and his wife, and twenty dollars for every child, under fourteen years old; then house rent and travelling expenses which they claim, and what will it amount to per month? $25 or $30, pretty good hire do you not think, for laboring pretty hard all the time? Well now suppose we reckon up his labor. In 7th edition, page 61 of the discipline is found the duties of superintendents as follows: "To visit all the classes, at least once a quarter, if practicable; and see that they are duly and promptly met by their respective leaders; and that the members regularly attend their classes." To visit the sick, the poor, the aged, the infirm members, as well as those in health, &c. How much time will these duties occupy? only Sabbath days?—! let those who do their duty answer. I know the members of Calvinistic Churches act nobly; but their minister must act efficiently: do they not catechise all their members, and members' children quarterly? and are thereby more useful than in preaching: But some of our ministers are unacquainted with some of their members, after preaching to them two, or three years! one case only I will give, a certain popular minister, after serving two years on———circuit, was enquired of respecting sister———and he said he thought she belonged to the Old Side; this sister I know to be amongst the most worthy of———Society. Was that minister worthy of his hire? are these kinds of cases rare? I fear not, they are too common: Brethren class leaders, Quarterly Conferences, it is time you would see to these things; will you allow your ministers to spend half their time in idleness or the employment of some other person, and then at the end of the year go up to Conference and report you deficient $50 or $100, when by the law of debt and credit they are your debtors: Suppose Mr. Editor that one of your hands who is employed at $200 per year, (and pays his own house rent,) was out of your employment one half or more of his time; would you pay him the full amount, or would you be pleased, if he would report you to the world as deficient in paying your debts, when you had paid him more than he had earned? I consider the minister's labors not half done when he has preached on Sabbath; "he is to see that the members attend their classes, visit the sick," &c., will this not occupy the balance of the week? No—he must go home, or if he has no home, lie down at some convenient place until the good family are twice glad. If the minister acts thus, is he worthy of his hire? I speak not by way of reproof, I speak for the consideration of ministers and members, that all may do their duty, and receive the reward. The end of the present Conference year is approaching, and ministers and circuits, will reckon with each other. Let the minister examine if he has done his duty, and let the Quarterly Conference examine & see that no man is discharged without a compensation for his labor; this would be dishonest: but it would be equally dishonest for the minister to claim more than he has earned, if he has labored but half the time, let him be content with half wages. Hoping that both ministers and members will be found doing their duty: my prayer is that the good Lord may have mercy on us all.

A MEMBER.

Written for the Western Recorder.

"A BOY" IN REPLY TO REV. C. SPRINGER.

Rev. A. H. Bassett: Dear Sir—By your permission, and in justice to myself, I will reply to the communication of the Rev. C. Springer, given to your readers in the Recorder of the 8th inst. In that article I am charged, 1. With indulging in "cowardly malevolence: 2. As an anonymous slanderer; & 3. With never writing the article to which he takes exceptions, but as "an amanuensis," and becoming godfather to the "precious bantling," as he very politely terms it. To all these charges I place an unequivocal and emphatic denial; the truth of which denial I will now endeavor to demonstrate.

In penning my communication of the 4th ult., inserted in the Recorder over the signature of "A Boy," which appears to have produced a very decided impression for so insignificant an article, I was influenced but by one feeling—and that was to see the protracted discussion on the Restrictive Rule terminated, and to manifest my disapprobation of the bitter personalities (as to me it seemed) introduced in the productions of one of the writers; these personalities, as I humbly thought, being derogatory to the popular character of the Recorder, and producing unpleasant sensations among ministers and brethren. I looked upon myself as a disinterested spectator, although very partially in favor of the Restrictive Rule, having only a very limited acquaintance with two of the opposing parties. But to proceed to the charges.

1. With regard to "cowardly malevolence." I am gratified in admitting that the Rev. C. Springer never "laid one hair in my road;" and in this admission I may include his last communication, also, when my true position shall be known. And I pray that he may never have an opportunity of doing so. We perfectly agree, so far as his opinions are developed on the Restrictive Rule; and I have read with admiration the firm stand he has assumed on other subjects. I say this without the least desire to flatter. I have had, therefore, no grounds for malevolence; and as for "cowardly malevolence," I see no just reason why I should play the part of a coward in expressing opinions that I consider to be just, and especially when addressed to such a distinguished defender of mutual privileges. True, he may be a giant in intellect, and occupy a high standing in comparison with myself, a novice, yet I learn with regard to the developments of human nature; and, in his own language, addressed to Rev. J. Scott in the Recorder of May 18th, he may be "old enough" to have "forgotten, on the subject of ecclesiastical economy, more than [I] ever knew," or in all probability may expect to know; yet I see no good reason why a "young man" should be prohibited from making his own deductions, assuming his own positions, and expressing his own opinions, so far as capable, and in consonance with truth and Christian politeness though they may reprove and excoriate wiser and greater men by far than himself. So far, then, I have had no grounds to indulge in "cowardly malevolence" to the Rev. C. Springer.—I have had no personal feelings to gratify; and to this charge I put in my solemn disclaimer.

2. As to an "anonymous slanderer," it is true that my proper name was not appended to the article, neither has it been placed to more than two or three others of my communications. I parade not my own name before the public.—For what I write I am responsible. My communications are all known to the Editor, and he is at perfect liberty to give my proper name when demanded, should they be considered slanderous or not. But as to my communication being either "malevolent" or "slanderous," I positively deny. What have I written that calls for such severe charges, and so deeply rouses the displeasure of the Rev. C. Springer? Here it is, with the proof; and let the reader judge between us. In that communication I say: 1. "It would be well if one of the restricters could restrict his pen from dipping so very much into the spirit of wormwood and gall." 2. That many of his articles are not "very fine manifestations of epistolary politeness or of christian love." 3. That "he was not a very old gentleman when he engaged in the Episcopal controversy." And is it for this that I am to be charged with indulging in "cowardly malevolence," the blackest feeling that stain can the soul? Do not his own declarations show something like a dipping of his pen into "the spirit of wormwood and gall," or are they to be considered "very fine manifestations of epistolary politeness," or "Christian love?" But let us test the truth of what I said in the communication of "A Boy." I appeal to his articles on Conference Collections and the Restrictive Rule. In one of the former he charges the Secretary of the Muskingum Conference as wilfully or ignorantly corrupting the journals. In the latter, he makes use of the following terms to his opponents, ministers in the same church, and brethren, if I am correctly informed, in good standing. He calls them a "lovely corps, the leaders of which are Captain Joseph Burns and Liutenant Scott"—a "set of reckless young men"—"aspiring young men," "who have hardly lived long enough in the world to mature a set of opinions on any subject whatever, or form a permanent character of ANY KIND;"—he calls their efforts "the tinkering of a set of inexperienced boys"—"a set of little priests, whose main object may be to get up a state of things where they can gain a little more ease"—"boys" who "have been petted too much by their mammas"—"whose superior powers entitle them to itinerate the smooth pavements of our elegant cities, to repose on the sofas and lounges of the rich, and to eat their sweet meats and panadas!" But enough of this; and if it exhibits not a want of Christian politeness and brotherly love, if it is not dipping the pen in wormwood and gall; nay more, if it is not a lack of Christian charity, impugning motives and worrying character, I am willing to stand corrected and condemned. See Recorder of March 30th, May 4th, and 18th.

3. I now notice the charge of never writing the article of "A Boy," but "only as an amanuensis." He further states that he heard of some gentleman reciting the article "as one that he had some notion of writing himself;" and that there "is little doubt, that he has brought it forth and that [I have] become godfather to the precious bantling!" Well, this is delicate, and for his sake we will call it "epistolary politeness!" But, pray who is this unknown author that is afraid to own this "precious bantling," and who desires to screen himself behind an "amanuensis," the simple weakness of the unfortunate John B. Peat? Is not this a squinting toward "evil surmising?" Surely he cannot be a spectre of the imagination that rises up in ghostly horror to disturb the happy dreams of the occupant of Meadow Farm! If it should be so, I pray him "bid the spectre down!" But "bantling" and "slanderous" as he seems to consider the communication, I must here claim the entire authorship, and release my suspected and unknown friend from all responsibility.—The communication is solely my own, written at my own residence, in the Ohio District. I have had no prompter in the matter. My mind was made up to rebuke a spirit of bitterness, and to endeavor to induce the Editor to close the controversy in the Recorder. I had determined my plan, unless I am widely mistaken, before any sentiment contained in it was ever lisped to me by any individual. I have no recollection of any individual ever prompting me to the task. I have performed it. If I have presumed too much, & erred, I pray the forgiveness of all injured parties. It is enough for me to stand in a bona fide relation to my own productions without becoming sponsor for the "precious bantlings" of others. Brother Springer says that I "never wrote this article but as an amanuensis." I deny that I have written it at the suggestion of any one. Now let him bring the proof forward to rebut my positive affirmation, or stand forth in error.

In conclusion it may have been no difference to the Rev. C. Springer, neither does it matter much to the world who I am; but probably he will learn by the time that he reads this article through, that I am not to be silenced with such charges as he brings against me, even though his position were the highest point of elevation in the church. I desire not to become notorious for bitter expletives or denunciary language.

I have done. I expect to trouble you, Mr. Editor, no more on this subject, unless stern necessity should occur. Your columns have been kindly open to all, even, shall I say it, to your injury. I have heard the opinions of many preachers & brethren, & the universal language of all is, that they regret the severity and continuance of the Restrictive Rule controversy in your columns.

JOHN B. PEAT.

P. S. It perhaps would be well to state that this communication is my own legitimate offspring.

J. B. P.

Banks of the Scioto, June 14th, 1848.

A STUPID RACE, MADE TO BE SLAVES.

Two slaves in Louisiana were let out by their master, at a considerable distance from his own residence. They were skillful, industrious mechanics, and of course he obtained high wages for their work. What time remained after their daily alotted tasks were finished, they were allowed to have for themselves; and these precious hours they employed most industriously with the view of purchasing their freedom. When they had accumulated, by patient toil, a sum which they deemed sufficient, they endeavered to negotiate with their master, but without success. Again they went to work, and after two or three years were enabled to offer a sum so large that they felt almost certain that it would tempt him to accede to their wishes. But he found them too profitable to be lightly parted with; moreover, what they had of property was in reality his.—He might with perfect impunity, have taken all their hard-earned wages, & kept them in slavery still, as thousands of slaveholders had done before him. But whether he doubted their having so much money as they pretended, or whether he was too honorable to steal more than ninety-nine hundredths of their earnings, I know not; at all events he would not listen to their propositions on any terms.

Finding they could not purchase liberty, they resolved to take it. The enterprize was a perilous one, for through a long line of slave states they must run the gauntlet of patrols, bloodhounds lynchers, jail-keepers and rifles—and if they reached the States called free, they must dodge constables and kidnappers backed by the glorious Constitution.

They were sufficiently intelligent and well informed to understand the dangers they would incur, and to devise a most cunning method of avoiding them.

They made themselves acquinted with a white beggar, and made him offers large enough to secure his secrecy. They dressed him in a handsome suit of clothes, and through his agency purchased a carriage and a fine span of horses. They brought the carriage to an appointed place, stood hat in hand while he entered, and then mounted outside as footman and groom. Of course no patrol thought of challenging such an equipage; and a white gentleman traveling thro' the country, attended by his servants, was welcomed at all the inns. The obsequiousness of heir manners was an admonition to their brethren in bonds. "Yes, massa," and "Certainly, massa," were accompanied with the most profound bows, and spoken in the humblest tones.

The trio arrived in Baltimore unmolested; there the carriage and horses were sold; and the white beggar paid handsomely for consenting to play the gentleman.

The slaves passed over to Victoria's dominions, whence they wrote a friendly letter to their whilom master, begging that he would feel no uneasiness on their account, as they were most comfortably situated.—Standard.

Nebraska. The boundaries of the new territory of Nebraska, as proposed in the bill now before Congress, are as follows:—"Commencing at a point in the Missouri river, were the fortieth parallel of north latitude crosses said river; thence following up the main channel of said river to the forty-third parellel of north latitude; thence west on said parallel to the summit of the Rocky Mountains; thence due south to the fortieth parallel of north latitude; thence east on said parallel to the place of beginning.

The Broken Vow.

Some years ago, a poor lad came to London, in search of a situation as errand boy; he made many unsuccessful applications, and was on the eve of returning to his parents, when a gentleman, being prepossessed by his appearance, took him into his employment, and after a few months, bound him apprentice. He so conducted himself during his apprenticeship, as to gain the esteem of every one who knew him; and after he had served his time, his master advanced a capital for him to commence business. He retired to his closet with a heart glowing with gratitude to his Maker for His goodness, and there solemnly vowed that he would devote a tenth part of his annual income to the service of God. The first year his donation amounted to ten pounds, which he gave cheerfully, and continued to do so till it amounted to £500. He then thought that was a great deal of money to give, and that he need not be so particular as to the exact amount: that year he lost a ship and cargo to the value of £15,000, by a storm! This caused him to repent, and he again commenced his contributions with a resolution never to retract; he was more successful every year, and at length retired. He then devoted a tenth part of his annual income for several years, till he became acquainted with a party of worldly men, who by degrees drew him aside from God: he discontinued his donations, made large speculations, lost every thing, and became almost as poor as when he first arrived in London as an errand boy. "There is," sayeth Solomon, "that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

Popery and the Revolution.

Evidences are multiplying, that Popery is tottering to its fall in Europe. The Jesuits are expelled from Italy & from other Popish countries; but it is stated by a correspondent of the Tablet a Romish paper, writing from Rome, that the same opposition is manifested against the other religious orders—that the Dominicans, Capuchins, Augustinians, &c., have all received unequivocal notices of their approaching fate; and to such an extent has this feeling spread, that even priests are often seen in their clerical dresses, joining in the processions, carrying the tri-coloured flag, and joining in the vivas for Geoberti, and "Death to the Jesuits." Convents and religious houses erected in Austria, the same writer says, have in various places been attacked and demand protection. In Mausle, too, in France, the Cure as well as religious sisters, took refuge from their brother Papist in the house of a Protestant schoolmaster.

The Rev. Mr. Roussel, of France, in a letter to the N. Y. Evangelist, says: "As a token of the decline of Romanism, I will give you some recent facts. I have myself, within a few days, been invited into several churches which have expelled their curates, and who asked me to organize Protestant worship in the midst of them. In a single Department twenty curates have been driven out." Truly the field in France and Europe is becoming white to the harvest; and it is to be hoped that American christians will turn their attention to that important country.—Presb. of the West.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

There are lessons of wisdom for the living, and especially for the young, in the life and death of such a man.

He was a man of system and industry. Thro' his long life he rose before daylight, took his exercise, and accomplished his task as a student before most men leave their beds. By dint of unremitted application, he made himself familiar with almost every branch of human science.—On all political subjects he was a living encyclopedia. He is said to have kept a daily record of conversations and events, extending through his public life, & reaching no less than 60 or 70 folio volumes.

He was a man of independent character. He was trained in the school of the Puritans, amid the fierce commotions of revolutionary times.—Deeply imbued with republican sentiments; trained to habits of self-reliance; scorning party trammels; he marked out a course as a public man which often disappointed and baffled his friends With too much independence to be a safe party leader, or a subservient party adherent, he has more than once stood alone and battled for principle, at the expense of temporary popularity.—Posterity will do him justice, if not anticipated by his cotemporaries.

There is another characteristic, more than all others, will render the name of Adams immortal. It is the profound homage he paid to the Bible.—In a letter to his son, in 1811, he says, "I have for many years made it a practice to read thro' the Bible once every year. My custom is, to read four or five chapters every morning, immediately after rising from my bed. It employs about an hour of my time, and seems to me the most suitable manner of beginning the day. In what light soever we regard the Bible, whether with reference to revelation, to literature, to history, or to morality, it is an invaluable and inexhaustible mine of knowledge and virtue." In nine beautiful letters, just published, 37 years after they were written, he recommends the study of Scriptures to his son. To the day of his death it is understood he continued his study of God's word, in several different languages; and within a few years he wrote to a friend, "As I advance in life, I feel more and more distrust of all self-formed opinions. I throw myself back on the simple work of God. I receive what that teaches. I go where that leads. I am not so far from the orthodox standards as people generally imagine."

Let those who reject the Bible, often without reading it, and who take pride in their scepticism, consider well the example of the eminent statesman, the profound scholar, and the brilliant orator, as he bends over the word of God each morning with devout attention, drawing from its pages the lessons of wisdom which made him one of the greatest of men, and inquire whether they do not stultify their own intellects by rejecting such a book without examination or study.

If our youth and public men will learn from him two lessons—first, that the path to distinction and worldly honor does not necessarily lie in the discussion of partisanship and political proscription; and second, that the Bible is the chart by which to steer one's bark on the ocean of life—John Quincy Adams will have lived to bless his own and other ages.—Amer. Messenger.

The Slave's Idea of Liberty.—You may place the slave where you please; you may dry up to your utmost the fountains of his feelings, the springs of his thought—you may yoke him to your labor as an ox that liveth only to work, and worketh only to live—you may put him under any process, which, without destroying his value as a slave, will debase and crush him as a rational being—you may do this, "and the idea that he was born to be free will survive it all." It is allied to his hope of immortality; it is the ethereal part of his nature, which oppression cannot reach, it is a torch lit up in his soul by the hand of Deity and never meant to be extinguished by the hand of man.—[Gov. McDowell.]

Advertisements.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use &c says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

Dr. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

All those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

This establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

SundaySchool Books--New Supply.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF BOOKS suitable for Sunday School Libraries, comprising recent publication of the American Sunday School Union, together with the two cent Hymn Book and the

Child's Cabinet Library,

containing 75 books bound in 50 volumes 32 mo. 32 pp. with morocco backs, lettered and numbered, only $2,50 for the Library, being at the rate of 5 cents per volume

Also, a good variety of books, in plain and elegant binding, selected with special reference to the coming

HOLYDAYS.

For sale at the Sunday School Depository.

J. METCALF, Agent.

Putnam, Dec. 13, 1847.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-opération and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT. Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

Office Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL
DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—

For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St., New York City.

FITS! FITS!!
A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm. Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England, Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, and medical advice and attendance. I was advised to take a tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visited England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case:—they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,

(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years. Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthelf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

Brother laborer in the cause of Humanity:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. Hatt, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, Post paid.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts., Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 42. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, JULY 20, 1848. WHOLE NO. 458

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,
AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO
OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

HYMN,

For the Fourth of July.

TO THE AUTHOR OF THE "STAR-SPANGLED BANNER."

Before the Lord we bow,
The God who reigns above
And rules the world below—
Boundless in power and love.
Our thanks we bring,
In joy and praise—
Our hearts we raise
To Heaven's high King.

The nation thou hast blest
May well thy love declare,
From foes and fears at rest,
Protected by thy care.
For this fair land,
For this bright day,
Our thanks we pay—
Gifts at thy hand.

Our fathers sought thee, Lord!
And on thy help relied—
Thou heard'st and gav'st the word,
And all thy need supplied.
Led by their hand
To victory,
They hail'd the free
And rescued land!

God of our sires! that hand
Be now, as then, display'd
To give this favor'd land
Thy never-failing aid.
Still may it be
Our fixed abode;
Be thou our God,
Thy people we.

May ev'ry mountain height,
Each vale and forest green,
Shine in thy word's pure light,
And its rich fruit be seen.
May ev'ry tongue
Be turn'd to praise,
And join to raise
A grateful song.

Earth! hear thy Maker's voice,
The great Redeemer own;
Believe, obey, rejoice,
Bright is the promis'd crown.
Cast down thy pride,
Thy sin deplore,
And bow before
The Crucified.

And when in power he comes,
O may our native land,
From all its rending tombs,
Send forth a glorious band.
A countless throng,
Ever to sing,
To Heaven's high King,
Salvation's song!

Written for the Western Recorder.

NATIONAL ANNIVERSARY.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CELEBRATION,

AT COVE SPRING, NEAR BAINBRIDGE, ROSS CO. O.,

JULY FOURTH, 1848.

At 8 oclock, A. M. we were clear of the beautiful village of Bainbridge; and crossing Paint Creek, at Mary Ann Forge, we ascended the Creek until we reached the mouth of Cove Run, which winds its way down a ravine, and enters Paint Creek, hard by the noted Falls of that stream. Our way now led through a thick beech wood, then descending the rocks, we passed the mouth of the cave, and soon ascended the hill, on which was prepared a spacious rostrum in a thick beech grove, and in front of Cove Spring Meeting House, which is built on the rocks which stand out in bold relief. At the foot of these winds a small rill, and in the opposite bank may be seen Cove Spring, gushing from the massive rock, rising some hundreds of feet above, surmounted by towering poplars, all which rendered the scene romantic and grand. Before the arrival of the appointed hour, the peaks, grove and cave were all alive with the lovely girls and boys, the youth of those native hills, a cheerful expression lighting up all their countenances.

The Marshal of the day ascended the stand, to bring to order this interesting host. Ladies and gentlemen, aged and middle aged, in great numbers, with hundreds of children, were now appropriately arranged. The children moved in the utmost order, showing what a mighty weapon is love, to direct and lead youth. Their promptness and discipline astonished their parents, and they also moved to the position assigned them. Hundreds of children were then seen pouring forth from the meeting house, in the order of well drilled soldiers.

All being seated, the Marshal notified the President, Mr. Jno. Benner, that all was in readiness. He then rose, and called to order, stating the object of the meeting in a brief address, which would do honor to H. Clay or T. Benton. Music (by the school) followed. Prayer was then offered by Rev. Jos. Irwin, Professor of Languages at S. Salem Academy. Music again. Miss Margaret Benner and Miss Zenetta Carson were then introduced for the purpose of presenting a splendid Banner from the Elm Street Mission (M. P. Church,) Sabbath School, Cincinnati; and Mr. Henry Green to receive it for the Cove Spring School. Miss Benner then pronounced the following

ADDRESS.

Sir: It would be in vain for me to describe the emotions of my heart this morning, as it becomes my duty to present to you this beautiful and well executed Banner, coming as it does from the Queen City, and rendered dear, by its presenters; being engaged in the same delightful institution, (Sabbath School.) How dear the name to our hearts, and how pleasant the thought, that we are not alone, but numbered with, and remembered by, those who are far away, and who are very differently situated; they enjoying all the advantages of city life, whilst we are situated in a remote interior portion of the country, surrounded by our hills and rocks, which to some would seem repulsive if not frightful, yet to us charming—charming, because here we first met in a Sabbath School. Here we were first instructed in the word of God. Here our voices first mingled in songs of praise to the Almighty who is our God.

Take then this Banner, and may its Motto be the Motto of Cove Spring Sabbath School, until called from this world to rise to one of greater beauty, where we may altogether be assembled in a house not made with hands.

Miss Carson then unfurled and presented the Banner, which was held up. The school all rose upon their feet, and continued standing whilst Mr. Green pronounced the following reply, when the school received the Banner, and they took their seats, with such unanimity, that it would have puzzled General Taylor's Regulars to beat it; all too, without one word from the Marshal.

REPLY OF MR. GREEN.

Ladies—The mission upon which you have come, and the day which we have met to celebrate are calculated to suggest two trains of reflections, of a pleasing character. First—The happy result attending the establishment of the Sabbath-School Association throughout our land, and the other, the glorious terminus which has been brought on by the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, by the American Congress, this day seventy-two years since. For centuries this earth was enveloped in a sheet of spiritual darkness; but the night of error is fast fading before the sunbeams of Education, as that bright luminary rises above the craggy mountains of Ignorance and Superstition, which have so long surrounded the human race. Follow this train of reflections back to the time when the twin sisters, Ignorance and Superstition, reigned, and contrast the condition of the human family then and now. Then could be seen, men bowing down in the attitude of worship, to the sun, moon, stars, or some piece of workmanship of their own hands. Then, the father could have been seen to sacrifice the son, or the son the father, in some cruel or heart-rending manner. Then, the mother could be seen to sacrifice her child in some river which she imagined to be sacred, or possessed of some divine influence. Then, on the Sabbath, the pleasing sound of no church bell warned the youth of the time to attend Sabbath-School, or divine worship, and then, no friendly voice of a minister of God saluted the ear, to teach men the way that leads from earth to heaven. All were slaves, and none were happy. But now, how changed the scene—instead of that sacrifice of human life, every thing is now done by man to render his fellow man happy & contented; and on the Sabbath, instead of noise, coufusion, and man's daily avocation being carried on, for a while the busy transactions of life are laid aside, and a solemn silence reigns thro'-out our towns and villages; broken only by the sound of a Sabbath bell, or a tedium sung by some Christian Association. What has caused this great change? No one, I presume, will hesitate to answer, Education has done it. Nor do I think I would be saying too much to say that Sabbath-Schools have been one among the chief aids; for there it is that the foundation is laid, upon which the mighty structure of Education is erected. There it is that a thirst for learning is created in the minds of the youth which volumes cannot satiate, but each successive draught only makes the happy victim of such an appetite long for more, and causes him to dip more and more deeply into the unfathomable well of knowledge. Well may education be termed the "feast of reason and the flow of soul;" for it is a companion which no misfortune can suppress, no clime destroy, or no despotism enslave. At home, it is a friend; abroad, an introduction; in society, an ornament—and in solitude, a solace. It guards virtue, lessons vice, and more than all, it secures Liberty. Yes, and should the time ever come when this mighty Government shall totter, when the beacon of joy that now rises in a pillar of fire, a sign and a wonder of the world shall wax dim, the cause will be founded on the ignorance of the people. If our union is still to continue to cheer the hopes and animate the efforts of the oppressed of every nation—if our fields are to be untrodden by the hireling of despotism—if long days of blessedness are to attend our country in her career of glory—if we would have the sun continue to shed its rays upon the face of freemen— then we must educate all the children in the land. This alone startles the tyrant in his dreams of power, and rouses the slumbering energies of the oppressed. It is intelligence that rears up the majestic columns of national glory: and this alone can prevent them from crumbling to ashes.

I say, then, it is a pleasing reflection, that the Sabbath-School Association,—a branch of which you have just presented with this banner,—has been a means in ameliorating and happyfying man's condition; and it is another source of pleasure to know that it has been, and is still, a means of prolonging that liberty which we now enjoy, and which we have this day met to celebrate.

You see, then, Ladies, that there is no mockery in your presentation—no hypocricy in our acceptance, nothing unsuitable in these ceremonies. We are engaged in carrying forward a great moral instruction; you have presented us with this banner as a token of your esteem for the cause, and your good wishes for our prosperity.

I receive this banner, Ladies, in the name, & on behalf of the Cove-Spring Sabbath-School; and in doing this I tender you, and those you represent, the sincere thanks of our School for this splendid gift. Your kindness shall not be forgotten, and never will it be remembered without gratitude.

Cove-Spring Sabbath-School: I have received this banner in your name, and now present it to you. The Lady orator, who read the communication, has advised you of the cause which led those scholars residing in a distant city to present you with it. She has told you of the kind feeling they have for you, and the reason of their making choice of a banner as a present. It is needless, then, for me to add more. May this banner be the means of encouraging you in your studies—may it urge you to be diligent in studying the word contained in the Scriptures, so that when you have grown to the stature of men and women, you may hold high stations in life, be an honor to yourselves, and ornaments to community. May you grow up in "the knowledge of the truth as it is in God," so that when your heads shall have become silvered over with the frost of many winters, you may look back with pleasure on your past life, and with bright hopes into a future eternity, and say with Elm Street Sabbath-School, and all God's people,—"Thy God shall be my God."

Miss Sarah R. Martin was now introduced, and read in a distinct manner, the following letter from Elm Street Mission, Cincinnati Sabbath School, which had accompanied the Banner.

To the Teachers and Scholars of Cove Spring Sabbath School.

Dear Friends: Through the kind attention of your Superintendent—we have heard something of the history of your school—of the difficulties under which you labor, for want of suitable books and papers; and also of the love you bear this good institution. Although, we have never seen your faces, yet the simple statement, that you are engaged with us in the same noble cause, that on the Holy Sabbath Day we jointly lift our voices in hyms of melody, and our hearts in humble supplications for blessings to rest upon us, has drawn out our hearts to you in christian sympathy and affection, and warmly and earnestly we say—God bless the Superintendent, Teachers, and Scholars of Cove Spring Sabbath School.—May peace and prosperity ever attend your efforts to do good. May the smile of God's approbation rest upon you.

It is pleasant in the spring to look upon the swelling buds and green leaves, the flowers smiling so brightly in the sunlight, the grassy lawn and waving meadows clothed in verdure & beauty, or to behold the summer rainbow, exhibiting in its blended tints at once the mercy and majesty of God, and yet the mingling of our voices in songs and praises, and the aspirings of grateful hearts before the mercy seat are more pleasant to the Almighty, than all the works he has made—O how cheering, how delightful the thot', that God, who is worshipped by all the shining hosts of heaven, who created all worlds by the might of his power—whose eye is upon all things in time and in eternity, that he smiles upon and blesses the humble and sincere devotions of the children of the Sabbath School. Well may we under such circumstances, with beaming eyes and thankful hearts press to our places at the school to learn more perfectly the lessons of heavenly wisdom. Well may we run with alacrity and delight in the way of life, when we have so certain an assurance, that it winds among peaceful vales, ascends the gentle slopes, and circles round and round, and higher and higher, until from the top of the mountain we first behold the homes of the blessed and happy in heaven.

Happy! Happy! is our land, where we may learn such noble sentiments, without let or hindrance, none daring to molest or make us afraid. To the Christian how thrilling the thought that the universal diffusion of the truth of this word, would at once hush to calm repose the wild and tumultuous elements of society, and bring peace on earth and good will to men. The Patriot would rejoice to witness in its development, every principle calculated to make his country great, glorious and happy, and the Philanthropist would here find a help for every sorrow, a balm for every anguished heart. These, Dear Friends, are truths, that I trust will at once find a grateful response in all our hearts; and if such great good would ensue if our friends and neighbors and the world would be better and happier from their influence, how shall they be disseminated, that every where the full consummation of our wishes may be attained. We each have our sphere of duty. The missionary bids his native land farewell, and encounters death in a thousand forms, that he may teach men to be happy.—The minister from the sacred desk, the good man in private life, point out to the wanderers the way of life and peace. Among other means employed, high in effectiveness and usefulness stands the Sabbath School. Others labor earnestly and successfully in other spheres, we have chosen the songs and prayers and teachings of the youth; here is an ample field for the exercise of our best energies, having the assurance that going forth from these portals imbued with sentiments of good will and benevolence, the good scholar will make the good Citizen, the good Patriot and the good Christian. O then friends, let us labor on, to do good, until from many a cottage, from many a fireside, from many a pleasant home, from the hearts and lips of happy children, we may hear the saying of Ruth to Naomi, "Thy God shall be my God." Then will we be glad indeed, for although we may enjoy our houses and lands, and gold and silver, or honors and fame to some extent, yet when we come to the close of life and review its labors, the reflection, that we have done some good, will be more precious to our memory than they all. Let us then unite our hearts and hands together, not only in one union, but with all the good in our country; that far and wide over our happy America, in her sweet vales, hidden in the recesses of her mountains, along her broad streams clustered with cities, towns and villages, and over her boundless prairies, shall be heard mingling with orisons around the altars of Liberty, this noble declaration, "Thy God shall be my God." We know how inspiring to the soldier, is the flag of his country, waving high above the din of the battle. To him it is the ensign of hope and victory. How cheerfully he follows it onward and onward through dangers and death. Friends, Teachers and Children we also are engaged in a conflict. We also would gather around the banner of our choice, we also would march under its guidance to achieve a great and glorious conquest. Its folds were never enveloped in the thick smoke of the battle. It has never been borne in triumph over fields strewn with the dead and dying. Never around its standard has been heard the thunder of the cannon or the shouts of the combatants. But wherever it waves, the song of the children is heard, and the widow's heart dances for joy. Discord and violence cease; and peace and plenty crown the quiet home of its votaries.

We feel then that we cannot more appropriately represent our union, and the object we have in view, than by presenting to you this banner, as a perpetual memorial between us, that whenever our eyes turn towards it we may continually be reminded of our duty to God, to each other, to ourselves, and may realize the truth of its motto, in all our efforts to do good,—through time and in eternity.

Elm Street Mission Sabbath School,
Cincinnati.

Music again followed, when Rev. Jno. Thompson, Principal of the So. Salem Academy was introduced and read the Declaration of Independence. Music again. Mr. Owen T. Reeves Jr., of Clarksburg, Ohio, a youth of nineteen, was now introduced, and delivered the oration, (which is enclosed for publication.) Music again. A public collection of $10.77 was now taken for the benefit of the school. The Marshal then formed the procession, and all were put in motion en route for dinner. The line formed by the children alone extended about one-fourth of a mile, followed by carriages, waggons and persons on horseback. At the head was borne a splendid banner with the following inscription:

"Elm Street Mission, Cincinnati, to Cove Spring Sabbath School."

(In the center is a Bible with a marble stand.)

"Thy God shall be my God."

This banner was executed by Mr. Ruffner, in fine silk, with gold letters, and hung on gold knobbed rollers, in the most chaste and splendid style. A table, two hundred yards in length, had been prepared and bountifully laden with luxuries, furnished by the grateful-hearted mothers. The children being all arranged so that their Teachers could wait upon them, there being still room, all were invited to partake. A blessing was asked by Rev. Mr. Irwin, and after all were satisfied, they were dismissed. We were soon again in our peaceful village, which we left in the morning, having spent one of the happiest days of our life, believing that all who had attended were more and more in love with Sunday Schools.

Mr. Editor, you will chronicle this one fact, that the Elm Street Mission Sabbath School of Cincinnati has the honor of presenting the first Banner presented by one school to another, and Cove Spring Sabbath School has the honor of being the first to receive a gift thus presented.—This Banner will be placed in the archives of Cove Spring for preservation, we hope for centuries.

Resolved, That the Secretary be instructed to return our grateful thanks to Elm Street Mission Sabbath School, for their inestimable present of a Banner, as a bond of love, and that we adopt the Motto,

"Thy God shall be my God."

Ministerial.

RULES

To assist in a right Prosecution of the work of the Ministry.

BY THE REV. ROBERT NEWSTEAD.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God: a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

I. In connection with the daily and regular reading of the word of God, study deeply the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, and the character and labors of St. Paul.

II. In connection with your studies and preparations for the pulpit, mingle unceasing prayer for the light and unction of the Holy Spirit.

III. Let the love of Christ and the love of souls, be the grand spring of all your outward efforts for the salvation of mankind. Your great business, instrumentally, is to save souls.

IV. In order to solemnity and earnestness in the public ministry, "set God always before you." Consider not so much to whom you speak, as the eternal import of the message you deliver. Aim at extensive usefulness.

V. Preach for eternity; as a dying man to dying men; &, in order to do it, live near the throne of grace; go from your kees to the pulpit; lift your heart to God in ascending it: frequently repeat this act in preaching,—preserving a stayed recollection of mind.

VI. Live above the mere fear or praise of men, and the facinations of popularity, by a constant and intentional aim at the glory of God, renewed in every ministerial act.

VII. Imitate the Saviour; labor to preach by example; maintaining, in all companies & places, by cheerful gravity, the sober dignity, the courteousness, the consistency, and the spirituality of the Christian minister. The power of "the daily example of one who lives under the impression of the word which he preaches" is mighty: "His example is a universal language; the child, the man, the gainsayer, and the believer alike understand it, and must read it, and take impressions from it concerning the Lord, and eternity, and Christ, and holiness."

VIII. Guard against light, facetious, and worldly conversation: steadily resisting the temptation to the punning and satire, witticism and repartee; which, though arising in many cases from a natural liveliness and buoyancy of disposition, can only tend to produce or spread an unseemly levity of spirit which will "eat as doth a canker," ministering to the destruction of your usefulness, especially among young people, and those of unformed minds. Gravity, with sound speech, and words that minister grace to the hearers, should be as much the adorning of the youthful as of the aged minister, and essential to the weight and influence of the ministerial character in all cases.

IX. Meddle sparingly with politics; and beware of any habit, though considered innocent by men, which might lower you in the estimation of any to whom you preach. Let all men see that self-denial is your every day garb, and that the messenger of the Sabbath is the minister through the week.

X. Rise early. Have a regular plan for every day and hour. Be conscientiously punctual, especially in appointed duties, and public services. Never trifle with other men's time; and especially never keep a congregation waiting.

XI. Sacredly economize your own time.—Employ all leisure and studious improvement.—Have ever some theme upon the mind. Avoid hurry and confusion, by avoiding procrastination and irregularity. Pursue order, and carry recollection into every thing.

XII. Labor after a practical improvement of the words of our Lord: "Occupy till I come." By the diligent cultivation of every talent, however humble, and by the wise alternation of reading and meditation, study and composition fill up your time so as to be always employed, yet never weary, till He shall say, "It is enough."

"One more word and I have done." How we dread to hear this expression from the lips of a speaker at a public meeting. It's always a sure sign that he is bracing up for a fresh start!

[Yankee Blade.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

MADURA.

LETTER FROM MR. M'MILLAN.

Mr. M'Millian writes from Dindigul October 12, as follows:

My location, as I suppose you have learned from other sources, is the west station of Dindigul, at first embracing all the southern portion of Dindigul Valley. At our last mission meeting, Poriacolum was set apart for a new mission station, and brethren Cherry and Ford designated to that place. This takes off the southern extremity of my field. That field presents a very promising aspect for missionary labor. There are several large Christian villages, which very much need the labor of a missionary in their immediate vicinity, to visit them frequently, and encourage them in the good way of the Lord. Their distance from Dindigul renders it impossible for a missionary residing in that place to devote much of his time to them, as some of those villages are eighty miles distant.

When they were under my care, I had the pleasure of visiting them once in company with brother Muzzy and brother Whittelsey. We were well received every where, and listened to with attention. They, as a people, appeared more willing to come under Christian influence, than any I had seen in India. And I trust as two of our brethren are now going to labor in their midst, much good will be done. At Periacolum we found fourteen or fifteen persons desiring baptism. We examined them as to their knowledge of the plan of salvation and their object in desiring baptism, and most of their answers were satisfactory. We were very much struck with the reply of one poor woman. She said that "she was a poor ignorant woman, and did not know much; but there was one thing which she did know, and that was, Jesus Christ was her swamy, and that she would love and worship no other swamy." We did not at that time baptize those individuals, thinking it best to defer it a little longer. Since then their number has increased considerably. We have received, in addition to the six Christian villages in the Periacolum district, two other villages. One of them is a whole village, embracing nearly seventy souls of the pariah caste. The other is a large village twenty miles south of Periacolum, situated in a fertile country. Fourteen or fifteen families there have placed themselves under our care. During our visit through that part of the country, we paid them a visit; but as they were absent attending a funeral, we did not see them. When they returned and learned that we had been there, two of their number followed us all the way back to Periacolum. One of them had been a Roman Catholic, the other a worshipper of Sivan. He said, "he had long thought that his religion was not the right one, and lately he had been more convinced of this by reading some of our tracts." He besought me very much for a schoolmaster or a catechist; but as I had none to send, I told him I would send one as soon as I could obtain a suitable person.—"The harvest is great, but the laborers are few."

Five have been added since I came here, two of them being low caste villages, of whom I have better hopes for the present than of the high caste villages. Yet notwitstanding things are so lamentable, there is much for encouragement; and I feel more encouraged now than I ever did since being in the mission.

Lately I had the pleasure of opening a preaching bungalow at Silliquireputty, a village sixteen miles distant from this place. There I found a congregation of about forty persons, waiting to hear the truths of God's word. This is a field sufficiently large for a mission station, and should be occupied soon as such.

LEETER FROM MR. MEIGS.

The Pulney Hills.

The scenery on the mountains is very grand. I was much delighted with it. The elevation is supposed to be about 7,000 feet. I found the difference of climate between that and the plains below to be at least 30 degrees. While I was there, the thermometer ranged from 48 deg. to 60 deg. Of course, it is much colder in December and January. While sitting by a comfortable fire, with my winter clothing upon me, I could scarcely realize that at the distance of a few miles, my brethren and sisters were suffering from the great heat of the climate. The ascent of the mountains is in some places very steep; and before I reached the mission station bungalow at the top, my weary limbs quite refused to perform their office. After a residence there of a few weeks, I found the descent much less difficult, and walked the whole distance of about ten miles, with very little fatigue.

By walking about a quarter of a mile to the south-east of the mission bungalow, we came to the brow of a mountain which we call Nebo, from which we have a fine view of the Dindigul valley for many miles to extent. I often sat there for hours, admiring the strife between the winds and the clouds. The clouds, rising from the water-falls below, would be driven to the top of the mountain by the wind. There, meeting with a stiff north-west breeze, they would be instantly driven back. Then again they would slowly ascend, and endeavor to get over the brow of the mountain into the valley, but in vain. Our numerous rambles over the hills and valleys, in such an atmosphere, we found very invigorating, both to mind and body. An occasional sight, also, of the wild bison, and elks, wild dogs and jackals, and large black monkeys, leaping from tree to tree with astonishing agility & strength, quite enlivened the scene. There are large tigers also on the mountains, but we did not meet any of them in our rambles though they have frequently been seen and killed in different parts of the Hills.

A Struggle to be Free.

The Rochester American, in a letter from Augusta, Ga., gives the following noble instance of man struggling to be free:

"The talk of the town to-day is the departure of Frank Shadwick, a self-emancipated slave, his wife and children, to seek a more congenial home in the State of Pennsylvania. This slave, who is a native of this beautiful city, began his work of emancipation by purchasing his time from year to year, at about $100 per annum—the usual hire of a good servant. Possessing great energy and much intelligence, with perfect integrity, he could both oversee other slaves and labor well himself, and very justly commanded his wages. His surplus earnings soon brought him horses and drays, and enabled him to hire good servants of such as had them to spare.—Thus established in business, in the course of 15 years he has made money enough to buy himself at about $1000, to pay a larger sum for his wife and children, and take to Harrisburg three or four thousand dollars besides. Some ten or twelve of the first men in Augusta united in giving him a letter of high recommendation."

Condition of the Slaves.

We have often heard it remarked, that the effort of anti-slavery men at the North had rendered the condition of the slaves far more intolerable than it was previously. We never believed this, and of late have taken much pains to learn the truth of the matter. We have conversed with many honest, intelligent slaveholders, and we learn from them that the condition of the slaves is improving. Their masters are aware that the eyes of the moral and religious world are fixed upon them—that the sympathies of Christendom are with the slave, and that the permanency of the institution requires that his condition should be ameliorated. Besides there are masters who are beginning to awake to the responsibility which rests upon them as guardians of the souls and bodies of their slaves; and there are not a few who regard slavery as doomed—who see that emancipation must soon prevail, & that it is time for them to begin to prepare for this event. Candid slaveholders sneer at the idea that abolition efforts have made the condition of the slave worse.—Clev. Dem.

Bringing the Case Home.

A few days ago, a wag, meeting a peasant who was on his way to Bordaux on business, said to him. "What are you doing here? They are bound to divide all the land of the rich, and you had better go to the Mayor and have your name for a share." The peasant set off at full gallop, and on arriving at the Mayor's said, "Monsieur le Maire, as there is to be a division of the land, I wish to have the meadow of M———, which joins my garden. Put down my name at the head of the list." The Mayor turned over some paper and then said:

"You are not on the first; I have an applicant who demands the meadow, and also your garden with it." "My garden! my garden!" said the peasant in a fury; "I will go and get my musket;" and he set to watching his garden day and night. There is a host of persons like this peasant; they wish to share the property of others and keep their own.—Gazette de France.

A corrspondent of the N. Y. Tribune says that H. Slatter, the notorious slave dealer at Baltimore, has abandoned the traffic, and closed finally his slave market. The fugitives from Washington, who were recaptured on board the Pearl were about the last that he had the heart to purchase.

Who Takes It?

Taylor, the water poet, wrote a line that reads the same forwards and backwards, and offered a thousand pounds to any one who would write another. Here it is:

"Lewd I did live & evil did I dwell."

Religious Intelligence.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Steubenville, O., July 13th, 1848.

Dear Brother Bassett: On the 6th day of June, I set out on my northern tour. My meeting for the Conneaut Circuit, was held June 10th and 11th at a place called Steamburg. We had a pleasant meeting, so far as the membership was concerned, but no special awakening among sinners. Br. H. Lucas, the Superintendent, had taken the ague and fever, early in the year, and had not been able to do one half of the work, and had not been any thing like half paid. I find it takes full labor, to draw out full pay, but a brother's sickness should make a difference.—When stricken down by Providence; Christian sympathy should be more than ever attentive to his wants. As the ague and fever season was at hand, by consent of the Quarterly Conference, Br. Lucas was released, and was placed in charge of the Sandy Lake Mission, in the upper part of Mercer County, Pa., where I hope he will do good, and be healthy. This is a new place, the call was long and loud, and the prospect fair for the formation of a circuit.

My meeting for the Summerville Circuit, was held at Troy, June 17th, 18th and 19th. We used the Methodist Episcopal Meeting House. But few attended on Saturday—all too busy in worldly matters. The Sabbath was a good day—Lovefeast was sweet to our souls. Our old Episcopal brethren took hold finely. God was in the preaching through the day, and we had a good Sacrament on Monday morning. Our cause if well managed, will yet be strong in all this region, for [illegible] much public favor.

On the Susquehanna Circuit, we had our meeting at Br. Dunkle's in the woods. It was pretty well attended, and there were some indications of good. Br. G. A. Compton was with us, and preached well. So did Brs Stewart and Marple, the preachers of the Circuit. The people were rather busy for meetings in day time, and the nights were too short for night meeting, or I think more might have been done. Thank God, a good impression was made on many a heart. Through grace this may be matured into final & eternal salvation. How I love the earnest religious energy, of the good people on Susquehanna Circuit.

I came next to Johnstown Station, and commenced my meeting July 1st, in the United Brethren's Meeting House. Our meeting closed on Sunday night—all was pleasant, but nothing special of the revival kind. Br. V. Lucas, the Superintendent, has done well this year. Just think of it, ye faint hearted, far and near. Our dear brethren in Johnstown, though few in number with no high pretentions to pecuniary strength, will, with the blessing of God have a most delightful meeting house, of good and adequate dimensions ready for occupancy against the 1st of August. God bless and prosper these christian people. Give our people meeting houses, in all places where we have societies. Give them a home of their own in which to meet, and worship the God of our fathers, and prosperity may be expected. A people who have no spirit to build a house for God, have not spirit enough to prosper, and extend religion in the world.—Even the poorest of the poor, might build some kind of a house for God, if they would. The boy said to General Marion—"Daddy says as how the heart is every thing." O how true!

From Johnstown I returned home, rather unwell. On Saturday morning my wife & daughter returned from Cincinnati. So now we are all at home once more, and thank God we all have about middling health.

I have suffered from an accident during this last tour. The day I left home, an ugly bug got into my ear, and seemed to be intent on making his way into my very brain. It was nearly one hour before I got him out, during which time I was nearly deranged. However in Wellsville, Dr. Stevenson scooped him out, but I was injured, for my ear bled all that afternoon, and during the next ten days, it gathered and broke three times. This was a calamity on me, but under it I filled all my appointments, and am now, I trust nearly well again. Thank the Lord. For the Aid Society I have obtained—Clarion Mission, $5.00, Susquehanna Circuit, $28, 75, and Johnstown Station, $20.00—in all $53,75—making in all this year, $976, 95. May heaven prosper the Aid Society. Again I call the Superintendents to collect what is due on their books, and bring it on to Conference.

The Pittsburgh District, is upon the whole in good order. Our ministers, preachers, and members, generally, understand, love, and abide by our ecclesiastical economy. In many places there have been revivals among our people, and we are getting on as a Church, very comfortably. Clarksburg, Waynesburg, Wheeling, and Conneaut, have suffered much, from the sickness of their Superintendents, still they hold on, without disorder, and so far as I have learned, the unstationed preachers have to some extent supplied their lack of service, and the sick have recovered, and are at their work again. This is truly gratifying. In conclusion, I say once more, age, hard service, and family considerations, all make me desire a smaller field of labor, for next year, if I live to see it. Some other brother must be President.

I am, &c.,

GEO. BROWN.

The Sabbath Convention at Xenia.—Delegates from various parts of the State assembled at Xenia on the 21st inst.

The Convention was organized by the appointment of P. B. Wilcox, Esq., of Columbus, as President, and the following gentlemen as Vice Presidents: Hon. Jeremiah Morrow, of Waren county. James Johnson, Esq., of Cincinnati, Rev.——Fitch, of Piqua, R. O. Spencer, Esq., of Cincinnati, Enos French, Esq., of Urbana.—For Secretaries, Jos. M. Trimble, R. W. Steele and R. W. Collett.

A series of resolutions were adopted, expressive of the opinions of the Convention upon the importance of the observance of the Sabbath as a day of holy rest—deploring the various modes both of business and pleasure, by which it is broken, and suggesting measures for securing the co-operation of christians everywhere, and the societies and governments, in securing and enforcing its observance.—Ohio State Journal.

Yucatan.—The Commissioners for Yucatan, who are despatched to Mexico to solicit aid against the Indians, have been unable to procure from the government the promise of any troops to march to the Peninsula. They were informed that no men could be spared, and the utmost that could be done for them was an advance of $30,000, 2,000 muskets, and some munitions.—They solicited the President to beg the United States Government to despatch 2,000 of the troops of General Butler's army to Yucatan, to pacificate the country; or, in case of refusal, to try and prevail with that officer to allow a portion of his men to volunteer at Vera Cruz, on their return home. All their endeavors proved vain.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, July 20, 1848.

☞ We direct attention to the statement of Br. Stockton, to the Subscribers for the Weekly Christian World, in our column of Notices.

☞ The discussion on the Restrictive Rule, is concluded in this number, not by the "young men," as has been repeatedly hinted, but by two writers in favor of the Rule.

Oberlin Evangelist.—Can the publisher favor us with a copy of No. 9 of his excellent paper, as we never received it? We desire to preserve our file complete. No. 10, is the last we have received.

☞ Many of our friends in Muskingum and adjoining Counties will remember the gentlemanly Agent, who distributed to subscribers and purchasers in this section, Howe's Collections of Ohio. They will find a letter from him to us, under the head of Correspond ence, dated in the land of steady habits.

Rev. G. Brown.—We are gratified to place before our readers another letter from this veteran laborer, in which he reports incidents of another toilsome tour in his extensive District. We have largely sympathised with our old friend in his arduous toils and constant journeyings, and long absences from his family, now in the decline of his years. We are not aware that any brother in any Conference of our connection has served for so many years as has Br. Brown in the office of President. But we are not surprised that he should find it necessary in view of the great extent of his district, to ask to be exonerated from further service in so toilsome an office.

Governor Shunk Resigned.—We find in the Saturday Evening Post the Address of Governor Shunk of Pennsylvania to the People of that State, resigning the office to which he had been chosen for three years from January last. The reason he gives is that he has by Divine Providence been deprived of the strength necessary for the discharge of his official duties, being laid upon a bed of sickness, from which in all human probability he may never rise. The following is the closing paragraph of the address.

In taking leave of you, under circumstances so solemn, accept my gratitude for the confidence you have reposed in me. My prayer is, that peace, virtue, intelligence and religion, may pervade all your borders—that the free institutions you have inherited from your ancestors may remain unimpaired till the latest posterity—that the same kind Providence which has already so signally blessed you, may conduct you to still a higher state of individual and social happiness—and when the world shall close upon you, as I feel it is soon about to close upon me, that you may enjoy the consolations of the christian's faith, and be gathered, without a wanderer lost, into the fold of the Great Shepherd above.

FRS. R. SHUNK.

Harrisburg, July 9, 1848.

Rev. G. B. Wooster.—This brother, it will be recollected, was a very zealous and successful minister of the Michigan Conference, from its organization. Last year he took leave, in view of going to Oregon. We see however by a late number of the Methodist Protestant, that he reports himself as having settled in Missouri. He has formed a small society at his neighborhood, and established various preaching places, one of which is at Kingston.

Since the above was in type, we have received the Methodist Protestant of the 15th inst. in which we are pained to find the sad announcement of the instantaneous death of Br. Wooster, by lightning. As he is now no more, we will state that we formed an acquaintance with him in 1842 in the State Michigan, where he then lived and labored. For he was for one year recognised by the Ohio Conference, before the organization of an Annual Conference in Michigan, though he never attended a session of the former. We were led to consider him a remarkably devoted and exemplary young man.—Publicly and privately he urged personal and practical holiness upon all with whom he had intercourse. Rarely have we ever heard any minister speak with more decided manifestations of the presence and power of the Holy Ghost, than Br. W. in his sermons and exhortations.—And as he carried with him the holy fire, as may well be concluded, he was instrumental in kindling up a sacred flame in many places. Br. Wooster was extensively useful. Though his career in the ministry was short, he was the means of an extensive ingathering of souls.—We think that in one instance at least, he received from 300 to 400 into society, upon profession of their conversion, in a single year.—Yet by the hand of an allwise Providence he is cut down in the prime of his days and of his usefulness. Shall we not receive an obituary by the President or some other member of the Michigan Conference? The following is from the Methodist Protestant.

Br. Reese,—In the order of God's moral government, I am called upon to record the death of my brother, Rev. George B. Wooster. He was killed by lightning on the 3d instant, in Kingston, 13 miles from his residence; aged 31 years and 19 days. He has left a wife and three small children to mourn his loss. He was doing much to ameliorate the moral condition of the people of this vicinity, which they highly appreciate. They deeply bewail his sudden dissolution. He was interred on the 5th inst. Father Stout of the Methodist Protestant Church delivered an appropriate discourse to a very large audience, from Rev. xiv; 13.

Yours, in great affliction,

D. WOOSTER.

Caldwell Co., Mo., June 8th, 1848.

On the 29th ult. the Hon. John Alexander, of Xenia, in the 69th year of his age, died at his residence, of Paralysis. He was a distinguished jurist, an ex-member of Congress, and a most estimable man.

U. S. CONGRESS.

June 27.—Senate.—The Bill to establish a Territorial Government in Oregon, being under consideration, Mr. Bright offered an amendment, bottomed on the Missouri Compromise, as follows.

And be it further enacted, That in all the Territories owned by the United States, including Oregon, New Mexico, and Upper California, which lies noth of 36° 30′ north latitude, slavery and involuntary servitude, otherwise than in the punishment of crimes whereof the parties shall have been duly convicted, shall be and is hereby forever prohibited: Provided, Always, That any person escaping into the same whose labor or service is lawfully claimed in my State or Territory of the United States, such fugitive may be lawfully reclaimed and conveyed to the person claiming his or her labor or service as aforesaid.

Messrs. Berrian and Calhoun spoke in support of the amendment.

June 28.—Senate.—The Oregon bill being under consideration, Mr. Underwood offered the following amendment additional to the amendment of Mr. Bright, which was ordered to be printed.

Provided, further, That citizens of the U. States emigrating, with their slaves, into any of the Territories of the United States south of said parallel of latitude, shall be protected in their property in their slaves so long as the Territory to which they emigrate continues under a territorial government.

July 6.—Copies of a Message from the President of the United States were submitted to both Houses, accompanied by the "Treaty of Peace Friendship, Limits and Settlement," between the United States and the Mexican Republic.

Dr. Cronk's Sarsaparilla Beer.—This is a very pleasant Beverage, and is designed to purify the blood, and is said to be good for the general renovation of the system. If it is as good for this purpose as is pleasant-tasted, we would say to the public, Try a few bottles. The Beer, we are assured, is a temperance article, and free from every thing Alcoholic.

The Irish Church and Slavery.—Below we give an extract from the Address of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (O. S.) in the United States, the session of which was recently held. American Slavery is the chief topic of the address. It will be perceived that reference is had to previous correspondence between the two Assemblies upon the subject.

"Slavery, root and branch, was hated with a perfect hatred, as it existed in own West India Islands, and our opposition only ceased with the death of Slavery there; nor can we view it with greater complacency, as it converts free America into a foul misnomer, and forms a dark and deadly stain on the escutcheon of evangelical Presbyterianism. At the same time we are comparatively powerless to remove the evil, and, to say the truth, we unfeignedly desire that other parties may be covered with the glory of its removal. It is our fervent wish, that the proud distinction may be earned by the American people themselves, still more by the American Churches and most of all by our evangelical Presbyterian brethren. You tell us that slavery is an institution which your Church never did, and does not now, set itself to defend; and this declaration we hail as indicating, so far, a step in the right direction; and we respectfully submit, that the Christian world would, if necessary, regard you as shielding that obnoxious institution, if you unwisely adhere to the resolution of attempting to prevent your correspondents of other churches from expressing honestly, and in the spirit of kindness, their opinions of its hideous and inveterate enormities.

"The views which we have taken the liberty of presenting to you on former occasions you have been pleased to stigmatize as "obviously erroneous;" and this grave sentence against us appears to rest mainly, if not entirely, on the assumption, that we are ignorant, while you are well informed on the subject—that we are incompetent to enter intelligently into the bearings of the question, while you thoroughly comprehend and appreciate in all its momentous relations.—Now, dear brethren, we are free to admit, that, if close contact with slavery is favorable to a right understanding of its nature, and a just appreciation of duty to the enslaved, you are fairly entitled to tax us with ignorance, in view of your own superior condition, and consequent attainments. If, on the other hand, in all ages, and among all nations, wherever slavery has existed, its tendency has been corrupting to the moral judgment and feelings of all within the sphere of its unholy influence, then we conceive that our sentiments (the healthy product of a clime which cannot be tained by the breath of slavery) possesses a strong claim on your most serious consideration; but as we do not profess, in the compass of a letter, to enter fully into the merits of the question, we shall, for the present, bring our observations to a close, by soliciting your attention to what appears to be the master difference between you and us on this painfully interesting subject. Your General Assembly, you inform us, has no power to deal with slavery as a purely civil institution; while you conceive you are with some measure of faithfulness performing your duty in relation to the moral aspects of the system. Passing over the mere technicality regarding the jurisdiction of the General Assembly are we to be informed that the sturdy, evangelical Presbyterians of America can exert no influence in altering, or, if need be, in abolishing the civil institutions of the country? Our West India slavery was a civil institution, but, by the blessings of God on the efforts of right-hearted Christian men, it has breathed its last. You may labor for the amelioration of "the moral evils connected with slavery," but, as these are, undoubtedly, the corrupt fruit of a currupt tree, they will never cease to be productive while that tree sends down its roots and spreads its branches in your fine and magnificent country. The sentence of justice, and we will take leave to add, the sentence of mercy upon that tree is, "Cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?" "

Lord's Detector.—Our friend T. W. Lord, who for several years past has been publishing a Counterfeit Detector at Zanesville, having received large encouragement in the way of patroage at Cincinnati, has removed his publication to that city. We have received his July number, in which handsome improvements are manifest. The terms of the Cincinnati Counterfeit Detector are $1 per year in advance. We are pleased to observe that Mr. L. has a patronage of four thousand.

Western Virginia.—The late General Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, set off a new Annual Conference in Western Virginia. Its first session has just been held in conjunction with the Pittsburgh Conference at Wheeling.—Br. Hunter, of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, in stating the prospects of the new Conference, in his last paper, gives the following interesting account of the country and the people.

The territory is extensive for the number of members—the population being more sparse than in the neighboring regions of Pennsylvania and Ohio. The country is hilly, and in some parts even mountainous. But it is generally fertile and healthy. It is improving in almost every respect, and will improve. The people are hospitable and generous, and a Methodist preacher who does his duty finds friends and a home almost wherever he finds a spot of cleared land with a log cabin on it. We know the greater part of the country embraced in the Western Va. Conf. We have traced hundreds of its meandering streams, and forded its beautiful rivers, (for it is well watered as the garden of the Lord,) have climbed its multitudinous hills, and breathed the pure air of heaven on the tops of its glorious mountains. We have ate and slept, and talked and prayed with the rich and the poor—have been where they fared sumptuously every day, and where they never fared sumptuously at all; for that spice of life called variety grows exuberantly there; and we here give it as our deliberate opinion that Western Virginia presents as interesting, important, and in many respects as pleasant a field of gospel labor as any to be found in the United States. Whoever goes there will find warm-hearted, devotional people, who will listen with eagerness to the word of life; and relish a warm, stirring sermon, as a hungry man relishes a good dinner. Nor let it be supposed that the people are all poor, and illiterate, and unrefined. By no means. They will compare very favorably with their neighbors in the adjoining States in this respect.

Progress of Liberal Feeling.—A few weeks ago the editor of the Methodist Protestant deemed it worthy of remark, that during the recent session of the General Conference at Pittsburgh, a Methodist Episcopal Bishop officiated in a Methodist Protestant pulpit. Upon this, the following remarks are given in a late member of the Protestant, from a private letter, dated at Pittsburgh.

"Some weeks ago, bro. Reese, I observed in your editorial columns the notice of a M. E. Bishop in an M. P. pulpit. The discussion of the question, "Union among Methodists," gave rise to this pleasing sight. The thought occurred to me that after said lengthy and friendly investigation of the question, now would be a suitable time at the Gen. Conference to ask for a Bishop to fill our pulpit in Pittsburgh. Accordingly, after consulting some of the brethren, I stated my wishes to the Committee whose business it was to supply the pulpits in these cities, &c., assuring them of our sincerity in the application, and that good might result from it, and that a Bishop would be well received among us. The request was entertained, and sure enough Bishop Waugh was appointed to our church next Sunday morning; and he labored like a man of God among us, officiated at the Lord's Supper, and used our Discipline!! He exhorted the communicants, and prayed with all his heart! Then bro. J. Robison determined that Alegheny should not be more than a week behind Pittsburgh, and next applied and Bishop Morris was appointed there on the next Sabbath. One writer on Union, &c., spoke of old Doctor Bunting, in England, preached the opening sermon before the Conference of the New Connection last summer; and suggested that when we had been in existence as long as the New Connexion, we might have an Episcopal Church Bishop do the like for us. According to that we must wait yet thirty years! But, considering the rail-road strides the Americans make in whatever they undertake, I thought we need not wait thirty years for a Bishop to preach for us. And lo! it is done at once! May it open the way for further friendship!"

Correspondence.

[Correspondence of the Western Recorder.]

New Haven, Conn., July 3, '48.

Mr. Editor: In four hours from the time we left Zanesville, we found ourselves comfortably quartered 24 miles nearer the place of our destination, in the beautiful village of Cambridge. I say beautiful, for the beauty of its location and natural scenery are sufficient to justify the term. Became acquainted with several gentlemanly and obliging citizens of this town, and were I to personify, I would speak first of our gentlemanly host, the worthy proprietor of the Temperance Hall, who is striving with unabated zeal and no little success to establish for the weary traveller a home free from the noise and drunken frolics which inevitably characterize the liquor vender's tavern, many of which I have found to be emphatically "dens of confusion," dark spots on the face of our beautiful land, and breathing holes of the bottomless pit. Would God the last vestige of this blasting scourge, I mean rumselling and drinking in any form could be forever annihilated not only from the west but from every nook and corner of our otherwise happy country, aye! from the most isolated spot beneath the circle of the sun. From Cambridge a night over a stage route which for speed and comfort is doubtless unexcelled was next passed, and as the grey tints of morning began to steal across our eyelids and afford us sufficient light to discover our position, we were found within a short distance of the city of Wheeling. Of this we had not definite ocular demonstration, for it is impossible among the hills of Belmont to see a city even at a short distance, but the smoke from its numerous manufacturing establishments afforded sufficient proof, and as we bounded with increasing speed along our "winding way" we could not refrain from musing in silence on the many scenes of thrilling interest which have occurred in early days within the circle of our vision.

"And yonder mountain's nodding brow
Where shepherds watch their flocks in peace," was once the seat of iron wars and cruel tyranny, but those scenes as we reflect upon them seem to have vanished like the "morning cloud," and from hence no more shall be heard the savage yell, the twang of the bow string, the clash of the tommahawk, or the shriek of his smitten victim, neither shall the report of the more sure and death dealing weapon of the red man's foe be heard to ring in the morning air while the rude and untaught son of the forest with trembling sinks to rise no more. In Wheeling as in other cities I heard but little talked of except the nominees for President and Vice President.

* * * * * * * *

As we stept on board one of those elegant packet steamers which ply between Cincinnati and Pittsburgh and went on deck to view the receding city, we were disappointed to find that the smoke had so accumulated that the town was enveloped and consequently from our position could not be seen. Next in the order of our journey to feast the eyes and gratify the taste, appeared the wild romantic scenery along the shores of "La belle reviere." This scenery is much more grand, and picturesque than I had ever imagined. Here the attention is attracted by a huge and rugged mountain, with its ragged side "projecting fearfully" and its lofty summit towering to the sky. There is a sweet and charming wild wood grove, by nature formed, and yonder flowers of every hue whose fragrance fills the air. Beyond are waving fields of grain, cattle of various descriptions dot the hill-side, & as we look and admire, we feel that your favored western land is truly "a land of corn and wine and oil." And although we were travellig to our much loved home, we could not but feel a sense of sadness pervade our spirits when we paused to reflect on the interesting scenes around us, and those with which we had been conversant during the past winter, the dear friends we were leaving behind, and all to enjoy again no more forever, except those friends we hope to meet 'where parting is no more.' By daylight the following morning we were in Pittsburgh, the noted "City of Smoke." From there we crossed the Alleghenies the back bone of the American Republic, through the towns of Johnstown, Hollydaysburgh, Harrisburgh, &c., to Philadelphia. Harrisburgh the capital of Pennsylvania, occupies an interesting position on the left bank of the Susquehannah; it is 97 miles from Philadelphia and 200 from Pittsburgh, situated in the fertile Kittatinny valley with good bridges spanning the river, and shaded walks along its banks; canals, railroads and turnpikes radiating from it in all directions. Harrisburgh has various attractions for the resident or stranger. I should like to speak of the city of "brotherly love," and particularly of New York, the "Empire City." I would talk of the imposing and truly magnificent appearance of this mighty city, "of its lofty domes and towering spires," the grandeur of its mighty ships, whose snowy sails have whitened every sea, the beauty of its adjacent mountain scenery and all the sublimity and loveliness which nature & art have lavished with unsparing hand around this favored spot. Neither would I pass without a notice the wretchedness and misery which unhappily exists among many of the five hundred thousand souls which compose its population.—But my sheet is nearly full and I must close.—About 9 o'clock Wednesday evening we came in full view of our own sweet land and home, and the view from Long Island Sound, as we glided over its rippling waters and gazed beneath the shining of a full orbed moon upon the "mountain walks and heath girt lakes, and story-telling glens of the land of our boyish hours," we said that this beautiful New Haven, this land of our Pilgrim Fathers henceforth shall be our home; and

"No more then we'll roam from the land of our birth,
To gaze on the world in its splendor of mirth,
'Twill more than suffice that I've learned its false glare,
As the days of my future with loved ones I share."

Yours, &c.,

J. H. J.

Written for the Western Recorder.

OUR TURN.

Brothers Springer, Prudentia, Scott, Burns and all you good natured, good brethren, who have been writing for and against the Restrictive Rule, will you hold on, and let your old friend have room to report the Celebration of Cove Spring Sabbath School? And then, you try again. But cannot you get a new subject? You have all done so well on the old one, you ought, of right, to be excused.

Yours,

D. C. CARSON.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MRS. GEORGE FRESHOUR,

The subject of this notice, was born in the year 1818, in Montgomery County, Ohio, was married to Brother F. about the year '34; and removed to Shelby County, a short time afterward, where she united with the M. P. Church, in what was then called Springfield Circuit, now Miami Ct.—She took a deep interest in the affairs of the Church, although she did not profess to enjoy the forgiving love of God till the lapse of three years afterward, when she was made happy in Christ. From that time she became a pattern of piety to all who knew her. After her conversion she removed to Miami County, where her house became the heme for the Missionary of the cross, and a preaching place. At the Conference of 1847, and upon the division of Miami Circuit, this appointment fell to Greenville Mission. We always found sister F. at her post and ready to give a reasonable answer to any who should ask her of the hope that was in her. She was taken with her last illness about the first of May. Her disease soon assumed a typhoid character, of the most alarming nature, and in a few days produced mental derangement. But after a few days her reason returned, and with it her former confidence and enjoyment. Although her sufferings were great, she was of a calm and heavenly frame of mind, and endured all with Christian courage. We visited her several times, but a short time before her decease. We enquired of her concerning her state. Her answer was, My way is clear—all is well, and added—

"My suffering time will soon be o'er,
Then shall I sigh and weep no more."

We learn that she maintained her confidence till the last. She departed this life, June 8, '48, leaving a kind husband and five children to mourn their loss, with a numerous train of acquaintances to shed the falling tear. But we believe that our loss is her gain.

I. C. HUNT.

Greenville Miss., June 22, '48.

News of the Week.

A savage war is raging between the Pawnee and Sioux Indians, west of the Missouri frontier, Capt. Vanvliet, whose arrival at St. Louis we announced a few days ago, says he passed thro' one of the finest Pawnee villages, on the 7th instant, which was destroyed in his presence by the Sioux. The village had been left unprotected by the Pawnees, who were out hunting. A short time previously, a band of Iowas and Sacs attacked a Pawnee village, and took fifty scalps. The Chiennes have also joined the enemies of the Pawnees. Capt. V. passed about 300 Chiennes, in waiting to attack the Pawnee hunting parties. Col. Wilson has promised them protection, but his force is altogether inadequate.—The new fort (Chiles) at the head of Grand Island, if well supplied with means, can probably hold the tribes in check. The Oregon battalion had arrived at Fort Chiles. Two parties of Emigrants, each with about thirty wagons had also arrived near the fort. The Mormons were passing up on the north side of Grand River, bound for Great Salt Lake.—N. Y. Sun.

An effort is making in the Cherokee country, by the Indians and Whites, to "root out" a gang of desperate outlaws who settled recently in the vicinity of Evansville, Arkansas. A few days ago a party of Cherokees killed Ellis Starr, and one of his associates, Matt. Gerring, was killed by the officers in pursuit. A company started in pursuit of Tom Starr. Shadrack Cordrey, a negro kidnapper, killed John Rodgers, who attempted to arrest him. Creek Starr and Isaac Gann killed a Cherokee woman near Evansville, on the 27th ult. They were immediately pursued. Gann is a deserter from a company of volunteers who went to Mexico last summer. A soldier, and a woman named Ann Pindar, have been arrested for kidnapping three Seminole negroes, who had been freed by Gen. Jessup in Florida. Seymour, the soldier, has turned State's evidence.—N. Y. Sun.

An Electric Telegraph Line is to be immediately established between Havana and Matanzas, Island Cuba.

A London Journal says that the number of lawyers in London is no fewer than 4,972, and that the amount of their costs in 1846–7, was £5,210,165.

The Cholera in Russia.—According to accounts received from Moscow, the cholera is making dreadful progress. The number of cases on the 29th of May alone were 80; the number of deaths being 42. During the six previous days, 464 persons were attacked, of whom 205 died! This dreadful visitation is likewise very prevalent at Robinski, Kalouza and Jaroslau. It is, there, evidently traveling westward.

Accident.—Yesterdy afternoon, as two gentlemen were driving a pair of remarkably fine horses, attached to a buggy, on Fourth street, the horses took fright at a mattrass hanging on a window and became unmanageable. The gents. jumped out and fortunately escaped unhurt.—The horses proceeded at great speed down the street, when they finally came in contact with a dearborn waggon, the shaft of which, striking the chest of one of the animals, penetrated, and passed out near the back bone, killing him instantly. The other horse was very badly injured both his fore legs being broken. A little boy, a son of Mr. William Coleman, who was driving the dearborn, was thrown out on the pavement, though we are happy to say not much hurt.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Twelve Horses Burned.—We learn by a telegraphic despatch addressed to Mr. Moorhead, agent of the Good Intent Stage Company, St. Charles Hotel, that the stage stable at Bedford, was burned down night before last. Four teams, (16 horses) four coaches, and five sets of Harness were destroyed. Col. Otinger's stable also caught fire and was destroyed, together with twelve valuable horses, seven carriages and a large quantity of grain. Five other stables were destroyed, but no horses were lost in them.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Bounty Land Warrants.—Soldiers' land warrants are worth, in Philadelphia, or any other money market in the Union, $120. The scrip is worth only $100, if sold at par. Our volunteers should, therefore, send for their warrants, and not for the scrip. Any assignment or discharge purchased from a soldier previous to the issue of the land warrant or scrip by the Pension office is worthless, the soldier having the right to claim his warrant or scrip.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Huntingdon and Broad Top Railroad.—We learn from the Huntingdon Messenger that the Engineers are now engaged in making a survey of the route of this road, and that as as they have progressed the result has been highly flattering to the friends of the enterprise. Some fourteen miles have been surveyed, and in that distance the cutting and filling will not exceed ten feet. The grade is estimated at fifteen feet to the mile.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

A New Counterfeit.—We were yesterday shown a new counterfeit $2 Allegheny County Scrip note. It is not well calculated to deceive, however. The paper and engraving are bad, and signatures very bad. The note is about one fourth of an inch shorter than the genuine.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Dr. D. S. Silver, a physician of Wellsville, has been sentenced to four years imprisonment in the Penitentiary for perjury.—Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Constitutionality of the Pennsylvania Sabbath Law.—Mr. Specht, a farmer and a Seventh Day Baptist, residing in Franklin county, was indicted for pursuing his ordinary avocations on Sunday—such as hauling out manure, &c.,—and fined by the Court. He appealed to the Supreme Court, mainly it would seem, to test, for his seat, the constitutionality of the law under which he was fined, which prohibits, inter alia, any person to "do or perform any worldly employment or business whatever on the Lord's day, commonly called Sunday, works of necessity or charity only excepted." The opinion of the Court is, that the law is constitutional; being a social and political regulation, giving a preference to no religious establishment or mode of worship.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Accidents on the Fourth.

At many places unfortunate men and boys had their fingers shot off, on the fourth, their faces burnt, &c., by premature discharges of pistols, &c. The following are more serious accidents:

At Niagara, by the premature discharge of a cannon, three men were injured; one lost an arm; two others a hand each, and of the latter was so badly injured in the side that his life is despaired of.

At Manchester, Vt., by the premature discharge of a cannon, Mr. Albert Jordan had his left hand and wrist entirely blown away; Mr. Fayette Battist had a part of one hand shot off, and was otherwise badly injured, and it is feared mortally.

At Morristown, N. J., Henry Williams was shockingly wounded by the bursting of a small cannon. Severe wounds were made by the fragments in his neck, breast, shoulders, &c., but having received prompt medical aid it is thought he will recover. Williams was attached to Taylor's battery under General Scott, and participated in all the battles from Vera Cruz to Churubusco, were he was wounded in the leg.

A boy named Frank was injured by powder at Hartford, Conn., and died on Wednesday.

James E. McKnight, teller of the bank of Attica, N. Y., was drowned in the Niagara River, on the Fourth, by the capsizing of a sail boat. His companions clung to the boat until rescued.

Rich Emigrants.—Four very wealthy Norwegians passed through New York city on Friday. The Sun says "They were the proprietors of a village near Bergen; who intend to found a colony in Wisconsin, and have brought with them, 160 persons, whose passages they pay.—The specie brought by these proprietors is immense, and their people are all in comfortable circumstances—every emigrant having from 800 to 1,000 pounds of baggage.

Distinguished Matron Dead.—A relict of the era of the Revolution, Mrs. Julia Rush, widow of the distinguished Dr. Benjamin Rush, and mother of the Hon. Richard Rush, now minister of the United States to France, died on Friday night last, in the 80th year of her age, at Sydenham, near Philadelphia, at the residence of her son. She was grandmother of Com. R. F. Stockton, U. S. Navy.

The Poor Soldier.—Twenty of the Michigan volunteers, returning from the war, died of fever between N. O. and Cincinnati, and four while they were going from the river to the canal at the latter place. So says a Cincinnati paper.

The Ratified Treaty of Peace with Mexico, reached Washington on the 4th of July, and the proclamation thereof was signed that day. It will be seen that it was yesterday communicated to both Houses of Congress, with a message from the President. Every citizen of the Republic will congratulate himself on the final consumation of the restoration of what is hoped may be a permanent peace with a neighbouring republic.

The fine rains of last week, in the vicinity of Centreville, Md., have greatly helped the growing corn and oats.

Hon. A. H. Sevier.—The New Orleans Courier, of the 7th ult., contains a correspondence between Mr. Sevier and the Governor of Louisiana, J. T. Preston Charles Gayarre, and other gentlemen belonging to the Democratic party. They requested Mr. Sevier to afford the citizens of N. O. an opportunity to express to him, personally, their high opinion of his public services and private worth. Mr. Sevier declines the honor on account of his public duties, being under instruction to proceed to Washington as rapidly as the state of his health will permit.

Fires from Squibs.—The celebration of the 4th in New York, this year, was characterized by none of the usual fires, the authorities having prohibited the manufacture or vending of that species of fire works, termed "chasers." Not so however, with Philadelphia. The use of these glorious Squibs having been transferred to that city, several dwelling-houses and other buildings were set on fire, but extinguished without much damage.

Interesting death of a Clergyman.

The Rev. Thomas Davis, of Bairsville, Pa., died on the 28th of May last, in the 77th year of his age. He was much afflicted with a distressing disease of the heart, yet on the Sabbath which was the day of communion, rode on horseback a distance of more than two miles to church, preached with vigor nearly an hour and administered one table with great solemnity. Feeling more unwell than usual, he left to return home. The day was warm, and he suffered much with the heat. When within about a mile of his house, he sank from his horse and died instantly, thus exchanging the table of the Lord on earth for the Marriage feast of the Lamb on high. —N. Y. Observer.

Soldiers' Return.

The Ohio volunteers have arrived at Cincinnati, where they will be mustered out of service, and in a few days return to their homes.

Most of the returning regiments of the States, present a beggarly appearance in numbers.—Death has done its work among them. It is said that not over half of the Michigan regiment has returned, and those who were fortunate enough to get back were in a most pitiable condition.

On Thursday evening last some two hundred volunteers of the Massachusetts Regiment, passed through this place on their way home by the lakes.—Urbana Gazette.

Judge McLean.—This eminent Jurist and Statesman passed through town on Thursday evening last; on his way home from Michigan, where he has been holding court for some weeks past. During the few hours he remained in town many of our citizens had an opportunity of paying their respects to him.—Urbana Gazette.

Hail Storm.

Our town was visited on Saturday, last by one of the severest and most destructive hail storms we have ever witnessed. It occurred at about 6 o'clock in the evening. The hail fell during the space of a few minutes, sufficient to cover the ground, presenting the appearance of a slight snow storm. The hail stones were unusually large, some having been picked up nearly as large as a hen's egg. The wind blew a smart gale at the time, causing many of our citizens to fear a recurrence of the memorable storm of 1830. Window glass on the South side of the streets, were almost entirely destroyed; and the awnings shared the same fate. Some of our gardens are entirely destroyed, and others severely injured. The young corn in the fields was very seriously injured, being blown down to the ground in many places, and tattered with the pelting hail storm. One thousand dollars would probably not repair the damage sustained by our citizens in glass alone.—Urbana Gazette.

From the Episcopal Recorder.

"Watchman, What of the Night!"

MADAGASCAR.

About one hundred and twenty miles east of the African Continent, is the Island of Madagascar, some nine hundred miles in length, and about three hundred wide. It contains a population of four millions of souls. Thirty years ago a mission was established within its borders, which gave every promise of abundant success. Schools were established, where thousands of children were instructed,—places of worship erected, where the gospel was preached, and a printing press sent forth in vast numbers, entire copies of the New Testament, and a large portion of the Old. Some time ago, the Queen of this Island became bitterly hostile to the teachers of Christianity, under whose training the people were rapidly rising in intelligence, sobriety, industry, and peaceful habits. The missionaries had to escape for their lives, and such was the fury of the adversary, that the soil was stained with the blood of martyrs. The precious seed of gospel truth had taken root in many hearts; and the retired glen, the solitary cave, the remote mountain gorge became the hallowed spots where prayer was made, and God was worshipped.—The noble testimony borne to the Savior amidst the torture of persecution and the agonies of martyrdom by faithful women in that distant field, do honor to their principles, their courage and their integrity. For the last two years, thousands of prayers have ascended to the throne of heavenly grace in their behalf, and it is gratifying to know that they have not been offered in vain. The morning star is rising upon the dark and dreary night, giving promise of the commencement of a bright and glorious day. Some of these converts went to England, where the simplicity of their Christian character, their devotion to the cause of the Savior, and their yearnings for the conversion of their countrymen, won for them the affectionate regard of all who knew them. The Rev. George Smith, speaking of one of them, says—"I once asked Joseph—'Do you think God will ever hear prayer on behalf of Madagascar, to open a way for the preaching of the gospel there?' It was not a likely thing at that time. He hesitated, he deliberated; he then took his New Testament out of his pocket, and turning to it, he read—for they were mighty in the Scriptures—he read to me that striking passage out of Luke, 'And shall not God avenge his own elect, who cry day and night to him, though he bear long with them.' 'I tell you,' his eye brightened up, 'I tell you he will avenge them speedily.' "

Such was the utterance of faith; and now, according to accounts recently received, the clouds are beginning to scatter. The Spirit of God is moving upon the hearts of the people. The only son of the Queen, and her successor to the throne, has embraced the faith of the despised Nazerene, and given unquestionable proof of his being a faithful brother to the persecuted flock of Christ. In defiance of the laws, which pronounce slavery and death upon the Christians, the youthful convert assembled with them for worship, in their places of retreat; and when their lives and liberties were threatened, he employed all the means in his power to warn them of impending danger, and effect their rescue.

How wonderful in working is the Lord of Hosts! Who can tell, but, that like the persecuting Saul of Tarsus, this ungodly Queen may be led to bend in penitence at the foot of the Cross, while her son, who has just attained to manhood, shall point her to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world. Christian reader, whoever you are, remember in your prayers your suffering brethren in Madagascar.

Money, Business, Banks, &c.

The new government loan of $16,000,000 has been effected without the least difficulty at an average premium of more than 3 per cent. Indeed, there were bids for double the amount at par and above. This would seem to indicate an abundance of capital somewhere. It is stated on the "best authority," that $4,000.000 of this loan was taken for foreign account, and that a still larger amount is going abroad under an arrangement for advances. None of the new loan, it is confidently asserted, will be needed before July, and but a small amount then, and no further loan will then be needed during the present administration.

This, together with the restoration of peace to our borders, must certainly be favorable to the business and commercial prospects of the country; although at present, business generally is dull. It is a dull season of the year; business men are absent from the city, or preparing to go. We cannot, therefore, expect much change before fall. The only unpropitious feature now seems to be the constant exportation of specie, thus curtailing the means of the banks; but it is thought even this will be stopped by the operations connected with the new government loan.—Van Court's Counterfeit Detector.

Bank Note Altered.—We we were shown a two dollar note on the State Bank of Ohio, altered to a ten, and so well executed that it would pass almost any where without detection. It should be observed that all the notes of the State Bank have a human figure on the vignette for each dollar the bill calls for. This is a certain detection.—O. States.

A gang of counterfeiters have been recently arrested in Cincinnati, having in their possession a large number of counterfeits on the following banks and denominations: $50, Farmers' Bank of Virginia; $10, Lafayette Bank of Cincinnati; $3, Bank of Norwalk, O.; $3, Bank of Sandusky, Ohio.

ARREST.

It may be recollected by some of our readers that in 1837 Salathiel Carter, of Mt. Sterling, in this county, was killed by Daniel L. Kemp, who made his escape before he could be arrested.—Subsequently his family disappeared also, and all trace of them was lost until a short time since, when Kemp having located as a tavern keeper in the village of Ravenswood, in Jackson county, Va., on the Ohio River, about 40 miles below Marietta, he issued cards to give notoriety to his establishment, one of which fell into the hands of a nephew of Mrs. Carter, and inquiry being excited, the identity of the advertiser with the absconding man was fully established. Authority from the governor of Virginia having been obtained, our indefatigable ex-sheriff, John Dillon, took with him one assistant on last Wednesday, and proceeded to Ravenswood, where he arrest-Kemp, and on Saturday night he was safely lodged in the Zanesville jail. Though greatly shocked at being arrested, he offered no resistance, and was safely brought on without being confined. He will probably be tried this fall. He claims that the deed was done in self defence.—Zanes. Gaz.

The citizens of Maysville, Ky., have, by a majority of two, decided in favor of granting licenses to retail liquors.

Peace Proclamation.

President Polk has issued his proclamation announcing that Peace has been concluded between the U. States and Mexico, as follows:

By the President of the U. States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a treaty of peace, friendship, limits and settlement between the United States of America and the Mexican republic, was concluded & signed at the Guadalupe Hidalgo, on the second day of February, one thousand eight hundred & forty-eight, which treaty, as amended by the Senate of the U. States, and being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

[Here follows the treaty, of which we published an extended synopsis in our last.]

And whereas the said treaty, as amended, has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications of the same were exchanged at Queretaro, on the thirtieth day of May last, by Ambrose H. Sevier, and Nathan Clifford, Commissioners on the part of the Government of the United States, and Senor Luis de la Rosa, Minister of Relations of the Mexican Republic, on the part of that Government:

Now, therefore, be it known, that I, James K. Polk, President of the United States of America, have caused the same treaty to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington, this 4th day of July, one thousand eight hundred and [L. S.] forty-eight, and of the independence of the United States the seventy-third.

JAMES K. POLK.

By the President;
James Buchanan, Secretary of State.

New Telegraph Line.

We conversed with E. Case, Esq., yesterday, who has charge of this section of Morse's new line of Telegraph from Baltimore to New Orlearns, via Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Maysville, Paris, Lexington—thence through Tennessee & Alabama, to New Orleans. From this direct line, side lines to Cincinnati from Maysville, and to Louisville through Frankfort will be erected.—The posts are already strewed along Third street up to Worthington's building, near the Postoffice, where the depot will probably be held. We learn from Mr. Case that he will have a line of posts up from here to Maricua in the course of a week. The line will cross over to Wheeling on two masts erected for that purpose. The posts in this city are very neat, straight pine, and will be durable. What effect this new line will have on the rates it is not easy to tell, but hopes are entertained that it will reduce them. This procedure would operate like low postage, provided there were quicker Telegraph machines put in use.—Cin Com.

Virginia Crops.—The Fairfax (Va.) News, of the 1st instant, says: The harvest is over in this region, and the quality of the grain is excellent and the quantity more than an average crop.—The corn looked very well, but the oats had suffered from the drought.

From the New York Evening Post.

The Anglo Saxon.

It is a fact well worthy of notice, that "The Anglo Saxon," the Phonotypic newspaper published in this city by Andrews & Boyle, has attained the extraordinary circulation of six thousand, weekly in a little more than one year since its establishment. This is certainly one of the boldest attempts at innovation on a large scale that we have ever known, and is so far one of the most successful. Phonography and phonotypy together constitue what is known as "the Language Reform," or "the Writing and Spelling Reformation." We have heretofore spoken approvingly of the principle which lies at the bottom of this movement; but, apart from its merits, the fact that a family newspaper in the English language, printed in an entirely new system of spelling words, with an alphabet of forty-two letters, instead of the twenty-six old stagers which have served our forefathers, is liberally sustained, and that its circulation is rapidly increasing, is indisputably one of the most striking and singular phenomena of the nineteenth century. The sheet itself is one of the "curiosities of literature." To the uninformed eye, it may seem the absurdest thing imaginable; but the reputation of its conductors for scholarship, the fact that their labors are not only approved and sanctioned, but warmly advocated, by some of the most learned societies and individuals in the country, and by many of those most interested in education, together with the success which accompanies the undertaking, should at least render those who have not thoroughly studied its principles and understood its advantages somewhat modest in condemning it.

Phonography, a kind of rapid and scientific short-hand, is rapidly coming into use for verbatim reporting, and even for letter-writing. It is undoubtedly the most perfect system of writing ever invented. The most obvious and immediate use of Phonotypy, is its influence in correcting false habits of punctuation. A years reading of "the Anglo Saxon," for this purpose only, must be worth far more, as a means of family education, than its subscription-price of two dollars, and even more than years of systematic study devoted to Pronouncing Dictionaries. Children read the paper at once, prompted by mere curiosity at its novelty; and incidentally they learn the true pronounciation of every word in the language, Phonotypy being an exact representation of speech. We wish the enterprising editors and conductors of "the Anglo Saxon" even more triumphant success in future.

Hurricane.—A most destructive hurricane passed over Orange county, Ind., a few days since, which swept almost every thing before it. The current was from one to two miles wide.—A number of houses were blown down. A great deal of stock was destroyed, orchards uprooted, forests levelled, and the injury to the growing crops was immense. The tornado piled ruins on ruins across the country, involving almost every thing in destruction. Fortunately no lives were lost, and but one man seriously injured.—Balt. Sun.

A Clergyman Killed.—A lamentable accident, resulting in the death of a worthy minister of the Methodist persuasion, lately occurred near the Roxbury mill, in Howard District, Md., according to a letter in the Patriot. Rev. Mr. Linthicum, aged 88, had his neck dislocated and his skull fractured by being precipitated from his buggy. He was then dragged by the horse with the forewheels, the coupling pin having broken. His aged wife was the first to reach the spot, but he had ceased to breathe. The first husband of the bereaved widow was killed near the same spot by being thrown from a horse.—Baltimore Sun.

Destructive Freshet in Columbia County, Pa.—The Columbia Democrat says—The rains of the 2d and 3d insts. swelled the Big Fishing-Creek to an almost unprecedented height. The The flood swept away Mr. Isaiah Cole's Mills, situate on the head waters, and destroyed several county bridges over the stream, causing a loss of some five thousand dollars to Columbia Co., to say nothing of the damage sustained by individuals in the loss of private property, which is immense and very general along the stream.—The piers of the acqueduct over Fishing-Creek, below Bloomsburg, were also washed under, so far as to cause the sinking of the two spans of the acqueduct. This circumstance caused the suspension of canal navigation a few days. It was prepared on Thursday, the water again let in, and navigation resumed.

Notices.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE "CHRISTIAN WORLD."

Br. Bassett—Please favor me with room for the following notice in your "Business Department."

When I removed to Cincinnati, I was undecided in relation to the publication of the 'Weekly Christian World.' During the latter part of the winter and the beginning of spring, I was so long confined by sickness that I could do nothing efficiently in business matters. Since my recovery, I have been kept in suspense by the consideration of several plans—some, suggested by others, some, my own. Among the former, is one for the establishment of a Christian Journal, free from sectarianism, and corresponding, to a great extent, with what I designed the C. W. to be. Gentlemen of influence, in various denominations, have this subject in contemplation; and I have been spoken to, in view of a partial editorial connexion with it. Among my own plans, the chief one is this: the publication of a series of neat and uniform volumes, written by myself, and some of them containing a few pictorial illustrations: for instance—1. A volume of Poems, in chief part such as have not been published, but with a selection, also, of the best of those which have been: 2. A Volume of Addresses, on Various Occasions: 3. A Volume of Lectures: 4. A Volume of Sermons: &c. As soon as I get the arrangements settled, they will be duly announced. Meantime, if any of the brethren who have paid me in advance for the "Christian World"' shall, after seeing this notice, desire the return of their money, all they have to do, is, to send for it and it will be at once mailed for them. Such as please to wait, may be sure, as a matter of course, that their money is safe, and that they will either receive it again, or its worth in some of the ways referred to.

I have received a few enquiries on the subject, and therefore request the favor of this insertion.

Very respectfully, Yours,
T. H. STOCKTON.

Cincinnati, July 7, 1848.

Pisgah Ct., Musk. Dist.—The fourth qr. meeting will be held at the Ebenezer meeting-house, 6 miles from McConnellsville, on the road to Marietta, to commence at 11 o'clock, on the second Saturday of Aug. next.—The President is expected to be in attendance, also, Br. H. T. Lawson; Br. Bassett also has been invited to attend, and it is much desired that he may find it convenient to accept and comply; Brother H. Gray is also invited, with any others who may be disposed to favor us with their presence and assistance.

July 14. O. V. WARREN.

Ohio Dist.—Br. J. M. Yeung requests that I should state to you that owing to a camp meeting of the United Brethren on the 19th of August, near Gilboa, where his appointment is wanted, he wishes you to change the order of his appointments so that they will stand as follows. Kalida Ct. Aug. 12, and Mt. Blanchard, Aug. 19, and the rest to remain unchanged. G. W. THORNBURG.

[Br. Young will excuse us that through oversight, this correction was not made last week.—Ed.]

White River Ct.—Indiana Dist.—I beg leave to say through the medium of your paper, to Br. Shipp, the President of Indiana District, that our fourth quarterly meeting will be held on the first Saturday and Sabbath in September next, at the camp ground near Br. Silas Mier's, two miles south of Freedom, to which we invite Brs. T. Shipp, H. Collings, P. Clingler, J. D. Medearis, H. Brinton, and all other brethren who can attend; as we wish to protract the meeting, we hope the brethren will not fail to come & help us. I would also inform Br. Shipp that the apportionment due him from this circuit will be met at that time. JAIRUS GARDNER.

White River Ct., July 6, 1848.

Clarksville Ct., Ohio Dist.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON.

Lima Ct., Ohio Dist.—Br. Bassett: By your permission, I would publish through the Reborder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on the Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it will be on the road to Conference. Come, brethren, and help us. J. L. BORTON.

Newark Circuit, Musk. District.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Irville, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in August next. Any ministering brethren who can do so, are requested to attend and assist us on the occasion. W. H. MARSHALL.

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August next. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected, and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local; together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst., to prepare the ground. E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt.

Kalida Ct., Ohio Dist.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton, of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Borton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

Columbia Ct., Musk. Dist.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

Coshocton Ct., Musk. Dist.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

Bellvue Ct., Musk. District.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend. A. S. ROBISON.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Cayuga Circuit, July 22d and 23d.
Wayne Circuit, July 29th and 30th.
Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15th, 1848.

Coluumbia	" 1st	"	August "
Woodsfield	" 3d	"	" "

Would be glad to receive due notice of the point at which my meeting will be held on each of the above named circuits.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

OHIO CONFERENCE.

Br. Bassett: Please to publish the following plan of appointments:

Maumee, July 30th.
Portage,	August 5th.
Mt. Blanchard,	" 19th.
Kalida,	" 12th.
Lima,	" 26th.
Lebanon, September 2d.		J. M. YOUNG.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

Steubenville, Ohio, March 2d, 1848.

Br Bassett:—You will oblige me by publishing the following appointments, which I will fill, Providence permitting.

Valley mission	23d	"	"
Huntersville, ct.	30th	"	"
Greenbrier,	" 6th	August	"
Braxton,	" 13th	"	"
Conference,	" 22d	"	"

Early notice of the plan of my visit in each circuit, be given by letter, or in the Western Recorder.

Any camp-meeting arrangements, desired by the brethren, will be published by them, in the Recorder. The Aid Society to be advocated by the subscriber, in all places.

GEO. BROWN.

Portsmouth Ct., Musk. Dist.—Brother Clancy is hereby informed that his visit to this ct. will be expected at Brown's Meeting-house, 15 miles from Jackson, near the Portsmouth road.

W. W. TIPTON.

Business Department.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

T Foster,	O.	C N Allen,	O.
D C Carson,	"	P. M., Jeffersonville,	"
E Stibbens,	"	C J Sears,	"
T H Stockton,	"	C Craig,	Pa.
W W Tipton,	"	J Gay,	Ia.
J L Borton,	"	J Gardner,	"
J F Bane,	"	W M'Gee,	Va.
E A Brindley,	"	I Holland, 3 subs.,	"
W Tipton, 1 sub.,	"	D H Miller,	Mich.
Geo. Brown, 1 sub.,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	cts.
E Stibbens,	A Neptune,	10	26	2 00
W W Tipton,	Miss N Sill,	9	52	2 00
C Craig,	J M'Clintoch,	9	52	2 00
Geo. Brown,	J K Coxen,	9	41	2 00
"	E M'Michael,	9	52	2 00
"	S Weaver,	10	41	2 00
"	J Pierce,	9	52	2 00
E S Hoagland,	Miss C Bancraft,	10	38	2 00
W M'Gee,		10	13	1 00

New Subscribers; last week, 1. Discontinuaces, 1.
" This week, 6. " 2.

The Post Master at Jefferson, O., notifies us that R. Thompson does not take his paper from the office. That subscriber owes us for about one volume and a half. Will our agent in that vicinity, please collect our dues for us?

Br. E. Stibbens, we are agreed.

OUR LIST.

Shortly after the commencement of our present volume, we addressed an appeal to our friends, and especially our agents, in behalf of the Western Recorder. We showed how easily one thousand new subscribers might be added to our list within a short time. Our paper is sent to more than one hundred and fifty travelling ministers, of several Conferences, most of whom have their copy free, for their agency. We remarked that if each of those brethren would obtain for us from five to ten new subscribers, or an average of seven subscribers each, the matter would be at once accomplished. A number of brethren have responded nobly, others have begun well, and will we trust succeed still better, others have not yet reported to us. The Publisher of the Methodist Protestant has also proposed to raise one thousand new subscribers, for that paper, by enlisting two hundred agents to obtain as many as five each. In his last paper he givos the names of twelve brethren, who have thus far complied. We have concluded to give also our list of those who have obtained five or more new subscribers for the Western Recorder since the commencement of present volume.—We are under obligations to numerous others who have thus far procured us, from one to four subscribors, and we are daily expecting to receive further intelligence from them, of encournging character.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta, Bainbridge, O.,	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinuati, O.,	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.,	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves. Pittsburgh, Pa.	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer. Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements.

List of Letters remaining in the Post Office at Putnam, Muskingum County, Ohio, July 1, 1848.

B
Burnett, Miss Ann 3
C
Culbertson, Miss Eliza Jane
Cowen, Robert
Cable, Rev. J.
D
Dawsen, N. B.
Dunn, Charles
E
Ellis, Miss Amanda
Evans, Robert
F
Fairman, Mrs Jane
G
Grant, Sarah
Giffin, Mary Ann
Gafney, Milton
H
Hart, William
Harper, John 2
Hudson, Elijah
Haiff, Austin
Helmick, George
Humphrey, Miss Caroline S.
Hesler, Miss Ann
Highfield, Esq., Inn Keeper
J
Jackson, George William
Jenkins, Mr G
Jordan, Miss Mary S
Jackson, Mr Andrew
Joslin, Abraham
K
Kruger, Roselia
L
Lewis, William
M
Mosely, Miss Bethe
Mechling, J J
Morris, John
Miller, Sarah
Milliana John
Mooney, Miss Mary
N
Nesbaum, Mrs Catharine
P
Putnam, John 2
Puff, Jacob
Price, William
Palmer Samuel
R
Rebarge, Benjamin
Riley, J W
Rees, Arthilla J Ann
Richards, Jacob
Ripley, William
S
Stainbrook, Phebe Ann
Stainbrook, Nancy
Sniff John
Stainbrook, Joseph
Smith, Ezra
Swingl, Maria B
Smith, Miss Fanny
Springer, Miss Ellen
Sweny, Cornelius
Sloan, Mr G
T
Tobin, Mr William
W
Wilson, Rev John
White, Samuel
Wickham, Salathiel
Welsh, J W
Watson, Miss Emily
Weaver, Mrs Jacob

JER. ELDER, P. M.

Administrator's Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of Muskingum County, Administrator of the estate of George Torbert, deceased, late of Newton Township—All persons indebted to said estate, are requested to make settlement immediately. Likewise, all persons having claims against said estate, are notified to present them, legally authenticated. SAMUEL WOOD.

June 17, 1848.

SACRED MELODEON

A SELECTION OF

REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.

BY REV. J. DALBY, Jr., & J. B. FEAT.

REVISED & ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public, as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while an addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publisher has received of the "Sacred Melodeon," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalbey, Jr. and Rev. J. B. Feat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist P. Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. * * * * The work is neatly executed, with fair type & paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hymns, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS:

Per copy, : : : : : : : : : : : : : : : : 75
Per dozen, : : : : : : : : : : : : : : : : 7 50
Fifty copies or more, per hundred, : : : : : 18
 The above work can be obtained of Rev. A. M. Bassett, Putnam; Geo. Conclin, Cincinnati; or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern Baltimore,

A New Supply of

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH.

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

Also a few copies of

SNETHEN'S SERMONS,

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the Office of the Western Recorder.

THOUGHTS OF AN ITINERANT;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. Levi R. Reese.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this Office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

To the Creditors of the estate of ALEXANDRIA McCRACKEN, Junior, Deceased. The subscribers have been appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of Muskingum County, Commissioners on the estate of Alexandria McCracken, Jr. Deceased, represented insolvent. The creditors of said estate will bring in and prove their claims against said estate. Claims which have been presented to the administrator will also be passed upon.

The subscribers will attend to the duties of their said appointment at the Post Office in Gratiot, on Monday & Tuesday the 26th and 27th of June, 1848, between the hours of 9 o'clock A. M. and 4 P. M. of each day.

WILLIAMS SIMS, Commmis-
PETER S. WESTBROOK, sioners.

May 18th, 1848.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

Fourth Volume of the American Pulpit.

The American Pulpit is a Monthly Magazine, published in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. It contains thirty-two pages in each number, and will be well supplied with that kind of Literature which is adapted to Ministers and Theological Students, such as Sermons, Sketches, Essays, Biographies, &c. &c.

The leading Sermon, will be of the highest order; and all the Sermons, we intend, shall bear the stamp of superiority. They will be sought, and obtained, as far as it is possible, from the most eminent Divines, on the American Continent. Arrangements are already made to accomplish this end; and no reasonable pains or expense will be spared, to make this department of the Pulpit superior to anything of the kind in existence.

The Sketches will be of the first class. We have accepted the proposals of an eminent minister in England to supply this department, partially—the Rev J Burns, D D, of London, author of "Pulpit Cyclopedia;" &c &c. By securing the correspondence of Dr Burns, the patrons of the Pulpit will enjoy a fine opportunity of comparing British and American talent in the same pages.

In the Miscellaneous Department will be found, Essays, Biographical Sketches, Poetry, and such et ceteras as shall enhance the value of the work.

The Pulpit is edited by

REV J D BRIDGE,

who will spare no pains to render it not only a welcome visiter to the Minister's study, but a 'profitable' one.—The work is evangelical in its character, and will avoid all controversy, except with sin and the popular errors of the day.

Its patrons, hitherto, have been gathered from all of the orthodox denominations in the country, all of whom the Publisher hopes to return. And we wish it distinctly understood, that Ministers in all the evangelical denominations are invited to become contributors to the pages of he Pulpit. We solicit from them, Sermons, Sketches of Sermons, or Criticisms, on any subject within the compass of Homiletics; and, that no one may feel embarrased in his desire to accept this invitation, we shall dispense wish the "List of Contributors" which has formerly appeared on our cover. We do this not out of any disrespect to any of the worthy names in that List, but that others may not be deterred from contributing, because not numbered in the distinguished catalogue.

By far the largest amount of matter contained in the Pulpit will be 'original;' but it will also be enriched by choice 'selections' from Books and periodicals.

Terms--One Dollar Per Annum, in Advance.

The Pulpit will be mailed regularly during the latter part of the month preceding that of its publication, so that it may reach its destination, in ordinary cases, by the first of each month.

We solicit Agents for the work. We will allow them a reasonable and just compensation for their services, and we authorize all the ministers of every evangelical denomination, and all laymen who love our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and who desire the extension of his kingdom on earth, to co-operate with us in extenhing the circulation of this work.

All orders for the work and all remittances for the same should be addressed to

SAMUEL CHISM, Publisher,
Worcester, Mass., U. S.

DR. PEASE'S

VEGETABLE RENOVATING PILLS.

These Pills are composed of the best Medicinal plants in the country, and are so compounded as to possess the most valuable Cathartic, Sudorific, Expectorant, and Tonic Properties, acting in perfect harmony with Nature's Laws, in expelling from the system all morbific matter, wherever found.—Being well adapted to the constitution, they cleanse the Stomach and Bowels, equalise the circulation, restore the perspiratory action of the skin, excite a healthy action of the Liver. In short, they correct and regulate all the secretions, thereby restoring the true Physiological action of the whole animal economy.

Could the numerous flattering testimonials of the great success and perfect safety of this Medicine be here submitted for inspection, they would satisfy the incredulous and dispel the doubts of even the most skeptical. These Pills are not injured by age or climate.

For sale at the store of W. Munch & Co.
tn,usOuP: March 30, 1848.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford Collectep from his private papers, and printed works; and written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

With the

POET'S CORNER.

From the Presbyterian of the West.

AN ASPIRATION.

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

I ask not length of days:—
Life's joys grow dim, and all delights are fleeting,
And friendships fade like mist-wreaths from the shore;
The pilgrim old—his heart in anguish beating—
Weeps o'er his broken staff, the loved ones gone before

I ask not wealth of Ind:
The red gold shines, but gives the heart no pleasure;
And jewels flash, yet vain their mocking glow,
If innocence, the souls best, secret treasure,
Yield to unhallowed fires, its pure and unsunned snow.

I ask not Beauty's dower:
Though starlit eyes with glances bright and tender,
Thrill the fond heart with passionate delight;
Though all the world should praise, should homage render
To cheeks of changeful hue, and tresses like the night.

I ask no wreath of Fame;
Amid its flowers a serpent-sting is darting;
A subtle venom dwells among the leaves,
Converting friends to foes, to each imparting
That gall and bitterness, o'r which the spirit grieves.

I ask for more than these:—
For more than wealth, for more than beauty's brightness,
Though one hath might, the other wondrous power:
Long weary years, will dull the young heart's lightness;
And even dazzling fame, hath but its meted hour.

Grant this my only prayer;—
Thou Holy one, invisible, yet shining
In all Thy works, by mountain, wood and sea,
From morn to noon, from noon to eve's declining:—
Make me but pure in heart, that I may look on Thee!

R. S. NICHOLS.

Pleasant Hill, June 21st.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A CARD,

Declining at present to engage in the discussion of the Restrictive Rule.

At our last Annual Conference, it is well known in this District, that I took a prominent part in the defence of the Rule against the attack of several junior preachers; and my silence upon the subject during this paper conflict has been a matter of surprise to some, and misinterpretation by others. At length my name has been editorially announced as an expectant to enter the list in this controversy; but under existing circumstances, I beg leave to decline the discussion at this time.

But lest a wrong reason should be rendered by others for the withdrawal of my name as a belligerant in this wordy war, it is due the cause I advocate, as well as myself to state that so far from the arguments advanced by brethren in the opposition producing conviction in my mind that the Rule is wrong, I am the better prepared for its defence. For instance, I have read, and re-read the essays of Prudentia, and deem it no difficult task to demonstrate the fact, that his argumentation generally from his introduction to his illustration, bears as hard or harder against the Itinerancy itself, as against the Restrictive Rule. And I have a series of Nos. in a state of preparation for the defence of this Constitutional restriction, and have been long waiting for a suitable opportunity to commence their publication. But my conviction now is that the people generally are heartily tired of the controversy, and desire a speedy termination of it, even should the young men who commenced it, close it also.

Should the debate be renewed another year, if spared, I hold myself in readiness to defend this part of our admirable constitution. But confessedly, I should desire some restrictive rules regulating the order of debate. When I am the respondent, and am replying to pieces which have been presented before me, I do not deem it fair to be assaulted by others in the rear in the same paper.* And above all, does it appear dishonorable, unjust, and cowardly, when a writer is discussing a question with an opponent over his own proper name, for others to assail him especially with personal allusions, under the guise of fictitious signatures. No course, to me, is more unmanly, and unbecoming the Christian character.

In view of all the circumstances, therefore, connected with this verbal conflict, at this stage of the strife, I hereby take back the mitten, which will be readily thrown down, whenever my defence of this vital part of the constitution is deemed necessary. Accordingly, I now publicly authorise the Editor to withhold the publication of those Nos. on the subject, already in his possession. Finally, would that brethren engaged in what many old and tried friends of the Church, consider not only unprofitable, but pernicious controversy, would cease from the strife of words, and write for the Recorder something calculated to advance the good cause among us, and make all our hearts better.

WILLIAM REEVES.

Pittsburgh, July 7th, 1848.

*We cannot recollect that any such circumstance ever occurred in your correspondence with our Journal. It has ever been our pleasure to treat both you and your communications with proper respect and attention. A friend has just reminded us that in our paper of May 18, a writer on the other side was treated in the manner objected to. We have not learned however that he is at all dissatisfied with us therefor, and have reason to believe he is not. We trust that that writer, & any others in such case, will receive our assurance that no "unfairness" is designed, in the accidental juxtaposition of articles, in making up our paper. Brother R. please come and edit this paper a few weeks, won't you? Most heartily, we will yield you our chair. [ED.

Written for the Western Recorder.

The Opponents of the Restrictive Rule.

MR. EDITOR: The columns of the Recorder have been crowded, for several months, with the productions of some three or four young preachers, who have never been regarded as more remarkable for talents, industry, zeal or eloquence, than some others. They certainly have injured themselves, if they have not the church, to which they doubtless profess, if they do not feel, strong attachment. It would really seem as if they had resolved to make up in quantity what their long and labored communications lacked in quality. If "Prudentia" had devoted the precious time that he has wasted in preparing long-winded articles for the Recorder,—if the expression is admissable—to secret devotion, to a due preparation for the exercises of the pulpit, and to pastoral visits to the sick and dying, he would be a much happier and holier man to-day, than I believe him to be. This remark will apply with almost equal force to the persons associated with him, in the unworthy attempt to break down the Restrictive Rule, or so modify it as to render it inefficient, and comparatively worthless. It is, however, some consolation to know, that their combined efforts, against the main pillar of the Itinerancy have thus far proved abortive. There is not one in a hundred of the laity, it may be safely affirmed, that regards their conduct, in the premises, with feelings other than those of disapprobation and disgust. If the real sentiments of all the laymen, within the bounds of the Pittsburgh Conference, were accurately ascertained, it is extremely doubtful whether ten could be found, disposed to endorse the views of the infatuated brethren, who seek to abolish the Restrictive Rule.

Let me say, Mr. Editor, in all kindness and good feeling, that if you desire to promote the usefulness, and extend the circulation of your paper, you must exclude from its columns, the crude essays of these would-be Reformers.—The readers of the Recorder will no longer bear this absurd discussion, with which they have been dosed, almost to death. Its continuance will be productive of immense evil, and can do no possible good. Of this you must yourself, be thoroughly aware. Your chief object, I doubt not, is the advancement of the spiritual interests of our Zion, which may in time, by the course now pursued, be made to bleed at every pore. You must be firm and decided, and suffer no consideration to induce you to swerve from the straight line of duty. Though it may, and no doubt will be, extremely unpleasant to you to disoblige your friends, nevertheless you should do it, in the present instance, were it as painful as the cutting off of a right hand, or plucking out of a right eye. Were you less devoted to the general interests of religion, and the spread of virtuous principles, I would not dare to address you with so much plainness of speech. In this way I give you the strongest evidence I can furnish, of my confidence in your wisdom and worth.

I would observe, in conclusion, that I do not entertain an unkind feeling towards the brethren, who unhappily commenced the assault on the government of the church, to which they, as well as myself, have the honor to belong. If I have said any thing apparently harsh, I trust they will forgive me, as they hope to be forgiven. To the communion of my choice, I feel a strong attachment, which may, perhaps, have hurried me beyond the bounds of moderation. My heart's desire and prayer to God is, that after our probationary state on earth shall have terminated, we may be accounted worthy to join the assembly of the saints in Heaven.

A LAYMAN.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REPLY TO THE REV. W. M'GWIGAN, ON SLAVERY.

NO. II.

In my last No. I promised in my next to present some of the reasons why I believe Slavery to be of the Devil. We admit most fully, man to be a moral agent, but also believe he is either with God in his operations or acts, and under Divine influence, which excites him to all that is essentially good; or that he is under the dominion of the Prince, and power of the air—by him influenced to a course of rebellion against God and against the well being of his fellow man. We are not particular to establish the doctrine that the Devil excites man to each & to all the sinful acts he commits, but to the facts of his being the great agent or Prince, leading on the Human family to sin, and opposition to God. The works of the Devil evidently embrace all that is sinful. In the Bible he is called the Prince of Darkness, Prince of this world—the God of this world—a spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience—the Prince, and Power of the air—the Destroyer.— He is said to be seeking whom he may devour, and is said to be a liar and the father of lies, and sinners are said to be children of the Devil. Now if we can show slavery to be in opposition to the character, example, works, laws and requirements of God, and in good keeping with the character, example, works, spirit and operations of the Devil, we shall no doubt have proved slavery to be of the Devil. The Slavery of which we speak, is that which exists in these U.S., which the Rev. J. Wesley said was "the vilest, that ever saw the sun"—it is the institution which makes merchandize of God's image, converts persons into things, robs a person of himself, soul, and body, of his wife, and children, sweat, and blood, toil, and time, will, and wishes, and makes them all over, to another individual of the same flesh, and blood—created by the same Divine hand. Not because the former have been any more sinful, but merely because the latter had the means, and opportunity of this reduction of the others. And all this for filthy lucre's sake.

1. That Slavery cannot be of God, may be argued in the first place from the Nature, and character of God. He is absolutely pure & holy, in the possession of every virtue, and excellence, in an infinite, or unbounded degree.—Consequently God cannot do an unholy act, nor in any way establish a system or lend it his sanction, which inflicts upon innocent beings innumerable wrongs, and ills. That Slavery is wrong from bottom to top, beginning, and end, we shall in the course of this discussion aim to prove. And if Slavery is wrong, and God cannot do wrong, then Slavery cannot be of God. That God can punish the guilty by depriving them of their liberty, without doing wrong, all will admit, providing the punishment be no more than what justice demands. And when individuals or nations have been guilty of great crimes, & refused to correct their wrongs, and forsake them, He evidently has upon the grounds of pure justice, deprived them of liberty, and put them in bondage. But God could not, without being partial, and unjust, bring the innocent or inoffensive into a state of wretchedness, for no other purpose but to add to the wealth of another of his creatures, of no more moral worth than those innocent beings.

2. The second reason for believing Slavery to be of the Devil, and not of God, we draw from the example of God. As we look throughout the Dominion of God, as far as we are able, by the light of Nature, and Revelation we see nothing in all his arrangements resembling Slavery. —But every example we can draw from the works, and providences of God stand as so many burning, living, and overwhelming proofs that Slavery, is at war with the will, and arrangements of Almighty God. When man became a Slave to sin, and Satan, God's heart moved with compassion towards man, and He devised a plan to rescue, and save him from Slavery. And when his people were slaves in Egypt. He wrought scores of miracles to effect their emancipation. And to deliver man, (and that when he was an enemy,) from the oppression of Satan he gave his Son to die, his Spirit, word, grace, &c., to effect his deliverance, and if possible effect, his final, and triumphant admittance into glory. This argument might be greatly strengthened by dwelling upon the particulars.

3. The third reason for this belief of mine, is founded in the works of the God of Heaven.—Here we have an infinite variety, and no where in the works of God, have we the least evidence that God, is a Slave holder or has in the least sanctioned the abominable practice of Slave holding. That God created man to enjoy freedom must be evident to all, unless the God of this world or of Slavery has blinded their eyes that they should not see. He has created man in his own image, and place in him an innate, and undying desire for freedom; and the testimony of men from Slave States shows that Slavery cannot destroy this anxiety for freedom. Mr. McDowell says, "Sir, you may place the Slave where you please, you may oppress him as you please—you may dry up to your uttermost, the fountains of his feelings, the springs of his thought and the idea that he was born to be free will survive it all." Mr. Preston, says, "My old friend from Halifax (Mr. Bruce) told us that the Virginia Slave was happy, and contented. Mr. Speaker, this is impossible; happiness is incompatible with Slavery. The love of liberty is the ruling passion of man." Mr. Campbell says, "The ever-abiding spark of liberty silently but surely exists, in the bosom of the most degraded, oppressed & humble Slave on earth." The above extracts are from speeches in the legislature of Va., in Jan. 1832 as reported in the Richmond Whig. If the Slaves are contented, and do not desire freedom, what mean advertisements like the following: "Runaway, a negro man named Squire—had on a chain locked with a house-lock around his neck"—see "Beacon," Greensborough Ala., August 23, 1838. "Runaway, a negro named David with some iron hobbles around each ancle." Spectator, Staunton, Va., Sept. 27, 1838. Mr. N. Edmund in the Petersburgh (Va.) Intelligencer, May 22, 1838. "Runaway, my negro man named Simon he has been shot badly in his back, and right arm." Mr. M. Jett in the National Intelligencer. "Runaway, negro man Ephraim, has a mark over one of his eyes occasioned by a blow." The N. C. Standard of July 18, 1838, has the following: "Twenty dollars reward, Runaway from the subscriber a negro woman, & two chileren; the woman is tall, and black, and a few days before she went off, I burnt her with a hot iron on the left side of her face; I tried to make the letter M., and she kept a cloth over her head and face, and a fly bonnet on her head so as to cover the burn; her children are both boys, the oldest, is in his seventh year, he is a mulatto, and has blue eyes. . . . Macajah Ricks, Nash County, July 7th, 1838. I wonder if Father Abraham, chained, hobbled, shot, marked with blows, or hot irons, his slaves, and then advertised them? Mark the above advertisements, &c., are from Slave holders, and not from "Abolition defamers."

4. My next reason for believing Slavery to be of the Devil, and not of God, is drawn from the Laws of God. In my second number to "A Virginian," published in the Recorder of Dec. 2, 1847, I showed that Slavery, came in contact, & violated every commandment in the decalogue, and I will only add at this time, a few more of God's requirements, which evidently reach this subject. Exodus, 23 chap., 9 verse, "Thou shalt not oppress a stranger" Lev. 19. 13, "Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbor, neither rob them," verse 33. "And if a stranger sojourn with thee in your land, ye shall not vex him." Deut. 15, 14. "Thou shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor, and needy whether he be of thy brethren or of the strangers, that are in thy land within thy gates." Isa. 58, 6. "Let the oppressed go free, and that ye break every yoke." Jer. 9, 1. "Thus saith the Lord execute judgment in the morning, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor.— Jer. 22, 3. Lev. 25, 10. "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

5. I offer as another reason for believing Slavery to be of the Devil, and not of God, that it is opposed to all the provisions, and arrangements of God. The Divine Being has given to every man the right of enjoying life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. And no where in his government over man has He instituted the force system of government. He gives them the right of choice. And he has not in earth or heaven a single servant who serves him on the principle of Slavery. God's servants are all freemen. And would God establish a government on opposite principles from his own, to be carried out by his saints, and one too, which would undermine, and subvert His own government, and spread wretchedness thereby, throughout a large class of his creatures? For fear I may extend this article to too great length, I will reserve the remaining reasons for my belief for another No. And will close this by a brief notice of a short Prayer of friend M'Gwigan's. He says, "But from both the Devil, and the ultra abolitionists we will continue to pray, good Lord deliver us." This Prayer, dear friend, can be answered if you will pursue the following directions. 1. If you will only give up your oppressive system of Slavery, in theory, and practice, all the sayings, and doings of the "ultra abolitionists" will have no particular effect upon you. You will feel as secure, and composed while their thunderbolts are hurled over at the oppressor of the poor Slave, as do the devoted, and faithful Abolitionists, when the advocates of Slavery pour out their accusations against them. It never disturbed a person much, if his conscience is with God, to hear false accusations brought against him. 2. To be "delivered from the Devil," it is necessary, Sir, to renounce, and forsake his works, and service, and as Slavery is one of his most destructive works, you must give up that too, and "remember them that are in bonds as bound with them." See Matt. 25, 31 to 46. We dare not promise you deliverance from both, or either unless you adopt a similar course to the above one.

Yours, &c., JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Ia., June 19th, 1848.

Miscellaneous.

From the Saturday Evening Post.

EXTRAVAGANCE.

There is hardly a more common error, especially among the wealthier classes of society, than that of justifying extravagance of living as a bounty to the poor. The man who yearly wastes thousands of dollars in gorgeous furniture, expensive clothing, magnificent buildings, &c., justifies himself to his own heart, on the plea that he is really, in doing these things, doing God service. Very probably, the longer he thinks about the matter, the more convinced does he become that his extravagance is not only justifiable, but very praiseworthy; and the inquiry which begun with fearful misgivings as to what answer he should render at the great day of account, to the command, "Steward, give an account of thy stewardship," ends in the conviction that instead of being selfish, he is one of the most charitable and deserving of men.

Now, it is our purpose to prove in a few words that the almost universal mode of reasoning on this subject, is unsound and fallacious; and that the prejudice against extravagance, which has come down to us from our forefathers, is not one founded upon mistaken notions of things.

We will take the case of a man who has a yearly income of three thousand dollars, and who can live comfortably on two thousand a year. He has then a thousand dollars over, which he can devote either to selfish or liberal purposes.—Suppose he spends the overplus of a 1,000 dollars yearly in buying more extensive clothes or adorning his house, or invests it in other unproductive ways; we grant that in so doing, he will pay it away in wages to artisans, &c., but he withdraws that much from the productive capital of the world. The articians receive work to the simple amount of the one thousand dollars, but the one thousand days' work which they have given for it is so much dead capital. They might as well have been employed in digging a ditch and filling it up again.

But suppose that that money, instead of being invested in clothing, ornaments &c., had been employed in some useful way, in business manufacturing, farming, &c. The artisans would still have had the same amount of work and wages and the proceeds of that work would be a house that might be lived in, or cloth that might be worn or food that might be consumed.

Or, to make the illustration still more simple, and prove to the extravagant man that he is not a charitable one:—Does he not see the difference between taking a thousand dollars and purchasing jewelry with it to wear on his person, and taking the same thousand dollars and buying bread with it for the sufferers by a famine? In both cases the original thousand is paid to the working classes; but in the former the work of many men for many weeks is squandered on the vanities of one man; while in the other it is employed in ministering to the necessities of hundreds. Is it all the same, then, what a man does with his money; whether he uses it to minister to his own selfish gratifications, or uses it, as a steward of Heaven, to give employment and bread to his fellow men?

One word in conclusion. We are not a utilitarian in the narrow sense of the word. We believe that beauty also has its uses, and high uses. The blue sky, the green earth, the clouds, the sun-rises, and sun-sets, all teach us the great utility of beauty; for God has made all nature beautiful and nothing in vain. Nothing inanimate, by any possibility, can become aught else than beautiful. The clouds shift and vary and change, but lose not their beauty, the river flows gradually along, is broken and torn by jagged rocks, or is flung down into deep abysms but grows more beautiful in proportion as it is rent and tortured—for God has made beauty the deep centred law of the natural world.

We believe that man, in his works, should imitate, in this respect, the great Creator. Let every thing that is made by men, also be made, as far as possible, beautiful; let all useful things be made beautiful.

Neither would we oppose the making of things which, like the flowers, are valuable for their beauty alone. But let us keep to a reasonable discretion in this respect. Let us imitate in this also the Creator, who has made comparatively few things that have not their practical uses. Surely, it cannot be pleasing to the Father of us all, to see so large a proportion of the yearly productions of the earth, squandered in things of mere beauty, when thousands are living in narrow, dirty courts, clothed in rags, and often in want of the coursest food. Grant that it often is in one sense, "their own fault;" they are still, however degraded, however guilty, our brethren. And "blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

Circulation of Methodist Periodicals.—Zion's Herald says the circulation of the Christian Advocate and Journal has declined, during the last four years, some 6,000; that of the Quarterly Review some 1,000. The Sunday School publications have advanced; the Sunday School Advocate had 40,000 subscribers four years ago, it has now 80,000! The Western Christian Advocate has 11,000 subscribers; this includes, we suppose, the preachers as non-paying subscribers. The Christian Apologist, (German.) has more than 2,300 subscribers. The Sunday School Advocate has a circulation of the Western house of 17,000. The Repository has 8,000 subscribers, though designed particularly for ladies; its patronage is constantly growing.

Advertisements.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. I Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

SundaySchool Books--New Supply.

A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF BOOKS suitable for Sunday Schoel Libraries, comprising recent publication of the American Sunday School Union, together with the two cent Hymn Book and the

Child's Cabinet Library,

containing 75 books bound in 50 volumes 32 mo. 32 pp. with morocco backs, lettered and numbered, only $2,50 for the Library, being at the rate of 5 cents per volume

Also, a good variety of books, in plain and elegant binding, selected with special reference to the coming

HOLYDAYS.

For sale at the Sunday School Depository.

J. METCALF, AGENT.

Putnam, Dec. 13, 1847.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT, Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents, and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St., New York City.

FITS! FITS!!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says, "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm. Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, and medical advice and attendance. I was advised to take a tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visited England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case:—they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Lime Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 12 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 283, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthelf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with a small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HART, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 43. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, JULY 27, 1848. WHOLE NO. 459

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,
AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO
OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

KEEP CALM.

Is a lion in the way!
Keep calm:
Tell him you respect his pride,
But, that you may go ahead,
He must please to stand aside.
Keep calm.

Does he rouse and show his teeth!
Keep calm;
Tell him you enjoy the laugh:
Give a single lightning glance,
And he'll dwindle to a calf.
Keep calm.

Are you hampered by the blues?
Keep calm:
When you get your conscience clean,
With your hands and brains at work,
Not a devil will be seen.
Keep calm.

Can't you find your quondam friends?
Keep calm:
You have only lost your cash;
They will all come dancing back.
When they see the dollars flash.
Keep calm.

Does a villian slander you?
Keep calm:
He can never hit his mark;
Since his nature is so mean,
Let the snarling puppy bark,
Keep calm.

Does a maiden play the jilt?
Keep calm;
If she care a whit for you,
When she sees you hale and strong,
You will find her coming to.
Keep calm,

Does a wanton spread her net?
Keep calm:
Tell her that with half an eye
You could see the serpant coiled
Underneath the painted lie.
Keep calm.

Are your virtues not admired?
Keep calm:
Rest assured, if they exist,
They will never sue for praise;
On their own wealth they subsist,
Keep calm.

Can't you stand upon your sense?
Keep calm;
Queer that you should think you can:
Prudent people fathom sense
With a golden plummet, man.
Keep calm.

Let things jostle as they will,
Keep calm,
Outward evils need a check;
But the greatest curse of all,
Is the stiffening in your neck,
Keep calm,

Boston, 1848. G. W. I.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

MAN FADETH AS A FLOWER.

A SKETCH. BY "ANON."

"The flower fadeth."—ISAIAH, XL., 6.

One of the most beautiful and striking figures employed to illustrate the brevity and uncertainty of human life, is the floral emblem of the inspired author: which will now afford us, in this our first sketch, a basis for a few important reflections.

1. Flowers in their beauty are emblematical of human life.—The countenance of infancy is more lovely than the bud unfolding its rich and beautiful colors. We gaze upon it with joyful admiration; and 'tis well—for it is yet free from the taints and pollutions of crime. What rapture thrills the parental heart as it listens to the lisping accents of its musical voice, sweeter than the tones of Eolus; or watches the smiling feature, the tottering step, or the merry gambol, of the "man in miniature." Children are buds of promise—tender osiers, that bid fair to become vigorous and noble trees. But while we look with admiration, and dwell with rapture on each developing lineament, the colors fade, the beauty vanishes, and the bud is rudely plucked from the tender stem, ere it has revealed its full and perfect beauty. Or,

"Nipt by the wind's unfimely blast,
Parched by the sun's directer ray,
The momentary glories waste,
The short-lived beauties die away!"

2. Flowers are emblematical of human life with regard to the shortness of their duration.—We gaze upon the beauty of youth, watch its unfolding loveliness, listen to the sweet tones of its voice, and look forward with anxious expectation tor the period when the bud shall expand in fragrant bloom, and the fruit shall swell and ripen in golden perfection. How vain our anxiety! The worm is in the bud, preying upon its vitality, and ravaging its inward being. Alas! how soon it withers—how soon it dies! "Children, bright, transient as early dew, soon exhale and go to heaven." Well may human life be compared to a "vapor," a shadowy dream, a shooting star, a bubble tossed upon the angry billow. For awhile we sparkle in the changing firmament of human existence, and then our beams are merged into the refulgent light of eternity! Many of our dearest friends are asleep in the dust of the earth, awaiting the sound of archangel's trump. Not a household but mourns some loved and absent one. We turn to view the seats of our parents, and behold! they are vacant; we call with endeared fondness upon their hallowed names, but the answer comes from the cold sepulchral voice of the grave, which responds "they are here!" The old arm chair remains the solitary tenant of the chimney corner; and when we look for the old familiar forms, that were wont to recline against its soft cushioned back, and smile upon the family group, we see them not. Around the family board is heard not the sweet melody of once cheerful voices; and the former joyful fireside is now gloomy and sad, and the fire burns more dimly in the grate. How many in the bloom and pride of life, have been cut down by the keen scythe of death! Man at his best estate is vanity. "He is as the grass which flourishes in the morning of a summer's day, presenting its verdure, which is beautiful to the eye, and displaying its blossoms, which are grateful to the smell, but which is cut down before the evening and withereth." The fondest, the brightest, the best, around whom the most tender fibres of the heart entwine, are generally the first to descend to the silent mansions of the grave.

"'Tis thus in this world of affliction and care
Death breathes on the lovely, and withers the fair;
The fondest and best descend first to the tomb,
Ere time hath revealed their full beauty and bloom!"

3. Flowers are emblematical of human life as it regards the numerous contingencies to which they are exposed.—They are liable to be trodden down by careless feet; plucked from the stem by rude hands; blasted by the frost of a night; or ravished by the ruthless worm. How many by sudden contingencies are hurried into eternity. Man has gone forth in the morning to the toils of the day, buoyant with hope and flushed with health; but has returned by the assistance of friends, ere the shadows of closing day had fallen upon the earth, a blighted corse. Insidious death riots upon the constitution undiscovered, until too late to remedy his fatal attacks.—Consumption tints the cheek with the color of the rose, while one by one the life-strings are breaking. The springs of human life are dried up by the burning influence of fever, or congealed by the severe frosts of winter.

"Dangers stand thick through all the ground
To push us to the tomb."

4. Flowers are emblematical of human life because they all eventually yield to the influence of time, change, or season.—So death will set his broad signet on all the human race. The nations already swept away from the face of the earth, will not prevent death from banqueting upon the eight hundred millions now living, and the many generations yet unborn. Sooner or later, all earth's feeble sons and daughters will be silent in the grave—all, all strewn like the leaves of the forest by the rude blasts of the autumnal winds.

"Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath,
And stars to set; but all,
Thou hast all seasons for thine own, O death!"

What a stupendous thought, that all who now live and act in the grand drama of life, will soon pass off the busy stage, down to the "dreary regions of the dead, where all things are forgot."

"What is this world?
What, but a spacious burial field unwalled, [bones,
Strewed with death's spoils * * and full of dead men's
The very turf on which we tread once lived!
And we that live must lend our bodies
To cover our own offspring: in their turn
They, too, must cover theirs."

Let us ever remember that

"Art is short, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still, like muffled drums, are beating
Funeral marches to the grave."

5. All earthly good, also, like the flowers of the field, will pass away.—Earth's honors wither on the brow; its greatest monuments of wealth and power will crumble into dust; its pleasures are but for a season; its glory vanishes; its treasures and garments rust and become motheaten; and its beauties fade as do the flowers.—All, all, short of the Word of God, is unsubstantial as a dream—like bubbles floating on the tumultuous bosom of the great river of time.

"Earthly things are but the transient pageants of an hour,
And earthly pride is like the passing flower
That springs to fall, and blossoms but to die."

Banks of the Scioto, May, 1848.

Ministerial.

Excellent, but not Faithful Preachers.

BY REV. G. B. IDE.

There are numbers, in every section of the land, who have come forth with rich literary attainments from the university and the seminary, and are adepts in the theory of their profession, and yet, when brought into the field of real service, prove utterly wanting in practical dexterity, and are mere nullities in the church, because of their defect. They are pious and learned, they possess noble gifts, both natural and acquired; and in the seclusion of study they can prepare very excellent and weighty sermons; but they can no more produce them with effect before an audience than the fabled Vulcan could wield the thunderbolts he had forged. In the distance and chilling reserve in which their spirits are wrapt up, they are as widely separated from the regards and sympathies of the busy, breathing, living world, as the hermit in his remote cell, or the lone astronomer on his mountain height. They are not working and everyday men; they have not the power of bringing their thoughts and feelings to bear upon others; and the consequence is, that their labors, both in the pulpit and in the more private walks of pastoral life, are unacceptable, uninteresting and feeble. One plain, unlettered preacher, with his warm heart and glowing utterance; his practical habits and intuitive perception of human passions and prejudices, will achieve more for the advancement of Zion, than an army of slow, torpid book-worms, with the starch of the college yet stiff upon them, with their heads of knowledge and souls of ice, their frigid manners, and their sluggish delivery, that lulls like an opiate. It is not by such men that the world is to be roused and shaken. It is not by such men the crowds of impenitent sinners are to be disturbed in their fatal repose; or the slumbering hosts of God's elect awakened to glorious deeds, and led on from victory to victory, until the earth alone shall be the limit of its conquests.

A Hint to Ministers.

There was a husbandman that always sowed good seed, but never had good corn. At last a neighbor came to him, and said "I will tell you what probably may be the cause of it: it may be," said he, "you do not steep your seed?" "No truly," replied the other, "nor did I ever hear seed must be steeped." "Yes, surely," said his neighbor, "and I will tell you how: it must be steeped in prayer." When the party heard this, he thanked him for his counsel, reformed his fault, and had as good corn as other persons.

May not this little anecdote afford a useful hint to those whose office it is to sow the seed of the divine word? Too frequently it is found that but very little good fruit is produced within the limits of their exertions. What can be the cause? Alas! the seed which they sow, although of the best quality, even of heavenly origin, is not steeped in prayer. To the want of scrupulously attending to this practice, may be traced the barrenness of our favored land. Let then the spiritual husbandman in future be more diligent in his attention to that important duty, and then may he hope to see the vineyard committed to his care, abounding in all the fruits of righteousness.—Flavel's Husbandry.

Ladies' Department.

Thin Shoes.

Ladies! can we animadvert too strongly on the practice of wearing thin shoes and light garments? We sound the timely warning!

"Epitaph on the grave-stone of a young lady: 'Died of thin shoes, January, 1839.'

"If the truth was always to be found in an epitaph on every grave-stone, such inscriptions as the above would be as thick in our depositories of death as fallen leaves in autum.

"A thin pair of shoes undoubtedly set off and display to advantage a pretty foot; but is the word of admiration from some senseless coxcomb an equivolent for the hacking cough and hectic flush—or the ruddy tint of health so lightly esteemed by our fair countrywomen as to be carelessly exchanged for the red herbinger of death blasting the cheek where it blooms?

"Is a foot, compressed into the smallest possible space by kid and morrocco—a prisoner there—and which, if placed and kept there against the will of the wearer, would be called torture—is a foot thus bandaged, we say (because its diminutiveness may attract the eye of some jockey in humanity,) and exposing its owner, both by the quality and manner of its covering, to cold, cough and consumption, to have such meretricious advantages compared with such probable fatal result? Let those who would thus throw themselves in the suicide's path reflect upon what they are doing.

"We say to every one, wear good, strong, think shoes, and over-shoes when there is mud, water, snow, or ice in the street. Never mind if your feet do look a little large, ladies; even if they should look a little clumsy, do not fret. A little-looking foot is not of so much importance to health and happiness as a good pair of lungs; and those who act the part of wisdom will dress to insure health, and let Fashion and Fashion's fools go to destruction in the way they love to travel."

What a Woman can Do.

The Journal of Commerce relates the wonders wrought by a Catholic woman in Williamsburg, a large and growing village in the vicinity of N. York. Where is the Protestant woman of equal energy and accomplishment? Indeed where is the man?

Eight years ago there was no Catholic Church in Williamsburg. An excellent Catholic woman who had a stall in one of our markets, thirsted for social worship, and was anxious for the education of her children. With two or three other women, her neighbors, she determined to see what could be done. She applied to some of the Catholic clergy, but the place was not promising enough to enlist their energies. The women however found a priest, and requested him to become their pastor. He canvassed the place, and thought there were not Catholics enough to warrant his staying among them. The women were not to be put off so. They assured him there were more Catholics in Williamsburg than would confess it; and to prove that there was strength there, they set themselves to build a church.—They raised a subscription of $700, and the work went on. Now there are three Catholic Churches in Williamsburg, all well filled. One of them is just finished, and holds from two to three thousand persons. This is one way in which Romanism is propagated among us. If Protestants, in their wealth, had been as zealous as the Catholics, for what they think all important, they would have taken early possession of so promising a place as Williamsburg.

From what we know of those enterprising women, we think it not improbable that at one time they would have joined a simple Bible movement. They are now ready to co-operate with a generous spirit in any thing useful, though it may be Protestant. It is easier to scold than to work we know. A religion which condemns others, is more agreeable, many times, than one which seeks by earnest labor to do them good. It is but fair that they should possess the superiority who work hardest for it.

Miscellaneous.

Remarkable expositions of Prophecy.

Recent events have directed the attention of students of prophecy to a Discourse on the Rise and Fall of Papacy, published in the year 1701, by the Rev. Robert Fleming, a Presbyterian minister. This gentleman was a Scotchman by birth and great-grand-son of John Knox, the Reformer. After officiating for some time to the Scotch Church at Amsterdam, he came over to London, and became pastor of a congregation in Lothbury. His father, who was also called Robert Fleming, was likewise a Presbyterian minister and was author of the celebrated book entitled, The Fulfilling of the Scriptures. Prophecy was a favorate study with both the father and the son and both rendered good service to the science of prophetical interpretation. It is remarkable that Mr. Fleming. Jun. in the Discourse on the Rise and Fall of Papacy, foretold the first French Revolution about ninety years before its occurrence. At the time, the verification of his reckoning excited general notice. The work was accordingly republished in 1792, and edition after edition was bought up with great avidity. It is a most extraordinary fact that Mr. Fleming fixed upon the the present year, 1848, as a grand prophetical epoch. The following passage, to be found in his Discourse, cannot fail to be read with interest at this crisis:

"I do suppose that, seeing the Pope received the title of Supreme Bishop no sooner than A. D. 606, he cannot be supposed to have any vial poured upon his seat immediately, so as to ruin his authority, so signally as this judgment must be supposed to do, until the year 1848, which is the date of 1260 years in prophetical account, when they are reckoned from A. D. 606. But yet we are not to imagine that this vial will totally destroy the Papacy, though it will exceedingly weaken it, for we find this still in being and alive, when the next vial is poured out."—Discourse, page 43. Edition. Edinburgh, 1809.

Mr. Fleming reckons that a prophetic year contains only 360 days, and hence he places the termination of the "time, times, and dividing of time." that is, of the 1260 not in 1866 but in 1848. It is extremely probable that the events of the present year will, as Mr. Fleming predicted, "exceedingly weaken" the Papacy. We believe indeed, that the Jesuits anticipated a very different result, for we have heard that they have been secretly fomenting the discontent which has issued in so many revolutionary movements.—They calculate that by dexterous managemeat they may place themselves at the head of the new governments, and thus secure the establishment of Romish escendency. Our readers may have remarked, accordingly that a number of Romish ecclesiastics were among the first to give in their adhesion to the Provisional Government of France. But He who is Governor among the nations, "taketh the wise in their own craftiness;" and it may be that the Jesuits may find themselves unable to control the elements at present in commotion. Free institutions are utterly incompatible with the spirit of their system; and should Roman Catholic States be compelled to grant the liberty of the press, and complete religious toleration, it is very evident the Papacy will be exceedingly weakened. Were such a man as John Knox permitted to preach, without disturbance, for six months in Rome, the Pope and the cardinals would meanwhile die of terror.

Mr. Fleming connects the year 1848 with the pouring out of the fifth vial, and another statement, which he makes in his Discourse in reference to this subject, is worthy of record:

"The fifth vial (Rev. xv. 10,") says he, "is to be poured out on the seat of the Beast, or the dominions that more immediately belong to and depend upon the Roman See."

It is worthy of remark that Romanism is prevalent in all the states which have recently been revolutionized. Protestant Britian enjoys peace, whilst France, Spain, Austria, Bavaria, Venice, Milan, and other places where the Papal authority is dominant, are in the utmost confusion. It may be that our young Irelanders calculate upon the support of France, should they venture upon an outbreak; but the Parisian revolutionists, for some time to come, will find it difficult to maintain their own rickety Government. If Fleming is correct in his interpretation of the fifth vial, and its judgments are to be poured out upon countries lying beyond the boundaries of the Roman Empire, the Roman Catholic portion of Ireland may yet be visited with even a more terrible scourge than the famine of last yhar; for it may be the theatre of the horrors of a bloody civil war, created by the unhappy miscreants who are now sowing sedition among our misguided countrymen. Protestant Ulster repudiates their proceedings, and it it is, therefore, to be hoped that it will to a great extent, escape the curses of the fifth vial.

From the Luthern Observer.

An Infidel not a Credible Witness.

A trial for murder recently took place in the Criminal Court of Philadelphia, in which the dying declaration of the man supposed to have been murdered was relied on by the prosecution in evidence. That declaration charged the fatal result on the person under trial. The deceased was an avowed infidal, and David Paul Brown, Esq., the council for the defence, maintained that the dying declarations of an infidel ought not to be received in evidence. We know nothing more of the circumstances of this particular case but we deem the remarks of Mr. Brown, on the principle involved, as of sufficient importance to be laid before our readers. They are as follows:—

This is a great question for this world and the next. Since the time of Pontius Pilate, few questions of greater importance have presented themselves to a judicial tribunal. Its consequences should be well considered in its decision.

An infidel—one who denies the existence of a God, and a future state of rewards and, punishments—cannot be sworn. This is established doctrine. An oath, in such circumstances, would be a solemn mockery! An oath, or appeal to God, is the only tie that a human tribunal can have upon the truth of a witness. 'Truth, the the whole truth, and nothing but the truth—so help me God,' is the obligation assumed by the witness. But it has no power—no binding influence, where the existence of a God and future rewards and punishments are denied.

If then, this man, if living, could not be sworn, can his dying declarations be evidence? They are even more objectionable and more dangerous than his testimony. They are exparte, they are surrounded by none of the safe-guards of cross-examination—they are to be received by us by transmission through others—and, superadded to all these objections, the deceased was an avowed and unqualified infidel. Why is an oath binding? From its appeal to God. Why are dying declarations admissible? From an approach to God and his judgement—from the almost immediate approach to that 'high and mighty one, that inhabits eternity,' and of whom the sacred Bible is the earthly emblem. It is therefore, obviously necessary to competency, that God and judgment should be presem in the mind of the dying man.

Suppose the dying declaration of a defendant; would it be received to affect the reversal of an attainder? No. Why not? Because not competent to be sworn. Suppose the deceased were infamous from crime, or pecuniarily interested. His declarations could not be heard. For legal purposes infidelity is the same. An infidel is not competent as a president of the United States—as a judge, as counsel, as a juryman, as a tipstaff, as any officer of the General, or State Government that requires an oath—for the life of an oath is fear of hell and reverence for heaven.

This doctrine is said by the opposite counsel to be a novelty—and it is further said that its novelty is an argument against it. The novelty of the doctrine consists in the anomalous character of the crime to which it relates, and which seems to flourish most in the present century.—But we are told the effect of the doctrine will be bigotry and delusion. What bigotry is that, that stands by the Holy Bible? Who is deluded that relies upon the justice of the Omnipotent? Let me tell you that the effect of the opposite doctrine will be impiety, corruption, and perdition.

A man who lives as a beast and dies as a beast, must, according to his own standard, be considered a beast, and for judicial purposes, he should enjoy no greater privileges. The rights of the defendant and the sacred character of justice demand it—the lofty and immutable principles of our religion forbid that it should be otherwise.

The decision of this day will startle thousands from their impious and perilous slumbers.

Do I ask you to work iniquity to any man? I ask you only to do justice to the great Source of all justice. I beg you not to permit an opportunity for so much good, to pass unimproved. The fate of the defendant is nothing—but these principles are vital to us all.

Remember, I allow for all differences in creeds, or modes of worship, but I make no allowance for that man who boldly confronts his God, and plants his cloven foot upon the Book of Eternal Life."

Cold Bathing.

BY JOEL SHEW, M. D.

Some general rules to be observed in Bathing.

1. Beginners and weak persons should commence moderately. Many are injured by beginning too rapidly. If you have any doubt, take first the luke warm or tepid bath (from 80 to 90° Fahrenheit)—This would not injure the feeblest child. Then, from day to day, gradually lower the temperature as you feel you can bear.

2. A most important rule is, never to take a cold bath when you are much fatigued. Take, then, the tepid or warm bath or wait until becoming rested.

3. Never take a cold bath when the body is cold or chilly. Cause first the warmth by friction on the surface, exercise, wraping up warmly in bed, or by the warm bath, as at from 92 to 98° Fahrenheit.

4. Do not bathe within three hours after a meal and four hours is still better.

5. It is better to wait at least half an hour after bathing before eating.

6. Always get warm after a bath. Exercise is the most natural, and therefore the best mode. But if this is not practicable, use artificial means.

7. Do not take the shower or douche bath on the head. It is better merely to wash well or pour water on the part. The force of water striking upon the head sometimes causes the head-ache and other unpleasant affects. You can easily incline the head forward while in the bath.

8. Under the above rules, sedentary persons and those not in good health, may bathe advantageously two and even three times a day; the time of rising in the morning being one of the best.

Would you enjoy health, happiness, and long life? The next thing to preserving a clear conscience, & in all things temperance, is regularly daily, some form of bath. Would you preserve soundness and beauty of teeth, clearnass and ruddiness of complexion? Avoid tea, coffee and tobacco, and take your daily bath. Would you enjoy, amid the trials of life, serenity of mind, clearness of preception, and the highest perfection of all your bodily and mental powers, in connection with all the other rules of hygiene? TAKE ALWAYS YOUR DAILY BATH.

THE BOY MAKES THE MAN.——A man's character is formed early in life. There may be some exceptions. In some instances, very great changes take place after a person has grown to manhood. But, even in such cases, many of the early habits of thought, feeling, and action still remain. And sometimes we are disappointed in the favorable appearances of early life. Not unfrequently the promising boy, in youth or early manhood, runs a rapid race downward in the road to ruin. All the promising appearances failed, because they were not formed upon religious principle and a change of heart. But, as a general rule, show me the boy and I will show you the man.—Anecdotes for Boys.

CONGREGATIONAL SINGING.—We rejoice to see this subject agitated in various perodicals.—'Choir singing,' says Lowel Mason, an eminent teacher of sacred music, 'does not answer the great purposes for which the singing of praises to God is designed. We believe it. Every heart and tongue should unite in God's praises. Besides choirs, in the main are too theatrical. Very many, destitute of the fear of God, chant the most solemn spiritual composition! We look upon this as little short of blasphemy! Mr. M. further remarks, that, 'a chorister will be necessary to promote harmony, while the usual accompaniments of concert horns, bass viols, trumpels, organs, &c., &c., will of course be dispensed with, and an unnecessary expense avoided." Very well—so let it be.—Golden Rule.

Lectures to young men on Tobacco—its physical and moral influence upon those who use it—are fashionable down east. We wish some of the lecturers would take a westward tour.

From the Luthern Observer.

Rules for the House of God.

"Walk softly to your seat.

Spend a few moments in silent prayer. This will solemnize and prepare the heart for a welcome reception of God's truth. The habit of gazing about on entering the house of God, as is the manner of some, is not only indecorous, but tends to dissipate the mind.

In singing, unite with the whole congregation; lift your heart to God in heaven.

Singing is a solemn act of worship to God in which all should participate.

(Every pew should be amply furnished with Hymn-books.)

Position in prayer. This should be uniform. The uncouth and disorderly practice of some sitting, and some kneeling, as is in some congregations, cannot be too severely censured. A very appropriate and scriptural position for rebel hell-deserving sinners, in approaching the great God, is kneeling and prostration; but this position cannot always be observed, for the following reasons:—

1. Pews, or slips, are often so constructed as to render kneeling very difficult; and

2. The floors of some churches are so completely saturated (often swimming) with tobacco juice, that it would be extremely dangerous, even for gentlemen, (to say nothing about ladies,) to kneel during the solemn season of prayer.

Sitting during public or social prayer we deem in general improper. Would we approach even an earthly prince in this idle position? How then, the King of kings—the Lord of hosts? Rise up, then; before God; rise up—close your eyes.—"Stand in awe, sin not." If prayers are what they should be, short, animated, spiritual, and to the point, every one may endure the fatigue of standing. No public prayer should exceed six or eight minutes; five in most cases, would be preferable. Solomon's prayer on the dedication of the temple, (which by the by, is the longest on record in the Bible,) did not exceed eight minutes. All the examples of prayer given by inspiration are short—very short, and graphic.

During the whole sermon, let your attention be fixed; and unwilling to lose a single thought.

When the benediction is pronounced. remain a few moments for silent prayer. Not a pew door should be opened; not a hat, glove or cloak should be taken; not a foot moved. How shocking and unseemly, to see many adjusting their cloaks or over-coats; searching for their hats, canes; opening the doors of pews, &c., while the blessing is being pronounced! Is not this outrageous, perfectly sacrilegious?

(Why do not ministers train their congregations into better manners?)

In leaving the house of God, go softly, moderetely; never crowd the aisles. Some people rush literally rush from the sanctuary. Scandalous!

In retiring from public worship, never put on your hat till you reach the the door.

After retiring from the sanctuary, go home, meditate on the solemn truths; let the seed sown take deep root, bring forth fruit to eternal life—some thirty, some sixty, some a hundred fold."

Keep Your Promises.

We have often been shocked at the reckless disregard which many persons manifest for the fulfillment of their promises. They are ever ready to make engagements for the future, but when the time arrives for their fulfillment, they seem to have forgotten them entirely, or at least, to treat them as though they involved no obligation whatever. Such conduct is sinful in the highest degree, and when indulged in by professing Christians, furnishes glaring evidence of essential defect in their Christian character. It is also highly injurious in its influence upon society itself, inasmuch as it necessarily tends to destroy that confidence of man in man, which is so essential to the happiness of the community. It is especially detrimental to the interest of the individual himself, who is guilty of it, as he thereby forfeits the confidence and respect of his fellows. His word accordingly, is not relied upon, & he is obliged to suffer all the unhappy cosequences. This sinful habit is one of the most inexcusable of which any can be guilty. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred there is no absolute necessity whatever for any one to break his word. No one should ever make promise, unless he looks well into the circumstances beforehand, and has every reason to believe, that it will be in his power to fulfill his promise. And whenever a promise has once been made, it should be his fixed determination to keep it, and with a particular reference to this, his subsequent conduct should be shaped. Were this course to be faithfully pursued, not only would the serious evils resulting from a disregard to one's word be avoided, but also the confidence of those around speedily gained and enjoyed, and a character thereby eventually estalished, that will be of more value than "ermine, gold, or princely diadems."

RUSSIA.

PROPOSALS TO LIBERATE THE SERFS.

The National contains the following letter from St. Petersburg, which is not without importance at the present moment:

"Every one here is expecting some great event, if any credit is to be attached to the reports in circulation, and which, there is every reason to believe, are well founded. The Emperor yesterday sent for the President of the Senate, the principal dignitaries of the Empire, the Bishop, and the Ministers, and communicated to them the project which he had in contemplation, for immediately enfranchising all the peasants from personal servitude. They would then be placed in the same condition as the Poles, and the people in the provinces of the Baltic.

"The young Prince G——— V———, who is very popular at St. Petersburg, warmly supported the plan; but the hereditary Grand Duke, who was believed to be of a weak and irresolute character, supported by his uncle the Grand Duke Michael, and a great number of important personages, insisted with much firmness on things remaining as they now are, founding their arguments on the danger which would arise from giving freedom to men yet plunged in the lowest state of barbarism, and who have not yet received any of the advantages of education; and that on the eve of a probable war, any change of the kind would be impolitic. Notwithstanding this opposition, orders were sent by the Emperor to the civil and military authorities in the different provinces to sound the feelings of the people on the subject."

Correspondence.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SABBATH SCHOOL CELEBRATION ON THE FOURTH.

Mr. Editor: I have for more than half a century, been enjoying the blessings of liberty, gained by our revolutionary fathers, and have been accustomed to the observance of our national anniversary of Independence, from year to year, but have never spent the day so pleasantly as on the recent occasion, July 4, 1848. I have been prevented from sending you at an earlier day, for publication, a statement of the proceedings I had the pleasure of witnessing, but it is not perhaps yet too late.

To me it seems, there is not a more rational or profitable method of spending the joyous day of Independence, than by convening our children and addressing them upon what the Lord has done for us as a nation, and how we should live, to have these blessings continued to them, after we the more immediate descendants of the revolutionary fathers, are laid beneath the clods of the valley. I had the privilege of attending three celebrations on the 4th, and will give a short account of each, though I cannot do justice to them for want of room.

At 8½ o'clock, attended at West Putnam, at the school house on the hill. The Superintendent, Mr. Bailey; had his school all seated and arranged in good order, & refreshments prepared. In a short address, he stated to the children the object of the celebration. Mr. J. Metcalf, of Putnam, then led in singing a hymn, and other hymns afterwards at intervals. Prayer was then offered, when Mr. H. Ward, Jr., read the Declaration of Independence, in good style. Then followed several short addresses on topics appropriate for the day, and all went off in good order.

In the afternoon, 4½ o'clock, attended at the 2d Methodist Episcopal Church, Zanesville. It was truly cheering to see the happy, smiling faces of the scholars, girls and boys, with those of their teachers, ladies and gentlemen, to the number in all of 300 or more. The minister in charge opened the exercises with prayer. Mr. John Darrow, the Superintendent, gave direction to the exercises. Mr. S. Burwell, led in singing. We had several addresses by the scholars, and hymns sung. Then followed two short addresses by gentlemen present. One presented the children the reasons why this day is observed as a day of rejoicing, and the causes which led to the Declaration of Independence. The other related facts which occurred during the Revolution. The school then marched around a square of the city, and on their return, went up into the body of the church, where refreshments were served up in the most pleasant style. Tables were furnished 60 feet in length, and so disposed that the Teachers and others could wait upon all the children at the same time without confusion. The society there deserves much credit for their labor of love, in thus giving increased interest to their school, which I presume will bring in many children that never would have attended, if they had not been brought out in this way. May kind Heaven bless their labors, and may the children of their charge be true Christians and true Americans, who will love their Savior and their country.

At 7 o'clock, p. m., attended at the 1st Methodist Episcopal Church, Zanesville. At an early hour, the church was crowded with children and spectators. Mr. G. Dowiy had the most pleasant arrangement for the occasion, which could have been desired. A small platform was prepared in front of the stand, with two flags of our country hung up on each side, and evergreens also hung all around. The sight was calculated to fill the mind with gratitude to a kind Providence, for the blessings we enjoy as a nation. After the exercises were opened, there were several Addresses by the scholars, and Dialogues on different subjects. The Dialogue on Selling Liquor was acted out to the life. We believe the thing was fairly presented as it frequently takes place, in the case of young men who go to those drinking and eating houses, making excuses for their drinking, and the vender saying, If I do not sell it, others will; and pleading justification in having license. He acknowledged that he had no Bible. The temperance young man said he expected that, for Bibles and liquor bottles never could agree to lie on the same shelf together. After reading him a few verses, he gave him the Bible as a present, Go and do likewise—Give the Bible to all who sell the fire water to their neighbors. I was much pleased with the Dialogue between the teacher and the scholar respecting the new birth, what it meant in the Bible. O that all who have not been born again by the Spirit of God could have heard it. It would certainly have moved their feelings, as it did the feelings of all present. May God bless the teacher & little girl who spoke this piece.—A Dialogue on Dancing, by three young ladies was also excellent. Please, Mr. Editor, give it entire, if you can find room for it in your excellent family paper. The sin of learning to dance, with all the evils connected with it in this our day has effected some of our churches here, and in other places. The advocates for the practice carry themselves among the 'upper ten,' who seem to hold that show, and dress, and wealth make the character what it should be, scarcely knowing any others of a different class. I trust that the young ladies of this Sabbath-School will be humble, and that they will disregard the "scorning of the scornful." For whom the Lord loves he will bless with peace, and every other blessing needful for time and eternity.

Yours, &c.,

M. GILLESPIE.

Putnam, O., July 25, '48.

The Last throb of Fourierism.—We perceive that Brook farm, near Boston, the citadel of Fourierism, is advertised for sale by the sheriff.

Religious Intelligence.

INDIANA DISTRICT.

Sugar Creek Ct., July 6, 1848.

Br. Bassett: By the blessing of God, we are trying to live, on this circuit. I have found here a religious people. The Lord is with us, and the cause is rising. The church is sustaining its ministers well, and we have had, say 26 additions to the Church. We have $142 subscribed towards the Ludlow claim, to be paid against the time of Annual Conference, and we expect to get the money. Brothers E. Horner and W. W. Rigdon have again joined our church. They left the Wabash Conference two years ago, on the abolition question, but have come back in the spirit of religion. * * * * *

May the Lord bless them and us together.

H. COLLINGS, Sup't.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, July 27, 1848.

☞The "Sketch," by "Anon," on our first page, was intended by the writer to have precedence of another, which appeared in our paper of June 15, on the "Immutability of the Word of God." But accidentally the latter was sent us first.

☞We have received for publication another letter from Rev. W. McGwigan, on slavery, which shall appear. He declines a discussion with Br. Gay.

☞We have given entire on our fourth page the Cove Spring Oration, to accommodate the wishes of our numerous subscribers in and about Bainbridge. It will generally accommodate us to be excused from publishing in our paper any document of so great length, unless it is suitable for it to be divided. We think it necessary to make this statement in reference to subsequent cases.

Disastrous Scenes in France.

The general sympathy and rejoicing throughout this country, upon the overthrow of the French Monarchy, and the establishment of a Republican Government in its stead, has been succeeded by sad regrets to learn of recent scenes of anarchy and wholesale bloodshed which have taken place in the heart of the new republic. The details, as given in some of our exchanges, are lengthy as well as horrible.—The occasion of the outbreak, we believe, was as follows. For the purpose of affording employment to the laboring masses, the new government had established national work-shops. It was soon found that a retrenchment must be made. For whilst ten thousand were at work and receiving full pay, about a hundred thousand more were idle, and received half pay.—An attempt was made to constrain a portion of these to go to work on public improvements at distant points, and another portion to enlist in the army. Extensive discontent was the result. Many thousands being turned out of employment, mischief and violence were readily concerted. A desperate attempt was made to overthrow the government, in which the insurgents it seems, well nigh succeeded. A terrible onset and slaughter commenced on Friday, the 23d of June, which continued for four days and nights in the heart of the city of Paris. Many distinguished officers, as well as from ten to twenty thousand others were slain. The Archbishop of Paris volunteered to act as mediator, but was shot by the insurgents, and died after lingering two days, with the prayer on his lips that his might be the last blood shed in this affair. Several thousands of prisoners were taken, and the prisons were filled. The insurrection was ultimately quelled, and the Republic was triumphant.

☞We find the following in several Cincinnati papers:

UNION LOVE FEAST.

Next Sabbath morning, (23 instant,) a Love-Feast will be held (D. V.) in the First Methodist Protestant Church, on Sixth-street, between Race and Vine-streets, to which Christians of all denominations, and persons seeking religion, are respectfully and affectionately invited. Tickets will not be required. Doors to open at 6 o'clock, services to commence at 7 and close ½ to 9.

T. H. STOCKTON,
Sup't. 6th St., M. P. C.

J. N. Maffit.—The Baltimore Sun has information that this gentleman is preaching with astonishing success at Batesville, Ark. The whole population, it is said, white and black, are joining the church under his preaching. What is called his persecution by the northern Methodists, is greatly helping him along at the south.

Qualifications in Tennessee.—A writer in the Nashville Christian Advocate, of the 14th inst. says, that the 9th article of the Constitution of the State of Tennessee provides that no person is eligible to hold any office in the civil departments of the State, that does not believe in a future state of rewards and punishments. Also that the Supreme Court has decided that no person that does not believe in a future state of rewards and punishments can give evidence in any courts of the state.

The Wreath.—We have received the Aug. number of this work. It is embellished with a steel plate representing Bethlehem, a colored engraving of Dianthus, and a piece of Music. It is filled also with good and interesting reading matter. We have repeatedly recommended the Wreath, as worthy of extensive patronage.—Devoted to Religion, Morality, Literature. $1 per year. Address, J. Van Court, Philadelphia.

We are also favored with the receipt, monthly, of Van Court's Counterfeit Detector, (same publisher) a very convenient and useful publication, containing engravings of the coins. $1 per Annum.

The Wreath for July never reached us. Will Mr. V. C. oblige us by sending us a copy?

☞The following from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, will be perused with interest by many of our readers.

The General Conferences of '28 and '48.

In casting our eye over the history of the Church, we paused a moment on the General Conference of 1828—the previous Conference which sat in Pittsburgh. Curiosity led us to make some inquiry, by way of comparison between the Conference of 1828 and that of 1848.

First, we find that five Bishops were present at each of them. In 1828, there were present, Bishops McKendree, George, Roberts, Soule, Hedding. At the Conference of 1848, Hedding, Waugh, Morris, Hamline, Janes. Bishop Hedding was the Junior Bishop in 1828. He was Senior in 1848.

Dr. Martin Ruter, then of Cincinnati, was the Secretary of the Conference of 1828. Rev. J. M. Trimble, of Cincinnati, was the first Secretary in 1848.

There were in 1828 seventeen Conferences, represented by 176 delegates. The ratio of representation was then one for every seven. In 1848 there were 23 Conferences, represented by 152 delegates, the ratio of representation being one for every twenty-one. There were 24 more delegates in the Conference of 1828 than in the Conference of 1848.

The numbers in 1827, the year preceding the Conference of 1828, were—whites, 327,932; colored, 54,065. Total, 381,997. Preachers, 1,576. In 1847, the year preceding the Conference of 1848, the numbers were, whites—600,941; colored, 29,901. Total, 631,553. Effective travelling preachers, 3,296. The number of members, therefore, has nearly doubled in twenty years; and the number of preachers rather more than doubled. During this twenty years the Canada Wesleyan Church separated, by mutual consent, from the parent body, as did also the Meth. Episcopal Church South. There occurred also in this time the two secessions of the Methodist Protestants and the New Wesleyans; having in the aggregate, about as many members as remain in the old Methodist Episcopal Church. The increase of American Methodism during the last twenty years has been from about three hundred and eighty-two thousand to about one million two hundred thousand. Methodism has nearly quadrupled itself in twenty years; and the old Methodist Episcopal Church, after suffering two secessions and two separations, taking off in the aggregate nearly as many members as were left, has still doubled the numerical strength which she had twenty years ago. The population of the United States doubles itself in about twenty-five years. This is considered a very great increase; but the increase of the Methodist Episcopal Church is greater, and of American Methodism vastly greater. If her other elements of strength have kept pace with her numbers, Methodism may yet be the honored instrument in the hands of the Lord of much good. Oh, for some common bond of union! At least the bond of peace! It would at once double our moral power, and enable the Church to spend all its energies in its original calling of spreading Scriptural holiness over the earth.

Of the five Bishops who presided in the General Conference of 1828, three—McKendree, George and Roberts,—have gone to the Church above; Soule to the Methodist Episcopal Church South; Hedding alone remains.

Of the delegates of the Conference of 1828, two, T. A. Morris and Beverly Waugh, were Bishops in '48; one, Leroy Swormstedt, Book Agent at Cincinnati, and a visiter at the Conference: John Early, of Virginia, Book Agent of the Church South, and appointee of the Church South to the General Conference of 1848; H. B. Bascom, Commissioner of the Church South to the General Conference; and John Ryerson, of the Canada Conference, fraternal delegate from that body to our late General Conference. The following delegates in 1848 represented the Conferences appended to their names in 1828: P. P. Sandford, Tobias Spicer, Marvin Richardson, from the New York Conference; Isaac Bonney, from the N. England; Heman Nickerson, from Maine; George Peck and John Dempster, from Genesee; Charles Elliot, from Pittsburgh; Jacob Young, J. B. Finley, John F. Wright, [of Ohio;] Peter Cartwright, from Illinois; Peter Akers, from Kentucky; John Davis, from Baltimore; D. Daily, Manning Force, Charles Pitman, from Philadelphia.

Both sessions of the General Conference at Pittsburgh have been remarkable for the great questions and principles which have been discussed and acted upon. At the session in 1828 the "Radical controversy" was at its height, and the action of the Conference brought matters to a crisis. In 1848 the great questions and principles involved in the Southern separation occupied the attention of the body, and led to very important decisions. Whether the results of the late Conference will be equally favorable to the interests of the Church with the action of the previous session of 1828, time must develop. We hope for the best.

It may be a matter of local interest to give the names of the delegates of the Pittsburgh Annual Conference in 1828. They are as follows: Wm. Stephens, now a superannuated preacher of the Pittsburgh Conference. Daniel Limerick, deceased. He died in the work. David Sharp, still a member of the Pittsburgh Conference.—Henry Furlong, now a member of the Baltimore Conference. William Lambdin, now a member of the Kentucky Conference of the Church South. James Moore, located—if we mistake not, withdrawn. Asa Shinn, a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church. He has been suffering for some length of time with that most lamentable of all maladies, a disease of the mind. He is at present, we believe, in an asylum at Boston. But little hopes are entertained of his recovery.—Henry B. Bascom, a member of the Kentucky Conference, President of Transylvania University, and Editor of the Southern Methodist Quarterly Review. Thornton Fleming, deceased, after having been a number of years a superannuated preacher of the Pittsburgh Conference.—Charles Elliott, now a member of the Ohio Conference. Of the above ten, only two now belong to the Pittsburgh Conference—Stevens and Sharp. Two are dead—Limerick and Fleming. Two have withdrawn from the Church—Shinn and Moore. Two—Furlong and Elliott—are members of other Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church; and two—Bascom and Lambdin—have gone with the Church South, and belong to the same Conference there.

Boston Olive Branch.—This popular Weekly, conducted by Rev. T. F. Norris, has just entered upon its 13th volume, and professes a larger circulation than any other sheet in New England. We see it announced in the last paper that Rev. S. Lovell and Dr. H. G. Barrus, heretofore serving as Assistant Editors, are now no longer connected with the publication, but that Brother Norris has associated with him F. W. Rice, Esq., author of Letters from Europe, as Assistant Editor. Messrs. D. C. Colesworthy, H. D. White and R. M. Devans, are also to be weekly contributors.

Sacred Melodeon.—We have received from the publisher by mail, a copy of the new edition of this work, just from the press. It is enlarged and improved, and we have no doubt will give general satisfaction. We trust that the publisher will be enabled to have a good supply put into binding in time for the approaching Conferences. The work has taken well thus far. An edition of two thousand has been disposed of, & a new edition of five thousand is now forthcoming. We expect still to have on hand at this office a supply to accommodate brethren of surrounding circuits.

Worth Telling.—We learn that the Mayor of Charleston, S. C., has issued his proclamation, setting apart a day to be observed as a day of Thanksgiving for the return of peace. So far as we have learned, we believe that that functionary is the first to enjoin a public observance of the kind on this occasion. Some months ago there were great illuminations, and rejoicings on account of victories gained by our troops. But now, who cares for peace? The Charleston Thanksgiving was Thursday last.

American Pulpit.—The July number is received. It contains a Sermon by Rev. Mr. Turnbull, of Hartford, Conn., on a most interesting topic, the "Law of Revolutions," from Ezek., 21, 26. "I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; until he come whose right it is; and I will give it him." Also, several sketches of sermons.—Address, Samuel Chism, Worcester, Mass. $1 per year.

Markets.

Putnam and Zanesville.—Flour, $4; Wheat, $65; Corn, 31; Oats, 20.

Cincinnati.—Flour, $4; Wheat, 60a65; Corn, 27a33; Oats, 30a33.

Pittsburgh.—Flour, $4,50a4,62; Wheat, 81c.; Corn, 30a36; Oats, 25a28.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

BROTHER ADAM A. BARTON,

Departed this life with a hope full of immortality, on the 16th of May, 1848, in the 34th year of his age. The same fell destroyer, Typhus Fever, which took away the beloved companion of the writer of this notice, carried off our dear Br. Barton. His illness was of four weeks' continuance, the first of which he was not confined to his bed, but was unable to attend to business, and continued to grow worse until about the commencement of the second week, when he took his bed. Shortly after a mighty struggle took place between nature and grace. The relations of earth seemed to pour in like a flood to drink up his spirit and deprive him of all enjoyment, arising from non-resignation to the Divine will, at the thought of leaving a helpless family behind, to encounter the ills of a sinful world.—And though the struggle was long and hard, yet at length by grace he obtained the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. And from that hour to his last, to use his own language,—

"All is peace and joy divine,
And heaven and glory now are mine,
All is well, all is well."

From which time, during his earthly existence, he enjoyed uninterrupted peace and comfort.—On the second Sabbath evening before his death, the writer had the pleasure of visiting him, and found him in the possession of a calm and peaceful frame of mind, which continued throughout the week, during the whole of which he neither wished to hear or speak of any thing earthly; his whole theme and delight was Jesus, happiness, and heaven. On Saturday evening, after a season of prayer, I left him in full view of immortality and eternal life in heaven.

A day or two before his decease, his companion mentioned his family affairs to him concerning which he gave some directions, and then said, raise your little children in the fear of the Lord, when again his mind was drawn from earthly things, and resumed his constant theme of praise to God.

The night before his departure, his father-in-law remarked to him that he would soon be over Jordan. Oh yes, he said, I see the other shore. The day he died, his brother-in-law said to him, Adam, you are pretty near the kingdom. Oh yes, and the nearer the shore, the brighter it grows, he replied. Such was the peace of mind that he enjoyed that his whole soul appeared to be enveloped in heavenly extacies of joy and rapture, so much so that an hour or two before his death he broke out in a hearty laugh which was very unusual in health, and his countenance exhibited a heavenly brightness, which continued for some time. His companion came to him and took him by the hand; he still continued to smile, and said, my dear Hannah, I am joyful, joyful. He exclaimed, I'm so happy, and in a few moments raised his head and closed his eyes and fell asleep in Jesus, leaving a wife and three small children and a number of relatives behind to mourn his loss; but their loss is his infinite gain. May they stay themselves on his God that He may bring them safe home to heaven at last. I may say he lived beloved, and died lamented by all who knew him.

Br. Barton lived a consistent member of the Methodist Protestant Church for a number of years and in his death the Church has sustained an almost irreparable loss. May the Lord sanctify this bereavement to the good of family, friends and Church.

C. J. SEARS.

Mt. Zion, July 12, 1848.

Dreadful Accident.—One of the river ferry boats at New York was run into by a sloop on Thursday evening about 6 o'clock, and the ladies' cabin stove in. A child and its nurse were killed, and two men were knocked overboard—both of whom it is supposed were drowned.—Another man among the passengers had his arm broken.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the Baltimore Sun, of Saturday last.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER

HIBERNIA.

QUIET RESTORED IN FRANCE!

IRISH AFFAIRS.

The following dispatch reached us at twelve o'clock last night, from our correspondent at N. York.

New York, July 21—12, p. m.

The steamer Hibernia has arrived here, bringing seven days later intelligence from Europe. I send you the following hasty dispatch:

IRELAND.

An express from Dublin, which left on Friday night, states that the Catholic clergy of the Arch Diocese of Tuam had resolved to adhere to Conciliation Hall Repealers, and oppose the formation of the League.

Mr. Martin was still at large. Devin Riley had written to the Attorney General, avowing the Authorship of articles in the "Felon."

The Irish papers are very fierce, and must attract the attention of the authorities.

The proceedings of parliament are unimportant, Hume's motion for Parliamentary reform was rejected by a vote of eighty-four to three hundred and fifty-one.

FRANCE.

Armed men with loaded muskets and instruments for casting bullets, have been discovered in cellars about Paris.

The destruction of property during the insurrection was less than was supposed. The houses were battered considerably, however.

The general officers killed and wounded in the insurrection, were Generals Fegrier and Brea, (assassinated;) Fraquiois, killed; Burgoine, died of wounds; Courtais, wounded; Dansme, leg amputated; Luvirre, wounded; Lafontide, wounded—since died.

An immense number of colonels and superior officers were put hors du combat.

On the 29th a sentinel arrested two men in a cabriolet, with an immense sum of Russian gold and cartridges. They were heavily armed with pistols and daggers.

The insurgents used iron balls pierced with copper, which projected from both sides.

Changarnier has been appointed chief of the National Guard of the Seine.

The Legions of the National Guard who were unfaithful during the rebellion, have been disbanded.

The best informed persons consider Causidiere to have been the chief of the late insurrection, and that Louis Blanc was privy, but shrunk from active participation. Their organization was perfect.

The police are making important discoveries. The documents found will show where the money came from, and who promoted the insurrection.

[Telegraphed for the Balt. Sun.]

Later from Mexico.

N. Orleans, July 18, '48.

By an arrival to-day from Vera Cruz, dates from the Capitol to the 7th instant, have been received at New Orleans. There is, however, no positive news as to the progress of the revolution.

The forces of Bustamenta and Cortigar had been connected, and amounted to three thousand men, who were preparing to attack the insurgents under the supreme command of Jarauanta.

A protest against the constitutionality of the treaty was about to be laid before the Supreme Court, which had become the great agitating question.

News of the Week.

Correspondence of the Genesee Evangelist.

A narrow escape and fearful retribution.

Mr. Editor,—During a storm a few days since in Cameron, Steuben county, lightning struck the door of the dwelling house of Mr. I. B. Chase, destroying one side of it entirely, and passed so near Mrs. Chase that it stunned her for a moment, and then passed out of another door which was open, without doing further injury. But in an adjoining town a man who was admonished for his blasphemous revelry during a storm about the same time, defied with horrid oaths and blasphemous imprecations, the lightnings of heaven; and so horrid were his oaths and daring his wickedness, that the inmates of the house fled for refuge elsewhere: and hardly had they passed the threshhold of the dwelling, before the booming thunder bespoke the majesty of Him who holds the winds and guides the storm, and quick as thought, the lightning's flash was seen and its power fell upon this proud defier of God's arm, and as suddenly was he prostrated to the floor, a mutilated, lifeless body. The flash had done its work and he summoned to the bar of the Being whose lightnings he had so impiously defied.

M.

Accident.—At the celebration of the Fourth, at Peninsula, Summit County, Ohio, Mr. B. W. Longsdorff, lost his right hand by the premature discharge of a cannon.—'When will men learn to let cannon be fired only by those experienced in the matter?'—Ur. Gaz.

Niagara Suspension Bridge.—Narrow Escape.—That there is danger in crossing from the one cliff of Niagara river to the other, in a basket drawn on a single wire or on foot by the temporary foot-bridge, the following narrative from the Buffalo Commercial of Tuesday, abundantly illustrates:

"We learn that a thrilling scene occurred at the suspension bridge at Niagara Falls, a few days since. Four men were passing over the bridge when it was struck with one of those sudden and strong gusts of wind which frequently rush through the chasm with the tremendous force of a hurricane, and so twisted it as to turn it bottom upward. The men caught in the wires and in this position—suspended about two hundred feet above the restless waters beneath—they were enabled to maintain themselves until the alarm was given at the Falls—a mile and a half distant—and the whole population in a body rushed to the rescue. The bridge was restored to its former position and the men saved."

New Diving Bell.—Experiments were made at Boston, with a new diving bell the invention of a Mr. Richards, a Boston mechanic. It fully answered the anticipations of the inventor. It is capable of descending to the depth of one hundred feet or more. At a depth of twelve feet newspapers could be easily read within the bell. The inventor is about to further test its capabilities in an examination of the wreck of the boat Alabama, on Cape Cod.

From the Watchman of the Valley.

RAILROAD TRAVELLING.

Thanks to the several Railroad Companies between Buffalo and Albany for their recent and unexpected action in relation to the running of their cars upon the Sabbath.

God be praised that the gates to this great artery between the East and West are now closed on His most holy day. Now no merchant on pressing business, no searcher of health or pleasure, no recreant disciple of Christ who is more anxious to get home to his family than he is to honor his Master, can have privilege of travelling on the great western Railroad on the Sabbath.

We congratulate our christian brethren living in the cities and villages on the line of this road, that they are to be no longer disturbed in their enjoyment and observances of the Sabbath by the whistling locomotive and the thundering train.

It gives us pleasure also to learn that not in all New England is there one mile of all the numerous Railroads, that is used either for freight, passenger or mail trains.

For a long time there was but a single mail made up at the Boston Post Office, and we learn that that is now stopped, and all is quiet at that central and foreign office.

Of the two hundred daily trains that arrive and depart in the city of Boston, not one is permitted to break in upon the stillness of a N. England Sabbath.

And we would not forget the noble stand maintained by the "Mad River Road" in the northern part of our own State. From the first, through the christian and manly decision of its Superintendent, it has resisted the most pressing influences to run upon the Sabbath. Nor would we fail to notice in terms of general rebuke the time serving policy of the "Little Miami Company," which, with some influential christians in its Board of Directors, and one of the strictest sect, a long time at its head, seems neither to fear God or regard man. Let that company remember there is a day of retribution. Let them not forget that a tide of public sentiment is rapidly gathering for the maintenance of God's law and the quiet worship of his people, before which they may have to yield when it is too late to retain their character or promote their pecuniary interest. Perhaps it is not known to travellers generally, that if they leave Cincinnati on the Sabbath in the cars of the Little Miami Railroad, they cannot reach Sandusky any sooner than if they waited until Monday—that they must lie over at Springfield one day, because the Mad River Company "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

One word of commendation for the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad Company. They have never run ther cars, we believe, on the Sabbath, except three or four days last fall to accommodate the speculators in pork! For a few weeks the press of hogs was so great that the most exergetic efforts, kept up night and day, did not suffice; and, to the shame of of some honored christian brethren, God's law—that original, fundamental law of his kingdom—was set aside. What a scene! Christian men yielding their christian principles and the express stipulations of a chartered company, trampling under foot the law of God, disturbing the worship of their christian brethren, and giving offence to their consciences, and lending the influence of their example to swell the tide of infidelity and worldliness that is sweeping over the church and divine institutions, just to get a few more hogs to market in season that the speculators might make a few more dollars! But we trust hereafter no such exigency will be allowed to influence the conductors of that road.

Brethren in Christ and friends of the Sabbath, what say you to the fact that our Little Miami Railroad is one of the last in the country to yield obedience to God's law and the moral sense of the community?

Good Advice.—The editors of the National Intelligencer caution "all writers for the press to write with the greatest possible distinctness all proper names, and words of any foreign language and all technical terms, with which it cannot be expected of our compositors and proof readers to be as familiar as the writers themselves."

Alderman R. Swartwout, the brother to the noted Samuel Swartwout, the former Collector of N. York, fell down on Monday in Wall st., and expired almost immediately."

The telegraph line from Portland to Bangor is going forward rapidly. They are putting up the posts along the whole route. It is to be extended to Calias during September, when the people of N. Brunswick and Nova Scotia will probably be prepared to complete the last link to Halifax.

Planet Metis.—The British Royal Astronomical Society, has named the new planet discovered in April last, Metis, and the name has been adopted at the National Observatory in Washington.

Fire in Providence, R. I.—We learn from the Providence Journal that a fire broke out on Sunday morning, in the rear of the building next to the Whitaker Building, North Main street, owned by H. B. Browns and others, which was nearly destroyed. Several of the neighboring buildings were damaged. The following are the sufferers by this fire: J. O. & J. R. Potter, jewellers, loss $10,000, insured $5,000; Carpenter & Congdon, crockery dealers, lost their entire stock, between $9,000 and $10,000 in value, insured. They also lost all their books and accounts. Rufus Greene, Jr., and Edward Beverly, loss small; Greene & Arnold lost about $10,000 worth of boots and shoes, insured; Work & Hodges, merchant tailors, stock damaged, insured; G. & D. Taylor, dry goods jobbers, store much damaged, insured. The Transcript and the Herald printing offices suffered some damage. H. Oldham, engraver, and Abel Foster, grocer, had their stocks damaged by water, the latter considerably. He is insured for one thousand two hundred.

Bathers Drowned.—With the bathing season comes the usual large number of cases of drowning. On Friday evening, Henry Thomas Padley, aged twenty-three, was drowned, while bathing in the Genesee Valley Canal, near Rochester, N. Y. He was but one month from Liverpool, and could not swim. On Sunday morning, James S. Wheeler, 18 years of age, was drowned near Boston—the current taking him off though a good swimmer. At Medford, the same day, Mr. Thomas Richardson was drowned. It is supposed that he was seized with cramp. On the 15th, the only son of John H. Willard, of the Troy Female Seminary, aged about ten years was drowned while bathing.

Death of Mrs. S. C. E. Mayo.—This lady, editor of the Rose of Sharon and the Ladies' Repository, of Boston, and a writer for many other periodicals, died in Gloucester, Mass., on the 9th instant, aged 28 years. She leaves a husband and an infant child. Her maiden name was Sarah C. Edgarton.

Religious Instruction of Virginia NEGROES.

At a recent meeting of a Baptist ecclesiastical organization, called the General Association of Virginia, a proposition was made to appoint a Committee to inquire into the expediency of petitioning the Legislature to modify the laws relative to the religious instruction of the colored population. The subject excited a good deal of interest, and was very earnestly discussed. In the course of the debate it was stated, that the laws restricting the religious privileges of the colored population, are more rigid in Virginia than in any other State. In all other States, colored persons are permitted to preach; and in Georgia and Louisiana they officiate as pastors of colored churches. But in Virginia no such privileges are allowed them. And, indeed, it is said that the whites are restricted, for, by an existing law, the presence of a single slave at a night meeting in any of the churches in Virginia would render the whole congregation of white persons liable to imprisonment! Of course such an absurd and ridiculous law could never be enforced; but it serves to show the spirit of slavery even in that State from wich so many Presidents of our free country have come. Well, after the subject had been thoroughly discussed, and several amendments and substitutes to the first resolution proposed, the following was adopted with one dissenting voice:—

Resolved, That a committee be appointed to petition the Legislature for such modification of the laws respecting the religious privileges of the colored population, as will admit of their assemblage at any time by the permission of their owners, in the presence of white persons, and will admit of their engaging in all proper religous exercises, provided they be conducted in the presence and under the supervision of a committee of white members of the churches to which they belong.—Sab. Rec.

Seminary for Blacks in Michigan.—The Legislature of Michigan, at its last session granted a charter to the black people of the State, conferred upon them the right to establish, in the county of Lenawee, a seminary in which labor shall be combined with learning.

From the Baltimore Sun.

Death of Ex-Governor Shunk.

The telegraph brought us, at an early hour yesterday morning, tidings of the death of ex-Governor Shunk, and the Philadelphia papers reach us wrapped in the habiliments of mourning—The distinguished deceased has been prominently indetified with the local politics of Pennsylvania for twenty years or more, and was universally esteemed for his unimpeachable integrity, moral worth, and all those social qualities of head and heart that made friends with him of all with whom he came in contact. The Philadelphia Ledger publishes the following dispatch from Harrisburg announcing his death:

HARRISBURG, July 20.

The Govenor breathed his last this evening about 7 o'clock. His death was calm and devoid of pain.

Last night, about 11 o,clock, his hands and arms commenced getting cold. This morning, about 11 o,clock, death's hand was laid upon his lower extremities. Stimulants proved unavailing—slowly, but surely, the cold king advanced to his heart, and a few minutes before seven o'clock, his spirit was released.

His last words were addressed to his weeping wife—'Don't fret Jane, I am anxious for the end.' His family and relatives, the heads of departments, his physicians and one or two friends were present at the final moment.

Though expected, the event has struck a chill over the town. He leaves a property of only about $4,000 to sustain his family.

In compliance with his repeated request, his remains will be buried at the Trappe, in Montgomery County, his birth place. It is about 25 miles from Philadelphia.

Fatal Accident.—A Mrs. Gould, the mother of seven children, was killed in Newark N. J., on Tuesday afternoon, by being thrown from a wagon. Her eldest daughter was also much injured the wheel passing over her neck.

Frightful Accident.—A man named John Hyland, a native of the county Westmeath, Ireland was killed on Thursday last, at Anthony's Nose, on the New York and Albany railroad, under the most thrilling circumstances. He had charged a large bore for the purpose of blasting an immense rock, which, after the fuse being lighted, missed; and this he went to remedy with a cast steel drill. The steel struck fire and the rock burst, the pieces flying in every direction; one of them, weighing about three hundred weight, struck him on the side, being chiselled from former blasts, not only broke his ribs, but entered his entrails, which protruded through the wound on the side. He was blown up, together with the rock, nearly twelve feet into the air, but descended on his feet, and immediately called for a clergyman. Many of his fellow laborers ran in search of one, but before he had arrived the sufferer had expired.

An Aged Orator.—At at a recent meeting of the Free Soil Democrats of Chicago, David Kennison, the sole survivor of the Boston Tea Party of 1776—aged 111 years—stood up amid the spontaneous cheers of the crowd and spoke for ten or fifteen minutes. As he told of the "days which tried men's souls," his eye grew bright with the fire of youth, and his trembling h and with a firmer grasp lifted up his cane, as if he were again brandishing his sword in the front of battle. The old man closed with the words,—"Make your country free and abolish Slavery."

DROWNED in the Muskingum river, in the upper part of the town, on Saturday the 8th inst., Geo. B. son of Mr. G. Hanlon, aged nine years and 6 months. He with a few other boys were amusing themselves in the water, when he got beyond his depth, and being unable to swim sunk beyond recovery. The other boys gave the alarm immediately, but the body had disappeared, and was not found until Tuesday following when it was discovered floating some seven miles below the town, by a stranger who succeeded in bringing it to the shore. This is a sore affliction to the bereaved parents; but we hope they believe with their hearts that "all things work together for good to them that love God."—Fam. Quarto.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A Mr. Tyler of this place, passing eastwardly on the National Road near Hebron in a buggy yesterday, was run into by the mail coach from this place, his buggy overthrown and dashed to pieces, and himself thrown some distance, with serious and perhaps fatal injury. A statement of the facts of the case which we have seen, prove a high degree of wanton if not criminal carelessness on the part of the driver of the coach; for it appears that the buggy of Mr. Tyler was entirely out of the track and upon the extreme verge of the road when the occurrence took place.—O. S. Journal.

The Pilgrim Hollanders in Iowa.

In Marion county, Iowa, a settlement has been recently commenced under peculiarly interesting circumstances. It consists of from 800 to 900 immigrants from Holland, driven from their native land like the Pilgrim Fathers of New England by religious persecution. An interesting account of them was given by one of the members of the Iowa General Congregational Association at its late meeting, who labors in that vicinity, of which the following is the substance:

They are Protestant Dissenters from the Established Church of Holland, and under an old statute forbidding more than twenty persons to assemble for religious worship, except in connexion with the Establishment, their meetings were broken up and they were prevented from enjoying "freedom to worship God." They were also forbidden to give their children a religious education. In consequence of this they have removed to America and settled in Iowa.

They have purchased two whole townships of land, each six miles square. Their leader is Domine Shelle, a pious and devoted minister, who is pastor of the Church, consisting of about 150 members. He suffered severe persecution before he left Holland and paid at different times 30,000 guilders in fines. There are also five elders who act as assistants to the minister, laboring in word and doctrine, and preparing business for the action of the Church. The people are very moral and industrious, and those who are professors of religion are very conscientious in the discharge of duty. The Sabbath is strictly observed among them, and their children are faithfully trained in the ways of godliness.

As an illustration of their habits, it is said that even in the field they never sit down to take refreshment without imploring the blessing of Heaven. In family worship the children all pray separately first and then the father commences the social exercises. To show how they regard the Sabbath the following was related: A young man of their number was employed to work for a tavern-keeper, but finding he did not reverence the Lord's day, and that it would be required of him to do many things which he thought inconsistent with the observance of the Sabbath, he refused to remain in his employ.

In church polity they are original Congregationalists. Like the Pilgrims of New England they have ruling elders, but as with them they can only prepare and propose business, the Church reserving to itself final action. Their elders however preach, and in some instances administer ordinances. They sympathize with our Congregational body, and Mr. Shoulte has expressed his intention to unite with the association within whose bounds the settlement lies. They are anxious, I am happy to say, to become amalgated with our people, and encourage the learning and use of the English language as all foreign immigrants in our country should. They have considerable pecuniary means, and are quite intelligent. Their manners and habits are primitive and peculiar, and excite much attention.—On the whole they are an interesting people, and will make valuable citizens. Nearly all can write. More are expected to join them ere long.

J. C. H.

Dubuque, Iowa, June 16.

Great Fire in Bedford, Pa.—The stage agent of the Pittsburgh and Chambersburgh line of stages, Mr. Moorehead, received the following telegraphic dispatch yesterday morning:

BEDFORD, July 12, 1848.

Mr. William R. Moorehead—

The stage stable and four teams, four coaches, and five sets of harness, were burned at 12 o'clock, 15 minutes. Twelve horses burnt in Col. Outinger's stables, and seven carriages and harness, all the grain, and five stables.

Steubenville, Mt. Vernon and Indiana Railroad.—The examination and survey of the route for this Railroad, commenced yesterday, at this city—the point of departure, the African Church—by an experienced and competent Engineer and suitable assistants. From examinations heretofore made no doubt is entertained but that the most favorable route for a railroad from the Ohio river to the centre of the State of Ohio, is that which commences at this city, by the vallies of Cross creek, Conotton, &c., to the level or table land near the Ohio canal, from whence it is believed that no natural obstacle exists until the Cincinnati and Lake Erie Railroad shall be reached. Beyond that line, it is not probable that we shall extend our views for the present. The city council of Steubenville has made a liberal appropriation, in aid of these surveys and examinations; which appropriation, to be efficient, must be increased by private subscriptions. If this Railroad shall be but fairly commenced, Steubenville will soon become a large city. Without any such stimulant, she is going ahead at a railroad pace, in buildings and business.—Steubenville Journal.

A Public Improvement.—The contract for the rails for the Chicago and Galena Railroad has been concluded, and a portion of the rails are already on their way to their destination. It is expected that some 15 or 20 miles of the road westward from Chicago, will be in active use during the present season. This road opens the trade of the whole Northwestern district—the lead region—to the Lakes, and hence it is regarded as an improvement of great interest.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

AS IS SHOULD BE.—Many years since, when the Lieut. Gov. Phillips, of Andover, Mass., was a student at Harvard College, owing to some boyish freak, he quit the Unversity and went home. His father was a grave man, of sound mind, strict judgement and of few words. He inquired into the matter but deferred expressing any opinion until the next day. At breakfast he said, speaking to his wife, "My dear, have you any tow-cloth in the house suitable to make Sam a frock and trowsers?" She replied yes. "Well," replied the old gentlman, "follow me, my son." Samuel kept pace with his father as he walked near the common, and at lenght ventured to ask, "What are you going to do with me, father?" "I am going to bind you an apprentice to that blacksmith," replied his father; "take your choice; return to college, or you must work." "I had rather return," said the son. He did return, confessed his fault, was a good scholar, and became a respectable man. If all parents were like Mr. P., the students at our colleges would prove better students, or the nation would have a plentiful supply of blacksmiths.

GOOD—VERY GOOD.—"Never be afraid to do right, because somebody will laugh at you. Never be ashamed of an old hat if it is well brushed, and the best you have; nor of an old coat, if to get another you have to go in debt for it to the tailor.

"Dig potatoes, hoe corn, maul rails, carry mortar, do any thing that is useful, rather than be indolent; and don't skulk behind some tree, or creep into a hole, for fear some simpleton will see your patched clothes, and laugh at you.

"Let people understand, and plainly, that your body and your mind are your own. If they have no brains, you have, or, at any rate, are trying to get some.

"You will sometimes be called a blind bigot, for defending a few principles, which you have thoroughly examined, and which you know to be correct. Well, to be called a bigot is hard: but to be called a blind bigot, by one who cannot and will not see, is still harder.

Lamentable Accident.

James Cavenaugh, of this city, a variety dealer and peddler, accidentally shot himself, whilst out in Mercer county on an excursion, on last Tuesday forenoon, about eleven o'clock. He had left his home on Monday morning last, in his peddling wagon, accompanied by his little son, a lad about fourteen, and, as he was accustomed to do he took a double barrelled gun for the purpose of killing game along the the road. It appears that he had got out of the wagon to shoot a squirrel, but it disappeared before he had a chance to fire. In returning to his wagon, he neglected to put the guard over the trigger, and was standing up leaning with his breast over the muzzle of the gun, when from the jolting of the wagon it went off, and both loads entered his breast, killing him instantly. His body was bro't to his home, on Third street, yesterday afternoon. His wife had not received any intelligence of his death before the arrival at the wharf of the dead body. He leaves a large family to deplore his loss.—Pitts. Gaz.

KILL THE BED BUGS.—Who has not been driven to his wit's end in a summer night by these little blood-suckers? What housewife has not felt her patience exhausted by their persevering residence in her beds and furniture? The man who will find a means of subduing their insect army will be more truly a benefactor of the race than any conqueror of them all; and such a victory will be much more to our admiration than many recorded in history, however great and bloody they may be.

WELL HERE'S THE REMEDY.

Take any quanity of alcohol, small or great as may answer your purpose, and dissolve in it as much corrosive sublimate as it will take up.—This well applied once a year, will completely rout out the bed bugs, however firmly in possession before.

From Galignani's Messenger, of June 20.

The Constitution of the French Republic.

In the pesence of God, and in the name of the French people, the National Assembly proclaims and decrees as follows:

DECLARATION OF DUTIES AND RIGHTS.

ART. 1. The duties of Man in society are thus summed up—Respect to the Constitution, obedience to the Laws, defence of Country, accomplishment of Family Duties, and the fraternal practice of the maxim, "Do not do unto others what you would not wish others to do unto you; what you wish men to do for you, do unto them likewise."

2. The Constitution guarantees to all citizens—Liberty, Equality, Safety, Instruction, Labor, Property, Assistance.

3. Liberty consists in the right of going and coming, of assembling peaceably and unarmed, of associating, petitioning, of worship according to one's creed of manifesing one's ideas and opinions by means of the press or otherwise. The exercise of these rights has no limits but the rights and liberty of others, or public security.

4. "Equality consists in the exclusion of all

5. Safety consists in the protection of Person, Family, Domicil, Rights, and Property of each member of Society.

Titles and Privliges of Birth, Class or Caste—in the admissibility of every one to all public employments without any other motive of preference than virtue and talent—and the equitable participation of all citizens in the advantages of Society.

6. The right of Instruction is that which every citizen has of receiving gratuitously from the State the education necessary to develop his Physical, Moral, & Intellectual faculties of each of them.

7. The right of Labor is that which every man has of living by his work. Society is bound, by the productive and general means at its disposal, and which will hereafter be organised, to furnish labor to every man who cannot procure it otherwise.

8. Property consists in the right of enjoying and disposing of his possessions, his revenues, the produce of his labor, of his intelligence, and of his industry.

9. The right of Assistance is which belongs to the children abandoned by their parents the infirm and aged, to receive the means of assistace from the State.

FROM THE RIO GRANDE.

News from Matamoras up to the 24th ult. has been received. The American Army was rapidly evacuating the country. On the 14th ult. the encampment at Saltillo was broken up. The troops halted at Monterey, but the wagon train, with stores and ordnance, reached Camargo on the 18th ult. Two companies, under the command of Capt. Rucker, left Monterey for Santa Fe, by way of Chihuahua. A portion of the same regiment is now in California with Col. Mason, its commander—some companies are on the Upper Missouri, and one or more on the line from Vera Cruz to Mexico. It is said they will concentrate and be sent to serve in New Mexico and California. Five companies of the 3d Dragoons, under Col. Butler, left Mier on the 20th ult. for Palo Alto. Captain Wilder's company, 10th Infantry, will remain at Mier until the public stores are all withdrawn.—The Arkansas volunteer cavalry, and Capt Reed's Texas Rangers, are at Camargo, and will be paid off & mustered out of the service about this time. It is understood that a great many of these men will remain on the Rio Grande. Others will return home through Texas. The Ohio volunteer cavalry and the Texas companies that were in service at Saltillo, are on the road to Camargo, & no doubt there before this time. The Texans will be discharged at Camargo. The Ohio company comes here. The Virginia and Missisippi volunteers, the 19th infantry, and some other corps, will march with Gen. Wool, and may soon be expected. On the 12th ult., a robbing band of from 35 to 50 Lipan and Wacoe Indians, 5 white men and 7 Mexicans, drove off from the neighborhood of Rio Grande City, about one hundred head of horses & mules. Capt. Reed, with about 30 Rangers, pursued, and overtook them on an open prairie, where a battle ensued. The Indian loss in the fight is stated at six or seven killed and wounded; and the American less at two wounded. Whilst the fight was going on, the stolen property was driven on by four white men and five Mexicans. Only five horses and eight mules were recovered. The Texans made no further pursuit, their horses being worn down by hard riding and want of food and water.—Cin. Commercial.

A rich man's son frequently begins the world where his father left off, and ends where his father began—penniless. Give your son a trade, and let him be of some service to the world he lives in. Train him up to some honorable business, and in due time he will doubly repay for the labor and the pains bestowed on his youth.

Marble, of fine quality, has been quarried in Floyd county, near the Coosa river, Ga.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.

A little son of Mr. CASY, residing on East Front street, while playing on a raft opposite the rolling-mill, yesterday morning, fell into the river and was drowned. All efforts to rescue the little fellow were unavailing, notwithstanding his cries directed to the spot.—Cin. Com.

The Directors of the Theological Seminary at New Albany have elected Dr. Rice, of Cin. to preside over that institution in the room of Dr. Mathews deceased; and Dr. Muray, of Elizabethtown, New Jersey, to fill the chair of Ecclesiastical History, church government, &c.—Fam. Quarto

NOTICES.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs. C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

Woodsfield Circuit, Muskingum District.—Please give notice that the meeting of Brother Clancy, our President, for this circuit, will be at Lewisville, 7 miles west of Woodsfield on the Summerfield road. Call on Brother Francis Allen. Brother H. T. Lawson is invited to attend this meeting if possible

N. LINDER,
Superintendent.

Maumee Mission, Ohio District.—Notice is hereby given to our worthy President, Brother Young, that his meeting for this Mission will be at Brother Tipton's, 3 miles north of Providencetown. Will our ministerial brethren of the adjoining circuits, come to our assistance?

Also, the meeting for Portage Circuit, is to be held in Perrysburg, which appointment is now under my charge. Come, brethren, make your arrangements to attend both appointments, and may the God of all grace be with us at these meetings

C. CARTER.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

LIMA CT., OHIO DIST.—Br. Bassett: By your permision, I would publish through the Reborder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on top Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it wa us.

J. L. BORTON.

CLARKSVILLE CT., OHIO DIST.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

NEWARK CIRCUIT, MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Irville, on the 1rt Saturday and Sunday in August next. Any ministering brethren who can do so, are requested to attend and assist us on the occasion.

W. H. MARSHALL.

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August next. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected; and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local, together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst, to prepare the ground.

E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt

KALIDA CT., OHIO DIST.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Borton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

COSHOCTON CT., MUSK. DIST.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

COLUMBIA CT., MUSK. DIST.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT

BELLVUE CT., MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

N Linder	O	Mrs H. Draper	Ia
D C Casson	"	H Collings	"
P M—Haskellville 1 sub	"	J Gay	"
Geo Brown	"	P M—Lafayette	"
W Remsburgh	"	T P Armstrong	"
W Duling	"	P M—Palatine	Va
C Carter	"	W McGwigan	"
S Worcester	Pa	S Dilley	Ill
P M—Brownsville	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ c/s.
S Worcester		9	52	3 00
Guthrie, Buckingham & Co		9	52	2 00
T P. Armstrong		9	45	25
W Duling	W Wiscarver	9	52	1 00
T Foster	T Little	7	52	2 00
"	S Summerville	7	52	2 00
"	W Barrack	9	40	5 00

The P. M. at Brownsville, Pa., notifies us that A. J. Lynn, refuses to take his paper from the office. He owes us for nearly a year and a half. Will Br. Symonton please see to this case and collect our dues?

Br. S. Worcester is informed that $3 now received, and $3 before, pay us up for vols. 7, 8 and 9 in full. It may be that Brother Springer has a claim for vol. 6. We do not know. Where can we send the balance of the year for you?

Br. S. W. Widney, the P. M. at Lafayette, Ia informs us that W. Smith does not take his paper from the office. Will you please attend to this case, and report to us?

The P. M. at Palatine, Va., notifies us that D. Holland has removed, and that no one takes out his paper. Will our agent please advise us in this case? Br. H. only owes us for 3 months.

Brother T. Shipp, papers have been returned us from T. Russell and S. Lakin. The former owes for one vol., and the latter for one volume and a quarter. You will oblige us by attending to these cases, if you please, and reporting to us, as the Post Master gives no explanation.

MARRIED.

MARRIED—On June 22d, by Rev. William Duling, Mr. CHARLES CONLEY, to Miss LEVINA RICHARDSON, both of Coshocton Co., O.

Advertisements.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking all out grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip a part their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Doen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisuness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED. READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The vol time begins with January

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT, Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome: paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents, and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $5 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

PILLS.

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nerveus and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have seffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says, "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm. Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, and medical advice and attendance. I was advised to take a tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visited England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case:—they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 23 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 283, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthelf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fair, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Rickton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with me small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping h

For the Western Recorder.

ORATION,

Delivered July 4th, 1848, at the Cove-Spring Sabbath-School Celebration, near Bainbridge, Ohio, by Owen T. Reeves, Jr.

[BY REQUEST.]

FELLOW CITIZENS: In being called upon to address you, a sense of inferiority compels me to acknowledge my insufficiency for the task. But as apologies have long since failed to form a scabbard for the sword of criticism, we deem further confession unnecessary. Our discourse being designed for the youth of the audience in particular; we shall use no labored effort of oratory, but endeavor, with a simplicity, in consonance with the commonality of our ideas, to address you for a few moments, on subjects connected with our national prosperity. The appearance of the glorious orb of day in the eastern horizon, has this morning been greeted as hitherto, by the firing of cannon, and the rending asunder of the etherial vault by the deafning roar of artillery, and especially by the grateful homage of millions of American freemen, as the great anniversity of that event, which calls forth as its final consequence, the great and growing fabric of American republicanism,—the second hope of the world. There is not a very strong probability of attaching to the anniversary too much importance and gravity of consideration. This day brings with it the pleasant recollection of the success of those principles, avowed, in the declaration made seventy-two years ago, and in commemoration of which we celebrate this day. It brings also the rememberance of that mighty struggle for liberty, that contest of right and wrong, wherein justice suffered, bled, and almost died; but again revived and at length conquered: whilst injustice in all the malace characteristic of its nature, swayed destructive reign over the rights of earth-born freemen; but at last in the hour of close contest, discovering the Ruler of the Universe, who framed the bodies, and is the father of the spirits, and regulates the destinies of men;—to assume the defence of His own attribute justice shrank from the conflict and under the covering prowess of the British lion, the enemy of God and man left the shores of America. We view the scenes of the struggle for liberty—we behold on the altar of every true American heart, that then inhabited the bodies of men, the patriotic fire of devotion ascending in sweet incense to the principle of genuine liberty, and we glory in the magic influence of the scene.

But that we may better analize the circumstance connected with the heart endeared revolution; let us forget those with which we are surrounded in this the day of our gracious visitation. Let us forget the genius of our free institution and the splendor of our wide-spread intelligence; let us forget those manifestations of the spirit of enterprise and improvement exhibited in every portion of our far stretching dominions; let us forget our internal and social improvements, our numerous and improved rivers, our many canals and railroads, the application of steam in all its forms to facilitate the transportation of produce and merchandise, the general refinement of society and the manifest regard for social relations; let us forget that we live in an age where the people talk with tongues of lightning and travel with the speed of the whirlwind: let us forget all these and lead our imaginations back through the past and settle our minds upon the banks of the memorable James river, whereon Jamestown the first permanent settlement was made in North America. Let us recognise the time when the unbroken silence of the forest, except as waked from monotony by the songsters of the air, the howl of wild beasts and the frantic yell of the ruthless savage, —was first sung with the piercing notes of civilization, and the first echoes of free and powerful exertion was heard to resound from mountain to mountain top, forming strains of thrilling emotion as it rushed in hurrying accents o'er hill and dale. The hardships sustained by that colony in their labored and untiring effort to form a permanent settlement, are not surpassed if equaled in the history of bold adventurers. However, misfortune and hardship is not unfrequently the parent of moderation and reflection, and the foster-mother of future prosperity.—With Jamestown as a cradle in their infancy, the American colonies ushered forth to the accomplishment of the great design for which they seem to have been destined, namely: the civilization of America. Though beset with the necessary sufferings of new colonines; frustrated in all their attempts to render life enviable, by the bleak shores of a northern latitude—by the sorrowful howl of the wild and raging tempest, and by the brutal warfare of savage Indians, yet like the Isralites of old, they endured the most perilous hardships, wandering through the wilderness, in anxious anticipation of finding the object of their search, a home free from the shackels of monarchy and sectarianism, a shelter from the blast in the wilds of America, that they might be "that happy people whose God is the Lord." The progress of civilization in America is of too general notoriety to require even a summary recital. In reviewing the settlement of our beloved land we behold in no instance more magnanimity in suffering—more resignation in privation—more determination in adversity—more zeal for the cause of civil and religions freedom, a stronger feeling of resentment against oppression, a deeper rooted feeling of regard for humanity and the natural rights of man—a firmer reliance, and trust in the arm of Jehovah than is exhibited in the character and actions of our pilgrim fathers. Civil and religious liberty, in the Western hemisphere sprang up from the seed implanted by the pilgrim fathers, who on landing at Plymouth rock, framed and carried into effect the first scheme of republican government, which has ever afterwards served as a model of the free States of America. By a careful examination of all the circumstances which led to the civilization of the Western Hemisphere, we will discover a long concatenation of providential occurrences sufficient of themselves to quell the fanaticism of the most Atheistical, & to establish the fact that the operations of circumstances as well as those of nature, are directed by the hand of the Omnipotant.

The downfall of the popularity and countenance given to Romanism in the old world, and the discovery and settlement of the new, are coincidences so closely allied to each other and to the interest of the human family, that their occurrence and co-operation are considered by the wise as the penumbra of the dark ages, and the twilight of Chrystendom. The settlement of N. England was one of the immediate results of Protestant reformation. The Puritans of England carried out the priciples of Luther in their dissent from the Episcopal hierarchy, Liberty of conscience was the principle for which they contended. The direful ire of Roman persecution, but increased their numbers and confirmed them in their opposition to the overbearing authority of the established Church of England. Unable to find repose in Great Britain, they fled to Holland, and at length determined to seek refuge in the wilds of America. Called by the importunities of conscience to emigrate into a far country, which they should afterwards receive as an inheritance, they cheerfully obeyed—in the language of inspiration—"they went out not knowing whether they went." After a long and wearisome voyage, safely housed in the ark which God had directed to prepare—protected by Him who rules the storms and holds the winds curbed and subservient in his hands; they landed on the shores of that land, the inhabitants of which, have delighted to bask in the ocean of their adventures. On their arrival, they stepped forth upon the strand, and with bended knees raised their voices in grateful supplication to God who had preserved them so entire and brought them in safety to these unhallowed shores. How lasting should be the impressions made upon every mind, when we contemplate the grand yet humbling scene of bowing suppliants in a baren waste, offering before the throne of Eternal, sacrifices of thanksgiving and praise. Parents, considering the high tone of morals that characterized your fore-fathers, are you prepared to answer the interrogations of your children concerning the apparent ingratitude manifested by you and your cotemporaries, amid the lavished profusion of a bountiful Providence. In the language of the prophet may we not truly say, "Hear O heavens, and give ear O earth: for the Lord hath spoken; I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me." But to return. The prospects of the pilgrims after their debarkation were such as to appal the most chivalric of human daring. Placed in a howling wilderness as immovably as Prometheus bound—inhabited by pagan savages and wild beasts—a dreary winter approaching—no shelter from the tempest, and no place of abode. They had one resting place and that was sure. Their trust was in Him who hath said to his chosen, "The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are everlasting arms, and he shall thrust out the enemy before thee, and shall say destroy them." But it is useless to persue farther the early settlement of our to-day prosperous land. Suffice it to say that they endured privations unparalled in the history of the world: Indians harrassed them without cessation; famine oftentimes stared them in the face, and dangers the most perilous continually came upon them. Such are the throes of anguish, youth of America experienced for you. You live to-day the happy recipients of all your precious privileges in consequence of the desolation and death of which your national domain was the province, and its scattering inhabitants the pitiful subjects.

The tree of liberty under the shade and healthful influence of which you are to-day permitted to repose, was strengthened and nourished by the bones and blood of your noble ancestors. Their resignation in suffering and perseverance in adversity, together with the special providence of God, has brought to you the happy circumstances with which you are blessed. Heaven forbid that you should ever imbibe the spirit of ingratitude. Scarcely had the rememberance of their pioneer sufferings ceased to flash continually before them, when the books of desolation were again opened, and the daily record of insults to the power of the colonies and atrocious barbarities committed against every principle of humanity and justice by the mother-country; opens to our view a spectacle the most revolting, and at which every feeling of the human heart recoils. The barbarity of the natives was excusable, and elicited from the colonist nothing more than such a retribution as would prevent the continued exercise of their savage cruelties. Oppression from any other nation than Great Britain would have been regarded with contempt, and shocked with the availability of force; but coming, as did their insults and discountenance from the crown, whose subjects they had boasted to be, and whose power they had willingly defended, the shock was too appaling—the scene too awful—the crime too great an enormity to receive one glance of sympathy, proud contempt or fraternal regard. Think for one moment of the injustice couched in this tyranical movement of Great Britain towards her colonies —a parent not only forsaking, but oppressing her children. Think not children, that your Sabbath School lesson is a farce if it should teach you that "the heart of man is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." But let us inquire something of the nature of this enormity, and look into the arena of strife and the vale of blood-shed. Let us call up those "days that tried men's souls," and imbibe a draught of true patriotism as we behold the promptness and zeal, manifested by our revolutionary fathers in resisting the encroachments of the British lion. Early in the eighteenth century the impartial reader will find the foundations laid and these measures taken which proved the great lever that contributed to hoist from our shoulders our load of British revenue, and to break the yoke of monarchy which galled the necks of our jealous fathers. We learn with astonisment the determination on the part of the British ministry, then in power to take away some of our liberties, as guarantied by the British constitution, and instead of extending the arms of love and protection around her apparently weak and helpless colonies: she lifted up against us the weapons of destruction, and granting us the embrace of the icy arms of tyrany and death. Denying us the protection of that code of laws which secued to its subjects certain individual rights, and adopting the principle that "might constitute right," her policy towards us was at once changed. We could no longer defend our rights by saying, "We are subjects of his Britanic Majesty." We were regarded as foreigners, and cast out of the vineyard of British protection as reprobates in the sight of His Majesty. And when step by step the crown advanced in its iniquitious bearing, and at length resorted to violence on the persons of some of our ablest statesmen, reprimanding some, punishing others, and offering premiums for those possessed of sufficient moral courage to brave the displeasure of His Britanic Majesty, and nobly advocate the cause of the enfeebled and oppressed, when her inhuman soldiery—if I may be allowed the expression—were carrying death from center to circumference; ravaging towns and cities: burning and otherwise destroying public and private property; imprisoning our citizens, oppressing our men, corrupting our morals, restricting our social relations, and oven carrying their destruction to the family hearthstones, murdering in cold blood our fathers, our mothers, our sisters and our brothers, without respect of age, sex or condition: then we say, and not till then, was that spirit of war aroused in the breasts of our Puritan fathers, which was destined ere long to burst forth with a power uncontrolable and irresistable. The indignation of the crown was provoked by the positive refusal of the colonies to submit to their flagrant legislation. And this, behold the characteristic consistency of our illustrious predecessors, which I am sorry to say, their progenitors have disregarded, for whenever an outrage from the legislature hall rushed forth upon their rights as the designing wolf upon the sheepfold, like the flock they were guarded from immediate destruction by the garb of willingness to suffer as long as sufferable, and hence we see them engaged in petitioning their oppressors, praying the appeal of the outrage, refusing to take up arms as long as there were any other weapons which they could use, in meantime gathering strength and concentration of effort as well as accumulating the sympathy of the disinterested world. At the passage of the stamp act torrents of indignation rolled broad cast o'er the whole land, public sentiment was aroused to a degree of excitement hitherto unknown. The illustrious Patrick Henry in defence of his resolutions introduced into the house of Burgesses, of Virginia, gave vent to that celebrated burst of eloquence: "Cæsar had his Brutus, Charles the first his Cromwell, and George the third," "Treason, treason," burst from the lips of the speaker, and most of the members of the Assembly.—Henry faltered not a moment, but with the most emphatic determination of voice and manner "may profit by their example." The same zeal and feeling spread with electrical rapidity. The spirit of resentment to British usurpation daily waxed warmer, and opposition grew more turbulent. Though Great Britain was virtually a den of iniquity and its inhabitants misanthropes, yet there must exist in the breast of survivers of his country's liberation, the kindest feelings of regard for those Englishmen who dared lift up their voice in denunciation of the course of the crown towards her colonies. The names of Beckford, Jackson, Bane, Meredith and others, will be remembered as long as the genius of American liberty shall exercise its magic influence over the minds of men. Battles were fought. America was disconsolate, England was distracted. The press poured forth the most bitter invictives against the mother-country, whilst the pulpit echoed the most eloquent appeals to the oppressed, and spirited exhortations to take up arms in defence of their rights. The issue pressed upon the colonists was submission or death. They chose the latter in preference.

But the great step was yet to be taken. The sun of heaven shone on our Western Hemisphere under vastly different and inauspicious circumstances seventy-two years yesterday, than did it perform its last apparent annual revolution, and the same luminary of day which sat beneath the western hills amidst the last twilight under circumstances of civil quietude, and apparent national prosperity fled from the scenes of civil commotion and national distraction to hide its head in the western horizon, on the eve previous to the declaration of Independence. But when it rose in the morning it marked a new era in the history of the world. Anxious solicitude sat enthroned upon every countenance. That day witnessed the declaration of American Independence. The war was on their hands and with the sacred motto "Victory to or death," they embarked their all in the bark of probability and Providence, and steered through tears and blood to final success. The history of mighty conquests, presents to the mind naught but a scene of carnage and bloodshed, without provocation, without respect of humanity. Not so with the American Revolution. The causes which compelled to the contest are such as would justify in the light of knowledge and revelation such a responsible movement. It was in defence of life and for liberty that they marched fearlesly to the field of contest, and spilled their blood. Their efforts were backed by the "God of battles," who so signally recognized the success of their arms. Peace at length dawned again upon the world and sent her enlivening rays through the scattered cloud of contention. America was pure, and the mother country recognized her egression from colonial subjection.

We have finished our remarks upon this thrilling era in our history. We may draw a few inferences from this part of our subject in another place. The scene of distress and civil disquietude stops not here. The capability of suffering was fast diminishing, the minds of the revolutionists was bewildered by extreme mental agony, their bodies emaciated by corporeal exertion, the late province of blood-shed and war was now the hospital of consequential suffering. Reduced to want and penury in the extreme, without government, without a treasury, without the means of national defence, destitute of every thing but the day-star of liberty, which appeared to them in the far distant future as a beacon light; leading them through all difficulties to future prosperity and national honor: and when the goal of their race heaved in view, that which had been but a twinkling star shone forth with a meridian brilliancy, that eclipsed the dazzling splendor that encircles kings, and the vain magnificence that hovers over princes.

But time would fail us to indulge in the effusions of an enraptured imagination, on the operations and results of the past: the present more immediately concerns us and our happiness.—The constitution of these United States: the written document of our national faith and practice, was adopted forming a republican government establishing as the executive power, the office of a President, as the legislative power, a national Congress. Under these regulations we have steered our gallant bark for sixty years. Our course has been marked by war and civil commotion, but the ship of state still triumphantly rides upon the waves of the billowing ocean of national being. Thus far we have traced in a summary manner the causes which led to the revolution; we have granted our sympathies to aid our imaginations in picturing the dark shades of woe consequent upon the settlement and redemption of our national domain; the prosperity of our nation and the happy condition of most if its inhabitants; is familiar to us all, and weighing all these things deliberately what is the inference which we draw. Woe be to us if we be not that happy people whose God is the Lord. The weight of our responsibility is a question we cannot evade. "Much hath been given and much will be required." It hath been wisely said that, He who can measure the responsibility of American youth must be endowed with an eye of wisdom characterised by peculiar powers of discrimination. The nature of this responsibility we presume not to thoroughly investigate, nor to notice comprehensively the means of preparing our youth for the righteous adjustment of their incumbent duties. The problem whether man is capable of self government remains not for your children to solve. The question has been wrought and you have but to give to the world the proof that the work employed in the solution of the problem is correct. The time is fast approaching when you must forsake the innocent merriments of childhood, and appear on the stage of public action; to assume the support of the character of a wide-spread and intelligent population, as well as that of a great nation. It is from your groups of puberity that must come our future "great embodiments;" our Presidents, our Legislators, our Chieftains, our Civilians, our Lawyers, our Physicians, our Divines, we would admonish you to consider your "manifest destiny." Your happiness can but be augmented if you are prepared to fill worthily the stations that await you, abandon the idea that you are to be only insignificants in the world, awake, to hail with joy and and consciousness of your ability to perform, that which awaits you. Many are the facilities for improvement with which you are surrounded & if economically employed, will prove commensurate with the issue, for which they have been instituted. We call your attention to one only, namely: the Sabbath-School. Man may in his ingenuity seek out many inventions; may frame the most consistent philosophy; may determine the number of the stars; may with the key of human knowledge unlock the store-house of creation, and revel in the halls of mysteries; may first contract his views to the minute examination of the smallest animal and again expand his intellect to behold at one glance all the immensity of space; and yet would fail to determine one single duty to God the ruler of the universe, and would entertain but feeble conceptions of his duty to his fellow man, without the aid of inspiration. All things are compared to the bible but as filthy rags, and as an inheritance in the air. We fail in our attempts to rightly estimate the bible since there is nothing which we may use as a comparison. The bible in its teachings in the character of its author, in its practical effects upon the happiness of mankind when obeying its precepts, in all these and many other lights, recommends itself to special notice. But to understand this volume we must study its contents. Where is the probability that our youth can be taught the book of books to a greater advantage out of the Sabbath-School? The history of the past speaks to call the Sabbath-School the hand-maid of virtue and the abetter of civil and religious liberty, The availability of the Sabbath-School needs no assistance from our public efforts. Its utility is recognised, and its happy effects realized.

But we propose to examine some of the lights in which the Bible may & should be taught advantageously to our interests as a nation. In the first place the bible should be taught as a divine revelation. And what are we to understand by these terms. Our idea of the bible as a divine revelation is founded on its practical use to mankind, and not upon metaphysical subtilities. There are three points of doctrine, the belief & practice of which constitute morality, both assential and necessary to the preservation of a republic. The first is the existence of a God, second the immortality of the human soul; the third a future state of rewards and punishments. Suppose it possible for a man to disbelieve either of these articles of faith, and that man will have no conscience, he will have no other law than the law of the tiger or the shark: the laws of man may bind him in clains, or may put him to death; but they can never make him wise, virtuous, or happy. Man must be moral or he cannot exercise advantageously the principles involved in self government. Our object being to perpetuate and enjoy the blessings of a republic; hence the necessity of understanding the bible as a divine revelation. Again the bible may be studied as a book of history. Our knowledge of the past is indispensable to our present happiness and future success. If Americans must be men of one idea let that be an historical one. The great utility of historical knowledge needs not to be sustained by argument or illustrated by practical application. Profane history only, as corroborated by the bible is a farce, and a source of delusion concerning the anterior periods of the world. On our knowledge of circumstances as well as of nature, depends the axiom of our free dominion; that a virtuous and intelligent people can never be enslaved. Once more, the bible may be viewed as containing a system of religion and morals. That a virtuous compliance with the laws of God, involves the safety and success of any people, remains not to be proven. The history of the world is fraught with abundant evidence of the truth of this remark. Page after page written in the gore of civil feud, and stamped with the image of man's debauchery, tells but the doleful consequence of man's digression from right, and his reception of wrong. Rome wanted nothing but a virtuous populace to have become the pride of nations, and glory of the world. Had Greece been as distinguished for religion and morality, as for learning and oratory, she might yet have been the metropolis of the world, and the meridian of wisdom. But destitute of virtue, they both have long since sunk beneath the waves of governmental destruction, and exist in the minds of men, only as that which was, but is not and never will be again. Unfortunate for American youth, if even they should conceive of the idea of republican perpetuity,—and prosperity without virtue and piety!

Lastly the bible presents to us a numerous collectian of books written by different authors, at different ages of the world; which we may survey as curious monuments of antiquity, and as specimens of ancient literature. The antiquity of the bible bears upon its face a source of curiosity, and a desire to revel amid the antique. As a specimen of ancient literature, you must fail to find its equal. Would you gather the spirit of historical discription, and witness the exhibition of legislative ingenuity, read. Behold Moses' power of description: "And God said let there be light, and there was light," and again: "And thy seed shall be as numerous as the sand upon the sea shore." Hear his wooing spirit breathe: "If now I have found grace in thy sight, O Lord, let my lord I pray thee go among us: for it is a stiff-necked people: and pardon our iniquities, and our sins, and take us for thine inheritance." Would you indulge in sublimity of thought, and perspicuity of expression? Go, sit at the droppings of the fervent spirit of an Isaiah, a Jeremiah, or a David. In short, would you learn wisdom, study the bible, and treasure up its truths in your hearts.

Youth of this audience, let me refer you to one instance wherein moral worth and patriotism are combined; a man of your own land, the "Old Man Eloquent," John Quincy Adams. Follow his example, and thus become lights to the world and ornaments to your country. But let us examine one analogy connected with our country's history. We certainly need no assistance from the imagination in drawing a parallel at once interesting and instructive, between the people of ancient Israel and the early settlers of these U. States. An Apostle has taught us that "God who made of one blood all nations of men to dwell upon the face of the earth hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitations.' And who can doubt that when the Most High divided unto the nations their inheritance, that he set the bounds of the people according to the number of our fathers: For nearly four thousand years after the ark had rested on Mount Ararat, whilst the posterity of Noah multiplied to hundreds of millions in the world, where oriental Roman and feudal despotisms, which successively enchained the bodies, minds, and consciences of men: his descendants in the New World, at least in that portion which constitutes our national domain, numbered only a few thousand savages. There lay this beautiful land stretching thousands of miles northward and southward, eastward and westward, with innumerable capabilities of sustaining untold millions, yet according to the counsels of heaven during all these forty centuries, in undisturbed primeval simplicity. No lofty city encumbered its soil.—No keel cleaved those vast rivers. No gallant vessel ruffled the bosom of its glassy lakes; no rich merchantman or frowning ship of war floated in its capacious natural harbors. No plow of the farmer turned the sod of its extensive prairies. No axe of the feller was lifted up against its magnificent and almost boundless forests. No adventurous miner explored the hidden riches of its coal and iron, gold and copper. The busy hum of industry had never been heard throughout all its borders. Not even the call of the herdsman to his cattle, or the whistle of the shepherd to his flock had ever broken the silence of its forests or waked the slumbering echoes of its mountains. But when the fullness of time had come, God guided the barks of Columbus to this Western Hemisphere: and mark how his Providence ordered the subsequent events.—Mexico and Peru, the portions of our continent already occupied by a denser and more civilized population; attracted by their exhaustless wealth of gold and silver and precious stones, the curious, ambitious, and avaricious adventurers of Europe. These northern and less alluring, but really more valuable regions, comparatively unoccupied, afforded a safe and happy home for ten thousand of the Old World, who under the Government of their native land, had long sought in vain for civil and religious freedom. Every occurrence in the eventful history of the colonies, even those apparently adverse was rendered subservient to the attainment of liberty. He that directed the Israelites to flee out of the land of Egypt, brought our fathers out of their house of bondage. He that opened up for the one a path through the Red Sea, provided for the other, by the invention of the compass and the improvement in the art of navigation facilities for traversing the broad Atlantic. If constant miracles of mercy attended the one in the wilderness of Sinai, a series of Providences no less manifest sustained the other amid the wilds of America.—If he raised up a Joshua to conduct the former to victory; he furnished the latter with an equally competent commander, in the person of Washington. And thus we might continue to trace the analogy farther and farther. Thus far in our discourse we have but viewed the bright side of the question we have looked upon the fascinating part of the picture. Our country's general prosperity speaks not its civil quietude. Faction with all its train of demoralizing influences has entered our borders. Party dissensions and inherited political views are barriers, before which, I fear, the genius of liberty must ere long fall prostrate, and the pride of America render homage. Parents, sacrifice not on the altar of party preference, the perpetuity and success of our republic. O that to-day an angel of mercy would severally visit the people of these United States and break the bands of party attachment; loose the fetters of party domination, and establish in the minds, of men the glorious reign of principle instead of party intrigue. Teach not your children to become the parasites of power, and "to be or to do or to suffer" as party dictation may suggest. Time would fail to enumerate the many evils which hang suspended over our heads, swollen with destruction and ready to drench us in civil blood. We but mention the Geographical distinction of North and South, made by difference of interest and feeling, and leave your faithful imaginations to speculate upon the consequences. Whatever may be the difference of opinion on other subjects, all will admit that our political sky is somewhat beclouded. The black and portentious cloud that is gathering thick and fast, apparently arising from either pole, is destined to meet on our meridian, and then will it be well for us if every head be clear and every heart renewed. One word for the progress of Liberty. Every gale that has for the last four months swept o'er the Atlantic, has wafted to our ears the joyous news of the triumph of Republicanism and the destruction of Kings and their Thrones. Among all the convulsions of the Eastern World, none brings more pleasant feelings of sympathy to the American heart than the revolution in France. In viewing the causes which led to the event of this joyous anniversary, in hearing the effects that have resulted to America; in searching for the principles which impelled to the contest; in recalling the feelings which supported us in the struggle, it cannot fail to occur to us, that the causes have not been confined to the limits of our own continent; that the effects have extended far beyond the boundaries of our nation; that the glorious example with electrical rapidity has flashed across the Atlantic; that guided by the same principles, conducted by the same feelings, the people who so gallantly fought and bled for the security of our lives and our liberties are now fighting for their own. On this day, therefore, religiously devoted to the consecration of our independence, it becomes us as the votaries of freedom—as friends to the rights of man—and bound to vindicate them, when invaded, to turn our attention with a grateful enthusiasm to the scenes of their suffering, their revolt, and their victories. Whilst exulting in the enjoyment of peace and tranquility, shall not a tear for the unexampled distresses of their magnanimous nation, check, for one moment, the emotions of our joy? We are happy to come before you to-day enabled to proclaim the thrilling notes of peace and the termination of war.—The tempest of war has passed, its lightnings are spent, and the glorious sunshine of peace breaks brightly and beautifully through the broken and scattered clouds. Your duty is plain, your pathway is clear. Reflect on your condition and that of your ancestors. Americans, the hostile cannon has ceased to shake your houses and your hills; the falling shell no more with horrid glare swells the terrors of the night. Think one moment in peace, of the untold miseries that would have been your portion had not the toils of your ancesters been crowned with success. Happy Countrymen! retire to your homes however humble; enjoy your peace, your competence, & your love,—kiss the children that throng around your knee, and teach them to bless God that they were not born to an inheritance of slavery nor doomed to mutual destruction. Struggle for the predominancy of liberty till the grand political millenium shall be at hand: when tyranny shall be buried in ruins, when all nations shall be united in one mighty Republic; when the four angels that stand on the four corners of the globe shall with one accord lift up their voices to heaven, in proclaiming, Peace, peace on earth and good will to all men.

The Cup of Cold Water.

A young English woman was sent to France, to be educated in a Huguenot school in Paris. A few evenings before the fatal massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day, she and her young companions were taking a walk in some part of the town where there were sentinels placed, perhaps on the walls; and you know that when a young soldier is on guard, he must not leave his post until he is relieved—that is, till another soldier comes to take his place. One of these soldiers, as the young ladies passed him, besought them to have the charity to bring him a little water, adding that he was very ill, and that it would be as much as his life was worth to go and fetch it himself. The ladies walked on, much offended at the man for presuming to speak to them, all but the young English woman, whose compassion was moved, and who, leaving her party, procured some water and brought it to the soldier. He begged her to tell him her name and place of abode; and this she did. When she rejoined her companions, some blamed and others ridiculed her attention to a common soldier; but they soon had reason to lament that they had not been equally compassionate, for the grateful soldier contrived, on the night of the massacre, to save this young English woman, while all the other inhabitants of the house she dwelt in, were killed!

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 44. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, AUG. 3, 1848. WHOLE NO. 460.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within Three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

THINGS THAT CHANGE.

BY MRS. HEMANS.

Know'st thou that seas are sweeping
Where cities once have been?
When the calm wave is sleeping
Their towers may yet be seen;
Far down below the glassy tide,
Man's dwelling's where his voice hath died.

Know'st thou that flocks are feeding
Above the tombs of old,
Which kings, their armies leading,
Have lingered to behold?
A short, smooth greensward o'er them spread,
Is all that marks where heroes bled,.

Know'st thou that now the token
Of temples once renowned,
Is but a pillar broken,
With grass and wall-flowers crowned!
And the lone serpent rears her young,
Where the triumphant lyre hath sung?

Well, well I know the story
Of ages passed away,
And the mournful wrecks that glory
Has left to dull decay.
But thou hast a tale to learn
More full of warnings sad and stern.

Thy pensive eye but ranges
O'er ruined fane and hall,
Oh! the deep SOUL has changes
More sorrowful than all.
Talk not, while these before thee strong,
Of silence in the place of song.

See scorn, where love has perished;
Distrust, where friendship grew;
Pride, where once nature cherished
All tender thoughts and true?
And shadows of oblivion thrown
O'er every trace of idols gone.

Weep not for tombs far scattered,
For temples prostrate laid;
In thine own heart lie shattered
The alters it had made.
Go, sound its depths in doubt and fear;
Heap up no more its treasures HERE.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

CLASS MEETING.

Having just returned from class meeting where I enjoyed a pleasant time, my mind is led to inquire why so few attend those delightful means of grace. It cannot be that they are not profitable: some of my best hours have been in the class room. Some of the happiest persons I have ever seen were in the class meeting. What more delightful to a true Christian than to talk of his own experience and hear that of others? Often is the heart made to wax warm while enjoying this privilege. There must be some cause for the decline in this department of Methodist economy; once it was the centre of association and the bond of union. In these meetings every member in society were expected to be present once a week, thereby evidencing there desires to flee from the wrath to come; and also edifying each other with holy experience. If any were absent, the Leader was expected to see them and enquire the cause of absence. If they were sick, he spoke to them appropriately and prayed for them. The itinerant preachers on the circuits spoke to the different classes every round and at every preaching place. Then the spiritual condition of the church was always known to the preacher and each other—Then too the societies were in a healthy condition, and revivals were numerous, powerful and constant. How is it now? Let the membership answer—do they attend the class meetings? Let the Leaders speak—do they see the members of their classes once a week? Let the preachers give an account—do they speak to the different classes on the circuits and stations? Let the Discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church announce its requirements, and what are they? "It shall be the duty of each member of the class to meet the Leader at the stated time and place appointed for holding the class meeting."

"It shall be the duty of each class leader to meet his class once a week, also to visit the sick and those members who frequently absent themselves from this means of grace."

"It shall be the duty of a Superintendent to visit all the classes at least once a quarter, if practicable; and see that they are duly and properly met by their respective leaders; and that the members regularly attend their respective classes."

"The Superintendent shall have authority to cause the assistant minister or preacher to aid in the above named duty."

Now the question recurs—why is this means of grace neglected? I answer—because Discipline is not executed. The ministers and preachers do not discharge their duty to the leaders in causing them to meet their classes, and the members to attend them—The leaders do not discharge their duty to their classes in meeting them regularly and visiting the members thereof—The members of the classes do not discharge their duty to their leaders and preachers in attending punctually their class meeting. What is the effect of all this? The church languishes—the membership become barren, and backslidings are common. My opinion is, that no man should become the superintendent or assistant of a circuit or station, unless he will discharge the duties of his office — no man should take a class unless he will discharge the duties of the office —and no man or woman ought to join the Meth. Protestant Church who will not attend class meeting. "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another."

ITINERANT.

Norfolk, Va.

THE LORD'S DAY.

Mr. Editor: If it would not be too great a trespass on your patience and that of your readers, I would propose a few enquiries, and offer a few suggestions for the consideration of those that feel interested in the subject.

The subject of the Sabbath Day as a day of Divine appointment, is (I believe) regarded with more or less interest, by all denominations claiming to be Christian. But the importance with which each regard it, appears to be essentially different respecting the nature or intention of the introduction of that portion of time into the Christian era as a day of religious observance, mental elevation, and physical relaxation.

Some regard the Sabbath Day as a day of sacred rest, not only to themselves, but to all that they have any thing to do with. Some regard it only as a day of amusement and recreation.—And others there are who regard it only as a relict of Judaism. But regardless of the difference of opinion relating to the sacredness of the day, may we not with propriety enquire,

1. If the Sabbath as a day of rest could be dispensed with in the necessary transactions of life.

2. Could it be dispensed with as a day for the worship of Him who blessed, sanctified, and reserved it for his own service?

3. Could it be dispensed with as a day of religious exercises and mental elevation in Divine knowledge?

4. If dispensed with, would it not strike at the very foundation of revealed religion?

5. If it were dispensed with, would it not strike deep confusion to the centre of the church?

6. If dispensed with would it not strike national regulations with terror and confusion?

7. If dispensed with would it not strike civilization with an enlightening and destructive parsy?

It probably would be more becoming in ministers and professing Christians who profess to believe in the sacredness of the Sabbath Day, to refrain from profaning it (if we are to "keep it holy,") with all manner of idle, vain, and foolish jesting, worldly plans of speculation, and political gossipping of almost every description, & pay that respect to the institution that is due to it. And to the Author of it be unceasing praise.

B.

Sylvan, Ia.

Reformatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

USE OF TOBACCO.

Friend Bassett: I have observed since I have endeavored to exert the influence of my example, combined with others of our fellow-citizens, to lessen, or suppress those vices which habit, fashion, or the natural disposition of men have engendered, that the hardest influence to overcome, has arisen from those who profess the self-denying doctrines of the Gospel. The worst enemies of the temperance reform, were found in prominent members of the church, whose practice, of the temperate use, and the sale of intoxicating drinks, it was exceedingly hard to overcome; but, their example was referred to, to justify those who used them intemperately; so much so that temperance societies were very much obstructed by the pernicious influence, of officers of churches, and wealthy members, whose influence was much stronger than those maintaining a less prominent place in society. Perseverance in combined effort, has done much to suppress the habits complained of. The same pernicious influences are found to operate in the effort to abolish the sin of slavery; and to some extent, it is experienced in the efforts making to prevent Sabbath desecration: can it be wondered at, that we should find Ministers, Elders, Deacons, and Class-leaders, stand in the way of a reform in the pernicious and filthy practice of using tobacco? I honor your firmness which has resisted the attempt to put down the discussion of the use of that poisonous article. Habits formed in youth, when the practice was justified by Fashion, and the habits of otherwise exemplary Christians, and when its pernicous influence on the body, and mind, were little understood, are not readily abandoned; and besides we are unwilling to admit the sinfulness of them. Having myself used tobacco for upwards of twenty years, part of the time by smoking, and the balance by chewing, I think I understood by experience, as well as theory, the influences it exerts. and the difficulties in the way of reforming habits long indulged; and from which we fancy we receive great comfort, in the indulgence of; and as I have abandoned the use about nineteen years, I am also prepared to speak from experience of the effects of "Total Abstinence" in restoring. or at least very much helping to restore, a prostrate constitution.

If your space will allow of your inserting in your paper a few short articles, in part of my own experience, and reflections; and in part the opinions and experience of others, I shall be gratified, as I desire as far as I can, to induce others to avoid the pernicious practices, under which I have suffered very much. It is said that the testimony of a reformed drunkard is more powerful in the reformation of others, than the arguments of many "who need no repentance:" why not then the views and experience of

A REFORMED TOBACCO USER?

Putnam, July, 1848.

☞ The following is the Dialogue spoken by three young ladies at a recent Sabbath School celebration in Zanesville, alluded to by Br. Gillespie, in his article in our last paper.—Ed. W. R.

DIALOGUE ON DANCING,

BETWEEN SARAH, JANE, AND JOSEPHINE.

Sarah.—Josephine, I am glad to meet you, I have a very particular subject which I wish to talk with you about.

Josephine.—What is it Sarah? If it is one I know any thing about, I will be pleased to converse with you; but, as you are older than I am, you cannot expect me to instruct you. If it relates to any of our Sunday School matters, you had better talk with one of the teachers.

Sarah.—I should not like, Josephine, to consult my teacher in the case, she is so very religious, I fear she would throw cold water on the whole affair, I prefer that she should know nothing about the matter till she finds it out in some other way. When people have made up their minds to a thing, you know they don't like to be opposed.

Josephine.—Sarah, I am glad to hear so good a character of your teacher. Would that all Sunday School teachers were what you pronounce yours to be—very religious; as the example set us by such teachers makes us willing to listen to what they tell us. But, Sarah, I fancy your project is not a safe one, as you fear to have your pious Sunday School instructer know any thing about it. I fear I cannot say any thing in favor of it; but I can tell better when I hear it. So speak on.

Sarah.—Don't be too fast, Josephine. Good judges, I have heard it remarked, take time to consider before giving their opinions. There is no harm in what I propose to do; it is merely to go to dancing school a quarter. Father says I may; and when mother objects, he says that David, one of the best men that ever lived, danced when worshipping the Lord. Here is Jane, I'll venture to say she is not so bigoted as to say dancing is wrong.

Jane.—I am afraid, Sarah, you appeal to an unfavorable judge. Some of my acquaintances have frequently asked me to go to dancing school, & said there was no harm in doing so; but, I have always refused, as I thought it would be wrong, and feared if I went once I might desire to go again: Methodists and their children live too much like the fashionable world already, without displaying themselves at ball-rooms.

Josephine.—That's right, Jane; I am glad to see you so candid. You will be of great assistance to me, I am sure in persuading Sarah to change her mind. I didn't think so good a girl as Sarah and one who has been so long in the Sunday School, would wish to go to such a place.

Sarah.—Come, come, girls, you talk too much like preachers: you are too sanctimonious entirely—too gloomy in your notions by far. Some of the best people I know send their children to dancing school, and went themselves when children. What harm is there in a little innocent recreation, especially when it benefits our health, improves our manners, and is not contrary to Scripture?

Josephine.—I think, Jane, Sarah has now brought forward all the arguments she can in favor of what she calls an innocent recreation.—You can easily answer them all. She is, I am sorry to perceive, fast drinking in the spirit of the world.

Jane.—Josephine, I have never studied logic, and make no pretensions to smartness; yet I think I can prove from experience, as well as Scripture, that Sarah is wrong in her notions. She says that the exercise of dancing improves the health; but pray, are there not other kinds of exercise that will answer for that purpose? Will not walking, jumping the rope, throwing the hoop, &c., exercise the limbs of young persons just as well as waltzing in a crowded room? As to Sarah's statement, that girls who attend such schools behave prettier than others. I don't believe a word of it. Caroline Sherwood, Jane Watson, and many other accomplished young ladies of my acquaintance, and whose behavior too is as pretty as that of any girls I ever knew, never saw the inside of a dancing school.

Josephine.—I agree with you, Jane, in all you have said; you have so clearly shown that Sarah's ideas are wrong, that I begin to pity her situation.

Sarah.—The old saying is, "Brag is a good dog, but Holdfast is a better." I have not given all my reasons yet; I have the Bible on my side, and feel that I am right in spite of all your boasting. Besides, many of the most respectable people speak in favor of sending boys and girls to dancing school.

Josephine.—You judge of people's respectability, Sarah, I fear by the figure they cut in society. The most respectable people in my judgment, are those that strive hardest to love and serve God. You don't hear such persons speak well of dancing schools.

Jane.—No, no, I am sure she doesn't. That was a good idea, Josephine. Well done for you, Josephine. Sarah says a great deal about innocent recreation. Can't children obtain enough enjoyment of this kind without resorting to dancing schools, and ball-rooms? I am sure they can. But I have heard that there is a great deal of pride and jealousy manifested at such places. That does not look like innocent mirth.

Josephine.—There is another capital hit—another nail in a sure place. Jane, why didn't you ask Sarah if she ever heard of a person's seeking or obtaining a new heart, or any other spiritual blessings at a ball-room?

Sarah.—Girls, I must confess there is a good deal of truth in what you say: but can you prove that dancing is forbidden in the Bible? Did David sin when he danced?

Jane.—I suppose, Sarah, there is no harm in the mere act of dancing! but the practice is deemed sinful on account of the follies and vices with which it is associated now-a-days. There may be no verse of Scripture directly forbidding the practice, but it is clear that dancing, as it is now practiced, is contrary to the whole spirit of religion. People never dance to worship the Lord as David did, unless it be among the Shaking Quakers; besides do you think David ever went to dancing school?

Josephine.—Well, Sarah, I think you will find it difficult to answer that question. Jane, it seems to me has clearly shown, that you are wrong in the matter, out-and-out. Jane is a better reasoner than I thought she was.

Sarah.—What you have said girls, has, I must confess, made me doubt whether I am right, and as I think it wrong to indulge in practices of a doubtful character, I think I will not go to dancing school.

Miscellaneous.

Cheap Pleasures.

Did you ever study the cheapness of some pleasures? asks some excellent writer. Do you know how little it takes to make a multitude happy? Such trifles as a penny, a word, or a smile, do the work. There are two or three boys passing along—give them each a chesnut, and how smiling they look? they will not be cross for some time. A poor widow lives in the neighborhood who is the mother of half a dozen children; send them a half a peck of sweet apples and they will all be happy. A child has lost his arrow—the world to him—and he mourns sadly, help him find it, or make him another, and how quickly will the sunshine play upon his sober face. A boy has as much as he can do to pile up a load of wood; assist him a few moments, or speak a pleasant word to him, and he forgets his toil and works away without minding it. Your apprentice has broken a mug, or cut the vest too large, or slightly injured a pice of work; say 'You scoundrel,' and he feels miserable; but remark "I am sorry," and he will try to do better. You employ a man—pay him cheefully, and speak a pleasant word to him, and he leaves your house with a contented heart, to light up his own heart with smile of gladness. As you pass along the street, you meet a familiar face—say "Good morning," as though you felt happy, and it will work admirably in the heart of your neighbor.

Pleasure is cheap—who will not bestow it liberally? If there are smiles, shunshine and flowers all about us, let us not grasp them with a miser's fist, and lock them up in our hearts. No. Rather let us take them and scatter them about us, where men of business congregate, in our families and every where. We can make the wretched happy; the discontented cheerful; the afflicted resigned; at an exceedingly cheap rate. Who will refuse to do it?

METHOD.

A lady was complimenting a clergyman on the fact that she could always recollect and recite more of the matter of his sermons than of any other minister she was in the habit of hearing. She could not account for this but she thought the fact worthy of observation. The reverend gentleman remarked, that he could explain the cause. "I happen," he said, "to make a particular point of classifying my topics—it is a hobby of mine to do so; and therefore I never compose a sermon without first settling the relationship and order of my arguments and illustrations. Suppose madam, that your servant was starting for town, and you were obliged hastily to instruct her about a few domestic purchases, not having time to write down the items; and suppose you said, 'Be sure to bring some tea, and also some soap, and coffee too, by the by; and some powder-blue; and don't forget a few light cakes and a little starch, and some sugar; and, now I think of it, soda---you would not be surprised if her memery failed with regard to one or two of the articles." But if your commission ran thus: "Now, Mary, to-morrow we are going to have some friends to tea, therefore bring a supply of tea and coffee, and sugar and some light cakes; and the next day, you know, is washing day, so that we shall want soap, and starch, and soda, and powder-blue; it is most likely she would retain your order easily as you retain my sermon.—Smith's Irish Diamonds.

The Priest and the Irish Milkman.

The following amusing instance of Irish wit on the part of a Roman Catholic milkman, in foiling the attempts of a priest to make him give up reading in the Bible, was related by Dr. Dowling of N. York in an address during the anniversary week.

On reaching the milkman's humble cabin in the county of Kerry the priest thus addressed him—"my good fellow, I am informed that you are in the habit of reading the Bible: is my information correct?" "Sure, it is true, plase your riverence and a fine book it is too."

"But you know;" said the priest, "that it is very wrong for an ignorant man like you to read the Scriptures." "Ah," replied Pat "but you must be asther provin that same, before I consint to lave it off."

"That I will do from the book itself. Now turn to 1st Peter 2., 2. 'As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby.' Now, you are only a babe, and are therefore wrong to read the Scriptures yourself. You are here told to 'desire the sincere milk of the word,' and one who understands what the 'sincere milk' is must give it to you and tend to you."

Pat listened attentively to the priest's authoritative address, but no way at a loss replied—"But be aisy your riverence while I tell you. A little time ago when I was took ill, I got a man to milk my cows, and what do you think he did? why instead of giving me rale milk, he chated me by puttin wather into it; and if you get my Bible, perhaps you may be asther serving me the same. No, no, I'll keep my cow and milk it myself, and then I shall get the sincere milk and not as I might from you, mixed with wather."

The priest thus finding himself defeated, and desirous that the mischief should spread no farther said in a conciliatory tone—"Well Pat, I see you are a little wiser than I thought you; and as you are not quite a babe, you may keep your Bible, but don't lend it or read it to your neighbors."

Pat eyeing his admonitor very cunningly, but seriously replied—"Sure enough, your riverence, while I have a cow and can give a little milk to my poor neighbors who have none, it is my duty to do so, as a Christian; and saving your riverence, I will."

The priest concluding that the honest milkman was rather a tough customer gave up the argument, and walked off abashed.

Origin of Various Plants.

Every farmer ought to be so far acquainted with the history of all ordinary plants and trees as to know their nature, country and condition. Such knowledge, besides being on every account proper and desirable, will sometimes explain phenomena in their habits that would otherwise appear anomalous and inexplicable.

Wheat was brought from the central tableland of Thibit, where its original yet exists as a grass, with small mealy seeds.

Rye exists wild in Siberia.

Barley exists wild in the mountains of Himalaya.

Oats, wild in Northern Africa.

Millet, one species is a native of India, another of Egypt and Abyssinia.

Maize, Indian Corn, was brought from America.

Canary Seed, from the Canary Islands.

Rice, from South Africa, whence it was taken to India, and thence to Europe and America.

Lentil grows wild on the shores of the Mediterranean.

Vetches are natives of Germany.

The Chick Pea was brought from the South of Europe.

The Garden Bean, from the East Indies

The Horse Bean from the Caspian Sea.

The Lupin, from the Levant

Buckwheat came originally from Siberia and Tartary.

Rape Seed and Cabbage grow wild in Sicily and Naples.

The Sun-flower, from Peru.

Flax or Linseed is, in Southern Europe, a weed in the ordinary grain crops.

The Radish came from China.

The Garden Cress, out of Egypt and the East.

Hemp is native of Persia and the East Indies.

The New Zealand Flax and Syrian swallow Root show their origin by their names.

The nettle which sometimes furnishes fibres for spinning, is a native of Europe.

Of Dye Plants, the Madder comes from the East.

Woad is a native of Europe.

Dyers-weed grows in Southern Germany.

Safflower came from Egypt.

Dyers Knotgrass, from China.

Hops come to perfection as a wild plant in Germany.

Mustard and Carryway seed, the same.

Dill is an Eastern plant.

Anise was brought from Egypt, and the Grecian Archipelago.

Koriander grows wild near the Mediterranean.

Saffron came from the Levant.

The Onion, out of Egypt.

Horse-radish, from Southern Europe.

White Mellior, from Greece.

Chickory grows wild in Germany.

Tobacco is a native of Virginia, Tobago and California. Another species has also been found wild in Asia.

Fuller's Teazel grows wild in Southern Europe.

The Grasses are mostly native plants, and so are the clovers, except Luzerne, which is a native of Sicily.

Spurry is a European plant.

The Gourd is probably an Eastern plant.

The Potato is a well-known native of Peru and Mexico.

Jerusalem Artichoke is a Brazilian product.

Turnip and Mangold Wurzel came from the shores of the Mediterranean.

Koalrabi and White Turnip are natives of Germany.

The Carrot is by some supposed to have been brought from Asia, but others maintain it to be a native of the same place.

Amongst other kitchen garden plants, the Spinach is auributed to Arabia.

The Garden Orache, to Tartary.

The Cucumber came from the East Indies.

The Melon from Kalmuck.

Parsley grows in Sardinia.

Tarragon, in Central Asia.

Celery, in Germany.

Of Fruit Trees and Shrubs, the Currant & Goose berry came from Southern Europe.

Medlar Pear and apple are likewise European plants; but the Seckle, the best of pears, is traced to near Philadelphia, as its original locality as far as known.

The Cherry, Plum, Olive and Almond came from Asia Minor.

The Mulberry Tree from Persia.

The Walnut and Peach, from the same country.

The Citron from Media.

The Quince from the Island of Crete.

The Chesnut from Italy.

Of Forest Trees, the majority are native plants of England except the Pine and Horse-Chesnut—the former of which was brought from America, and the latter from Thibet. But the greatest variety of Oaks and other fine timber trees are natives of North and South America.

The Hurtleberry is a native of Asia, Europe and America.

The Cranberry, of Europe and America.

Anti-Slavery Feeling in Virginia.

A recent number of the Richmond Southerner contains the following article. After deprecating the existing debates in Congress, on the subject of slavery, the editor proceeds:

"The country proposed to be ceded to us by the late treaty with Mexico, it should be remembered, the Almighty has Wilmot-provisoed.—Should the free States consent (and they never will) that slavery should be allowed there, still the climate and the country would forbid it.—Why, therefore, should we contend for that which profiteth us not—which we can never possess? Is it not wisdom on our part to say to the North, 'we be brethren;' and if we cannot possess this property on such terms as will be mutually agreeable, let us not have it at all? Let us not take that which must become an 'apple of discord' and a bone of contention to us and our successors, and which must end in a separation of a people whose fathers have given so "goodly a heritage."

"And now as to this slavery question, fellow-citizens of the South, let us in good feeling reason one with another. It should be remembered that Great Britain has abolished slavery in all her colonies; France, Denmark, Sweden, and other countries of Europe, except Spain, have done so likewise. Is it natural to suppose that the other powers of Europe will long suffer imbecile Spain to hold on to it? When she gives way, the entire civilized world, with the exception of Brazil, will be arrayed against us on this question. Now, what is our policy? Is it not wisdom on our part to avoid having the question of slavery agitated in our political institutions?—The North has pledged itself to maintain intact and inviolate the compromises of the constitution. Let us, therefore, abandon the acquisition of territory, and free ourselves from this untoward difficulty.

"It is not generally known, yet it is nevertheless true, that two-thirds of the people of Virginia are open and undisguised advocates of ridding the State of slavery; and after the year 1850, when the census is taken, their views will be embodied in such a form as to startle the South. We speak understandingly. We have, within the last two years, conversed with more than five hundred slave-holders in the State; & four hundred and fifty out of the five hundred, expressed themselves ready to unite on any general plan to abolish slavery upon almost any terms. Abolition fanaticism at the North has not produced this, but the annexation of Texas and the acquisition of territory has done it.—Virginia may be put down as no longer reliable on this question. When she goes, the District of Columbia is free territory; then Delaware & Maryland will also go, and North Carolina and Kentucky will follow suit. This will surround the extreme South with free States: and when that day comes, and it will not be very long, we would just as lieve own a parcel of wild turkeys as so many slaves."

Hinges all Over.

The following article illustrates pretty well the difference between natural and revealed theology. Whatever natural theology might teach concerning God, we are satisfied that without revealed theology little would be learned about Him, except as a great architect.

Hinges all over.—A converted native of the South-Sea Islands was once endeavoring to give an account of the manner in which he persuaded himself that the Bible is the word of God. "When I look at myself, he said, "I find I have hinges all over my body. I have got hinges to my legs, my jaws, my feet, my hands. If I want to lay hold on any thing, there are hinges to my hands, and even to my fingers, to do it with. If my heart thinks, and I want to make others think with me, I use the hinges to my jaws, and they help me to talk. I could neither walk nor sit down, if I had not hinges to my legs and feet. All this is very wonderful. None of the strange things that men have brought from England in their big ships is at all to be compared to my body. He who made my body has made all those clever people who have made the strange things which they bring in ships; and he is God, whom I worship.

But I should not know much more about him than as a great hinge-maker, if men in their ships had not brought the book which they call the Bible. That tells me of God who makes the skill and the heart of man likewise. And when I hear how the Bible tells of the old heart with its corruption, and the new heart, and a right spirit, which God alone can create and give, I feel that his work in my body and his work in my heart fit into each other exactly. I am sure, then, that the Bible which tells me of these things, was made by Him who made the hinges to my body. I believe the Bible to be the Word of God.

"The men on the other side of the great sea used their skill and their bodies to make ships & to print Bibles. They came in their ships and brought iron hoops, knives, nails, hatchets, cloth, and needles, which are very good. They also brought rum and whiskey, which are very evil. They moved the hinges of their jaws, and told lies and curses, which are abominable. At last some came and brought the Bible. They used the hinges of their bodies to turn over the leaves and to read and to explain God's blessed Word. That was better than iron ware, and stuff for clothing. They were the servants of the living God, and my heart opened to their words as if it had hinges too, like as my mouth opens to take food when I am hungry. And my heart feels satisfied now. It was hungry, God nourished it—it was thirsty, God has refreshed it. Blessed be God who gave his Word and sent it across the sea to bring me light and salvation."

A Home in the Wilderness.—It is said that Wm. Howitt and his accomplshed wife, Mary Howitt, contemplate leaving England and taking up their residence in the West. They have had relatives in Ohio for many years. His connection with some London magazines has involved him in bankruptcy at the age of 54.

☞ The difference between rising at five and seven o'clock in the morning, for the space of 40 years, supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night, is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a man's life.

A religious paper published at N. Orleans urges Christians coming there to bring their religion with them, as it will be needed more than ever. Religion in that city, it says, has received its worst wounds at the hands of its professors.

FOREIGN NEWS.

By the arrival of the Steamer United States, at New York, the Baltimore Sun has the following intelligence.

FRANCE

Paris had become perfectly tranquil. The arrest of individuals implicated in the emeute and the seizure of arms, however, still continued, the prisoners now amounting to 12,000.

Gen. Duvivier, who was honorably conspicuous among the combatants at the barricades, has died, this making the sixth general officer slain.

General Bedeau, a moderate republican in principle, had been appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs in the place of M. Bastide, a member of the late government.

Funds have improved, and the Bourse bears every indication of returning confidence.

Mgr. Sibour, bishop of Digne, is nominated archbishop of Paris. This prelate was born at Saint-Paul-Trois-Chateau (Drome) in April, 1792, was nominated in 1839, and consecrated the 24th February. He was previously a canon at Nimes, and a distinguished preacher.

The following decree has been issued by Gen. Calvignac, President of the Council, chief of the Executive power:

"In the name of the French people, the President of the Council, charged with the Executive power, in virtue of the rights conferred upon him by the decree of June 21, which places Paris in a state of siege;—considering the decree of June 27, which provides that the individuals who have taken part in the insurrection shall be transported to the French possessions beyond sea, and that the proceedings commenced before the courts-martial shall follow their course so far as concerns those who shall be designed as the abetters, chiefs, or instigators of insurrection, or who shall have furnished or distributed money, arms, or amunition, exercised command or authority, or command any act to argravate rebellion;—considering the decree which instituted the commission of inquiry into the events of June, of which Colonel Bertrand is President—decrees as follows:—Art. 1. There shall be constituted four courts-martial, of each of which there shall be three military men members, and of which a superior officer shall be President. Art. 2. These courts-martial, after examining all the warrants, and other evidences laid before them, shall decide—First, as to the discharge of the accused, this right of discharge being nevertheless reserved to Colonel Bertrand in case of urgency; secondly as to the individuals liable to transportation; thirdly, as to sending parties for trial before the permanent courts-martial of the first division."

In the National Assembly on the 11th, the Minister of the Interior proposed a bill for the regulation of clubs, and prohibiting the members to go armed to their meetings; also, a bill demanding 50,000fr., to be distributed among the theatres of Paris, and 170,000fr., for the French Opera.

Paris remained up to Sunday night, the 9th instant, perfectly tranquil. The siege has not been raised, and is not to be raised for some time, General Cavaignac declaring it to be yet unsafe to relinquish military precautions. The insurgents are not yet considered to be thoroughly beaten, immense numbers of them still remaining in Paris and its environs, anxiously waiting another opportunity for an outbreak.

The number of prisoners already in the power of the government, was said to amount to 12 or 13,000, and the Executive is much perplexed what to do with them. The idea of transporting the whole number was deemed impossible of accomplishment, from the vast expense it would entail on the finances of the country.

The funeral of the Archbishop of Paris took place on Friday, and was a very different affair from that in the Place de la Concorde. No troops shut out the people who wished to pay the last tribute of love and respect to their pastor, who fell the martyr of peace and concliation.—A vast concourse of all classes assisted at the ceremony, with all the evidences of the most tender attachment and reverence for the deceased. Notre Dame was filled to the utmost, and I have never been present on a more solemn occasion.

There is no moral doubt that Lamartine, Ledru Rolin, and others of the late Executive, were implicated in the recent insurrection. Lamartine is about to leave France—to say the French Journal—but it is denied by that gentleman most emphatically.

ENGLAND.

The intended visit of Queen Victoria to Ireland has been suspended for a more favorable opportunity, in consequence, as alleged by the Times, of the threats made "publicly to insult her Majesty and her advisers with seditious and calumnious cries."

We announce an important failure in the Irish linen trade, Stewart & M'Clelland, of Bainbridge and Belfast, whose liabilities are stated at a very large amount. The firm of R. S. Guinness & Co., land agents in Dublin, who are stated to have large connections in that line of business, are announced to have suspended payment.—London Standard.

The Potato Disease.—The Gardener's Chronicle, of July 8th, publishes reports received from various parts of the country, which prove the very unwelcome fact that the potato disease has again manifested itself in England, Ireland and Scotland, and that it has already done much mischief.

More Chartist Convictions.—An Irish Chartist, named Looney, was committed on the 8th for attending an illegal meeting; and on the 10th, Mr. Charles Ernest Jones was found guilty of making a seditious speech at a meeting which ended in tumult.

The Slave Trade.—Letters from the Grappler, (Br.) steamer, Lieut. Lysaught, commander, dated April 24, on the West Coast of Africa, states that she had just captured, off Lagos, a schooner with 500 slaves on board, and sent the prize to Sierra Leone. The Grappler had previously captured, (March 25,) off Cape Three Points, a little felucca, of 75 tons, fitted for, but had no slaves in, and sent her to St. Helena for condemnation.

THE STATE OF IRELAND.

The writer of the following letter is said to have resided some years in Ireland in an official capacity, which affords him the best means of information, and to be a military man of high rank and of great experience, as well as great intelligence.

"This country, since Mitchell's transportation, has been, apparently quiet, but that very quiet leads me to suppose that it extends only as far as experience goes, and that the disaffected are only waiting for what they may consider a favorable opportunity. The clubs have within the last month not only encreased in number, both in Dublin and in the provinces, but are daily becoming more cautious in their proceedings, and perfecting themselves as much as possible in details, so as to become efficient as one body. Crimes which twelve months ago were frequent all over the country, now are almost unheard of—merely because the people are not ready to make an attempt on the extended scale, and all Ireland will take its tone from Dublin. It is known that fifty thousand men and upwards are at present armed, and well armed too, and almost the whole of that number have been practiced to use their arms. An immense quantity of ammunition has found its way into Ireland during the last six months.—Where is it? The number of avowed repealers is great, the number of repealers not avowed is also great; and to these others whom the smallest chance of success would surely turn from selfish motives and say how many honest men and true are left. Some strong and decisive measure should be at once taken to put down the clubs, and disarm the disaffected as much as possible. Till this is done, all other measures must be fruitless.

More Assests.—Our Dublin correspondent, under date of July 8th, writes:

"This evening the editor of the Nation was arrested and taken to College-green police office, charged under the recent act with felony. The informations were not objected to by Mr. Duffy, and he was committed for trial at the next commission, which will be held on the 8th of August. Bail was offered but refused. The police seized all documents in writing, books and papers in the office and house, which remained in their custody. This morning Mr. Martin, the proprietor of the Irish Felon, for whose apprehension a warrant had been issued on Mon. last, voluntarily surrendered to the police authorities. He was committed to Negate to take his trial on a charge of felony, at the commission, which stands adjourned to the 8th of August next, and not, as Mr. Martin imagined when he gave himself into the custody of the police, to the month of October next. The Government are acting with energy, so far as the state of the law will permit. Previous to Mr. Martin's surrender, the police had seized all papers, etc., at the office of the Felon, yesterday evening, and this day they seized all the numbers of the Felon they could lay their hands upon, either at the office of that paper or amongst the newsvenders in the streets. But the treason journals are still increasing in violence, and the club organization proceeds at railroad speed."—London Times, July 10.

We learn from Dublin by letter, dated July 9th, that two more of the ultra Repealers have been arrested, Mr. O'Doherty and Mr. R. Williams, proprietors of the Tribune, a new seditious journal.—London Standard.

SWITZERLAND.

The rock known by the name of the Dent de Nave, which was 7,000 feet high, fell on the 3d instant, into the valley of Montreuse, (Vaud,) Switzerland, and destroyed seven houses and all the persons in them. It is said that upwards of 2,000 head of cattle have been killed in the fields.

RUSSIA.

A letter from St. Petersburg, of July 1st, gives the following report of the cholera in that city: In the morning of the 29th ult., there existed 1,029 cases; in the course of the same day, 719 new cases were declared. The number of cures was 41, and the number of deaths 356. On the morning of the 30th, the total number of cases reported was 1,451.

TURKEY.

The Journal de Constantinople, of the 26th ult., states that the cholera was on the decrease in that city, but was raging terribly at Galatz.

A Constantinople letter, of the 21st ult., states that 3,000 houses in the suburb of Pera have been destroyed by fire. The damage is estimated at one hundred millions of dollars. The fire broke out in the quarter inhabited by the rich American merchants.

STILL LATER.

ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA.

Another Plot in Paris—City Completely Fortified—Ouviriers demanding to be fed or shot—Insurgents in Spain—More arrests in Ireland—Great Excitement—Disturbances at Frankfort—Cholera in Russia—Markets, &c.

Boston, July, 27, P. M.

The new steamer Europa has arrived, after a passage of nearly twelve days, having sailed from Liverpool on the 14th inst. I send you the following hasty dispatch of the news, which is very important.

Another plot has been discovered in Paris.—The workmen of the Ateliers Nationoux intended to revolt on the 15th instant, the day fixed for a banquet. The plans, it seems, were fully organised, and the banquet was only a pretext to get the Insurgents together.

The government possesses full details of the plot, and many intended chiefs had already been arrested.

By the plans discovered it is shown that Paris was to have been pillaged, and as in the previous insurrection, this seems to have been the chief if not the only inducement held out to the insurgents to rebel.

Cavaignac has made every preparation to meet any emergencies:

Fifteen prefects of the departments have been arrested on charges of implication in the June insurrection. Part of the present government are strongly in favor of prosecuting suspected members, while others, including General Cavaignac, strongly oppose such a proceeding. All political prisoners have been removed to detached points out of Paris, and the City is completely fortified.

It is said that 40,000 ouviriers intend marching to the Assembly and demand to be fed by the government or shot.

In Spain the insurgents are progressing rapidly toward becoming a very formidable body, and the government is greatly alarmed.

In Ireland affairs are rapidly approaching the crisis for which both the government and people have long been preparing.

Duffey of the Nation, Martin of the Felon, O'Dougherty, Williams and Roband of the Tribune, Dodeny and Meagher of Waterford have been arrested for sedition, and committed for trial. The arrest of Meagher caused great excitement, and he would have been rescued but for his own efforts and the arrival of fresh troops.

In Russia the Cholera is frightfully increasing.

The news of the march of the Russian troops into Moldavia is confirmed. The people had declared for a Republic.

At Wallachia an insurrection occurred and the Prince resigned.

In Berlin the Communists are endeavoring to excite an insurrection similar to the Parisian rebellion.

Portugal is tranquil.

Mahomet Ali is insane.

Disturbances occurred at Frankfort in which several lives were lost.

Germany is still greatly excited.

The Italian war is prosecuted with little vigour.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, August 3, 1848.

☞Our receipts for the paper are very light, as Conference time approaches. How shall we make out for funds till that period? We cannot help thinking of a number of subscribers, and agents too, who ought to remember us just now. And if those who are indebted for books or pamphlets would send us those little sums it would aid us in meeting our heavy expenses.

Acknowledgment.—As the U. S. Congress is expected soon to adjourn, we take this opportunity again to express our thanks to our representative, Hon. N. Evans, for numerous documents sent us.

☞ Wanted—Any quantity of new subscribers to commence with Volume Ten. We trust the brethren are just now engaged in procuring a good many responsible names to bring with them to the ensuing Conferences.

Rev. Allen Wiley, a minister of long standing in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and a member of the Indiana Conference, died on Sunday 23d inst. in great peace. So says the W. C. Advocate. No particulars yet.

A Screw Loose.—The following advertisement appeared recently in the Philadelphia Ledger:

Methodists, Attend!—All who believe themselves capable of self-government, who are opposed to clerical dictation, and in favor of the laity managing Church Affairs, are invited to attend a meeting for the organization of a Congregational Methodist Church in the city proper, To-Morrow (Thursday) Evening, at 8 o'clk, at the Bricklayer's Hall, N. E. corner Thirteenth and Race streets, lower floor.

EPISCOPAL METHODISTS.

We know not the origin or occasion of this announcement, but take it to be a sign that a portion of the "laity" in "the city proper," [Philadelphia,] have conceived the idea that they ought to have some voice in the 'management of church affairs.' We regret to see however a tendency to ultraism in this movement.—Tired of "clerical dictation," these "Episcopal Methodists" propose that the 'laity shall have the management of church affairs,' to the exclusion of the ministry, as we suppose. This is so far wrong. Dr. Mosheim informs us, at "the commencement of the Christian Church, its government was administered jointly by the pastors and people." This is precisely our plan. In the Methodist Protestant Church, the ministry and the laity have joint management of church affairs, a representation from the laity having seats, with a like number of the ministry, in the General and Annual Conferences.

☞The following bit of criticism appears in the last number of the Boston American Signal, which is a large and handsome sheet published daily and weekly, devoted to the interests of the Native American party, and quite valorous in resisting the inroads of Popery.

JOHN MC D. KENDALL, PRINTER.

The above line comes to us at the head of one of our best exchanges—the Western Recorder. What does it mean? Are we to understand that our friend's name is 'John One Thousand Four Hundred Kendall?"

Will friend John please explain? We are a 'straight-out' Yankee, but we can't guess that.

We have understood that Yankees were given to asking questions, and we do not object to being interrogated as to the purport of our initials.—We should have thought, however, that a Bostonian Editor would understand that Mc was the common abbreviation for Mac, and that D. might be the initial of Dowell, making, if the Signal please, MacDowell, which happens to be our middle name. By the by, if a Buckeye, as well as a Yankee, may be allowed to guess, and ask questions too, wonder if the name of the Editor of the Signal, Rev. C. W. Denison, is One Hundred W. Denison?

JOHN McDOWELL KENDALL.

PIONEER HISTORY: Being an Account of the first examinations of the Ohio Valley, and the early settlement of the Northwest Territory. Chiefly from Original Papers.—By S. P. Hildreth. Cincinnati: W. H. Derby & Co., 1848.

Such is the title of a beautiful octavo volume of 525 pages, just issued from the press. Amongst the claims of this work to the patronage of the western public, are first, the reputation of its author. Dr. Hildreth is one of the oldest citizens of Marietta, O., and has for many years been well known to the literary and scientific world, as author of many valuable works and papers. Secondly, the publication is issued under the patronage and superintendance of the Cincinnati Historical Society, and forms the first volume of its transactions. The work is handsomely executed, with fine paper and good type, and is substantially bound, and is embellished with ten engravings and maps. The price of the "Pioneer History" is $2.50. Messrs. Gurley and Cross, the Marietta publishers, have left us a subscription paper, in view of our obtaining subscriptions in this place and vicinity. But very few copies have yet been disposed of in this county. As but a small edition has been issued, those who wish to procure a copy will please leave their names soon at the office of the Western Recorder.

Evangelical Preacher.—The July number contains a sermon by the celebrated A. Barnes, D. D., of Philadelphia, from "A wounded spirit who can bear?" Also a sermon on the "Good Fight," by Rev. Dr. Lynd, of St. Louis. All the sermons published in this work are original. The Rev. N. N. Wood, of Zanesville, proposes to furnish a copy to any clergyman procuring 3 subscribers, and forwarding the money; or four copies for $3. Complete sets of present volume to be furnished. Single copy $1.

Relief for Ireland.

A public meeting was recently held in the Presbyterian Church, Zanesville, to consider and take some action upon the distressed condition of Ireland. C. W. Mauppay, Esq., presided at the meeting. Rev. Mr. Moore, of Tubbermore, Ireland, was introduced to the meeting, and gave a heart rending account of the sufferings of that wretched people. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Smallwood, Brown and others. An Executive Committee was appointed, and an arrangement devised for committees of ladies to wait upon the citizens in the various districts of the town, to obtain contributions for the relief of the suffering, to be transmitted to Ireland through proper channels.—The following Address to the citizens of the county has also been drawn up by the Executive Committee, and ordered for publication.

To the Citizens Muskingum County.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee, appointed to take measures for the relief of the suffering poor of Ireland; the undersigned were requested to prepare a brief address to their fellow citizens, enforcing the claims of that unhappy land upon the charity of the people of this country, arising out of its subsisting necessities and sufferings. In execution of this duty, we beg leave to state, that the Rev. Mr. Moore, a delegate from that country, brings with him the most satisfactory and conclusive evidence of the continued existence of a deplorable state of destitution and disease.

The following extract is from a letter of the Rev. Mr. Dawson, Vicar of the parish of Easkey, in the county of Sligo, dated the 21st of June last:

"The share of the provisions, which I retained for the parish of Easkey, is now almost exhausted, and on Saturday night next, I do not expect I shall have a pound of meal in my possession, although I have given it out in small quantities, and with a sparing hand, not knowing whether it would be in your power to give us a further lift from the jaws of famine. Employment cannot be had, for those who, would give employment, if they could, have no money. I never, even in the worst days of 1846—7, remember money so hard to get at as at the present moment. There are no public works! And consequently the multitudes who are obliged to get out-door relief from the Poor-house, increase fearfully the amount of the poor-rate, and disable the larger occupiers of land from giving employment, while they can scarcely pay their taxes, and support their families. I have been hoping for some time past to hear further from you, as you mentioned, I think, in your last letter, that you were just setting out for one of the States, to look for further relief for our poor country men."

The Rev. Edward B. Wood, minister of the parish of Kilglass, in the same county, writes as follows: "I wish I could give you a more cheering account of the state of things than in my last, but I cannot. It is truly heart-rending to witness the scenes of distress and wretchedness constantly presenting themselves to view. I regret to say fever is again on the increase in this parish."

The answer is from the letter of a private individual in Ireland to the Rev. Mr. Moore, dated the 12th of April last: "By this time, I suppose, you must think, that we are no more, but glory be to God on high, who spared us, we are still the monuments of his tender mercy, and permitted by a kind Providence in this our green Isle to move about, though in sorrow and want, with death stalking before us in every quarter." Another individual writes thus: "You recollect that I wrote to you for some relief for myself and brother M. before you went to America, when we were starving. I beg you will not forget us now; but in the Lord's name I beg you will relieve us. I have a wife and five children, and under heaven I know not how to come through life. For God's sake, remember me, and see to relieve me, for I have neither food nor raiment, friend nor fellow, nor means to set or sow. All I had in the world is taken away by the famine, and if its well with you, I pray remember me and mine."

Many other statements similar to these might be added. They all unite with the testimony of Mr. Moore in representing that famine, & death from famine, yet prevail, whilst, within the last two years, the famine has killed from one to two millions of persons out of nine millions. These facts speak loudly in favor of extending relief to the poor sufferers. And we must not shut our ears to the appeal. Our distressed and dying fellow man ask us for bread. Is it a christian duty to give them a stone? We have bread in abundance,—vastly more than we need for ourselves. What shall we do with it? Do, as he was required by our Lord to do, who had two coats—give to him who has none. In this way: let every one, in the sympathy of his heart, do as the Lord hath prospered him.

It is hoped that the benevolent in the country will take measures for co-operating with the Executive Committee by transmitting to them such contributions of money, bread-stuffs, or wearing apparel, as they may be able to give. Their ability is ample, and if every farmer will do something, Old Muskidgum will again cover herself with honor in the persecution of this work of mercy.

In conclusion, the committee have to ask that each individual will consider the case of these suffering and perishing millions, and then remember that the Lord loveth a chearful giver.

WM. A. SMALLWOOD,
G. C. MOORE,
JOHN M. COURTNEY, } Committee.

July 26, 1848.

Bicknell's Reporter.—This useful business paper, has just entered upon a new volume.—We have heretofore recommended it as invaluable to business men. It is a large weekly sheet, giving the general News of the Day, Full reviews of the Markets in the leading cities of the Union, the Prices of Stocks in Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore, Commercial Letters from Europe by every Steamer, A complete list of Counterfeits, A review of the Money Markets for each week, and Commercial, Banking, Agricultural and Political Statistics from accurate sources.—Terms, $3 per annum. Two copies for $5.—Address, Matthew T. Miller, Philad.

Markets.

Putnam and Zanesville.—Flour, $4; Wheat 65cts.; Corn 31

Cincinnati.—Flour, $3,80a4; Wheat, 60cts.; Corn, 36; Oats, 33.

Pittsburgh.—Flour, $4,31a4,37; Wheat, 81 cts.; Corn, 30a35; Oats, 26a30.

A Retiring Editor.—The last number of the [illegible] are, bring[illegible] valedictory of Rev. Dr. Elliott, who has conducted that paper for rising of twelve years. He had previously edited the Pittsburgh Conference Journal for more than two years, making about fifteen years of his itinerant (?) life of thirty years, devoted to the weekly periodical press. After his long experience in the calling, he endorses the statement of Dr. Capers, that "editing a weekly sheet is the dog's drudgery!"—Dr. Elliott adds: "The composition of weekly editorials, as a whole, we never liked. We do not like them [it] now; and we are sure we never will. And we are now glad that we are rid of that sort of labor, to which for fifteen long years, we always sat down with reluciance; we performed it without delight, and reflected on it with little satisfaction." He further states that when he entered the itinerant ministry almost 30 years since, he set out as an itinerant for life, with the purpose of making the pastoral work, and what pertains to it the only business of his life. He gives as his opinion that the calling of an editor greatly disqualifies a man for the usual pastoral duties. But as it is sometimes "necessary to the interests of the church and must be filled, the incumbents must fill them as a matter of duty, though rarely out of choice." The Doctor proposes now to return to the regular labors of the itinerancy, though he observes that the labors and habits of an editorial career have rather, now in his fifty seventh year, impeded him in recommencing them. "Still," says he, "we purpose to try it; and to try it too, in its commonest and humblest forms, as a preacher on a circuit." He proposes also pursuing some literary labors, the first of which will be to prepare a book in answer to the challenge of Dr. Longstreth, in defence of the innocence of slavery. He will maintain the sinfulness of slavery.

U. S. CONGRESS.

July, 18—Senate.

Mr. Clayton, from Select Committee on the Territories of Oregon, California and New Mexico, reported a bill for the organization of Territorial Government in each of them. The bill contains thirty-seven sections. It recognizes the spirit of the "Missouri Compromise" in reference to the Territories, providing that slavery shall not be introduced into any north of Lat. 36° 30′, but not prohibiting it, south of that line.

July, 26.

After debates for several days, the Senate at a late hour, (night session) came to the vote upon the final passage of the compromise bill of Mr. Clayton. It was adopted by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Atchison, Atherton, Benton, Berrien, Borland, Breese, Bright, Butler, Calhoun, Clayton, Davis, of Mississippi, Dickenson, Douglass, Downs, Foote, Hannegan, Houston, Hunter, Johnson, of Ga., Johnson, of Md., Johnson, of La., King, Lewis, Mangum, Mason, Phelps, Rusk, Sebastian, Spruance, Sturgeon, Turney, Westcott, Yulee—33.

NAYS—Allen, Badger, Baldwin, Bell, Bradbury, Clark, Corwin, John Davis, Dayton, Dix, Dodge, Felch, Fitzgerald, Green, Hale, Hamlin, Metcalf, Miller, Niles, Underwood, Upham, Walker—22.

ABSENT—Cameron, Pierce and Webster—three.

Sat. 29—House.

The Compromise Bill from the Senate, was introduced in the House. A motion was made to lay it upon the table, which motion prevailed, by vote of 112 yeas to 97 nays. So, the bill is rejected.

☞The following article from the Western Christian Advocate contains some cogent thoughts respecting Camp Meetings. We had it laid by a year ago, and now hand it out for the benefit of our brethren who are about preparing for worship in the grove.

CAMP MEETINGS.

Mr. Editor,—As some new fashions are creeping into the Church, some old ones are going out. This is true in reference to camp meetings. Formerly, our old Methodists tell us, they thought nothing of going a hundred miles to camp meeting: now our circuits are cut up into small patches, and you hear them complain of the distance!

Some would substitute protracted meetings, two day meetings, &c. These may answer the best for large towns and cities; or during the winter season. And we have nothing to say against them in their proper place; but shall these prevent us from keeping the feast of tabernacles! We notice a few objections.

1. "We are so frequently annoyed by the sons of Belial." And what good thing was ever moved, that did not meet with opposition? When, on a certain occasion, the sons of God came together to worship, Satan came also among them. When Elijah tested the matter, with regard to God and Baal, he meet with formidable opposition. And we may expect that Gog and Magog will compass the 'camp' of the saints. And here, too, as anciently, they are refuted, confounded, and put to flight.

2. "Many persons go to feast on others, and to see and be seen." Was it not so anciently? "Ye seek me not," says the Savior, "because of the miracles; but because ye eat of the loaves, and were filled." And yet he fed them, and preached to them, and availed himself of this very circumstance, to say, "Labor not for that meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life."

3. "It is such a burden to our sisters to provide for so many." This is true, where few with tents attend; but all this may be obviated. Let the preacher in charge of a circuit begin in time, and show the people the impropriety of going unprepared to take care of themselves, if it is possible for them to make arrangements.—And, then, there will be no difficulty in providing for the remainder. Try to teach all our people, that there is something for them to do, besides merely taking care of themselves; and if we find here and there a Philip, who is ready to say, "We have but a few loaves & fishes, and what are they among so many," let us direct them to make arrangements in the grove, and trust God for the final issue, assured that he will multiply even his temporal gifts to those who use them for his glory.

We might mention some advantages arising from camp meetings, in addition to those already alluded to.

[illegible] Church, h[illegible] ing. [illegible] clothing is not ke[illegible] splendor of many fashionable C[illegible] our latitude in the summer is a [illegible] cheapest clothing, and the rich an[illegible] meet together in the grove, and have [illegible] common." And this will afford a gre[illegible] nity of preaching the Gospel to the po[illegible]

Again, the novelty of camp meetings [illegible] even those who are prejudiced against [illegible] gives access to multitudes to whom w[illegible] have access in no other way.

When, therefore, the Methodist Epis[illegible]copal Church abandons camp meetings, I pray [illegible] the Lord to raise up somebody that will adopt [illegible]hem. But I yet hope it will never be. Amen.

L. FORBES.

Cynthiana, Ia.

Travelling, East and West.

Col. Curtiss of the Cincinnati Commercial, taking a tour at the East, gives the following account, in his "Notes by the Way."

U. S. Hotel, Philadelphia, July 18, 1848.

Taking the railroad cars at Buffalo on the 11th, at ¼ past 8, A. M., and arriving in Albany next morning at 6 A. M., only twenty-two hour's ride, gave me an excellent opportunity to contrast the States of Ohio and New York in the article of wheat and some other things. As I passed thro' Ohio, I noticed all the wheat standing in shocks, ready to house. In New York, the wheat was untouched by the farmer, and the sun was just changing the color of the heads and stalks to that beautiful "golden hue" the poet speaks of. As the train went whirling through the air, one glorious view succeeded another in quick succession, as one undulation of country waved to that which next appeared, covered with wheat fields, glistening in rich hues, and gently waving in the sunshine. As I remarked of this product in Ohio, so can I say of New York—the crop of wheat, if well secured, will be heavier than in any former year.

At half past 6, A. M., on the 12th, got on board the Hendrik Hudson, North river steamer, and at 5, P. M., was safely at my hotel in New York. By the Camden and Amboy railroad, I reached this city in five hours, after a stay of a day or two in New York. I am thus particular, because I wish to speak of the eastern travelling facilities in comparison with ours in the west.

First.—The railroad through Ohio is superior to either the one through New York or the one through New Jersey—the Ohio track is better, the cars are better, and the superintendents and conductors on our Ohio railroads are gentlemen, which cannot be said, in truth, of most of those engaged on the eastern routes. If an eastern man in the west should meet with such fare as all of us western men do in the east, why, we should never hear the last of it. It would be rung through all the changes of the newspapers, as monstrous barbarism. In this eastern country, a man's baggage is tossed about like it would be in a young whirlwind! Remonstrate, and the blackguards will impudently tell you to "handle your trunk yourself and be d——d to you!" I saw a gentleman, at New York, giving vent to a little quiet solicitude about his trunk being in a certain baggage car then being filled—the fellow tossing in the trunks told the gentleman to "get out of the way, or he would throw him into the car and look him up where he could guard his baggage if he liked!" Such a scapegrace deserved to be tossed into the river. But so it is all the way along the lines mentioned, and so it will be, I presume, until competition railroads are built.

Secondly.—The rates of travel between all points, except between Buffalo and Albany, (and the price is kept down there by the canal packets) is positively onerous to bear. I paid three dollars from Albany to New York for passage—then come fifty cents for a dinner and fifty cents for supper, making four, and the porterage is so dexteriously managed (together with the hire of a deck-hand to store your trunk and keep it safely, for which purpose each hand on the boat has a room,) that another dollar is broken into ahalf, or whol- ly gone, before leaving them at the dock in N. Y., making about five dollars for 147 miles. The mail-boat between Cincinnati and Louisville carries a man in the best style and accommodation, and charges only $2.50! The amount of the matter is, (we have no personal grievances to complain of ourself,) the public is generally fleeced by these eastern monopolies of the swift modes of conveyances, and then insulted at every convenient opportunity by all grades of blackguards, such fellows as could not be found in Ohio with the single exception of the crew around the old "evening paper" office in our city.

Ladies' National Magazine.—The August number of this work is received. It contains a mezzotint, "Alice Linley," and the usual Fashion Plate, also some wood illustrations. Edited by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens. Published by C. J. Peterson, Philadelphia.

Godey's Lady's Book.—We have seen various notices of the August number, in our exchanges, respecting it, as a very rare production, but we have not been favored to see it as yet, no copy having reached us. Mr. Gody will oblige us by having one sent us.

News of the Week.

Large Fire in Boston.

About half past five yesterday afternoon, a fire was set in the loft of Adams & Clark's stables. Hudson street, and spread till several dwelling houses and workshops were destroyed in Hudson, Albany and Harvard streets, as follows:

On Hudson street: the stables occupied by Messrs. Adams & Clark and Mr. Freemen; two wooden houses, occupied by Mr. Dedovah Scates and Daniel Munroe, and a brick house occupied by Mr. Reed, commission merchant, out of town on business. Three brick houses were scorched in the rear, and the furniture in them was badly injured by water.

On Albany st.: The shops of Robinson & Moulton, stair builders, with a large stock; Bowkar and Hough, and Silas W. Merrill, carpenters; Roger Herring, slater, with a large stock, and John B. Kingsley, mason.

On Harvard street: a brick house, corner of Albany and H. sts., the lower story occupied by Clark I. Gorham as an eating house, and the upper part as a residence by Mr. Carcia, professor of music; the adjoining house occupied by William Hobart, and the next occupied by Mrs. J. K. Baker and Andrew J. Duncan.

All the houses were insured, but the total loss in furniture was very great. The value of building stock and furniture destroyed cannot be less than $80,000. The progress of the fire was not effectually checked till eight o'clock, although the department worked with great energy.

[Boston Post, 13th.

AN INCIDENT.

The other day when thousands were gathered on our wharf, welcoming, amid shouts & cheers, the roll of drums and the thunder of cannon, the arrival of our conquering legions; and while many an eye was straining to catch some once familiar form upon the thronged decks, how many were there among them that looked in vain?—How many were the hearts upon which these sounds of joy fell like the toll of the knell—like the dull, hoarse rattle of clods on the coffin of the dead?

And thus it is, ever, in war. The most glorious victories but poorly recompense the suffering with which they are purchased; and, with the sound of a nation's triumph is heard, in mournful dissonance, the wails of the widow and the orphan.

The other day, an old man came many miles to this great city, for his son was a volunteer, & he expected to meet him on his arrival. He had seen his boy go forth to battle in the pride of his youth and strength, flushed with hope and eager for the fame, which in his wild boy dreams he had associated with the name of soldier. At early dawn, the old man planted himself on the wharf, and waited patiently the arrival of the Steamers. He heeded not the hot sun that poured its fierce rays upon his gray head,—he murmured not at the jostling of the crowd, or the occasional rudeness of the passers by;—was he not soon to see his boy; the pride of his manhood, the stay of his old age? He heeded not fatigue or annoyance, so earnestly were his thoughts bent upon the expected meeting.

At length, the signal gun announced the approach of the Steamer; and the air was rent with the ringing of bells, the sound of music, and the cheers of the multitude. Pressing eagerly forward, the old man at length found a position where the troops must pass as they were disembarked. Company after company were landed, until at last that in which his son had served, moved on the wharf. The old man gazed intently along the line of bronzed and manly faces—and a sickness, as of despair, came upon his heart. Seizing an officer by the arm, he shrieked rather than asked, for his son.

"Killed at Mexico," said the officer, "march!" The drums beat, the standards waved, and the line passed on with a quick and measured tread; and the old man sank helpless in the crowd.

This is not fancy. It it a fact, and how many thousand similar examples could be re-counted! This poor old man—obscure, unknown,—knew not for long months that his son had fallen: and he heard it, at last, at the moment he expected to clasp him in his arms. How few of all the multitude around him paused to think of the agony of that one broken heart? And yet it was anguish, which all the glory of this glorious war could not relieve.—Pittsburgh Com. Journal.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday evening last, Joshua W. Cobbs, a citizen of Eaton, Ohio, while loading a wagon with wheat, fell on a fork, which he held in his hand. The fork entered his body immediately under the short ribs, and penetrated the region of the heart, making an incision of an artery, which resulted in death in the course of twenty or thirty minutes.

Melancholy Death of a Young Lady.—Miss Julia Ann Van Doozer, died rather mysteriously at Racine, Wisconsin, on the 6th instant, having been taken ill soon after a young man to whom she was engaged to be married, left her and went east, without assigning any reason therefor.—The wedding dress was already made and she requested on her death bed that she might be buried therein. An examination by the coroner disproved the rumors that her death was the result of an attempt to produce abortion. She had been deserted by a heartless fellow, and drooped to her end in a few days.

Fatal Consequences of Superstition.—In Louisville, Ky., on the night of the 18th inst., the wife of a German, named Mitchell, being ill with the tooth-ache, thought she would be immediately relieved if some blood were buried under the root of an apple tree. Her husband, to gratify her superstitious notion, went into the yard of Carter Tiller, who was on the look out for burglars, and supposing Mitchell to be one, killed him by striking him on the head with a stick.

Dreadful Calamity.—We learn from the Portland (Me.) Advertiser, that a pleasure boat was capsized on Saturday evening last, in Pordand harbor, and eight persons, (one woman and seven children,) lost their lives in consequence. The boat had on board Mr. James Stephenson, Mr. Wm. J. Smith, wife and three children, and four children of Mr. John Whiley. Mr. Stephenson swam to the ledge, and Mr. Smith was taken from the mast of the boat, to which he was clinging.

The trial of the slave abductors commences in the Criminal Court, at Washington, to-day, & the exciting investigation is expected to occupy at least the entire week. The Hon. Horace Mann, of Mass., and D. A. Hall, of Washington city, will appear as counsel for Drayton & Sears. Messrs. Carlisle and Ratcliffe, undertake the defence of Chester English. It is stated in the New York Tribune, that ex-Governor Seward will also appear as counsel for the prisoners. A large number of witnesses has been summoned.—Balt. Sun, 24th ult.

Locusts.—The seventeen year locusts now abounds in the counties of Monroe, Livingston, and some others, in the interior of the State of N. York.

Escape of an Alleged Murderer.—Wm. Donaldson, who is charged with the murder of Mehan, in New York city, a few months since, has been discharged by one of the Judges at N. Orleans, because no requisition had been received from Governor Young. A day or two afterwards officer A. M. C. Smith arrived there with a requisition, but Donaldson had escaped to parts unknown.

Accidents in Newspaper Offices.

We regret to learn that Mr. E. J. Hinckin, a pressman in the office of the Daily News, and a very worthy man, met with a shocking and most painful accident on Tuesday morning, which, it was believed, would cause him the loss of his right arm. While printing off the edition of the paper, as he was in the act of brushing some dust from the form, his fingers were caught by the rollers (cylinders) and drawn into the press.—Before the machinery could be stopped, his hand and fore-arm were mashed between the rollers and form almost perfectly flat. On being extricated the sufferer swooned from agony. After he revived, he was taken to his residence, where he received proper surgical aid.

On Monday morning, a lad about 15 years of age, named John Cotney, employed in the Ledger establishment, had his hand and arm badly lacerated and crushed by being caught in a cog-wheel in the press room. He was taken to the hospital.—Philad. Bulletin.

Awful Calamity and Loss of Life.

The N. Orleans Picayune, of the 15th inst., gives the following particulars of the terrible accident mentioned a few days since by telegraph from N. Orleans:

One of the most heart-rending calamities that we have lately had to record, occurred about 7 o'clock on Thursday evening last, on the levee opposite the Ursuline Convent. On Tuesday last a small portion of the levee at that spot gave way and sunk, and some fears were entertained that a larger portion would soon break off. On the evening we have spoken of, some men were engaged in driving pickets down at the place where the bank had given way, in order to prevent the levee from further wearing away by the action of the water. Some fifteen or twenty persons, who resided near the place, were gathered on the bank, viewing the river and the men at work, when about two hundred feet of the levee in length, and eighty feet in width, suddenly gave way, and without a moment's warning six human beings were ushered into eternity. The scene is described by those who witnessed it, to have been the most heart-rending they ever looked upon. The names of the victims, as we have learned them, are Mrs. Hypoline Troump and child, about eight months old; Fanny Troump, aged nine years; Louise Troump, aged seven years; Felix Troump, aged twenty-four years; Miss Charlotte Dezire and Mr. Francoise Andry. Of the five men who were at work driving pickets, four of them escaped; Felix Troump being the only one who was drowned. A little fellow, not quite ten years of age, Gustave Troump, was precipitated with the others into the water, but being able to swim and fortunate enough to retain his presence of mind, reached the shore.—He is the son of Hypoline Troump, and the only one of his family that is left to him.

The death of Mrs. Troump and child was the most agonizing portion of the terrible scene.—The spot upon which she stood, instead of rolling over into the water as most of the bank did, settled down beneath her, leaving her standing with her child raised above her head, with the true feelings of a mother, and calling until she had nearly disappeared upon some one to save her child. Her husband, who was but a short distance from her, rushed towards the spot, and when within a few feet of her, a large pile of wood fell over and crushed her beneath it.

The unfortunate man, who had thus lost all he held dear at a blow, could with difficulty be restrained from plunging into the water and going down with his family. He yesterday presented the most melancholy spectacle we ever looked upon. Without noticing the crowd that was congregated about the place, he rowed over the spot in a small boat from morning till night, vainly searching for the remains of his lost family.—None of the bodies had been recovered up to 6 o'clock last evening.—New Orleans Picayune, July 15.

Sudden Decease.—Thos. B. Howard, of Philadelphia, one of a party of ladies and gentlemen who were spending a few days at a bathing resort, died on Sunday morning, from an attack of epilepsy, brought on by his imprudence in going into the surf while overheated.

Freshet at Cumberland.—The recent rains caused a considerable freshet at Cumberland, Md. The canal contractors have suffered considerably; several temporary bridges being swept away. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad bridge, a few miles below Cumberland, is slightly damaged.—Balt. Sun.

Destruction of a Factory.—The carpet and calico factory of Mr. Samuel Scott, Southwark, Philadelphia, was burnt on Saturday night. It comprised three large buildings, each three stories high, and one four story building, together with machinery, and about fifty looms, all of which were consumed, valued altogether at $50,000, on which there was an insurance of $10,000. Very little of the stock saved.

More Cases of Drowning.—Miss Ashworth and another young lady, of Summer st., Portsmouth. N. H., were drowned on Sunday in a sail boat with two young men, who were saved with difficulty.

Two boys, Jerome Mortinger and Frank Lewis, sons of Benjamin Anthony, of North Providence, R. I., one aged 11 and the other 8 years, were drowned on Sunday morning.

Look to Your Scythes.—No less than three dangerous accidents occurred in Bucks county, Pa., lately, from careless handling of scythes.

At Washington, Pa., a child of Mr. P. Reed, accidentally killed his young brother with a scythe they found in the field.

Killed by a Cannon.—On Friday last, as the citizens were escorting the Fayette Volunteers to Uniontown, Pa., Mr. S. S. Austin was fatally wounded by the bursting of a Mexican gun or swivel.

Destructive Fire.—A fire broke out in Rochester, N. Y., on Tuesday last, and destroyed the large five story brick building belonging to Horatio N. Curtis, on the east side of the river, and extending on the south side of Main to Water street, burnt out 15 or 16 other establishments.—The loss to Mr. Curtis will be very severe. He had an insurance of only $6,000, little more than half his loss on the building; his entire loss can fall but little short of $10,000. The building is totally destroyed. The loss together will be not far from $30,000, falling in a considerable degree upon mechanics, who were not insured, and will feel it seriously.

Fire.—The extensive iron establishment of Messrs. Brown, Peeble & Co., at New Castle, Mercer county, Pa., was entirely consumed by fire, on Sunday morning last. The establishment was new and in successful operation. It is not known how the fire originated.

☞The railroad to the Lakes, the entire line, will be completed in about twenty days. We may then take breakfast in Cincinnati and supper in Sandusky.

The father of waters is, by Mr. F. Steele, being converted into a mill stream. To effect this a dam is in course of construction at the falls of St. Anthony, which when completed will furnish the greatest improved water power in the world. The dam is seven hundred feet long and sixteen feet high, and built of heavy timber, and but a short distance above the principal fall. Upon the dam will be built the mills, extending from the shore to an island, a distance of four hundred feet. It is expected the work will be completed the present year, when the erection of saw and flouring mills will be commenced. Should this stupendous work be successfully carried into execution, the roar of these tremendous falls, which for ages has resounded through the forests and filled the listener with awe, will be drowned by the clatter of machinery, and one of nature's grandest and wildest works brought by the skill and perseverance of man, to administer to his wants.—Cin. Com.

Murder Most Foul and Unnatural.

Circumstances have transpired, within a couple of days, of a character which indicate that a murder most foul and unnatural, was committed in Mohawk, 2½ miles from the city, about 3 weeks ago. Mr. Elijah Wood, constable of Millcreek township, was on his way home, one night near that time, and when close by the house of John Seifert, in Mohawk, he heard the cry of murder coming from that direction. One of the windows of the house was up; under which Mr. Wood stopped and asked the cause of the cry.—"Oh! nothing," said several who came to the window; "it is only a little fun we are having here." Satisfied with the reply, and not suspecting any foul play, he wended his way homeward. But a few days after that, Mr. Wood was passing by the same house, and saw a funeral issuing from it; and all at once it occurred to him that some act of violence had been committed on the night in question. He communicated his suspicions to Mr. A. G. W. Carter; who advised him to have the corpse disinterred and examined. The thing was done on Wednesday last. Drs. Richardson and Vattier held a council over the body; and from the wounds inflicted, pronounced it as their belief that the man (the keeper of the house, Mr. Siefert,) had been murdered.—The coroner was called in, who held an inquest upon it; and the verdict agreed upon was in accordance with the opinion of the medical gentlemen. On such a decision, and at the instance of friends, the family occupying the house, consisting of several persons, were arrested, and will undergo an examination before the magistrate of Millcreek township to-morrow. Without desiring to prejudice the public mind, we are constrained to say that matters look dark against the persons implicated; but we hope they will have a fair trial, and if innocent, dealt with accordingly.—Cin. Enq.

The Elephant and Rhinoceros Fight.—We learn from the Johnstown (N. Y.) Republican, of July 24th, that the telegraphic account we published on Thursday, of the battle between the elephant and rhinoceros, was a "true bill," and was not, as was generally supposed, a hoax. The Republican gives the following account of their fight, and the escape of the rhinoceros:

"Finding himself menaced, the rhinoceros came from his cage and showed fight. He was no sooner on the ground than he received two or three heavy blows from the trunk of the elephant upon his back, which beat him to the earth, where he lay for some time as if dead.

The elephant then endeavored to finish him by trampling upon him, which the rhinoceros evaded by jumping under the body of his powerful antagonist, in which position he gave the elephant several upward thrusts with the prodigious horn that projects from the front of his head, which put his elephantship hors du combat. The keepers finding it impossible to secure the infuriated beasts alone, called upon the neighbors for assistance, which was promptly given, and every effort made to prevent him from doing further mischief.

"In the meanwhile the rhinoceros had got into the open fields, where he confined his operations to the frightening of horses and cows that were in the pasture, and then took to a neighboring swamp, where he luxuriated in his favorite recreation of bathing, with the same unconcern as if he had been wallowing among his own native marshes in Japan."

He was still at large, with some five hundred persons in pursuit of him, at the latest accounts, all attempts to shoot him with rifle balls having proved abortive.

☞The rhinoceros which recently escaped from the Manegerie of Waring & Co., was caught near Little Falls on the 27th inst. It is thought that he will not recover.

The republic of New Grenada, in order to attract immigration, has determined to offer large grants of land and other privileges to immigrants, among which is religious toleration. The late treaty between the United States and New Grenada, which secures to the former the right of way across the Isthmus of Darien, will doubtless invite enterprise to that country, and flourishing towns will soon spring up along the route.—Cin. Com.

DROWNED.—Mr. Daniel Eckert, an old and industrious citizen, and a Pioneer resident of Cincinnati, was drowned yesterday morning by making a misstep when endeavoring to pass from the steamer Lewis Wetzell on the Ben Franklin. He was seen to fall in, and one of the officers of the Franklin jumped into the yawl to save him; but the boat being half full of water, it swamped, and it was with difficulty that the officer saved himself. Mr. E., of course, perished. He will be remdmbered by most of our people as a drayman, and sometimes as a fish dealer in the markets.—Cin. Com.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Law Journal for July contains an eloquent opinion by Judge Lewis, delivered at the June Term Common Pleas Court, at Lancaster on a case where a certain man devised to his widow all his property, "provided she remain a widow during her life; but in case she should marry again, my will is she shall leave the premises," &c. The widow having married again, suit was brought by other heirs of the husband to recover the property. Judge Lewis decided that "the condition in restraint of marriage is void, and the second marriage of the widow does not divest her estate"—"the principles of morality—the policy of the nation—the doctrines of the common law—the law of nature and law of God, unite in condemning as void the condition attempted to be imposed by this testator upon his widow."—Miner's Journal.

DANGERS OF THE TELEGRAPH.—On Monday of last week, the operator at the telegraph station at Augusta, Ga., had a very narrow escape from death by lightning. He was sitting a short distance from the instrument, around which were fixed the wires to ward off atmospheric lightning, and was writing the transmission of a message from Charleston to Savannah, when a flash of lightning instantly stunned him making a report like a pistol. The batteries were knocked to pieces, the magnet destroyed, and the winding wires melted in several places. Had he been operating at the time there is little doubt that he would have been killed. It is presumed that the magnet at Savannah was also destroyed, as the communication was instantly interrupted.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT AND DEATH.—On Saturday afternoon, Mr. Samuel W. Keppel, a resident near Germantown, Pa. met with his death in a singular and melancholy manner. He was riding home in a wagon containing a quantity of weeds which he had been cutting, and upon which he had laid a pitchfork, with the forks towards him, the handle being towards and near his horse. From some cause the horse backed towards the wagon, and in doing so, struck the handle and forced the forks into his breast, one of which penetrated his heart, and caused instant death. The deceased was in the 27th year of his age.

From the Clarion of Freedom.

Rare Surgical Operation.

MR. EDITOR: To-day I was present where a Surgical operation was performed that surpassed anything I ever witnessed. Dr. Holston was the principal operator, assisted by Drs. Cunningham and Porter, besides Messrs. Robert Harper, Thos. Cunningham, and myself, were the only ones present. The subject was Mary Jane White, a young woman well known in this vicinity. A number of years ago she received a severe wound on the left side of her head by a stroke of an axe in the hands of an incautious boy. For some time past she has been subject to spasms, an operation was considered the only way by which she could be cured.

All things being ready, the Divine blessing was implored by Dr. Holston in an humble and fervent manner. The patient resigned herself into the hands of the Savior for life or for death, with much appearance of christian fortitude. On being asked if she was ready, she unhesitatingly answered "Yes sir." The powerful agent, Chloroform was then applied until it produced insensibility to pain. An incision was then made, first in the skin, which was laid back out of the way, and then through the skull by means of Striphine and other subordinate instruments, and a portion of the skull was then taken away. The orifice thus made was two inches and five eighths in length and one inch in breadth: the time occupied in the operation was nearly two hours. The patient had the right exercise of her mental faculties all the time, or nearly so. She made very little complaint of pain. She conversed freely, and gave some directions, and even named the persons present.

From my observations of the power of Chloroform in this instance, I think it will be of great benefit to the human family in many other cases. It does not destroy the proper action of any power of the mind so far as I could judge.

We left the patient at ease; after telling us that she felt as though she had a new head, she said all was right. I have here related the facts relative to the above critical case as correctly as possible.

ALEX. GEORGE.

I do hereby certify that the above statement of Mr. George, respecting the recent surgical operation, performed by Dr. Holston, is true.

ROBERT HARPER.

FROM YUCATAN.—Accounts from Yucatan, via Havana, are to the 23d ult. The town of Muna had been taken by the whites, after a conflict with the Indians. The whites had also captured the towns of Hampolot and Cenotillo, routing the Indians who defended it, with considerable loss. The general aspect of affairs is decidedly favorable to the whites.

A Campeachy paper announces that six hundred Angle-Americans from among those who served in Mexico, had arrived.

CAPTIVES OF THE PEARL.—Grace Russell and Ellen Madison, two of the slaves who were recaptured some time ago, after an attempt to escape from Washington, have been ransomed from slavery, by contributions chiefly raised in New York and Massachusetts. The amount expended was nearly fourteen hundred dollars. Grace is in New York, with her mother, and Ellen in the vicinity of Boston. Measures are in progress for the ransom of two other girls Mary & Emily Edmeston, who have been sold and sent to New Orleans. N. Y. Com.

The Hornet's Nest on the Barn.

My uncle was reading a paragraph in the newspaper, the other day to this effect: that a certain man found a large hornet's nest under the eaves of his barn, and determined to destroy it. So he took some matches, tied them to a pole, and with them set fire to the nest, and totally destroyed it. Unfortunately, however, the barn was also burned, together with a thousand bushels of oats, and a large quantity of rye, hay, and other valuable stores. The loss was estimated at from twelve to fifteen hundred dollars, and there was no insurance on the property.

"Well, well," said my uncle, "Mr. Simmons was a fool! It's nothing new, however, for I've known the same thing done a hundred of times."

"What! burn down a house to get rid of a hornet's nest?"

"To be sure, my boy. What is a man doing when he drinks rum to cure disease?"

"Why, uncle, it may save his life."

"It may save it for a while, but it is apt to destroy it after a while. Look at your neighbor, Mr. Grumly; he has been for a year trying to burn out a pain in the breast, by firing his stomach with brandy, and the eaves of his house are on fire now."

"That's true, uncle; but then Mr. Grumly has a weakness, for which he drinks brandy."

"Exactly, and so has every man that drinks a weakness. There's Mr. Carbuncle, who has been dosing for dyspepsia—burning out the hornet's nest with rum, till the front of his house is in a blaze. Mr. Carbuncle's whole concern will soon be in ashes. I tell you my lad, many a fellow that stands high in life, is as big a fool as Simmons. It's all dead loss, too—no insurance—not a farthing. Mind what I say, Peter—never do you make such a fool of yourself, as to set fire to your house for the sake of burning out a hornet's nest."

VICTIMS OF THE LAND SLIDE.—Since our last issue says the the New Orleans Bulletin, the bodies of all the unfortunate victims of this dreadful accident, whose names are known, have been found and indentified. On Saturday morning, the body of Mr. Felix Troump came up within a few yards of the place where the accident happened. In the afternoon the body of Fanny Troump, aged 8 years, was found below the U. S. Barracks, and the infant Gustave Troump, aged 8 months, was shortly afterwards picked up near the "English Turn." On yesterday, the body of Mrs. Victorine Troump was found below the Convent, and also that of Mr. Audbrey, who was discovered opposite Mr. Villier's plantation, about 15 miles below the city. These persons were the only ones whose names are known; but from all that we can learn, there are several other victims.

GREAT FIRE AT OREL, IN RUSSIA.—A letter received in this city, by the steamer Hibernia, from St Petersburgh, which we have been permitted to peruse, gives an account of a devastating fire at Orel, June 26, which destroyed a great part of the town. So rapid was the spread of the fire, by the force of a violent wind, that many inhabitants with difficulty escaped with their lives, without any atempt to save their property. In the town and suburbs, 1237 houses were destroyed, of which 50 were built of stone or brick, besides four bridges 30,000 chetverts of grain, and 100,000 poods of hemp. Eight lives were lost, and two other persons were severely burnt. The amount of loss is estimated at 3,425,000 silver roubles. The Emperor had given 50,000 silver roubles for the immediate relief of the sufferers, and 10,000 had been advanced by the Minister of the Interior. A general subscription for the same purpose had been opened throughout the empire.

Fatal Superstition.

The Louisville Courier tells of a singular affair which happened in that city on the 18th.—The wife of a German named Mitchel was suffering with an excruciating tooth-ache, and in conformity with a superstitious custom, requested her husband to go into a neighbor's yard, where there was an apple tree, dig a hole under the roots and bury some of her blood, which, according to the superstition, would immediately relieve her. The husband proceeded to the yard of Mr. Carter Tiller, where there was an apple tree, and was progressing with the ceremonies, when Mr. Tiller, supposing him to be a burglar, (an attempt having been made a few evenings before to rob his house,) struck him over the head with a stick or cane so severely that it caused his death.

A fire recently occurred in Boston which destroyed property on Hudson street valued at $40,000.

Aristocracy of Appetite.

We never dreamed until yesterday of the existence of an "aristocracy of appetite." We overheard in the market the following brief dialogue between an old lady and a little girl, while they were standing in front of a vegetable stand:

"Grandmother," said the litule girl, "buy some of these cucumbers."

"No, my child," replied the lady, "I should hate to be seen carrying them home, for every body knows they are only a cent apiece!"

The excuse was incontrovertible.—Cincinati Com.

"A gentleman of considerable fortune, but a stranger to either personal or family religion, one evening took a solitary walk through a part of his own grounds. He happened to come near a mean hut, where a poor man with a numerous family lived, who heard a voice pretty loud and continued. Not knowing what it was, curiosity prompted him to listen. The man, who was piously disposed, happed to be at prayer with his family. So soon as he could distinguish the words, he heard him giving thanks with great affection to God, for the goodness of his providence, in giving them food to eat and raiment to put on, in supplying them with what was necessary and comfortable in this life. He was immediately struck with astonishment and confusion, and said to himself, 'does this poor man, who has nothing but the meanest fare, and that purchased by severe labor, give thanks to God for his goodness to himself and family, and I, who enjoy ease and honor, and every thing that is grateful and desirable, have hardly ever bent my knee, or made any acknowledgment to my Maker and Preserver!' It pleased God that this providential occurrence proved the means of bringing him to a real and lasting sense of God and religion."—Thos. Dick.

A Public Improvement.—The contract for the rails for the Chicago and Galena Railroad has been concluded, and a portion of the rails are already on their way to their destination. It is expected that some 15 or 20 miles of the road westward from Chicago, will be in active use during the present season. This road opens the trade of the whole Northwestern district—the lead region—to the Lakes, and hence it is regarded as an improvement of great interest.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Jos Burns,	O.	H Palmer, 1 sub.	Pa.
R Rose,	"	M Stewart, 2 subs	"
P M—Stoner,	"	Jas Smith,	N. Y.
O P Stephens,	"	A Lister.	Va.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
Jas Smith,	A Burrows,	8	7	1 00
W Maynard,	Abr'm. Gallion,	8	52	4 00
O P Stephens,	R P Rogers,	8	96	3 00

☞Rev. Thomas Foster, of the Muskingum District, is about to take a tour in the Pittsburgh District, for the purpose of collecting the dues of Rev. C. Springer on account of Western Recorder, having received a special commission from Br. S. to this effect. We trust that brethren, wherever Br. T. may come, will give him facilities for accomplishing the object of his mission.

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa,	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chancyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Adam Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

NOTICES.

A CALL.

As the all absorbing question, now engaging the attention of community is, whether Slavery and all its appendages shall be carried into the Territories of the United States, the undersigned respectfully request all, of whatever political name, who are determined to resist the extension of Slavery, to meet at the School-House on West Street, Putnam, on next Tuesday evening, 8th inst., for the purpose of forming a Free Soil Association.

ELI NESBAUM,	E. A. FARQUHAR,
C. M'CARTY,	C. NORTHROP,
J. WEISANT,	JOHNSON GLASS,
S. B. JOHNSON,	JAMES ALEXANDER,
G. BUCKINGHAM,	BENJAMIN TUTTLE,
JOHN SNIFF,	S. B. BALL,
A. A. GUTHRIE,	E. DILLON,
A. CHANNELL,	WM. BIRKSHIRE.
L. WILES,

SPRINGFIELD CT., O. DISTRICT.—We have appointed a Protracted Meeting at the Concord Meeting House, to commence Thursday, August 31st., and to continue over the next Sabbath. We trust that some of the ministerial brethren north of us will observe this notice, & make it suit to come at the commencement and stay over Sabbath with us. It will be directly on the way to Conference. Come, brethren, I shall look for at least an equal divide of laborers with Br. Hunt. Concord is six miles south of Springfield, on the Cortsville road.

Will Br. Young call with us, on his way to Lebanon?

R. ROSE.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs. C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

Woodsfield Circuit, Muskingum District.—Please give notice that the meeting of Brother Clancy, our President, for this circuit, will be at Lewisville, 7 miles west of Woodsfield on the Summerfield road. Call on Brother Francis Allen. Brother H. T. Lawson is invited to attend this meeting if possible

N. LINDER,
Superintendent.

Maumee Mission, Ohio District.—Notice is hereby given to our worthy President, Brother Young, that his meeting for this Mission will be at Brother Tipton's, 3 miles north of Providencetown. Will our ministerial brethren of the adjoining circuits, come to our assistance?

Also, the meeting for Portage Circuit, is to be held in Perrysburg, which appointment is now under my charge. Come, brethren, make your arrangements to attend both appointments, and may the God of all grace be with us at these meetings

C. CARTER.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Lysander Circuit August 5th and 6th.
Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

LIMA CT., OHIO DIST.—Br. Bassett: By your permission, I would publish through the Recorder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on the Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it wa be on the road to Conference. Come, brethren, and help us.

J. L. BORTON.

CLARKSVILLE CT., OHIO DIST.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

NEWARK CIRCUIT, MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Irville, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in August next. Any ministering brethren who can do so, are requested to attend and assist us on the occasion.

W. H. MARSHALL.

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August next. Said meeting to be held about 1½ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected; and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local, together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst, to prepare the ground.

E. S., HOAGLAND, Supt

KALIDA CT., OHIO DIST.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Borton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

COSHOCTON CT., MUSK. DIST.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

COLUMBIA CT., MUSK. DIST.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT

BELLVUE CT., MUSK. DISTRICT.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

Advertisements.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern, Baltimore,

A NEW SUPPLY OF

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

Snethen's Sermons.

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the office of the WESTERN RECORDER.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. LEVI R. REESE.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

SACRED MELODEON

A SELECTION OF

REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.

BY REV. J. DALBEY, JR., & J. B. PEAT.

REVISED AND ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public, as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while an addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publisher has received of the "Sacred Melodeon," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalbey, Jr., and Rev. J. B. Peat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. * * * * The work is neatly executed, with fair type and paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hyms, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS.

Per copy,	$00 30
Per dozen,	2 60
Fifty copies or more, per hundred,	18 00

 The above, work can be obtained of Rev. A. H. Bassett, Putnam, Geo. Conclin, Cincinnati; or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

Poet's Corner.

SABBATH-SCHOOL HYMNS.

How pleasant thus to dwell below,
In fellowship of love;
And though we part, 'tis bliss to know
The good shall meet above.

O! that will be joyful, joyful, joyful,
O! that will be joyful,
To meet to part no more.
To meet to part no more,
On Canaan's happy shore,
And sing the everlasting song,
With those who've gone before.

Yes, happy thought! when we are free
From earthly grief and pain,
In heaven we shall each other see,
And never part again.
O! that will be joyful, &c.

The children who have loved the Lord
Shall hail their teachers there;
And teachers gain the rich reward
Of all their toil and care.
O! that will be joyful, &c.

Then let us each, in strength divine,
Still walk in wisdom's ways:
That we, with those we love, may join
In never-ending praise.
O! that will be joyful, &c.

How serious is the charge
To train the infant mind;
'Tis God alone can give the heart
To such a work inclined.

May we in Christian bonds,
The Christian name adorn,
By active deeds for public good;
Nor mind the sinner's scorn.

While wicked men unite,
Our youth to lead aside;
'Tis ours to show them wisdom's path
In wisdom's path to guide.

Dependent, Lord, on thee,
Our humble means to bless;
We gladly join our hearts and hands,
And look for large success.

Indulgent God, to thee we pray,
Be with us on this solemn day;
Smile on our souls, our plans approve;
By which we seek to spread thy love.

Let party prejudice be gone,
And love unite our hearts in one;
Let all we have, and are, combine
To aid this glorious work of thine.

May multitudes of souls be found
Who shall attend the gospel sound:
And let barbarians, bound and free,
In suppliant throngs resort to thee.

Where pagan altars now are built,
And blood of beasts or men is spilt;
There be Messiah's cross upreared;
And God, our God, alone revered.

To Thee, the little children's Friend,
Their hymn to-day shall rise;
O from the heavenly courts descend,
And bless the sacrifice!

While through our land fair freedom's song
Our fathers raise to thee;
Our accents shall the notes prolong;
We children, too, are free!

The past with blessings from thy hand,
Was richly scattered o'er;
As numerous as the countless sand
That spreads the ocean-shore.

O may the future be as bright;
Nor be thy favors less
Resplendent with the glorious light
Of peace and happiness.

On earth prepare us for the skies;
And when our life is o'er,
Let us to purer mansions rise,
And praise thee evermore.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

SLAVERY IN THE UNITED STATES.

Br. Bassett: In concluding a former letter on slavery, I proposed to furnish another communication, in which I would give my views more fully on that subject. When I commenced that letter, I expected to say all that I intended at once; but I found that I could not without extending the letter to an improper length. Numerous engagements and want of health, have prevented me from writing again at an earlier period. In another letter published some time before the one of which I have just spoken, I remarked, that I had very great, and very serious objections to slavery. In the one which followed, I took the ground in opposition to one of your correspondents, that slavery is not of the Devil—and that in its origin, it is not repugnant to the will of God. Now, I intend to show that I do not call in question any act, or sanction of God, and that my views as at different times expressed through the Recorder, are not contradictory of each other, but only paradoxical. The paradox, however, is one which needs further explanation. And, yet, I thought when I wrote my last that I gave a sufficient "clue," as I then called it, to prevent, for the time, any serious misapprehension of my meaning. That "clue" was given in these words.—"I cannot believe that slavery is an offspring of the Devil—but I am not disposed to think, at the same time, that God intends it shall be perpetuated throughout all ages." I have no right to object to what God sanctions. To do so, would be the height of presumption.—But some things, whose origin, and temporary existence, may not be repugnant to the will of God, he may not intend to continue in existence. And if slavery has answered the end, or ends, for which it seems to have been designed by the Almighty, as I am led to believe it has; & if these are providential intimations, as I think these are, that it may be done away, without any contravention of his will, and purposes; I have a right to object, I think, even greatly and seriously, to its present existence, as well as its perpetuation. This is where I stand—and such is my position. My views I intend, in a brief synopsis, to develope; and though they may not be correct, I profess to hold them as an honest man. They may be presented, briefly, as follows:—

1. That the institution of slavery; in the U. States, was Providentially established, in view of benefiting the African race.

2. That the proximate ends, at least, of Providence, in the establishment of slavery, in the United States, seem to have been attained.

3. That the institution of slavery, in the U. States, seeming to have attained, at least, the proximate ends, for which it was designed by Providence—it may, with great propriety, I think—and probably if not certainly, God intends it shall be finally abolished.

4. That the colored people of the United States, who are still in bondage under the institution of legalized slavery, are not prepared for the due appreciation, possession, and national enjoyments of civil freedom.

5. That the course of the abolitiontsts, while they may be moved by the purest philanthropic motives towards the slaves of the United States, is one founded upon an erroneous policy, as it is adverse to, and in a great measure preventive of their preparation for freedom.

6. That when the slaves of the U. States shall, eventually, be prepared for liberty, it will be infinitely better, in view of their own good, as well as ours, that they be placed, by government, or otherwise, in some part, or parts, of the world, in communities to themselves.

The above propositions, embodying my views upon the subject of slavery, I have not time, or space, at present, to consider. The principal design of the communication, is to define my position, and to show particularly, why I have objections to slavery. I have never stated the general grounds of these objections. I might, it is true, have given them more in detail. But what I have said is, I judge, sufficient. I shall not now, I think, be misapprehended. I have no desire to "evade" anything that I have written, heretofore, upon the subject, though it has been intimated that I would probably attempt it! I profess to be an honest man. I profess to be open to conviction. I profess to be willing to retract any errors into which I may fall. And who has a right to question whether these professions are sincere? I am not certain that my views are correct. I am in search of light. I have long been of the opinion, that an interchange of thought, upon this subject, ought not to be suppressed. And, yet, there may be times when it is not best to agitate it. Of late, I have seen intimations in the Recorder, and that from the most respectable sources, that an agitation of this subject again in its columns, would not be agreeable, or judicious. These intimations caused me to regret somewhat, that I had written at all, upon the subject. I intended no harm, however, and I trust that I have done no harm. It is uncertain whether I shall write any more upon the subject. But if necessary, I will, at some other time, with the Editor's consent, consider somewhat in detail, my opinions, as synoptically presented, in the foregoing propositions.

But before I close this letter, I must not omit to pay suitable respect to a passage in a recent communication from Rev. James Gay. He speaks of me, my position, and sentiments, as follows:—"It possibly may be that this Rev. Sir, is a slaveholder, & that his objections to slavery consist in the want of a clear title to his human goods, and chattels, and thinks that if God has" (had I supposed) "only given him such a warrantee to the souls, and bodies of the poor slaves, that his own conscience would always be quiet, and that he might put to silence the ultra abolitionists, then it would have been all right."—Upon this I will make a few remarks.

1. With my being, or not being, "a slaveholder," Mr. Gay has nothing to do, whatever. Whether I hold slaves, or not, he can ascertain, no doubt, if he will give himself a little trouble. But whether I do, or do not, has nothing to do with the question, nor can it affect any argument concerning it. And, besides, I protest against his having any right, in the course of discussion upon a general question, to pry into any of my domestic relations. Whatever relation I may, or may not, hold to the institution of slavery, I am willing, when respectfully and properly called upon, fully and frankly to state. But I regard the allusion of Mr. Gay, as totally irrelevant, and very improper.

2. What, again, has Mr. Gay to do with my "conscience?" Or what right has he to suspect, that I have not a "quiet conscience?" Or how can my "conscience," in any way, affect the general question of slavery? Or what authority has he to think, and intimate, that I, instead of desiring the will of God to be done, in all things, desire God to accommodate himself to my temporal interests, so as to cause my "conscience to be always quiet?" Were I to say of him, that "possibly this Rev. Sir," as he styles me, wants to be a slaveholder, but from some causes beyond his control, cannot, and is therefore an abolitionist,—I should use no argument, but should be greatly wanting in christian courtesy. But were I so far to forget myself, and the rules which ought to govern christians, and gentlemen, in their intercourse with one another, as to express, through the public prints, such an insinuation, I should be no more discourteous to him, than he has been to me.

3. My positions, and my arguments, Mr. Gay has the right to bring to the test of a rigid ratiocination. If he can prove my positions to be untenable, and my arguments to be inconclusive, let him do it, and I am willing to give him credit for it. If there was anything in my position, as it was in part defined in the Recorder, which he did not understand, had he named it, an explanation would have been given to him. But as he has obtruded himself into the chamber of my "conscience,"——where no man has the right to enter—and descended to what I must regard as improper and offensive personal insinuations, self-respect demands, that, while I regard him as a brother, I should decline any further discussion with him, upon the subject in question. I still believe that a discussion on the subject, if conducted in a right spirit, would do good. But I do not conceive that Mr. Gay has manifested that spirit; and I never will consent, except there is some necessity in the case, to hold a discussion with a man, who ever he may be, that will descend to unwarranted insinuations, and personalities. I have not, indeed, pledged myself to discuss the subject with any one. I have at no time, indeed, desired to do so, much less have I expressed such desire. Hereafter, I shall be governed by circumstances, as they arise.

Yours, very sincerely,

W. M'GWIGAN.

Lynchburg, July 17th, 1848.

Brother Editor: While passing around my circuit a sister who reads the Recorder said to me, "you must write to that Virginian" (meaning friend M'G.) and if possible put his head right. For the purpose of giving him light on his strong passage of Scripture, in favor of slavery; I wish you would publish the following letter from the pen of the Rev. Mr. Johnson of Ohio, as published in the Emancipator, of March, 1836. JAMES GAY.

"THE BIBLE ARGUMENT."

Levit. 25. 44–46: "Both thy bondmen and thy bondmaids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you, of them shall ye buy bondmen, and bondmaids.—Moreover, of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you which they begat in your land: and they shall be your possession. And ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you to inherit them for a possession; they shall be your bondmen forever." Though advocates for slavery consider this passage as their strong hold, it contains nothing favorable to slavery. They infer two things from this passage which neither it nor any other passage in the Bible authorizys.

First. That these servants did not sell themselves. This inference is altogether inconsistent with the morality of the Bible, and unauthorized by it. I feel myself safe in defying the world to produce a single passage of scripture, which authorizes one man to sell another as a slave. It may be said that persons were sold in case of theft. But in that case the person sold, was not, strictly speaking a slave; for he, and his posterity were not held as personal property. He only served, until he had made restitution to the person he had injured. But why is one man authorized to buy another? The answer is plain. A man has a right to sell himself, and when he is willing to sell himself, it is right that he should be purchased. This was the case with the sojourners mentioned in verse 45. "Moreover, of the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy." These sojourners were not slaves. v. 47. "If a stranger or sojourner wax rich by thee, and thy brother that dwell by him wax poor, and sell himself to the stranger or sojourner," &c. These sojourners, instead, of being slaves, are, in this text, represented as getting rich, in some instances, and buying Hebrews for servants. Hence, these sojourners were unquestionably freemen, who came from other countries to sojourn in the land of Canaan. And who sold them if they did not sell themselves? The Jews were not allowed to steal sojourners! The surrounding nations were not allowed to steal sojourners; neither were they allowed to steal one another. Exod. 21. 16: "He that stealeth a man, and selleth him, or if he be found in his hand, he shall surely be put to death." As kidnapping was not allowed in Israel, the irresistible conclusion is, that the sojourners became servants by selling themselves. But might not the Jews buy stolen men of the nations round about, and make slaves of them? Those who can relish such a notion, and take comfort from it, may believe it; I cannot believe it without proof. Did God command the Jews to put the man-stealer to death, and yet permit them by purchasing stolen men to encourage man-stealing? Can any one believe, that, when man-stealing was punishable with death, a slave market was opened in Israel, and that the man-stealer was permitted, unmolested, to bring his stolen property into market? Did the Jews institute a slave market among the heathens to purchase slaves? If the Jews had done so they would have been partakers of the man-stealer's guilt. Prov. 29. 24: "Whoso is partaker with a thief hateth his own soul." The same is said in this statute v. 44, concerning the Heathen that lived round about, and who were purchased; that is said concerning the sojourners that were purchased. And as the sojourners who were purchased evidently sold themselves, the fair inference is, that the heathens who were purchased, also sold themselves. Joseph thought the Egyptians to be Pharoah's servants. Gen. 47. 23: "Ahab was sold to be the servant of iniquity," 1. Kings, 21, 20, 25: But who sold the Egyptians? Who sold Ahab? The answer is easy. The Egyptians sold themselves, and Ahab sold himself. Also all admit that the Hebrew servant sold himself; and this is the idea of selling into servitude in many places in the Bible. 2. Kings 18. 17: "And sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the Lord," Isa. 50. 1. Behold for your iniquities have ye sold yourselves." Isa. 53. 3: Ye have sold yourselves for naught." Rom. 6. 16: "To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey his servants ye are to whom ye obey."

Secondly. That the servitude spoken of in the statute under consideration was perpetual, and hereditary. This inference is, equally inconsistent with the morality of the Bible, and unauthorised by it. This inference is made from verse 46: "Ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession; they shall be your bondmen forever." No man denies that the bondman bound himself, and his children to serve until the year of Jubilee. But if in the meantime his master died, he, and his children descended as an inheritance to his master's children until the year of Jubilee. At which time I expect to prove to the satisfaction of every candid reader, all bondmen went free.—The word forever, is sometimes used in the Bible to signify a limited term of time; and admitting the common translation of this passage to be correct, the word forever, must be so understood in this instance; for no man will be eternally a bondman, unless he be such after his death. If the common translation of this passage is correct, there is more propriety in limiting the term forever, to the year of Jubilee, than to the death of the servants; for when it is limited to the year of Jubilee, it harmonizes with the law concerning that year. Verse 10, "Ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." Not to a part but to all the inhabitants. It is nonsense to say that liberty was proclaimed to all the inhabitants; & yet that they were not all allowed to take their liberty. Hence, the passage under consideration, may be satisfactorily explained without altering the translation. I cannot however admit the translation to be correct; for, instead of being rendered they shall be your bondmen forever; it should be rendered, "Ye shall serve yourselves with them forever." This rendering agrees with the marginal reading of the Polyglot Bible, and other family Bibles; and I believe no candid Hebrew scholar will deny the correctness of this translation. But it may be asked what is the difference? I answer the difference is very great. "They shall be your bondmen forever," fixes the duration of the time, that each servant should serve. Ye shall serve yourselves with them forever, does not fix the duration of the time, that each servant should serve; but amounts to a standing law, that Jews should always serve themselves with heathens, but never with one another, as bond-servants.—If the legislature of Ohio should pass a law, that the citizens of Cincinnati should serve themselves with country folks forever; would the citizens of Cincinnati conclude, that each servant was bound by such law to serve forever? No such thing. They would understand the law to say nothing about the time that each servant should serve. They would simply understand such law forever to forbid them to serve themselves with their own citizens. This illustration of this text agrees with what follows.—"But over your brethren, the children of Israel, ye shall not rule one over another with rigor." That is as I understood it. with strictness or exactness; which is opposed to indulgence. The spirit of this text seems to the same as one in the New Testament. Gal. 6. 10: "Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the house-hold of faith." It is remarkable, that the heathen who was a sojourner, was allowed to hold a Jew as a servant,* just as long as the Jew was allowed to hold a heathen. Thus while the Jew was bound to release the ordinary Hebrew servant, after he had served six years, the heathen, who was a sojourner, might hold a Hebrew servant if not redeemed, forty-nine years. V. 47: "If a sojourner or a stranger wax rich by thee, and thy brother that dwelleth by him, wax poor, and sell himself unto the stranger, and sojourner by thee, or to the stock of the stranger's family." The Hebrew who sold himself to a heathen might be redeemed by his relatives or by himself at any time. V. 48. 53: But if he was not redeemed, further provision was made for him. V. 54: "If he be not redeemed in these years, then shall he go out in the year of Jubilee both he and his children with him." The year of Jubilee dissolved the relation between the master, and servant. The Heathen servant went out free from the House, and family of his Hebrew master. The Hebrew servant went out free from the House, and family of his heathen master, and was restored to his Hebrew relations. To this arrangement Christ manifestly alludes in John 8. 35. "The servant abideth not in the house forever; but the son abideth ever." Son in this text, is contrasted with servant; and consequently as son means all sons or Jewish descendants, servant means all heathen servants. .... The Jubilee was a type of the gospel, which was preached without distinction to both Jews, and Gentiles: therefore, if liberty had been proclaimed on the Jubilee, to none but Hebrew servants, it would have been a lame type. .... "Proclaim liberty thoughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." The same is required in Isa. 6. 8. 6: "Let the oppressed go free, & that ye break every yoke." The Savior says, as before quoted, "The servant abideth not in the house forever."

HEZEKIAH JOHNSON.

* If slavery at the south is the same in principles with servitude among the Jews as friend M'Gwigan would have us understand, then the slaves at the south may become the masters, and hold their present masters as slaves as long as they have a right to hold their present slaves in bondage or servitude. J. G.

"My Life has been a Failure."

So said a capitalist in this country worth his several millions, on being asked why he did not have a biography of his life written. What an answer, and what a sad truth to be made and considered by one who has spent a long life in amassing wealth; and now, with trembling limbs, stepping into the grave, the startling truth, quite too late it is feared, flashes across the mind, that his life has been a failure—its great object and the only one worth the attention of an immortal being, having been entirely overlooked, or neglected! What more than such a thought need occupy a sane mind, to fill and keep it full of unutterable anguish? Life a failure! Probation squandered—ending!!—the soul lost!!!

Reader! whoever you may be, poor or rich, did you ever ask yourself whether your life also, has not been a failure? Whether you are living merely for this world?—laying up the treasures, of which you cannot avail yourself, in your time of greatest need? Will you go to the judgment, with the awful truth sounding in your ears, that your life has been a failure? If you would not, mend that life—mend it to-day; to-morrow is not yours. Put off no longer a work so important, involving your all, and one which should have been done the first day of your accountability.

Heads of Sermons.

The excellent and eccentric Rowland Hill, when once in Scotland, was found fault with because he had not heads and particulars in his sermons. When he next ascended the pulpit, he made an apology for past omissions, and announced that he should now have four heads—how many particulars he did not yet know—first, he should go around about his text; second, he should come up to the text; third, he should go through his text; and fourth, he should go away from his text.

The difference between rising at five and seven o'clock in the morning, for the space of 40 years, supposing a man to go to bed at the same hour at night, is nearly equivalent to the addition of ten years to a man's life.

Advertisements.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on West street, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking all out grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthning the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED. HEAR AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease of the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3.00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, on year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT, Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decicedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

FITS! FITS!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, 'I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptic fits, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm. Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, and medical advice and attendance. I was advised to take a tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visited England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case:—they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Densmow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years. Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years. Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Kendall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthoff, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

Brother laborer in the cause of Humanity:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. Hatt, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, Post paid.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & L. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 45. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, AUG. 10, 1848. WHOLE NO. 461.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN McD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

LIGHT FOR ALL.

BY J. GOSTICK.

You cannot pay with money
The million sons of toil—
The sailor on the ocean,
The peasant on the soil,
The laborer in the quarry,
The hewer of the coal;
Your money pays the hand,
But it cannot pay the soul.

You gaze on the cathedral,
Whose turrets meet the sky;
Remember the foundations
That in earth and darkness lie:
For, were not those foundations
So darkly resting there,
Yon towers could never soar up
So proudly in the air.

The work-shop must be crowded,
That the palace may be bright;
If the plowman did not plow,
Then the poet could not write.
Then let every toil be hallowed,
That man performs for man,
And have its share of honor,
As part of one great plan.

See light darts down from heaven,
And enters where it may;
The eyes of all earth's people
Are cheered with one bright day.
And let the mind's true sunshine
Be spread o'er earth as free,
And fill the souls of men,
As waters fill the sea.

The man who turns the soil
Need not have an earthly mind,
The digger 'mid the coal
Need not be in spirit blind:
The mind can shed a light
On each worthy labor done,
As lowliest things are bright
In the radiance of the sun.

The tailor, ay, the cobbler,
May lift their heads as men—
Better far than Alexander,
Could he wake to life again,
And think of all his bloodshed,
(And all for nothing too!)
And ask himself—"What made I
As useful as a shoe?"

What cheers the musing student,
The poet, the divine?
The thought that for his followers
A brighter day will shine.
Let every human laborer
Enjoy the vision bright—
Let thought that comes from heaven
Be spread like heaven's own light!

Ye men who hold the pen,
Rise like a band inspired,
And, poets, like your lyrics,
With hope for man be fired!
Till earth becomes a temple,
And every human heart
Shall join in one great service,
Each happy in his part.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

DO RIGHT.

How many professing Christians have a sort of spasmodic religion, somewhat like unto fever and ague. At one time, they are burning as with holy zeal and seem to bear every thing before them; at another time, they are cold and apparently seized with a perfect apathy; having no disposition to move on in religious duty; I have noticed men suffering with fever and ague, and I have noticed them suffering with this spiritual disease so much like unto it; and there is quite a perfect resemblance between them. At one time with the heat of the fever they are indeed passionate; at another time under the chilling influence of ague they are drawn up and loath to stir.

I am informed that some where in Virginia there is a continued and spontaneous fire rising up from the ground; it is termed a 'fire spring,' thus termed perhaps because of its perpetuity.—No rain puts it out, however violent; it cannot be quenched. When I learned of this strange phenomenon, thought I, what a beautiful illustration of the Christian religion. A fire which burns steadily, and nothing can stop its flame—no, the waters of adversity cannot quench it. But the people may sing—

> "Let cares like a wild deluge come;
> Let storms of sorrow fall."

All these shall not, cannot damp the living flame that burns within. The religion of too many reminds me of a custom that obtained previous to the invention of friction matches; when housekeepers found it necessary for convenience to cover the fire coals on the hearth with ashes when retiring at night, that they might have fire in the morning. How many seem to be fired with religious fervor during a season of revival, who after the excitement is over, lay their interest and zeal aside until another religious excitement brings them out again with the same apparent deep and glowing zeal. How inconsistent such professing Christians live. I have known such to have irreligious husbands. What influence can they exert in their family circles? I have known such men to have non-professing wives and children; They had no religious influence over them, and from the nature of their examples could not have. Paul said—"the believing husband sanctified the unbelieving wife, and the believing wife, the unbelieving husband." But in the above cases something was lacking, for the sanctifying influence was absent. What then was the matter? The hearts of those unstable professors of Christianity were not right in the sight of God.

Such persons generally are not as religious as Brother Earley's shad cut coat; because his coat looks religious and always looks so. These persons look so (if at all) only now and then when the spiritual power is on them.

Give me that religion which is love—constant love, burning as a steady fire, and sending its holy flame upward to God, and diffusing its heat among men in my sphere of action.

ADIEL.

Norfolk, Va.

Written for the Western Recorder.

HOW TO BUILD MEETING HOUSES.

Br. Bassett: As our brethren are engaged in building meeting houses, and as tastes differ, will you permit me to say a few words in relation to the subject, which will perhaps suit some people at least. Let me drop a word of advice and then leave the subject to those interested.

Dear friends, you need meeting houses and are perhaps about to build them. Please observe the following rules to the very letter. 1st. Build a small log house, it will be so economical and you will thus prevent your congregation from being scattered. 2d. Do not enclose the house with a fence nor under-pin it, for this might put your neighbors hogs to some inconvenience and deprive you of the pleasure of hearing their melodious squealings during Divine Service. 3. Do not have more than four or five windows, and be sure to have these very small. You will save the expense of paying for much glass, & you will greatly accommodate those who "love darkness rather than light." Be sure however to have one window directly behind the pulpit, this will relieve your minister of the embarrassment of being seen so plainly as to distinguish his features from those of a handsome baboon. 4. Be sure to have but one aisle, and let this be very narrow—it will afford your congregation an opportunity of crowding together and conversing, and should any feel disposed to retire they will have excuse for climbing over the seats to get to the door. 5. If you have two doors to your church, place the pulpit between them—this will afford those who are passing to and from the doors a good opportunity to annoy those who may be about the pulpit or altar. 6. Make the ceiling of your house very low, and fill your stove with rotten wood and raise as much smoke as possible. (If you cannot raise smoke, heat the stove red-hot,) this will afford your minister an opportunity of testing the strength of his lungs, and will make him earn his salary—it will also give tone to your music, and cause you to have warm meetings. 7. Do not fail to elevate the floor of your pulpit three or four feet above the floor of the house, and the book-board 3½ or 4 feet above the pulpit floor—this will give your minister an elevated position in the sight of the multitude, and at the same time prevent him from making too many gestures.

If the foregoing will not enable you to build your meeting houses according to your taste, you must heave a taste very different from that of many of our brethren in the west, and perhaps you had better exercise your own judgement in the premises, and run the risk of being called vain in attempting to erect your houses of worship in a different manner.

Yours,

ADELPHOS.

Bournevile, Ohio, August 1st, 1848.

Ministerial.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Responsibilities of the Ministry.

Br. Bassett: By your permission, I will publish in your valuable paper some scraps which I have gathered from various sources in reference to Pastoral Visitation. I am not in the habit of writing for the press, nor do I now attempt it, only to select such matter as I shall think useful, and leave for you to publish or not as you deem best.

J. Q. A. Y.

West Alexandria, O., June 29, 1848.

THE NATURE OF THAT RELATION OUT OF WHICH THE DUTY OF PASTORAL VISITATION ARISES.

1. It is a relation which springs from Christ's immediate appointment.

The duty of believers to associate themselves in holy fellowship, and to place themselves under the superintendence of a Spiritual guide, is one originating not in human expediency, but in the infinitely wise and benevolent arrangement of Him, who is at once the Savior, the ruler and the Supreme Head of the church. When he ascended to the right hand of power, with prophets, evangelists and apostles, he gave "pastors and teachers" for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ, till we all come in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure and stature of the fulness of Christ.—Eph. 4, 11—13. The authority by which believers congregate themselves for purposes of mutual edification is the same by which ministers teach and rule in the house of God, and it is only in so far as pastors and churches regard Christ's will in the discharge of their respective obligations that they can hope to realize his smile or fulfil the great designs of their sacred and endearing compact. But though the relation of pastor and people arises out of Christ's immediate appointment, let it not be imagined that there is any thing unreasonable or arbitrary in it.

On the other hand it evinces in a high degree the wisdom and benignity of the source whence it springs, and approves itself to enlightened and sanctified reason, as a divinely adapted expedient for extending the empire of truth, and training souls for immortal bliss. It is of immense consequence that ministers and churches should regard Christ's will and authority in all their mutual relation and obligation. It is this alone which will preserve them from those fearful disruptions of christian feeling and duty which are constantly taking place in certain communities, (I speak knowingly,) it is this which will hallow and regulate all their intercourses, which will render the discharge even of the most self-denying duties comparatively easy, which will draw the line of demarcation between all private feelings and the distinctly expressed mind of the adored Master; in one word, it is this which will secure conscientious, persevering discharge of all the duties mutually binding on pastors and on the flock of Christ.

O, how diversified, and fatal have been the effects which have sprung from forgetfulness or contempt of Christ's institution in reference to the relation subsisting between christian ministers and the people of their charge. Thus it has been that upon slight and insufficient grounds it has been dissolved, and that self-interest and self-importance have stepped in as fiends of darkness to mar and destroy the peace of churches. Thus it has been that some Diotrephes, loving to have the pre-eminence, has taken upon himself the fearful responsibility of dictating to a whole community, and that laws and practices have been adopted in the churches altogether foreign to the institution of the gospel. And thus too it has been, that an office intended to foster all that is reverential, devout and kind, has been made the occasion, through the disparity of our fallen nature, of ungodly surmisings, and even of open strife and debate.

2. It is a relation most tender and endearing. In churches formed upon the primitive mode, the manner in which the union between pastor and people is solemnized, tends to impress upon each party concerned a deep sense of relative responsibility. Where religious communities are left to choose their own spiritual guides, and are not forced to receive a teacher for whom they have no prediliction, there will be a spontaneous movement of affection and regard, which if duly watched over and sanctified by prayer, (not otherwise,) will tend materially to advance the great objects of the christian ministry.

Between the man of God and the people for whom he watches and prays, and studies and labors, there exists a link of union which will bind the friendship of eternity, and which will attach the faithful minister of the cross to those who are his joy and crown of rejoicing, when all the transitory interests of earth shall have passed away, and when all human relations shall have perished for ever. Surely, Mr. Editor, that must be a tender and endearing relation which exists mainly for the benefit of the immortal spirit, which is intended to show forth the union and love of Christ to his church, which is instituted for the purpose of giving prominence and effect to the all-subduing realities of the cross, which is a powerful agent in fostering all the lovely graces of the Divine Spirit; and which forms and cements friendships which neither time nor death can destroy. A good minister of Jesus Christ is as the father of a family, each member of which he is anxious to protect, to sympathise with, and to nourish. He may see indeed in his family "babes, and young men, and fathers," but upon them all he looks with paternal solicitude and longs to present every one of them at last perfect in Christ Jesus. He is a good shepherd, who cares for the sheep, and who not only desires to preserve them from the devouring wolf, but leads them into green pastures and delights even in tending the lambs of the flock. He is an instructor who wisely adapts his methods of tuition to the diversified capacities of those who listen to his doctrine, imparting milk to babes, and strong meat to them that are full of age.—He is a friend in whom all should be able to confide, a counsellor in the hour of perplexity, a comforter in the dark hour of sorrow, faithfully mingling pity with rebuke.

3. It is a relation upon which depends consequences infinitely momentous. How direct and solemn is its connection with eternity. How immediate its reference to the dread disclosures of the judgment day. Yes, Mr. Editor, when ministers and their people part on earth it is to meet again—to meet in a world where the real character of their present intercourses will be faithfully disclosed, where all deceptions and false coloring will be unknown; and where the consequence of neglect, impenitence and disobedience to the Divine command will be irreparable. Oh, how tremblingly alive to his awful responsibility should he be who remembers that life and death hang upon his lips, who knows that the message he delivers will save or condemn, and who feels that he is "unto God a sweet savour of Christ in them that are saved and in them that are lost."—With what attention and prayer, child-like simplicity and self-application should they hear who are listening for eternity, whose day of merciful visitation is hastening to a close, who must render account at last for every sermon, every pastoral visit, for every opportunity enjoyed, who must meet the man of God whose message they have heard amidst the terrors of that scene, when heaving sepulchres shall disclose their dead, when the heavens shall be rolled together as a parchment, when the elements shall melt with fervent heat and when impenitent millions beholding the unutterable glories of the Eternal Judge, shall cry to the mountains and rocks, "Fall on us and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the lamb, for the great day of his wrath is come and who shall be able to stand?"

Then, O then, what will be the condition of the unfaithful shepherd, stript of all the honors of his earthly sphere, detected, abashed, condemned? Behold him speechless in the presence of him whose "countenance is as the sun that shineth in his strength." O if there be an object in the universe calculated to inspire sentiments of unwonted terror and dismay, it is the spectacle of a faithless minister of the cross about to receive his reward, and to be consigned to his tremendous and just doom.

But next to him in guilt and punishment, must be those who have been deaf to the voice of their teachers, who have hardened their hearts against the truth, who have refused to obey the gospel call, who have added ungodliness and hypocrisy to unbelief, who have squandered away the last moments of their earthly probation, and have sunk to eternal perdition with those miserable servants who knew their Master's will and did it not.—Luke 12—47. And are there no happier scenes to which our minds can turn for relief amidst contemplating such as these? Yes, dear reader, there are pastors and churches who shall hereafter meet with joy unspeakable. Fidelity, affection and zeal on the one hand, and attention, docility, faith, purity and harmony on the other, will lay the foundation by the grace of God of an intercourse which shall only reach its full maturity in the skies. What imagination can conceive, or what tongue can describe the raptures of the faithful minister as he sees those who have been plucked as brands from the burning by his earthly labors, standing before the throne with crowns of glory on their heads, palms of victory in their hands, and songs of joy and triumph on their lips.

Now brethren, ye live if we stand fast,—(1 Thess. 3—8.) "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? For ye are our glory and joy; Amen."—(1 Thess. 2, 19—20.)

Reformatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

USE OF TOBACCO.

NO. II.

My own Experience.

About the years 1806 and 7 it was the fashion for young men to smoke segars, and I contracted the habit, and continued it until 1812, and though my constitution was robust, its influence upon the nervous system was very perceptible. In 1812 I quit this habit with manifest advantage; I went that season into the military service in the unhealthy situation on the head waters of the Scioto, where a large portion of the Brigade became sick: I escaped. In 1813 or '14, I commenced chewing: for some years my health was not materially injured as I supposed, but I was sensible of its bad influence, and I quit it for a year; and restored the habit by "treating my resolution" as does the reformed drunkard when he treats his. I then continued this, until I undermined my health, and became unable to do laborious business,—was emaciated and had little appetite;—I desired to break off the practice, but put off beginning until "to-morrow." To-morrow never came for this.—In hopes of benefit, I exchanged the habit of chewing, for smoking: vain hope,—my nerves now became the victim, and amongst other evil consequences, hardness of hearing, hypochondria, and as before, prostration of strength.—Still desirous of a reform, my old remedy of quitting to-morrow, deceived me as before. In 1829, I adopted the Scripture rule of "immediate repentance;" and discontinued the the use at once, and forever. No substitute kept up the hankering.—An immediate change for the better took place in my health; my appetite became good; digestion perfect; my rest better; my mind more elastic; and my strength enabled me to labor almost without unusual interruption, until this day, and I have had occasion to use but few medicines, compared with my former habits—and can have no doubts to what to impute the change. It is true that my experience of the benefits of abstaining from tobacco, has helped my resolution in giving up other bad habits, such as tea, coffee, &c., but tobacco was evidently the great cause of my ill health. I desired to reform others by my experience, and in many instances with success; and in all with manifest advantage to the persons who have tried my remedy. No patent medicine has given so uniform evidence of its power to heal,—and one manifest advantage which it possesses over all other "sovereign remedies," is that it costs no money, loss of time or property, but on the contrary, leaves all these to be otherwise profitably employed—relieves your wife if you have one, from a most vexatious annoyance, in the filthy habit necessarily following its use, to say nothing of the annoyance we give others. Surely the benefits I have described, are well worth the effort. Nineteen year's trial has served to confirm me in its efficiency. Touch not, taste not, handle not the unclean thing. To all who will faithfully apply this remedy, I insure a perfect cure.

I know sir, there are those who say "they cannot." I have no faith in the assertion; when there is a "will there is a way." In illustration: One of my neighbors related to me the following. A merchant of New York took snuff until his mental, and bodily powers were completely prostrated, and to the frequent urging of his friends to leave it off, he would reply "I cannot." One day his partner urging him, received a positive assurance, that it was impossible. The partner replied "he knew better." "Come," said he, "I will give you a hundred dollars to quit." After a moment's reflection, he replied, "Out with your money." And he quit at once, and recovered his health. So trifling a motive stimulated him to begin now; it was all that was wanting.

"To-day, To-day if you will hear my voice harden not your hearts," is the language of Scripture.

In a future number I propose to offer some further reasons for reforming these practices; and some cases of the benefits others have received by total abstinence.

A REFORMED TOBACCO USER.

Palpitation of the Heart

Tea, Coffee and Tobacco.

Professor W. Parker, of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, at a recent clinical lecture, examined a man who was troubled with palpitation of the heart. The report states that no physical signs of organic disease of the heart could be detected; and hence we may conclude, says Prof. P., "with much certainty, that all the cardiac disturbance is purely functional, depending on derangement of the digestive organ—and this organ depending on the free use of tobacco, tea and coffee, and confinement within doors." What then are the indications of treatment? Shall we give physic in such a case? Will physic cure bad habits? Not a bit of it. Let the patient simply throw away his tobacco, his tea and his coffee; adopt a plain, wholesome diet, and take regular exercise in the open air, and he will soon be well; in a word, remove the causes of derangement and the effects will cease.—Sci. Amer.

Temperance Department.

Selected by our Philadelphia Correspondent.

INTEMPERANCE AND CHOLERA.

The proportion of mankind susceptible of cholera, seems to be decidedly smaller than holds good with respect to small pox, plague, or other malignant epidemic or contagious diseases; we know of no data, however, upon which any rational calculation as to the relative numbers can be formed. Then there are other certain peculiarities, which are distinctly traceable with regard to the cholera; thus children which are not entirely exempt, are much less liable to it than adults; women, too, according to general observation, are less susceptible than men, a circumstance which shows that something more than relative degrees of strength must be taken into the account. There are differences between most writers on certain circumstances which shows that something more than relative degrees of strength must be taken into the account. There are differences between most writers on certain circumstances connected with the disease, but on this point they all agree intemperance gives a claim to the pestilence which it never overlooks; in every town and every district, from the Ganges to the Wear, the drunkard has been the earliest object of its attack, and its most ruthless visitation. Nor was the principle ever more conspicuously illustrated than by the occurrences at Gateshead, where intoxication, which was indulged in to a frightful extent on Christmas day, accompanied by a strong breeze, blowing from the North and over New Castle, where the disease existed, was followed by the lamentable irruption of cholera which has so often been alluded to.—London Medical Gazette.

Death from Burning.

It is not uncommon to see in the papers, such accounts as the following; which is taken from a paper of Feb. 24.

"A woman named Rebecca Mullen was burned to death in Easttown township, Chester county, Pa., on the night of the 10th instant. She was a woman of intemperate habits, and in fact so were the whole family. On the night of the occurrence, before retiring, the family partook freely of whiskey, and it is supposed retired in a state of intoxication. The body of the woman was found sitting on a chair in the kitchen, burned to death.—The body presented a horrid spectacle, and when touched it immediately fell from its position. She had been in the habit of rising to smoke a pipe, and it is supposed she did so on this occasion; but in consequence of being intoxicated was unable to observe sufficient care. Her dress is supposed to have caught from a spark of her pipe, candle or match."

Doubtless, some respectable dealer in whiskey will have reason to regret the loss of a profitable customer by the shocking death of that miserable woman! Should the habits of intemperance, however, increase in the surviving members of the family, the loss of one member of the family may be of little consequence to the dealer in view of his profits, to say nothing of his responsibilities to Him who has said, "Cursed is he who putteth the bottle to his neighbor." The curse is in the Scriptures, and its infliction is to be seen in the ordering of the Divine Providence. In every part of the country are these inflictions of Providence to be seen!

Ladies' Department.

To Prepare Hashes.

An essential qualification for a good housekeeper is to possess skill in saving broken victuals, and converting them into wholesome, palatable dishes for a subsequent meal. To make hashes is the most common, and the best way, of disposing of meats and vegetables, and no dish is so convenient for breakfast, since it can be prepared the night before, all except warming and seasoning. A few hints as to their preparation. Meat that has been once cooked is injured in flavor and wholesomeness by being cooked again. It simply needs warming. Butter or fat of any kind should not be fried, only melted.

The hash should be warmed over a slow fire, in just enough water to keep it from burning, and after it is thoroughly warmed, the seasoning can be added. Butter is better than any other kind of fat, and cream indefinitely better than butter. Salt moderately, if needed, but let pepper and all other strong things be applied by those whose appetite desires them. The ingredients used can depend upon the choice of the housekeeper. Some repudiate every thing but meat and potatoes, while others use beets, turnips, carrots, and cabbage, and get up a very palatable dish, too. Where pork is used, dry bread chopped fine is a great addition; some use flour, but this gives a sad taste to the hash. Sour apples chopped and used in about the same proportion as potatoes are a very great addition, especially where the stomach does not relish greasy food. Try these various ways, you who love to experiment in culinary operations.—Ohio Cultivator.

Multum in Parvo.

Bits of Bread.—First, learn to make good bread, and the loaves of a 'good shape;' then avoid cutting while warm, if possible, (and this should always be possible;) cut up no more than will probably be eaten, better send to the pantry twice than have a quantity to dry; and last, but not least important, teach children to take no more than they are quite sure they will need, remembering—"Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined." Some trees seem not to have been bent by this rule when twigs. But, in spite of caution some bits will accumulate. The best can be made into toasts, either dry or moist, for breakfast; others into a pudding for dinner; or, soaked thoroughly, and mixed with a little flour, &c., they make excellent griddle cakes; while the remainder, seemingly good for nothing, can be browned and made coffee of; a dish very agreeable to children when milk is not abundant.

Flour which has been packed should always be sifted. It makes lighter bread, & raises quicker.

The bottom crust of bread is often unpalatable from a taste imparted to it by the pans in which it is baked. These should never be rusty tin, or any thing rough, so as to require much greasing. Indeed the better way is to keep the bread pans so smooth, by careful washing as to need only sprinkling over with flour.—Ohio Cultivator.

English Pie.

A very excellent Pie for dinner can be made by taking almost any kind of fruit—apples, peaches, pears, cherries, currants, blackberries, huckleberries, &c., filling a deep dish with them, seasoning moderately, and covering with a thick crust; some sweeten the crust. Eat with some kind of sauce, sour sauce is best, butter alone relishes well with them.—Ohio Cultivator.

APPLES.

Baked apples are greatly improved by being baked in bright tin or earthen plates, with a little water in, and a small quantity of sugar sprinkled over them. To our eating they are quite as pleasant as common apple sauce, and very much less labor is required in their preparation.—Ohio Cultivator.

Perpetual Roses.

Many cultivators of this fine new class of roses "waste its sweetness" by allowing it to carry all its blossoms in the month of June.—Now to have the perpetual rose fully enjoyed, it should not be allowed to bloom at all in the rose season. Roses are so common then that it is not at all prized, while, blooming from mid summer to November, it is highly prized by all persons.

The way I pursue to grow it in perfection, is to pinch out, as soon as visible, every blossom-bud that appears at the first crop, say from the middle of May to the middle of June. This reserves all the strength of the plant for the after-bloom; and accordingly I have such clusters of roses in July, August, September and October, as those who have not tried this stopping system can have no idea of. La Rein, Madame Laffay, Compte de Paris, and the Dutchess of Sutherland, are particularly superb varieties under this treatment. Indeed, they may be recommended as among the best of the perpetuals.

Cure for the Bite of a Snake.

Last summer a black man in Frederick county was bitten on the finger in the corn house, about dark, by a snake supposed to be a copper-head, from the fact that one was killed the next day under the house. Immediately his arm swelled to twice its ordinary size. I applied first the breast of a chicken cut open—next a large vial of whiskey—to the wound. We also bathed the arm and hand frequently during the night, and the next day until ten o'clock, with salt water, without any visible abatement of the swelling.—At that time a physician arrived, and immediately sent for the root of the yellow poplar, (more properly called the American tulip tree;) he had a strong decoction made of the bark, washed the swollen part with it frequently, gave the patient half a pint every half hour, and applied the bruised bark which was boiled, as a poultice. The relief was almost instantaneous; the swelling soon subsided, and the pain, which was very excruciating, in a short time ceased altogether. The Doctor assured me, that had it not been for this simple remedy, the man would not have lived many hours; and I am convinced from what I saw, that had it been applied in the first instance the suffering would have been very light. I wish this remedy to be generally known, as it may save the lives of hundreds.

J. JOHNSON.

Correspondence.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Pine Lake, Michigan, July 26, '48.

Br. Bassett:

You find by looking over the doings of our last Annual Conference, that my relation to it was a superannuated one. But subsequent circumstances on Orchard Lake Circuit required prompt action, and as the circuit is near where I reside, our beloved President desired me to take charge of the circuit, for asmuch as the preacher appointed by last Conference to travel said circuit, left his regular work, having with some upon the circuit got into a notion of the method of healing the sick by laying on of hands in the name of the Lord, as did the apostles. It is said that many cures were professedly effected in that way, and they profess to have about all the gifts of the apostolic age. An effort was made to get the sanction of the Annual Conference, but failed. That body would have nothing to do with the subject, without further evidence. R. Bamford, who was appointed to Orchard Lake Circuit, not having his mind answered in every respect, rather denounced the Conference. He however went to his Circuit, and at his first Quarterly Meeting Conference, obtained a vote of that body, not to have the President visit the circuit the present year. In a few days he declared himself detached from the Methodist Protestant Church, and set up for himself, and formed a church pure and holy, full of all the gifts of the primitive church, and called the Bible Witness Church! He got the most of two socities to join him, and two persons from another society. That is about all he has effected since. I understand he preaches to two small societies there. S. T. Cranson, one of our young preachers, seemed also to be offended at the Annual Conference. He too left us, set up for himself, and did us some little harm.—With all these things before me, I entered upon the labors of the circuit, in a poor state of health, to do what I could to save the circuit from utter ruin, thro' the Mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, and may God have all the glory. Amen. We have not looked for many conversions, at present. Our general solicitude has been to preserve the church, or take care of what we have under our care, and let Bamford and Cranson alone.—I suppose that if some of your correspondents had them to deal with, they would give them a tremendous lampooning, and learn them better than to be meddling with our institutions. If you think this personal, I mean it for good. It cannot be supposed that we should all see or think alike on any given subject. We may be in error, it is true. But good sound argument, and mild treatment may cure the evil, when harsh words might stir up wrath. But a soft answer will turn it away. I think if we would study this we should have a better feeling one towards another.

I remain, yours as ever, the same "hot-headed abolitionist."

LABAN SMITH.

Van Buren, N. Y., July 28, 1848.

Br. Bassett:

When I came on this (Syracuse) Circuit, as superintendent, I found our Zion bleeding at a thousand pores, in view of former things, and some things still unsettled. The two superintendents before me had both left and gone to the Wesleyans. They succeeded in drawing off some members with them. One of them left in a discreditable manner, without any recommendation, so that the Wesleyan Conference declined receiving him, and he is now at large, upon the devil's commons, and ceases not to utter "great swelling words of vanity," about the Methodist Protestant Church and its preachers. The storm has now passed by. We have peace at every appointment. Not one has left us this year. The Lord of glory has been with us. Fifteen souls have been happily converted to God, seven of them have cast in their lot with us, and three from the M. E. Church. The cause is rising at every appointment save one. We have some of the excellent of the earth upon this circuit. The cause of Mutual Rights is gaining ground, in spite of wicked men and devils. I discover but one thing to hinder a permanent prosperity, that is a want of thorough action upon the part of the official members of the circuit.—Some do nobly. Others would if called upon. The preachers of our Conference are men of God, men of Discipline and men of talent, as a body. We are willing to make sacrifices for our principles. Pray for us, that the great Head of the Church may bless us as a ministry, as a membership, and as a brotherhood, that under God we may be enabled to scatter scriptural holiness all over these lands, and in unison with the brethren from the east, west, north and south, let us prepare for "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together," that Satan's Kingdom may come tumbling down, and the glory of our God be revealed in the salvation of sinners, and in the sanctification of his people. Amen.

Yours in Christ,

HAMILTON BROWN.

☞We omitted portions of the above letter, as we were doubtful that our brother intended them for publication. Ed.

Tanners Creek, Aug. 1, 1848.

Dear Br. Bassett:

In reading the "Recorder" for July 27th, I read with unfeigned pleasure the communication from Brother H. Collings, stationed Methodist Protestant minister of Sugar Creek circuit. I am happy to inform you that we have indications of success in this circuit.—The Lord is with us. Our Presidential visit in connexion with the Conference Missionary was crowned with God's blessing. The people on Tanners Creek circuit are kind, affectionate, and united. The circuit has suffered much of late from want of regular ministerial aid, but by God's blessing upon the exertions of Br. Wm. Smith, help has been obtained and regular preaching at 3 places has been commenced and continued for nearly 3 months and we trust in God to make bare his arm in the awakening, conviction and conversion of sinners; we beg an interest in your prayers and in all that are concerned for the cause of Christ.

Perhaps it may interest such brethren as the unflinching advocate of Female Preaching (I mean Br. Wm. Reeves, my fellow-countryman,) to know, that the people from this circuit and around it have crowded to hear some sermons that have been recently preached by Sister Sibley.—She came on a visit from Cincinnati and the people being informed that she had been a speaker in the "Bible Christian Denomination" in England, earnestly requested her to preach. She complied, and good was done. Another argument for female ministrations.

Yours, affect'ly, in the bonds of the gospel,

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

WESTERN REGORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, August 10, 1848.

☞The Foreign News which we place before our readers will be found of intense interest.

☞Our new correspondent at Norfolk, Va., is welcome. He writes on useful topics. Hope we shall hear from him frequently, at his convenience.

☞Our friend, the Major, writer of the "Historical Reminiscences," has commenced giving some candid views upon the habitual use of tobacco, which we think well worthy of examination.

☞Br. M'Gwigan declines a discussion with Brother Gay on slavery, but we thought it right to publish what we had on hand in reply to the previous letter of Br. M'G.

Clever.—Br. J. Burns, observing that our receipts are light, gives us a lift this week in the way of an X, for which we are thankful, as it comes very opportunely. We shall remember this at the coming conference, for that same brother, at last conference brought us a little more cash than any other brother.

Concert.—We see by the Gazette of yesterday, that Mr. Munson gives a concert by his Juvenile Choir of Zanesville, this evening, (Thursday,) at ½ before 8 o'clock, at the Market Street Baptist Church. Admittance, 25cts. Many of our Putnam friends we doubt not will do themselves the pleasure to attend.

Putnam Female Seminary.—The Annual Examination at the close of the summer term of this Institution is just over. We learn from those who attended the Examination during its progress more frequently than we were able to do, that it was pleasant and interesting throughout, that it was thorough, and decidedly creditable both to Teachers and Pupils. This Institution is steadily gaining in public favor. We believe the Instructors are every way competent to have the care of young ladies, and give them a thorough education, and we unhesitatingly recommend to our friends, this Seminary, as a desirable place for their daughters.

New Paper Enterpise.—We learn by a letter from Rev. H. Brown of the Onondaga Conference, N. Y., that that Conference at its last session, resolved upon the establishment of a paper within its bounds, that an Editor and assistant Editor were appointed, and an amount sufficient raised to start the publication. But the gentleman who had engaged to act as publisher, relinquished the enterprise, so that thus far it is 'no go.' Our brother gives this circumstance as a reason why he has not been procuring subscribers for our paper, whilst there was prospect of a paper in their own District. We however send a respectable number of copies to that District, and our list there is still increasing, through the agency of some half dozen of of its ministers.

In case our brethren of Northern New York enter into the publication of a periodical, we shall wish them success and not a failure. But we are persuaded that few who have not been connected with the publication business, are prepared to "sit down first, and count the cost" of such an enterprise. A competent patronage should first be secured, and the most energetic agencies to collect subscription dues. How many similar attempts have been made, (the New York Luminary, for example,) which have survived but a few months or years, and then resulted in failure, to the mortification and serious loss of those immediately connected! During the present year, a paper which had been conducted under the patronage of the Illinois Conference for two years past, has come to nought as a Conference paper, its publisher having found it necessary to convert it into a political press. The Western Recorder, which has been published for nearly nine years, and has the principal patronage of nearly all the Western Conferences, now but barely lives. We have no Assistant Editor, or Publisher, Clerk or Book Keeper, to share with us our onerous toils, precisely because the income of our publication does not as yet place it in our power to employ, such assistance. And it will still be out of our power, till our patronage shall be essentially increased. Hence we have upon our shoulders, the care & toil and responsibility of 2 or 3 men. And this is the reason why we find it impossible to devote more attention to the editorial department of our paper, which we are most anxious to do. Since we have thus incidentally alluded to our own affairs, we will add that our increase of patronage within the past three years has been encouraging, but we have enlarged our sheet within the time which of course adds to the weekly labor and expense of publication. Our cares and toils have seriously invaded our health and comfort, and seem to threaten ultimately our very life if relief be not obtained.

The Onondaga Conference meets early in next month, and we trust we shall soon hear its conclusion in reference to the paper enterprise.

Restrictive Rule.--Our Position.--Proceedings of a Meeting in Pittsburgh.

We publish below the proceedings of a meeting of Male Members of Pittsburgh Station, expressing their sentiments relative to the Restrictive Rule, by way of giving instructions to their delegate to the Annual Conference. Though the discussion of this subject in our columns between our correspondents has been brought to a close, we feel at liberty to publish proceedings of public meetings, as well as doings of official bodies, bearing upon this subject. We feel at liberty also at this time, and at all times to state our views upon this and any other subject for the interests of the church. As we left the discussion to be conducted by our correspondents, and did not heretofore definitely state our position relative to this question, we think that the present is a fit occasion for us to do so, in connection with the Pittsburgh resolutions. We are a Methodist Protestant, from the start—of the earliest stock. Of course we are an ardent friend, admirer and defender of our ecclesiastical system for the most part. We have been connected with the itinerancy of the Ohio Conference for eighteen years. We were engaged for fifteen years in the regular service, before we took charge of this paper. Of course we are acquainted with the operation of the Restrictive Rule. At the time we entered the travelling connection, 1830, and for several years after, our Ohio Conference embraced the entire west, a territory which now embraces nine distinct Annual Conferences. Of course in the early part of our operations, our circuits were extensive, and oftimes quite remote from each other. It was our lot for a long season to be changed every year; and for the first four years, we received an appointment each year in a different State, our removal each time being from 170 to 400 miles. As we were then a single man, we had no substantial objection to being thus changed, and we ever felt it our duty to go where we were sent. And during the seven years we travelled as a single man, and the subsequent years we labored as a married man, we in no instance ever appeared before a stationing committee at Conference to ask for any particular appointment, or to be excused from any one, or to be continued in any one. During the whole period of our itinerancy, we are not aware that we ever complained of the operation of the constitutional rule, requiring us to be changed within from two to three years, though we have perhaps endured a full share of the privations and hardships incident to the itinerant life, especially in the incipient state of our church. We here distinctly say, we are still in favor of the rule. We conceive that its operation imposes vastly less grievances upon ministers now than formerly. Now that our Conference Districts are limited in extent, and our charges so numerous, and less remote from each other, less toil and sacrafice is required of a minister, in a removal from one charge to another. We think it would be an injurious policy now to abolish the rule.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has a similar restriction, yet her success and advancement are known to all men. We published a week or two ago a statement from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, that though she had experienced two divisions and two secessions within the last twenty years, she had nevertheless more than doubled her members in that period. An itinerant minister of that Church of long standing, who reads our paper, lately said to us that he hoped we would not abolish the Restrictive Rule, for to do so would greatly injure our cause if not prove our ruin. He referred to the circumstance that at our start, he used to think it right to oppose us, with the impression that we would soon be found without an itinerancy. But since we are now established, he wishes us well, & therefore desires we should not do a suicidal act.

When we received from our respected friend "Prudentia" some half dozen numbers for publication, in opposition to the rule, we thought of giving our views in the progress of the discussion, but were relieved of this shortly, by offers from two senior brethren, one at the east and one at the west, who both were of the framers of our constitution, to reply to his argument when he should get through. Several others subsequently took some part, upon either side, and we thought best to leave the matter to take its course with our correspondents, especially as it is not in our nature to be fond of controversy.

We have been rebuked by some for admitting the discussion at all into our paper. How could we refuse, and thus do violence to the spirit of the age, by suppressing discussion, (though discussion in this instance was far from being desirable with us,) seeing we were aware from personal acquaintance that the individual who introduced it is an amiable christian brother, in good standing in his Conference, and seeing also that our paper has always been known as a free press? We knew that truth and right need suffer no loss by investigation, and that if conducted in a proper spirit, the investigation could do no harm. We are not alone in this opinion. In a letter found in Western Recorder of March 16, Rev. G. Brown says: "Our young men began the discussion—so far all is mild—let them go on." Our excellent Br. could never have said 'go on,' had he apprehended that great harm would accrue. Rev. C. Springer also closes an article on the subject, found in our paper of June 15, with the following expression. "With personal good will to the projectors of this new enterprise, and with a firm belief that we shall all get through with this controversy, without any serious calamity befalling either ourselves or the church, I subscribe myself," &c. We were gratified at the time, to have the declared opinion of that respected brother that little harm would result from the discussion.

We regretted however the personal turn which the discussion finally took, and the unpleasant words and feelings which followed. Some we are informed, inferred from our silence in reference to our own position, and we suppose, our disposition to give a fair hearing to those who opposed the Restrictive Rule that we also were on the side of opposition to it. If we have sympathised with the opposition it has not been in their views, but just as we would sympathise with any party that is treated with harshness. We were grieved with the disposition manifested by various brethren, in their zeal to defend the Rule, to treat with denunciatory epithets and expressions those who sought its removal, forgetting, we fear, the recommendation of an apostle, "in meekness instructing them that oppose themselves." This seemed indeed an approach to intolerance which would forbid them to write, and us to print for them. We have remarked that this course, instead of convincing, must and does tend to procure sympathy from many for the opponents of the Rule, if not also for their views. And we are not without evidence, we regret to say, that such has been the result, to some extent. Of course we regret both the occasion and its consequence. For we are persuaded that had the "meekness" referred to by Paul, & the "mildness" commended by Br. Brown been used, with the sound arguments which the brethren were capable of using, a better result would have been produced.

Finally, whilst we are in favor of retaining the Restrictive Rule of our constitution, we are also in favor of the Restrictive Rule of the New Testament, "Let all your things be done with charity." Our remarks have no bearing upon the Pittsburgh Resolutions, but, we have taken occasion, in connection therewith to state our position in reference to the question at issue.

Pittsburgh, August 3*d*, 1848.

At a meeting of the male members, of the Methodist Protestant Church of the City of Pittsburgh, the following Preamble and Resolutions were adopted, without a dissenting voice.

Whereas, Several communications have appeared in the pages of the Western Recorder, recommending a change in the Restrictive Rule of our Church, and whereas, from all that has been said on the subject we can conceive nothing worthy the slightest consideration; and yet, in this instance as in most others, it may be expected that, partiality to self conceived opinions, be they ever so futile, may prompt their Advocates to an obstinate perseverance, so as to make it necessary on our part thus to express our most decided disapprobation of the measure.

And whereas, In the opinion of this meeting, the Restrictive Rule as it now stands on the pages of our Church Constitution, is indispensably necessary, to the effectual operation of an efficient Itinerant Ministry, and as that system of ministerial operation is calculated above all others to meet the wants and the local condition of our widely extended population, we therefore consider every attempt, to change or alter the Rule an unwarrantable speculation, and only calculated to disturb the harmony of our beloved Zion.

And whereas, The unparaleled success of the Methodist Church from the commencement of her being, to the present period, is a lasting monument of her vast achievements, that will proclaim to future ages the efficiency of her system, & the wisdom of her founders, and should be a sufficient guarantee to all that truly love her, that prosperity shall accompany her efforts so long as she continues her primitive institutions under the guidance of a wise Providence.

Resolved, therefore, That our Delegate to the approaching Annual Conference, be instructed to oppose any and every attempt that may be made, to abolish, modify or change the Restrictive Rule.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Western Recorder, and Methodist Protestant.

JOHN MECASKEY President.

B. H. Garrard, Secretary.

ITINERANCY.

We have been much interested of late in observing that several of our leading religious denominations, who have always had a settled ministry, have had their attention drawn out to the advantages to be derived from the operation of an itinerant system. At the last session of the G. Assembly of the Pres Church, (N. S.) considerable discussion was had upon the subject, a number of leading members urging the propriety of devising and adopting some plan of itinerant operations, in view of meeting the wants of the West. A report having reference to the subject was adopted, recommending that each Presbytery survey its own territories, and procure one or two Missionaries to go about to build up new churches. A Committee was appointed to prepare and present a more extended plan at next General Assembly. Rev. T. A. Mills, of Cincinnati is Chairman of the Committee, and we doubt not he will do up the subject well, for though himself a settled pastor, we think he has the spirit of an Itinerant. We have heard him in time past, upon a Sabbath afternoon, from a position upon a meat block, in a market house of the Queen City, holding forth the word of life to assembled crowds, with a zeal & earnestness, seldom surpassed by any of our Methodist heroes of the saddle-bags.

This same subject of itinerancy has also been engaging considerable attention in the Protestant Episcopal Church. We have before us a number of the "Episcopal Recorder," the Philadelphia organ of that denomination, dated within a few months past, in which the Editor, (a clergyman,) holds the following language.

"We have long been convinced, and have often said, that some modified system of itinerancy is greatly needed in the more destitute sections of our Church. We are glad to find that this subject is commending itself to the notice of some of our Bishops. The Bishop of New Hampshire, in his late address to the Convention of that Diocese, says:

"On a former occasion, if I do not mistake, I have stated it as the conclusion, to which my observation and judgment had brought me, that we must cast ourselves to some extent on the primitive plan of itineracy. The points of Missionary endeavor must be grouped, and three or four places must receive the ministration of word & ordinances, from a single clergyman. And our settled ministers, if in these unstable days there are any such, must occasionally leave their flocks, and go out among the people of this goodly commonwealth, preaching and instructing and admonishing and giving the Gospel invitation as they go. Something of this kind has been done, and the reports of our brethren are most encouring."

We learn by the Editor of the "Cumberland Presbyterian," who attended the recent session of the General Assembly of the Church bearing that name, at Memphis, Tennessee, that that body by resolution, recommended to the Presbyteries to take measures to raise again the plan of itinerancy. The Editor of the C. Presbyteries insists upon the importance of the resolution. He endorses "the utility of the plan" as a "means of doing good," and though he does not discard or undervalue the pastoral relation, he states that he would be "rejoiced to see the itinerant plan in successful operation, wherever it is needed."

Heretofore the system of itinerancy has been confined we believe to the Methodist donomination, and one or two other smaller denomination. Such distinguished success has attended the use of the plan, in extending the cause of Christ & church interests, all over the country, even some older denominations, it seems, have been wakened up to the importance of adopting some similar method, to some extent, amongst them. Seeing this is the case, we shall certainly cleave to this distinguishing feature of our economy as a denomination, and great instrument of success. And we will not be hasty to entertain any measure which we fear would be calculated, though certainly not designed by its advocates, to cripple if not ultimately to destroy that itinerant system, which has been found so eminently useful and successful.

MARKETS.

LATEST DATES.

Putnam & Zanesville—Flour, $4.00; Wheat, 65; Corn, 25@30; Oats, 20.

Cincinnati—Flour, $3.30@3.40; Wheat 60@62½; Corn, (shelled,) 29; Oats, 28@30.

Pittsburgh—Flour, $4.00@4.12½; Wheat 80; Corn, 30@35; Oats, 30.

Baltimore—Flour, $5 50; Wheat, 85@$1.; Corn, 46@50; Oats, 18@23.

FOREIGN NEWS.

SEVEN DAYS LATER.

THREATENED REBELLION IN IRELAND.

Ravages of Cholera.

STATE OF THINGS IN FRANCE.

By an Extra of the New York Sun we have the following important intelligence from Europe, received by the Steamer America, which arrived at N. York on the 4th inst.

THE CHOLERA.

The Cholera continues to prevail throughout all the Turkish provinces. At Constantinople it continued without abatement, but it was considered mild.

At Ibralla, from the 3d to the 7th of June, 274 cases of whom 70 died. This is a large proportion in reference to the population of this town, which is only about 20,000.

At Viachka, from the 2d to the 7th of June, 90 cases and 21 deaths, in a population of 4000. It has spread in all Wallachia, and advances rapidly to the frontiers of Transylvania.

By the last accounts received of the progress of the cholera, in Moldavia, the visitation was excessively severe. At Jassy, from the 17th to the 28th, 1799 persons had been attacked, of whom 810 had died, and 655 remained in the hospital, and 344 only had been cured. The attacks were steadily increasing in severity. At St. Petersburgh, from June 24 to July 3, there had been 5963 cases of which 2596 had proved fatal, 198 had been cured, and 2269 remained under treatment.

ENGLAND.

The Weather and the Crops.—The reports which have lately reached us from all parts of the United Kingdom respecting the state of the crops, &c., is very encouraging, and afford convincing proof that we shall, should the weather continue as favorable as heretofore, have a most abundant and timely harvest.

The police have received informated that depots of arms exist in some parts of the metropolis, and that they were to make strict searches in the suspected localities.

Orders have been given from the Commander-in-Chief's office to all officers belonging to regiments in Ireland, on leave of absence in London, to repair immediately to rejoin their respective regiments quartered in that country.

SCOTLAND.

Riots connected with Orange demonstrations in Dundee have taken place.

A letter from Glasgow, mentions that heritable property, the great haven for investment in troublous times, is becoming a drug in the market. The properties advertised for sale are unusually numerous, and many attract no bidders.

IRELAND.

The purchase and manufacture of arms is proceeding rapidly.

Last week eighty stand of arms were purchased by the Dr. Doyle Club, of which Mr. Duffy, of the Nation, is the President. 20,000 stands of disused military flint muskets have been purchased in London for the use of the insurgents and all coming over in batches.

Hyland, the noted pike-maker, has left Dublin, for Carlow, with a large consignment of pikes.

The rebels have prepared a map of the city of Dublin, subdivided into districts, in each of which, the points at which the clubs are respectively to muster, and where barricades are to be thrown up, are indicated.

It is now arranged that if, upon the formation of the jury to try Duffy or his fellows, it shall appear probable that a conviction will be had, the clubs are to rise immediately and prevent the trial by anticipatory, and, as they hope, a successful outbreak.

More arrests for Sedition.—A second edition of yesterday's Cork Reporter announces that three of the leading Confederates of that city, namely, Messrs. Varian, J. W. Bourke, and John O'Brien, were arrested at half past two o'clock that day, on informations charging them with having:——

A Cork paper says that 182,000 Confederates, armed, ammunitioned and drilled, and waiting but the word to rise. The 8th of August is named as the day for rising. A circular to this effect, signed by one of the "Felons" now in custody, was read before one of the Dublin Clubs.

Crops of every description never promised such abundance. Potatoes are only four pence the stone of fourteen pounds.

The potato disease has not appeared as yet in Ireland.

The last club procession in Cork brought the leaders in contact with the authorities, and the result has been the arrest of Messrs. Varian, Bourke, Lane, and J. O'Brien—all on charges of sedition. The arrest took place on Tuesday. The parties were all admitted to bail.

Barricades were erected in the streets of Kilkenny.

The cautionary notice of the police against the purchase of "seditious newspapers" had no effect.

Mr. Smith O'Brien has been active in organizing clubs in Drogheda, as Messrs. Meagher and Doheny, in Tipperary and Waterford.

There has been a "brush" at Carrick-on-Suir. A Clonmel correspondent thus describes the affair:—

"The Carrick people on hearing the arrest of some of the club members, and the rumour that one of their own curates was marked out for arrest, rose en masse, and with arms in their hands, consisting of rifles and pikes, repaired to the authorities and demanded the release of the prisoners, who were at once delivered up to them.

They then rung the chapel bells, when 4000 men descended from the neighboring hills, armed to the teeth, who remained in Carrick all night, lest an attempt should be made to arrest Father Byrne. The delivery of the prisoners, and the withdrawal of the few troops were considered as a triumph. There is no mistaking the national feeling.

A letter from Dublin, dated July 17, states that the club organization is daily assuming a more alarming aspect—more secret in the mode of proceeding, but more concentrated and systematised, whilst branch clubs are extending far and wide into the rural districts.

The Government, along with a strong body of constabulary, are concentrating troops in Waterford and its neighborhood. Troops have marched from Wexford in that direction, and from Kilkenny this morning. The place of the latter in Kilkenny is occupied by companies of the 73d, from Carlow.

There is artillery both at Waterford and Clonmel. In addition to the police force despatched yesterday by the Rhadamanthas steamer, a regiment of infantry is ordered up from Belfast, per the Duchess of Kent; chartered for the purpose, and has also been despatched.

Cahir is to supply some troops of cavalry. The intelligence of the rising at Carrick-on-Suir was received all through Tipperary with enthusiasm. On Monday night the mountains were all in a blaze with fires, from Slievebloom to Slievenamon, and the peasantry crowded around them in large masses.

The cheering along the Waterford range was distinctly heard in Clonmel, and the clubs turned out to do homage to the general enthusiasm.

FRANCE.

The examination of nearly 1100 insurgents confined in the fort of Ivry has been concluded, after three weeks' incessant labor on the part of the magistrates, who had 8000 documents to examine. It now remains for the military commission to decide on the fate of those men.

The Minister of Public Works has published an account of the number of laborers belonging to the national workshops not employed in the construction of railroads, canals, &c. They amounted on the 14th of July to 8117; 7792 more had solicited employment.

STILL LATER FROM IRELAND.

Dublin, Sunday Night.

We are almost in a state of siege in this city. To-day a proclamation was issued by the Lord Lieutenant, for both the county and city of Dublin, calling on all persons to deposit and leave at the respective police stations on or before the 25th of July, instant, all guns, pistols, and other fire arms, and all swords, cutlasses, pikes and bayonets, and all gun powder and amunition, on pain if convicted, of being imprisoned two years with or without hard labor.

The police, who are armed with cutlasses, took up a number of pikes and guns to-day throughout the city.

Mr. C. G. Duffy, from his cell in Newgate, furnishes an article headed, "Casus Belli," in which he reviews the course adopted by the Government for suppressing the demand for Repeal, and observes, It is a solemn and terrible responsibility to advise a nation to peril its hopes on the battle field. To permit them to fall to pieces by the fatal dry-rot of inaction to see them lost without honor or sympathy, or the chance of redemption, lost by some fatal cowardice or incapacity; that is the hell in which there is no consolation." Referring to the revolutions which have taken place in the memorable year of 1848, and glancing at the results, Mr. Duffy proceeded at length, "with clear deliberation and full knowledge of all the peril and all the responsibility, but with assured faith in your prudence and the justice of our cause we bid England choose speedily between concession and the sword. We formally proclaimed a war of independence, and the time now is when that pledge must be promptly fulfilled, or as formally dishonored."

The article concludes by expressing a wish for transportation rather than to live in Ireland, if the Club be supine in the hour of action, and are defeated by the military force of England.

The Nation also continues its political instructions in the military affairs, and among other directions explains how polished arms are to be preserved in a damp or under-ground position, suggestions as to window grounds, how to break down a bridge, or to rebuild one, and how to blow up a bridge with practical remarks on gunnery.

A letter from Waterford states that that city is greatly excited by the proclamation issued against it. The notices are torn down as soon as put up. Mr. Meagher has issued a counter proclamation, in which he calls upon his fellow citizens to imitate the men of Limerick and Tipperary, to be firm and steady and organize calmly, speedily and fearlessly. Mr. Meagher, in mockery of the Castle proclamation, put at the foot of his address—

"God Save the People!"

By the arrival at New Orleans on the 20th instant, of the schooner Jno. Bell, Capt. McLaughlin, from Campeachy the 14th inst., the N. Orleans Times has been put in possession of a file of the Boletin to the 13th inst. It would appear by the contents of these papers that the war has taken a favorable turn for the Yucatecos. Several fights are herein recorded, in which the Indians have been signally defeated. At Tunkas, at Sotuta, and at Kayal, although the latter were vastly greater in number, they were routed with terrible slaughter. The Boletin, in a summary of twenty-three encounters which it gives, estimates the killed of the enemy at 1,027, and 205 made prisoners. The total loss of the barbarians, for the month of June, amounts to 1,540 men. At this rate, the Yucatecos will soon recover the ground they have lost.

The Boletin bitterly complains of Commodore Perry, for designating the Yucatecos, in an official communication to our government, as a cowardly race; too cowardly to defend themselves. With this recommendation, that paper remarks, "we have no doubt that Americans will rain on our soil, like hailstones."

News of the Week.

Factory Riots.

Yesterday, our sister city, Allegheny, was the scene of another of those Factory riots which rendered her somewhat notorious two years ago. Ever since the first of July, when the "Ten Hour Law," as it is called, went into operation, the Cotton Factories in that city have been standing idle, the operatives, as they have a right to do, standing out for the ten hours, and the Factory proprietors, asserting their inability, on the ten hour system, to compete with eastern mills which work twelve hours.

A portion of the hands are willing to go to work, at the old time, and had entered into a contract so to do, as the law provides, and yesterday (Monday) morning, the Penn Factory was started with a respectable number of hands, tho' not full. Those of the Operatives favorable to standing out, together with a crowd of men and boys not connected with the factories, gathered around the mill, and throughout the forenoon contented themselves with no further demonstrations than the throwing of a stone through the windows occasionally, and shouting and hooting at those within. They were waiting for the dinner hour to arrive, when they expected the hands working would go home to dine as usual. But in this they were mistaken. They had brought their dinners with them, and when the factory stopped, the doors were not opened, and no one came out. The fury of the rioters then broke loose, and an attack was made on the fence, both in the rear of the building on Isabella street, and on the river front. The fence soon gave way, when the crowd rushed into the yard, and commenced an attack upon the doors with axes and poles. One of the doors soon yielded to the blows of the infuriated Amazons, and the rioters carried the factory by storm.—All the other doors were immediately thrown open, and the building was soon filled with the rioters, who commenced throwing out of the windows the dinners of the work hands, together with bobbins, &c.—Through the exertions of some men who had influence with the attacking party, a line was formed, and the hands who had been at work were permitted to pass out, amidst the shouts, and jeers, and scoffs of the rioters. Having thus succeeded in their object, by putting a stop to work in the mill, the rioters retired to the streets again, where they hung around the mill the most of the afternoon, regaled with an occasional harrangue by their leaders, and one or more fights.

The Mayor of the city and police, and the Sheriff of the county, with his posse, were present, but were wholly unable to protect the property, or to prevent the rioters from obtaining entrance. We regret to hear that Mr. Logan, one of the proprietors of the Mill, was badly injured by a cut or blow in the face, and that Mr. Weigley, one of the Mayor's Police, was quite seriously injured, by blows and cuts. The windows in the east end of the building are pretty badly shattered, and we understand, some warps, &c., were cut. The machinery, we believe is not injured, except by the stones, rotten eggs, &c., which came through the windows.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

Harvest Without Previous Sowing.

In the 'Schnellpost, we find an account of the method of compelling the wheat plant to become perennial like grass, and to perfect its grains annually without the yearly sowing of seed, which has been successfully practiced at Constance, in Germany. It was discovered by a stewart of an estate named Kern. His method, after ploughing and manuring the land and sowing it with summer or winter wheat, is to mow it in the Spring before the ear makes its appearance.—This process is repeated several times in the season, and the products is used as hay. The plant is then allowed to grow and be cut in the ordinary manner. The next year it ripens earlier and bears more abundantly than wheat treated in the ordinary manner. From one field four successive harvests have been gathered.

Deaths from Lightning.—These are exceeding numerous of late. Another death from lightning occurred at New London, Pa., last Friday, the victim being a little girl named Mary Summons. She was standing near a pump in the porch of Mr. Ive's house.

At Rumney, N. H., on the 14th of July, Mrs. Jane Bartlett was killed instantly by lighting, while leaning against the wall of her room.

In Groton, N. H., on the same day, the house of Benjaman Simpson was struck, and his wife instantly killed. Several other persons narrowly escaped with life. Mr. Blatchford, of Augusta, Maine, had a narrow escape on Monday fortnight. The lightning struck his shoulder and felled him to the ground. His arm was actually singed.

Dead Sea Expedition.—The U. S. Exploring party has returned to Jerusalem from its expedition to the Dead Sea. This was the first occasion on which a boat was ever navigated around the sea, and many of the stories once current have been proved to be fabulous. The explorers sounded the sea in all its parts, to the depth of 600 fathoms, and found the bottom crusted with crystalized salt. The pestilential effects attributed to the waters turn out to be fabulous. Ducks were seen skimming over the surface, and partridges abounded along the shore. Nothing was seen of the ruined cities, which, according to old legends, were visible in clear weather beneath the water. It should be a source of great satisfaction to every American, that his country, although the most remote, was the first to explore this celebrated sea.

Indictments.—We learn that indictments have been found in the United States District Court, during its late term in Chicago, against Mr. Truett, the Mayor of Galena, and two other persons of that place, for resisting the U. States Marshal, and assisting in the escape of an Irishman charged with the commission of a murder in Ireland, and arrested under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain.

It seems he was a candidate for office, & did not wish to offend the voters of the district where the prisoner had resided, and who had rallied for his rescue. At all events he took such a course as defeated the law and the objects of the treaty, and we are glad that his conduct will now undergo the scrutiny of a high and impartial judicial tribunal.—St. Louis Republican.

The sufferers by the late riots in Allegheny, whose condition most demand our sympathy are those girls who desired to work, but were prevented from doing so by others. Those of the operatives who had gone to work were doubtless compelled to do so by their necessities; and those necessities must have been pressing indeed, when they induced the poor girls to expose themselves to the animosities of their companions, for the sake of a "privilege" to work. These are the people who should have been protected at all hazards.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

Pennsylvania and Ohio Railroad.

We are pleased to learn from the President of this Company, that the surveys so far, are exceedingly favorable. Four routes have been surveyed, by the Engineer, now on the line from the valley of the Big Beaver, near its mouth, to the valley of the Northern Branch of Little Beaver; to wit:—Brady's Run, Powers' Newkirks' and Clark's. All these routes have been found perfectly feasible, with not much choice between them. The grade in no case, exceeds 'forty feet to the mile.' The routes are also very direct towards Salem, and the distance from the mouth of Big Beaver to Salem, by the Railroad, will be less than by the present travelled road. All the difficulties, then, of reaching the table lands of Ohio, from the valley of the Ohio river, have vanished. The road can be made on a direct line, of easy grade; and we understand the Engineer says, at very fair rates, more cheaply than was anticipated. The route from Salem to Canton, and so on West, is one of the most favorable in the country, and the road can be built at comparatively little expense.

We congratulate our citizens on the blooming prospect now before us, of soon having a Railroad communication with the interior of Ohio, opening up to us a vast and growing market for our manufacturers and merchandize, and pouring into our lap the immense surplus agricultural productions of a prolific soil. To avail ourselves, however, of these advantages, we have a work to do. We must subscribe the appropriate shares of stock, which fall to this city, freely and without grudging. Our citizens will be waited upon for that purpose shortly, and we hope there will be a generous and hearty co-operation in this great work manifested by all classes.—Pitts. Gazette.

The Cholera at St. Petersburg.

We copy the following melancholy details of the ravages of the cholera at St. Petersburg, from a letter received by a gentleman in this city:

The streets are full of funerals. The common people have taken up the old suspicion of poisoning, and several old women and foreigners have been attacked and ill-used by the mob, though generally soon rescued by the police.—Two Englishmen were violently assaulted while endeavoring to protect a poor man—but they soon routed their assailants by their pugilistic skill.

On Saturday, July 1st, the Emperor addressed the people in the Hay market square, very energetically, and declared his determination to let no instance of sedition pass unpunished. A detachment of troops have been recalled to town from their summer encampment to act as occasion may require. Several of the rioters have been sentenced to severe punishment and sent to the galleys. Public prayers have been offered in the streets, &c. Foreign residents find it impossible to convince their own servants that the charge of poisoning is unfounded. The island (Vassily Ostroff) is the quarter most attacked by the disease. In the country round, scarcely a case has occurred as yet.

In Moscow, after raging again with great fury, (said to be upwards of 700 cases a day,) it is comparatively light.

St. Petersburg, June 28-5 July, 1848.

Our last report of the cholera in this city came down, (if we remember aright,) to the 15th inclusive. Since that it has spread into all parts of the city and become daily more severe as the following official returns, extracted from the Police Gazette, will show:

16 June	595	new cases—deaths not stated.
17 "	719	recovered	41	died	356
18 "	678	"	38	"	340
19 "	813	"	61	"	456
20 "	776	"	58	"	396
21 "	1000	"	129	"	534

The total number of cases published in the Police Gazette from the first appearance of the cholera in this city, is 6.063. The number of cholera patients remaining over to yesterday morning was 2.606.

Mr. Chambeau, the private Secretary to the Empress, died of the cholera last week at Peterhoff, where we hear there are many cases, as also at Constadt.

Mr. Harvey informs us that there is one quarter in Moscow, (the Basmamayah,) where there has not been a single case of cholera either in the visitation of 1830-31, or at present.

The Weather and the Crops.

Since our last, the weather in these parts has been quite showery, with barely enough of sunshine the first week to allow the wheat to be secured, some of it in a damaged condition—but generally in good order. Haymaking has been sadly interfered with, and the crop much damaged by rains; oats, too, are suffering where cut, or ready for the scythe. Potatoes look healthy as yet, as far as we have observed. We hear of some evidences of the rot in other States. Corn is growing very luxuriantly—too much so indeed for the greatest yield, but the prospect is, on the whole, good. In fact we have seldom known more favorable weather than the past month has been for all growing crops. Garden vegetables, young fruit trees, &c., have made astonishing growth, and the appearance of the country is exceedingly fine.—Ohio Cultivator.

The Expected Comet.—Public attention has been recently drawn to the anticipated return of the great comet of 1264, 1556, after an absence from our system of 292 years. This great comet made its first appearance on the 5th day of March, 1556, passed its perihelion on the 21st of April, and was lost to sight two days afterward. It was first seen in the sign Libra; whence rushing with immense velocity, (it completed 70 deg. W., and 30 deg. N. of its course within four days,) it touched the wing of Virgo, passed below the knee of Bootes, whence it ascended to Andromeda, there to linger awhile, and recede towards the northern Fish and vanish. At first its heliocentric motion was retrograde—at last direct. In the intermediate course it was most swift, despatching 15 degrees daily. The nucleus (or body) presented the aspect of a bright globe of flame equivalent to a half-moon, but the rays and colors varied and interchanged like the flickering of a flame agitated by the wind. The tail was moderately long and much attenuated; at first presenting a martial aspect, but subsequently dissolving into a pale and livid complexion; the stream of rays was denser near the head, and more rarified towards the extremity of the tail, which at first pointed eastward, but as the comet mounted to the north, the train took a southerly direction.—This comet has been conjectured to be identical with that mighty one which startled Europe in the year 1264, so particularly described by Palæologus, Zainger, Calvisius, Matthew Paris, and other chroniclers of that period, and should the approach of this comet crown the other wonderful occurences of this eventful year, it will afford another astronomical triumph; as the comet will then have completed its twentieth revolution round the sun since the creation of the world.

Terrible Casualty in Portland.

We learn from the Portland Argus, of yesterday, that a pleasure boat was capsized in Portland harbor on Saturday, by a sudden squall, and eight persons, lost their lives.

The names of those drowned, according to the Portland Advertiser, are the wife and three children of Mr. Wm. J. Smith, and four children of Mr. Whyley. Mr. Smith is an Englishman, a baker by trade, and has not now a relative on this side of the Atlantic. He was taken from the mast of the boat to which he was clinging almost exhausted. Mr. James Stephenson, a sailor also on board, swam to a ledge of rocks and was saved. Mr. Smith says that "when the boat went from under him, his little girls—one aged about 5, the other 7 years—clung to his hair, and that he sank twice with them, when he lost all conciousness; and on coming to, he was clinging to the top of the mast, unconscious how he came there. Had he been able to swim, he might have saved them, as the ledge was within a stone's throw."

M. Whyley, whose four children were drowned, was sitting on the wharf with a lantern in his hand, anxiously watching for the return of his little ones, when the fearful news reached him. We understand he has been in a state of delirium almost all the time since. But one body has been recovered.—Boston Signal.

Fatal Accident.—On Friday morning last, while some six or eight men were at work in the soapstone quarry near Marriottsville, about 28 miles from Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, a slide occurred which brought down some five or six tons of stone and earth. One of the workman named Beale Frizzele, was caught under the mass and terribly crushed—he could not have breathed after the accident, so much was his head and body mashed.—Another of the workmen was slightly injured on the foot, having the heel of his boot torn off. All the rest escaped uninjured. The deceased was a resident of Baltimore, and leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. His remains, we believe, were taken to Caroll county for interment.

Melancholy Case of Drowning.—A young man named Richard Shannon, a mercantile clerk, aged 19, was drowned in the Delaware, at Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, while bathing with some companions. He was a good swimmer, but making a dive rose no more. He leaves a widowed mother at Smyrna, Del.

Shocking Results of Lightning.—We learn, from the Philadelphia papers, that, during a tremendous storm on Friday, two worthy young men of that city, David W. Gihon, bookbinder, and James Campbell, son of ex-Alderman Campbell, of Moyamensing, were struck by lightning at Abecom Beach, N. J., and both have since died. They were lying upon a matrass, in the room of a hotel, when Mr. Gihon was struck upon the stomach, causing his death in about eight hours after. Mr. Campbell, who was struck across the back, rose from the bed, dressed himself, and was proceeding down stairs, fell, and remained insensible until Saturday evening, when he died. Every thing in the room was shattered to pieces, as was also the furniture in other parts of the house. Mrs. Gihon and child, who were in an adjoining room, escaped without the slightest injury.

From Mexico.—The Treaty declared Constitutional.—The Monitor Eepublicano, of the 13th ult., published at the City of Mexico, contains the document laid before the Supreme Court of that Republic by eleven Representatives in Congress, alleging and setting forth various grounds against the constitutionality of the Treaty of Guadalupe. This important matter has been for some time under consideration by the Court. On the 10th inst., says the Delta, the Court delivered its decision, in the presence of all the high functionaries of the Government, declaring the Treaty to be constitutional, and that the power of making peace, or declaring war, being vested in Congress, its jurisdiction over the subject matter was exclusive, and the States composing the Confederacy had no legal right to assume cognizance thereof. This decree annihilates the positions assumed by the opponents of the Treaty who so strenuously contended that Congress had no right to cede a portion of the Mexican soil to a foreign nation, without the consent of the State Legislatures. The Supreme Court of Mexico had decided otherwise, after matuse consideration, and the question must be considered at rest forever.—Balt. Sun.

Mail Robbery.—The through mail from Pittsburgh to Hollidaysburg was robbed at or near Ebbensburg, on the night of the 17th instant.—Upwards of 100 packages of letters were taken from the mail bag and opened.—Two of this number containing several letters, were directed to Hollidaysburg. From all information that we have been able to obtain, there have been missing but from $14 to $15 from the whole number of packages—the amount, however, may be much greater. We understand that a driver, named Foust, has been arrested and confessed the deed and is now confined in the Ebbensburg Jail.—P. C. Journal.

Awful Accident.—Dr. Jonathan Morris, an old and respectable citizen of Green county, lost his life on the 19th inst., in the following shocking manner. Dr. M. was 75 years of age. "He was on horseback superintending some farming operations, and while sitting with one foot in the stirrup, his horse became alarmed and sprung to one side, when the saddle turned and the foot became entangled in the stirrup as the Dr. fell to the ground. In this condition he was dragged rapidly several rods before he could be released, and was consequently mangled most dreadfully. He breathed his last but a short time after the accident.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

Death from the Sting of a Bee.—An inquest was held on Saturday, at Bradfield, St. George, before H. Wayman, Esq., coroner, touching the death of a poor woman, named Last, aged 60.—It appears that the deceased has for some years been the habit of attending upon bees in the swarming season; and on Friday, while engaged in such employment, she was stung by one of them on the thumb of her right hand. She went into her house and sat down on a chair, exclaiming, "How bad I feel!" She then fainted, and never spoke afterwards. She trembled very much and in the course of half an hour she was a corpse. It was the opinion of the medical gentlemen who were present that the nervous system received such a shock as to stop the circulation of blood in the heart.—Ipswich Express.

Rain.—The following is the depth of water that has fallen each month since the first of August, 1847—viz—August 3.09 inches, September 5.49, October 4.87. November 1.87, December 6 83, January 3 75. February 1, March 3.5, April 83, May 6 39, June 1, July 7.23, making in the year 45.75 inches; equal 3 feet 9¾ inches.—This would be equal to 20.611½ hogsheads on each acre of land. It will be seen that the greater depth fell in last month, and the smallest in April. We designed giving a report also of the thermometer's range, but cannot this week.—Z. Gaz.

MEXICO.

News from the city of Mexico to the 8th ult., has been received. Letters from Bustamente, had been received by Herrera's government, apprizing the authorities that a junction had been effected between him and the General Cortazer, which had raised the number of troops under his command to 3,000 men. On the 27th, a messenger had arrived in Bustamente's camp, from Paredes, making the former various propositions, tempting him, as it appears from his loyalty.—The reply to them was, that Bustamente would not deviate an iota from the letter of his instructions, and that he was firm in his adherence to the government.

A private letter from Guanajuato, states that the movements of the rebels have been paralysed by a tremendous fall of rain, which had deluged the roads, making them nearly impassable. They had not moved from the centre of the city, and Paredes had obtained no fresh accessions to his forces. The people of property at Guanajuato, feared that their houses would be pillaged by the lepros there, a considerable number of whom had been armed by the rebel officers.—Between Paredes and Jarauta there is a violent feud. The company of St. Patrick has made grave complaints against their comrades, and the government is exhorted to redress them. The diplomatic corps waited upon General Herrera on the 6th inst. to congratulate him upon his accession to the Presidency. The U. States, Prussia, England, France, and Spain were represented. Mr. Clifford, the United States minister, addressed the President in behalf of his associates.—The address and the reply were in good taste.—No reference was made to the late war.—Cin. Com.

From the Baltimore Sun.

Important from Oregon.

St. Louis, August 2, 1848.

A party of ten have just arrived from Oregon, in 87 days from St. Joseph's. They bring highly important intelligence respecting the Indian hostilities.

On the 10th of March, the Oregon regiment met a large force of Indians, and after a fierce combat, completely routed them. The enemy's loss was 50 killed, and many wounded; the Americans had 9 killed, and 10 wounded. A pursuit was commenced, but abandoned from want of ammunition and provisions. Colonel Gilliat, (probably Gilpin,) the commander of the regiment, was killed by the accidental discharge of a rifle, after the batle.

The regiment had been successful in defending the territory, but was much in want of supplies and horses. Propositions for peace had been entertained by the Indians, but not definitely settled. The government had made a call for more troops, and was anxiously looking for them from the States.

The Mormon settlement at the Salt Lake was in a highly flourishing condition.

Colonel Garland and Major Brant had arrived from Ft. Mann. Thirty-two Camanches are ascertained to have been killed in the skirmish with Lieut. Royall's command.

The amount of tolls received on all the New York State Canals, since the opening of navigation to the 14th of July, was $1,142,396 57.—This shows that an immense trade is carried on through these works.

☞ A Miss Story was married on Sunday last, in Covington, to Mr. R. Short. This is a very pleasant way of making a "story short."—Cin. Com.

☞ The navigation of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, between this city and New Orleans, has been uninterrupted for about eighteen months. Something remarkable.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Thrilling Adventure at Niagara.

The Philadelphia Ledger gives the following extract from a letter to a friend in Philadelphia, from C. Ellet, Jr., the bold architect of the Wheeling and Niagara suspension bridges, which for a feat of calm, cool daring, we think it would be difficult to excel:

"Niagara Falls, July 29, 1848.

"This morning I laid the last plank of my foot bridge on the Canada side, and then drove over and back again in a buggy. Five hundred feet of the bridge was without railing on either side. My horse, though spirited, went along quietly, touched up occasionally with the whip, just to show him that he was in command, and give him courage.

"On returning, I directed one of the drivers to bring on his team—a two horse closed carriage, weighing altogether over a ton and a half. I took his place on the box and drove over and back. The horses went quietly. The flooring is but eight feet wide, 220 feet high, 762 feet long, and without railing, over such a torrent as you never saw, and never will see any where else!"

Emigrants Arrived.

The whole number in the seven months of this year, to 31st July, arrived at New York in vessels from abroad, was 110,404—in the eight months, or from 5th of May (the time of the organization of the department of the Commissioner of Emigration.) to the 31st of December, the number was 129 082, being 239.486 in the last fifteen months. From May to December 1847, there were 53.180 Germans, and 52.496 natives of Ireland—but from December to August 1848, the number from Ireland has exceeded by some thousands, those of Germany; this is owing, no doubt, to the war between Denmark and Germany, and the blockade of the German vessels in the rivers, by the Danish fleet. The number arrived in July, 1848, was 24.622, of which 7,963 were from Germany, 11,740 from Ireland, 2.235 from England, 1,566 from Scotland, 106 from France, 34 from Holland, 129 from Switzerland, 63 from Spain, 114 from Wales, 481 from Norway, 85 from Sweden, 91 from West Indies, 1 from Denmark, 3 from South America, and 1 from Poland.

Serious Rail Road Accident.—The cars from Philadelphia to New York were detained till 12 o'clock Friday night by being first thrown off the track near Princeton, N. J., and then near Newark, by running over a man, supposed to be asleep, and killing him. One leg was cut off near the body and the other just above the knee.

Slavery in Porto Rico.—We learn from the Antigua Observer, (British West Indies,) of the 6th inst., that all British subjects and others in Spanish Porto Rico, supposed to be inimical to slavery had been peremptorily and suddenly compelled by the authorities to leave the island.

Drowned at Coney Island.—An unfortunate girl of the town, named Maria Monell, who resided at 15 Thomas street, New York, was drowned on Friday afternoon, while bathing at Coney Island. A male companion, said to be James Lynch, made every effort to save her.

Fires in New York.—During the year ending August 1st, 1848, there were in New York, two hundred and ninety-eight fires, and ninety-eight false alarms, which by comparison with the statement furnished in the last annual report, show a considerable decrease in both.

NOTICES.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

A complete list next week.

Portage Ct., Ohio Dist.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will commence August 19, at Prospect meeting-house, two miles east of Freeport. We invite Brothers Peat, Graham, Thornburg, Swaney, Guest, Laney and Carter. Come, brethren, without fail and help us.

WM. CHAPMAN.

Twin-Creek Ct., Ohio Dist.—We expect to commence, a protracted meeting at Liberty, 6 miles West of Dayton, on Friday, September 2d, with the view of having the labors of some of the brethren from the north on their way to Conference. Hope we shall not be disappointed.

J. NUTTY.

Tanners Creek Ct.—Ind. Dist.—Our 4th Quarterly Meeting will be held at the E. Fork Meeting House, near Brother William Smith's, commencing on Saturday, September 16, 1848. We cordially invite our esteemed President, Brother T. Shipp, and Brother T. Finkbine, and all other brethren from the Indiana and Ohio Districts that can attend.

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

PIONEER HISTORY: Being an Account of the first examinations of the Ohio Valley, and the early settlement of the Northwest Territory. Chiefly from Original Papers.—By S. P. Hildreth. Cincinnati: W. H. Derby & Co., 1848.

Such is the title of a beautiful octavo volume of 525 pages, just issued from the press. Amongst the claims of this work to the patronage of the western public, are first, the reputation of its author. Dr. Hildreth is one of the oldest citizens of Marietta, O., and has for many years been well known to the literary and scientific world, as author of many valuable works and papers. Secondly, the publication is issued under the patronage and superintendance of the Cincinnati Historical Society, and forms the first volume of its transactions. The work is handsomely executed, with fine paper and good type, and is substantially bound, and is embellished with ten engravings and maps. The price of the "Pioneer History" is $2.50. Messrs. Gurley and Cross, the Marietta publishers, have left us a subscription paper, in view of our obtaining subscriptions in this place and vicinity. But very few copies have yet been disposed of in this county. As but a small edition has been issued, those who wish to procure a copy will please leave their names soon at the office of the Western Recorder.

☞ Our receipts for the paper are very light, as Conference time approaches. How shall we make out for funds till that period? We cannot help thinking of a number of subscribers, and agents too, who ought to remember us just now. And if those who are indebted for books or pamphlets would send us those little sums it would aid us in meeting our heavy expenses.

☞ Wanted—Any quantity of new subscribers to commence with Volume Ten. We trust the brethren are just now engaged in procuring a good many responsible names to bring with them to the ensuing Conferences.

Springfield Ct., O. District.—We have appointed a Protracted Meeting at the Concord Meeting House, to commence Thursday, August 31st., and to continue over the next Sabbath. We trust that some of the ministerial brethren north of us will observe this notice, & make it suit to come at the commencement and stay over Sabbath with us. It will be directly on the way to Conference. Come, brethren, I shall look for at least an equal divide of laborers with Br. Hunt. Concord is six miles south of Springfield, on the Cortsville road.

Will Br. Young call with us, on his way to Lebanon?

R. ROSE.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs. C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

Kalida Ct., Ohio Dist.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Borton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

Michigan Conference.

The Michigan Annual Conference will hold its next session at Adrian, commencing on the 27th day of September, 1848.

JAMES GAY.

Coshocton Ct., Musk. Dist.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

Bellvue Ct., Musk. District.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

Lima Ct., Ohio Dist.—Br. Bassett: By your permsion, I would publish through the Recorder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on the Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it was be on the road to Conference. Come, brethren, and help us.

J. L. BORTON.

Clarksville Ct., Ohio Dist.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON.

Newark Circuit, Musk. District.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Irville, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in August next. Any ministering brethren who can do so, are requested to attend and assist us on the occasion.

W. H. MARSHALL.

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August next. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S.W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected; and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local, together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst, to prepare the ground.

E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt

Columbia Ct., Musk. Dist.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT

Woodsfield Circuit, Muskingum District.—Please give notice that the meeting of Brother Clancy, our Presider, for this circuit, will be at Lewisville, 7 miles west of Woodsfield on the Summerfield road. Call on Brother Francis Allen. Brother H. T. Lawson is invited to attend this meeting if possible

N. LINDER,
Superintendent.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Syracuse Circuit, August 12th and 13th.
Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

C H Williams	O	M Jared 1 sub	Ill
J B Peat	"	J Sibley	Ia
W B Miller	"	L Smith	Mich
C J Sears	"	R C Lanning 1 sub	"
J Nutty 2 subs	"	G Pratt	N Y
S Catlin 1 sub	"	H Brown	"
W Chapman	"	C Craig	Pa
John Burns 1 sub	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	cts.
M Jared	W F West	10	43	1	00
C J Sears	I Stephens	■	52	1	00
E Morris		10	33	2	00
H Brown N Y		10	31	1	00
Mrs S Enyart		10	52	1	50
J Nutty	J Bare	10	26	2	00
John Burns	J Branford	10	20	2	00
"	H Douglass	11	20	2	00
"	T H Scott	■	52	2	00
"	J Parr	10	13	2	00
"	D M Brainard	10	7	2	00

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	18
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	■
Rev. S. P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	■
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa,	■
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	■
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	■
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞ We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—By Rev. A. Kingsbury, on the 8th inst., MR. C. W. POTWIN, to MISS SARAH STURGES all of this place.

OBITUARY.

DIED—At Cincinnati, on the 2d inst., Rev. Robert Punshon, in the 72d year of his age.

——At the same city, on the 26th ult., Mrs. Louisa Jane Harrison, wife of Rev. Thomas Harrison, aged 28 years.

——At Frederic, Md., on the 29th ult., Judge Abraham Shriver.

——At Richmond, O., on the 25th ult., Rev. J. W. Miner, Presiding Elder of the Allegheny District, Pitts. Con., M. E. Church.

Advertisements.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern, Baltimore,

A NEW SUPPLY OF

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

Snethen's Sermons.

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the office of the Western Recorder.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. Levi R. Reese.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

SACRED MELODEON

A SELECTION OF

REVIVAL HYMNS & SPIRITUAL SONGS.

BY REV. J. DALBEY, Jr., & J. B. PEAT.

REVISED AND ENLARGED EDITION.

The flattering reception with which this volume of Sacred Poetry has been received by the Christian public, as well as the rapid sale of the first, has induced the Publisher to undertake the publication of a second, and enlarged, and improved edition, which is now in press. No efforts have been spared to make it worthy of the public regard and patronage. Several hymns in the first edition have been omitted; and their place supplied with others of a more modern and popular use; while an addition of several new and valuable hymns, has been appended to the volume.

Among many flattering notices which the publisher has received of the "Sacred Melodeon," the following is deemed sufficient to lay before the public:

From the Western Recorder.

"THE SACRED MELODEON."

This is an excellent selection of revival hymns, compiled by Rev. J. Dalbey, Jr., and Rev. J. B. Peat, both itinerant ministers of the Ohio Conference, Methodist Protestant Church, and recently published at Cincinnati. * * * * The work is neatly executed, with fair type and paper, comprising 312 pages, 32 mo. It embraces not only a good selection of hyms, but a number also never before published. From our examination of it, we unhesitatingly say, we like it better than any book of Spiritual Songs with which we are acquainted. It embraces all the new Spiritual Songs in common use we can call up, from 'Mercy's free,' to 'Will you go,' &c. * * * The Publishers are deserving of encouragement, and the work is well worthy of a liberal patronage.

TERMS.

Per copy, : : : : : : : : : : : : $00 30
Per dozen, : : : : : : : : : : : : 2 00
Fifty copies or more, per hundred, : : : 18 00

☞ The above, work can be obtained of Rev. A. H. Bassett, Putnam, Gee. Conclin, Cincinnati, or the Publisher.

April 10, 1848.

Poet's Corner.

THE BATTLE OF OUR LIFE.

BY REV. E. C. JONES.

Up to the strife with care,
Be thine an oaken heart,
Life's daily contest nobly share,
Nor act a craven part:
Give murmurs to the coward throng,
Be thine the joyous notes if song.

If thrown upon the field,
Up to the task once more;
'Tis worse than infamy to yield
'Tis childish to deplore;
Look stern misfortune in the eye,
And breast the billow manfully.

Close in with every foe,
As thickly on they come;
They can but lay the body low,
And send the spirit home;—
Yet may'st thou stout it out and view
What giant energy can do.

Soon shall the combat cease,
The struggle fierce and strong,
And thine be true unbroken peace,
And thine the victor's song:—
Beyond the cloud will wait for thee,
The wreath of immortality.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REPLY TO THE REV. W. M'GWIGAN, ON SLAVERY.

NO. III.

That Slavery, is of the Devil, and not of God, we prove in the next place from the fact that every peculiar feature in the character of the Devil, harmonizes with the nature, spirit, and character of Slavery.

1. Is the Devil a liar, and the father of lies? Then Slavery must have been begotten by him, for it has been carried on, sustained, kept in existence, by gross falsehoods, and misrepresentations, from first to last. And I do not see how any man, whether a professed friend of Christ, or an open advocate of the evil one, can defend the vile system of Slavery, without violating the sacred principles of truth. Such sayings, as these; "God has sanctioned, ratified, & instituted slavery," That many of the abolitionists "so soon as Slavery comes up, almost literally boil over with the foam of a wild, and terrible madness; that you can see their eyes sparkling with an unnatural fire, lips quivering, limbs shaking," &c., &c., we regard, in the absence of proof, to say the least of them, as untruths; coming within the walks of his satanic majesty's range!

2. Is the Devil the Prince of Darkness? — Then Slavery must belong to his dominions, for there is not a system on this green earth, which seeks more for darkness than Slavery. As proof, witness the unconstitutional gags it has forced upon the United States Congress in past years, the thousands of petitions which have been silently buried under the Speaker's table by the sworn Representatives of a "free people," in their zeal for Slavery; also the mobs Slavery has excited to put down free discussion, within the last fifteen years;—also the threats of violence put forth by "Judge Lynch" against any, and all persons who should lisp a word in opposition to the dark, and hellish system of oppression, in the Slave States of this Christian land. See also the laws which the spirit of Slavery, and the servants of the Devil, have framed to keep the poor slaves if possible, in midnight darkness forever. In Georgia, if a white teach a FREE negro or a slave to read or write, he is fined $500, and imprisoned at discretion of the Court. If the offender be a colored man, bond, or free, he is to be fined or whipped. In N. C. it is unlawful to teach a Slave to read or write or to sell or give him any book or pamphlet the Bible not excepted. It is in the same state, unlawful for a man of color to preach the gospel, and in Georgia if a free negro preaches to his companions or exhorts them, he may be seized without warrant, and whipped thirty-nine lashes, and the same number may be given to each of his congregation. In Louisiana the penalty for instructing free blacks in a Sabbath School, is for the first offence five hundred dollars—for the second offence DEATH! And what meanet that disgraceful outrage upon the heart, and nature of woman, from the Court of Wood Co., Virginia, by sentencing Martha Christian to imprisonment for ten years in the Penitentiary, for the crime, "hear it O! heavens, hear it friend M'Gwigan, for teaching a female Slave to read the Bible." See the Recorder of June 8th. Is this of God? Does God authorize, and sanction the very pious act of casting his children into prison, for the awful crime, of teaching his holy word, to another of his creatures? In 1839 an aged negro, was sentenced to ten years imprisonment in the Penitentiary of Maryland for reading to Slaves.

3. Is the Devil a tyrant, and an oppressor? So is Slavery one vast system of tyrannical oppression, carried on under the control, and spirit of the great oppressor, the Devil. Slavery is founded in absolute tyranny, and no one can enter into the spirit of it, without becoming a tyrant, especially in the presence of his victims, the poor slaves. And to carry out this oppressive system of tyrany, laws have been formed, iron colors, clogs, chains, hobbles, hand cuffs, thumb screws, cow-skins, &c., &c., have been made and used upon the victims of Slavery.—For further proof let the South speak.—Hear Hon. Thomas Jefferson, a Virginian." "The whole commerce between the Master, and the slave is a perpetual exercise of the most boisterous passions, the most unremitting DESPOTISM, on the one part, and degrading submission on the other. Our children see this, and learn to imitate it; for man is an imitative animal. This quality is the germ of all education in him.—From his cradle to his grave, he is learning to do what he sees others do. If a Parent could find no motive either in his philanthropy or self love, for restraining his intemperance of passion towards his slaves, it should be a sufficient one that the child, is present. But GENERALLY it is not sufficient. The parent storms, the child looks on, catches the lineament of wrath, puts on the same airs in the circle of smaller Slaves—gives lose to the worst passions, and thus nursed, educated and daily exercised in TYRANNY, cannot but he stamped by it with odious peculiarities. The man must be a prodigy who can retain his manners, & morals, undepraved under such circumstances." [Notes on Virginia, page 251.] The next witness we will introduce, is the Hon. Lewis Summers, Judge of the General Court of Virginia, said in a speech before the Virginia Legislature, in 1832. (See Richmond Whig, of June, 26. '32.) "A Slave population exercises the most pernicious influence upon the manners, habits, and character, of those among whom it exists. Lisping infancy learns the vocabulary of abusive, epistles, and struts the embryo TYRANT of its little domain." The Hon. W. B. Seabrook of South Carolina says, in an essay on the management of Slaves, read before the Agricultural Society of St. Johns, S. C., and published by the Society, Charleston, 1834, "I consider imprisonment in the stocks at night with or without hard labor in the day as a powerful auxiliary in the cause of good government. To the correctness of this opinion many can bear testimony. Experience has convinced me that there is no punishment to which the Slave looks with more horror." The hundreds of Advertisements of runaway slaves published by slaveholders, in the publications of the South, prove most conclusively that Slavery is carried out by tyranny. We give one or two of them as samples." "Runaway, my man Fountain—has holes in his ears, a scar on the right side of his forehead, has been shot in the hind part of his legs—is marked on the back with the whip.—"Brought to Jail John—left ear cropt."

4. Is the Devil actuated by the spirit of malevolence, revenge, and of cruelty? Then Slavery must certainly be of the Devil, for it has his spirit in full; unless it can be shown that God, and the Devil are actuated by one, and the same spirit, or that God has, in order to carry on the system of oppression which He has instituted, been under the necessity of putting on the spirit of the Devil. And friend M'Gwigan may select the position which suits his fancy best; but as for myself I believe most fully, and hesitate not to speak it out—Slavery is of the Devil. As we wish to give the proof to every item of the argument, we will turn our attention once more to the South, the seat of Slavery. A clergyman of Virginia closes a letter to the sessions of the Presbyterian Congregations within the bounds of West Hanover Presbytery, published in the Richmond Whig as follows: "If there be any stray-goat of a minister among us tainted with the blood-hound principles of abolitionism, let him be ferreted out, silenced, excommunicated, and left to the public to dispose of him in other respects.

Your affectionate brother in the Lord,
"ROBERT N. ANDERSON."

That is, if there is a minister among us, tainted with the principles of abolitionism, let us hunt him out, silence, excommunicate him, and encourage the infuriated public to dispose of him, &c.

The Rev. Wm. S. Plumer of Virginia says: "If the abolitionists will set the country in a blaze it is but fair that they should have the first warming at the fire. .... Let them understand that they will be caught if they come among us, and they will take good heed to keep out of our way." Gov. M'Duffie of S. C., said in relation to the movement of abolitionists, in writing, and publishing their sentiments on Slavery, "The laws of every community should punish this species of interference with death, without the benefit of clergy." The spirit of slavery is also to be seen in the advertisements of Runaway Slaves. Take one or two for illustration, Wilmington (N. C.) Advertiser, of July 13th, '38, has the following, "Runaway, my negro man Richard, a reward of $25 will be paid for his apprehension dead or alive. Satisfactory proof will only be required of his being killed."

"DURANT H. RHODES."

Any person, is authorized to kill certain runaway slaves by the proclamation of Justices, in these word, "any person may kill, and destroy said slaves by such means as he or they think fit, without accusation or impeachment of any crime or offence for so doing, or without incurring any penalty or forfeiture thereby.

Given under our hands and seals this 12th November, 1836.

"B. COLEMAN, J. P. [Seal.]
"JAS. JONES, J. P. [Seal.]"

See Newbern (N. C.) Spectator, of Dec. 2, 1836.

The above are sufficient to afford us a faint view of the spirit running through slavery as it exists in this land of Bibles; and any person with the most limited views of the Divine Being, we should think, could easily see that God is not the author of Slavery but that it arose under the reign of the fiend of Darkness, and by that Prince it has, and is still carried on in opposition to the will of Almighty God, and the well-being of all the oppressed. The advocates of Slavery will see that, we form our opinion of Slavery by testimony from men of their own class and habits: that is from Slave-holders themselves.—And we will assure friend M'Gwigan that the worst things, we have ever seen or heard in relation to Slavery, have come from the supporters of that system, and if we judge at all, it will be from what comes from that source. Slavery looks so much like the Devil, I am honestly led to wonder, how any one can help believing it to be the offspring of that evil one.

JAMES GAY.

Kingsbury, Indiana, July 6th, 1838.

LIGHT AMONG THE GERMANS.—The German Romanists in Newark and Patterson, N. J., have recently organized societies, where they receive Bible instructions from German Protestant Clergymen. The gospel light is penetrating dark minds on this continent as well as in Europe.

Narrative.

THE PRIEST AND THE ROBBER.

A TRUE STORY.

Forty years ago the scenes related occurred in the heart of France. A Roman Catholic Priest was called on to prepare for his great change a highway robber, about to perish on the scaffold. The good father used his eloquence and his efforts, to lead the prisoner to repent of his aggravated crimes in vain. He observed that the mind of the latter was absorbed,—that he seemed to heed him not. What could engage his thoughts at such an awful hour! Do you reflect, said the Priest, that in two hours you are to appear before your Maker? I do, said the criminal, but I wish just now to live and repent, not to repent and die,—and the thought has come into my brain, and I can't for the soul of me drive it out, that you are the very man to save me from death, not to pave me a way to it.—But, said the priest, even if I had the power, and I can't see that I have, should I not be doing a wrong to mankind by setting you free, and be subjecting you to a farther load of guilt? If that's the only obstacle in the way, you may, my good father, he entirely easy on that score. I have seen the scaffold too near, ever to expose myself to its terrors again. Never will I rob or defraud more. I will be henceforth a changed man.—With eyes imploring and bathed in tears, he knelt before the holy man, and begged his life. He appealed to a kind heart, and saw the impression he had made. The chapel in which they were, was lighted only by a window near the ceiling, and which was more than fifteen feet from the floor. You have but, said the prisoner, to put your chair upon the altar, which we can place near the wall; you will then ascend on the chair, and I will mount upon your shoulders, from which I can gain the window.

In an instant the criminal was beyond the reach of the law. The priest remained tranquilly seated in the chair, having restored the altar to its place. Some hours after the flight, the hangman, who was impatient at the long prayers of the priest, who, he thought, might have put half-a-dozen souls on the road to heaven in less time, knocked at the door. Not seeing the prisoner, he demanded what had become of him. He must be an angel of light, said the father, for on the faith of a priest, he went out by that window, I saw it with my own eyes.—The hangman was in a maze. Having closely questioned the priest, he demand if he was in earnest. On his replying in the affirmative, he ran to warn the judges. They hastened to the chapel; examined the chair, the window, the height from the floor. They saw no other means of escape, than that stated by the priest. Their brains were perplexed. But they could not preserve their gravity at the sang froid of the good father while describing the flight of the angel, as he styled him, through the window,—and the prayer he was tempted to make to him, as he vanished, to take him along with him to the skies. Be this as it may, the church was too powerful in those days to question the word of a priest, who assumed to himself the merit of converting a sinner into an angel in an hour.

Twenty years afterward the holy father was lost in the forest of Ardennes. The night came on: he was without food or a place to rest. The spot was infested with robbers. Wild beasts were prowling around. Step by step, weak and desponding, he wandered farther in the mazes of the woods. His frame sank exhausted with hunger, fatigue and terror. He commended his soul to the care of heaven, and laid him down to die. He had lain there some hours, when a lanthorn shone in his face. It was held by a peasant, who examined his features attentively. He aided him to rise. With his sinewy arm he bore the exhausted form of the priest to a neat farm-house delightfully situated in a fertile plain on the skirt of the woods. The father was nursed with care and restored to life, and warmly thanked his benefactor. On his recovering sufficiently to eat, table was spread for the new guest. A fine capen was cooked and nicely dressed, and every luxury the farm afforded was set before him. A female neatly atired with eight little-ones surrounded the table.—Father, exclaimed the peasant apart to him after they had finished their repast, a wife, children, farm, all these blessings I owe to you. You saved my life when I was condemned to die on the scaffold, I have in turn saved yours. I have redeemed my pledges made to you. Wandering a mendicant, chance brought me to this house, where by industry and honest dealing I won the confidence of the father of my wife, who on his death left to us this farm. I have prospered ever since in my affairs. My wife has been a real blessing to me, and my children with their ruddy face and their sweet smiles, remind me each day as I return from my daily toil what I owe to heaven and to you.

The good father, whose conscience had often smote him for the fraud he had practised on the magistrate, and the danger of letting a robber loose to depredate on the public highways, was set at ease, he embraced the peasant and thanked his God that he had been the means of reclaiming a guilty soul from perdition, and raising a condemned felon to the dignity of an honest man.

Scientific.

Value of the Sciences.

The Journal of Commerce has an article on Electro-Magnetism, and the use made of the power by Professors Henry and Morse. To show the practical use of a study of such a science, the Journal says:

"We are reminded in this connection of an anecdote related to us by one of the most eminent counsellors in this State, which, while it illustrates our remarks, pays very just compliment to the learning of Prof. Henry. It is known to scientific men that the field of this gentleman's most extensive and important investigations and discoveries, has been Electricity. In the course of a trial of a cause in the city of Albany, said Judge———, I was employed by the defence, and called on Prof. Henry, then in the Albany Academy, to give the court and jury some information in regard to the variations of the magnetic needle. I was surprised and interested at the clear, dignified and forcible character of his testimony, and the readiness with which he explained the most difficult points. So much was I interested, that I made my notes of his testimony very full, and, after the conclusion of the cause, I filed them away with the papers. Many years later I was employed in a cause in Albany co., which originated in the variation of the landmarks from those laid down in the old deeds. Six country surveyors had been employed to run the lines, none could hit the old marks. We examined them all, day after day, and could reach no result. It occurred to me to open the testimony of Prof. Henry, which I had forgotten for years. I took it into court with me, and selecting the most intelligent of the surveyors, I asked him a series of questions framed on that testimony. His replies were satisfactory. I then requested him to take a pencil, and giving him certain data from my notes I reqeusted him to calculate what this line would have been under such and such circumstances, variations, &c. He spent a long time in the calculations, but the result was to confirm the old deeds. All were astonished but myself.

"A better illustration of the utility of many studies & discoveries which appear at first to be useless, could not be asked."

Solar Paralax.

A report was submitted to Congress in April last, with reference to setting on foot an expedition to the most Southern available position of the Western Continent, for the purpose of making observations on the planet Venus during the period of her retrogade motion; these observations are to be conjoined with similar obsevrtions at the Observatory in Washington city, with a view to determining more accurately than has hitherto been done, the solar paralax. The plan emanated from Dr. Gerling of Marburg, well known for his astronomical and geodetical labors, and was communicated by him in a letter to Lieut Gilliss, dated April 17, 1847, in which he earnestly seeks for the co-operation of American astronomers. The correspondence on the subject between Dr. Gerling and Lieut. Gilliss, addressed by the latter to the Chairman of the Committee of Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives, was made the basis of the report. The object is one worthy of a national expedition. The report states that in 1769, Dr. Rittenhouse, under the patronage of the government of Pennsylvania, made observations on the transit of Venus that were of great value. The subject is, therefore already connected with the history of American science, under the auspices of a government patronage.—Illinois Journal.

Chrystalized Salt

Colonel Benton has deposited in the Congressional Library, for public inspection, various beautiful specimens of chrystalized salt, taken from the shores of the Great Salt Lake in California, by Col. J. C. Fremont, October, 1845.

This chrystalization of the salt is formed by the spray of the lake. The specimens are on twigs, but it forms on every thing that it touches.

The reddish stain on one of the specimens comes from contact with magnetic iron ore in the box where it had lain for two years; in its own formation, all is clear and white and glitters in the sun.

Mineral Salt.—There is also deposited a specimen taken from a mountain in the basin of the Great Salt Lake by Colonel Fremont, October, 1845.

Locality southeast from the lake, designated on Humbolt's map of New Spain as 'Montagne de Ral Genne,' (Rock Salt Mountain.)—Wash. Union.

Miscellaneous.

The Light of Nature.

There lived many years ago, in Philadelphia, a celebrated Indian chief by the name of Tedyuscung. He was sitting one evening by the fireside of a friend, both of them looking silently at the fire, indulging in their own reflections.

At length the silence was interrupted by the friend, who said, "I will tell you what I have been thinking of. I was thinking of a rule delivered by the Author of the Christian religion, which, from its excellence, we call the Golden Rule."

"Stop," said Tedyuscung, don't praise it to me; but rather tell me what it is, and let me think for myself. I do not wish you to tell me of its excellence—tell me what it is."

"It is for one man to do unto another as he would that the other should do unto him," said the friend.

"That is impossible—it cannot be done!" Tedyuscung immediately replied; and taking his pipe, lighted it, and commenced walking about the room. In about a quarter of an hour he came up to his friend, with a smiling countenance, & taking his pipe from his mouth, he said, "Brother, I have been thoughtful on what you told me. If the Great Spirit that made man would give him a new heart he could do as you say, but not else."

GOLD REGION OF GEORGIA.

The following story is a matter of popular history. After the State Legislature had divided the Cherokee Purchase into lots, and regularly numbered them, it was rumored about the country that lot No. 1052 was a great prize, and every body was on tip-toe with regard to its distribution by the proposed lottery. At that time 1052 figured in the dreams of every Georgian, and those figures were then far more popular than the figures 54 40 have been in these latter days.—Among the more crazy individuals who attended the lottery was one Mosely, who had determined to draw the much talked of prize, or purchase it of the winner, even though it should be at the cost of his entire property, which was quite large. The drawing took place, and 1052 came into the possession of a poor farmer named Ellison. Mosely immediately mounted his horse and hastened to Ellison's farm, where he found the child of fortune following the plough. The would-be purchaser made known the object of his visit, and Ellison only laughed at the impetuosity of his impatient friend. Ellison said he was not anxious to sell the lot, but if Mosely must have it, he might have it for $30,000.—Mosely acceded to the terms, and in paying for the lot sacrificed the most of his landed and personal property. The little property which was left him he was compelled to employ in working his mines; he labored with great diligence for several years, but he could never make both ends meet, for his mines were not at all distinguished for their richness.

In process of time he was compelled to sell 1052 for what it would bring, and having squandered that remnant of his former wealth, he left the country for parts unknown, a veritable beggar. But, what is more singular than all, the present proprietor of 1052 is that identical man Ellison, who is annually realizing a handsome sum of money from the newly discovered gold ore found in the bowels of his lottery lot.

Another instance of good fortune, unattended with any alloy, is as follows: Five years ago a couple of brothers, who were at work upon the Georgia Railroad, took it into their heads to visit Dahlonega and try their luck in the mining business. They were hard-working Irishmen, and understood the science of digging to perfection. They leased one or two lots in this vicinity, and are now reputed to be worth $15,000.

The deposite gold is extracted from the gravel by means of a simple machine called a rocker, which merely shifts and washes out the metal. The vein gold is brought to light by means of what is called a pounding mill, which reduces the rock to the consistency of sand, when the ore is separated by the use of quicksilver.

Advertisements.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric jrtice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances, corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS —The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT, Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

FITS! FITS!!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm. Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After traveling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 12 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years. Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.
Samuel Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthoif, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HATT, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 46. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, AUG. 17, 1848. WHOLE NO. 462.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,
AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO
OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

From the Pennsylvania Freeman.

'TIS GOOD TO LIVE.

A THANKSGIVING.

I thank thee, Father that I live!
I thank thee for these gifts of thine—
For bending skies of heavenly blue,
And stars divine;

For this green earth, where wild, sweet airs,
Like freest spirits, joyous stray—
For winding stream, and trees, and flowers,
Beside its way.

But more I thank thee, for true hearts
That bear sweet gifts of love to me,
Whom mind enfolds, and feels that this
Is love of thee.

Warm from their spirits spreads around
An atmosphere serene—divine—
Magnetical, like golden haze,
Encircling mine.

To-day I bless thee most for power—
It draws me, Father, nearest thee—
To love all thine, e'en though they give
No love to me.

In stillness deep I walk a land
Where spirit forms my footsteps greet,
And beautious thoughts an angel band
Chant low and sweet.

Drear hours I know will darkly come,
Like April days of cloud and rain;
But thus must hearts, like wintry fields,
Grow green again.

I thank thee, Father, that I live!
Though wailings fill this earth of thine;
To labor for thy suffering ones
Is joy divine!

And even I, so weak and poor,
May bear some word of life from Thee;
A beam of hope may reach some heart,
Even through me.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

CAUSES OF DECLENSION.

Br. Bassett: Among all the subjects which occupy the minds of boys and fathers, whether layman or ecclesiastics, that consider themselves competent to write for the benefit of the public, or the church, none to my knowledge, has touched upon the subject of perseverance. And yet it must be acknowledged in reference to some of them, that they have shown themselves to be illustrious examples of the principle, in the long essays which they have for several weeks in succession presented for our perusal. Indeed if we may be permitted to judge from our personal knowledge, we cannot but conclude, that many of those that style themselves laborers in the vineyard of the Lord, will contend longer, and stand more firmly, for a mere matter of opinion in reference to church polity, than to make inroads upon the territory of the enemy, or to hold it when it is gained. In taking a survey of the region over which our information extends, we behold a desolate field indeed.

Seldom have we become acquainted with the members of societies, or enquired in reference to the spiritual condition of a place, without being informed that there was, formerly a class of Methodist Protestants there: and in many instances these are represented as having been flourishing. But what is their history? why briefly this: They continued for a time, some of the members died, some backslid, some moved away, and the remainder together with the preacher become discouraged; neglect followed, and they began to believe, and perhaps prophesy, that they were not going to succeed, and it was unto them according to their faith. They realised the fulfillment of their prediction. Instances not a few are also known, where our preachers have taken up appointments, by the request it may be of some friend, preached a few times and because they saw no special interest manifested, have concluded it was all of no use, and in accordance with this conclusion, and to the gratification of their ease seeking nature they have left the appointment; in some instances at least, just when an interest was beginning to be awakened, and the people began to consider.

Here again we are compelled to say that the prophesy was fulfiled "it was all of no use" labor lost. Time worse than misspent: unless peradventure an impression of a religious nature was made upon some that resulted in inducing them to unite with some other branch of the church, if so this was well; we rejoice in the salvation of one soul. Yet how much better would it have been for that branch of the church, the principles of which we so dearly love, and perhaps for the neighborhood, or town, if the appointment had been continued.

This method of hagling over christendom has become so general that it is next to impossible for a man to labor without building upon another man's foundation. No doubt there is good reason in some cases, for preaching places to be left, but we think our observation has been sufficiently extensive to enable us to say without fear of misjudging, had there been as much firmness displayed in maintaining the ground acquired, and as much persevera nce in extending the borders of Zion, accompanied with as much faith in God as the disputants of the present day appear to have in themselves, there would not be so many broken down classes, so many broken down circuits, and so much abandoned territory.

We would not censure any particular class of individuals, but believing a grand defect to exist on this subject, we have taken this method to to direct the attention of both ministers and people to it, hoping that thereby a reformation may be effected.

Yours for the promotion of Gospel principles,
W. B. M.

Richland Co., O. July 29, 1848.

Reformatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

USE OF TOBACCO.

NO. III.

Friend Bassett: I have mentioned the fact that in many moral reforms, church members stand most in the way. The reasons are obvious. First: Their unwillingness to acknowledge that they have adopted any practice inconsistent with the gospel. Second: The influence they have, of sanctioning such practices in others by their example. When we can point to a minister who uses, and has used tobacco for many years, and refer to his talents and zeal in the discharge of his duties as a Pastor, his faithfulness in warning the impenitent, the ability with which he holds out the kind invitations of the gospel to the penitent, the care of the lambs of the flock, his benevolence in visiting the sick, and ministering to the wants of the poor and needy, and his support of the great missionary efforts of the day, Bible, Tract, Missionary, Moral Reform, and other efforts of the benevolent societies, we are apt to conclude that his personal habits are in accordance with the requirements of the gospel, and cannot be wrong: and if we find such a one discharging from his over-loaded mouth upon our stoves, or carpets, his saliva, we look upon it with much more of complacency, than we should, if he were some unmannerly Boor, who had been brought up without any of those advantages of education, and refinement, which the good Pastor has enjoyed: and so of other Professors in proportion to their rank and influence in the church. These give license to the desecration of our meeting houses, which is every Sabbath practised, greatly to the discomfort of those around them; and to such of the congregation as pass by where they have occupied a seat.

It may be urged that we have no such persons amongst the ministers of the gospel, or the officers in our churches. If not how comes it that in the cities where large assemblies of christians meet to urge forward the benevolent operations of the day, the wealthy families are unwilling to entertain them, but rather pay their expenses at a tavern. I have myself seen such things enacted, and have been greatly annoyed in meeting, by a fellow professor, rendering the whole pew as filthy as a hog-sty; to say nothing of the exhibitions in private houses.

I have given you my own experience, in order to shew that I am not without information on the subject; and I own, that I verily believe thousands in our land are yearly consigned to premature graves, solely from the use of this deliterious article; and I hope before I am done with the subject, to prove this by good testimony: and if this is true, can christians be guilty of that which shortens their lives without any necessity, and yet be innocent in the sight of God? Surely not, and if in addition to this, others by their example, are encouraged to practice this vice, and are thereby consigned to a loss of health, or life, are their skirts clean of the blood of their fellow mortals? These are questions worthy of deep reflection. If St. Paul declared "it was good to neither eat meat, or drink wine, or any thing whereby a brother is offended or made weak,"—surely it is good to abstain from the use of so unnecessary and filthy a thing as tobacco; if we ourselves were not harmed by its use. No duty to God, our neighbors, or ourselves require us to use it. I propose in due time to answer the plea of using it as a medicine.

A REFORMED TOBACCO USER.

Putnam, O.

Ministerial.

From the Religious Telescope.

VISIT YOUR FLOCKS.

Pastors, ministers, preachers, stationed or itinerant—what is the state of your flocks? Are any lame, weakly or sickly among them? Are none gone astray? is the place of each one filled regularly in the church, the prayer, the class-meetings? Where are they—what are they doing—how are their souls prospering? Can you answer these questions to the Chief Shepherd with a conscience void of offence? Can you say you "have not ceased to warn every one night and day with tears;" that you have "taught them publicly, and from house to house?"

Some ministers preach, preach, preach, do nothing but preach from the pulpit, and wonder that the work, the spiritual work declines on their hands. They preach sound doctrine, powerfully and pointedly, the people, it may be, are edified and pleased, some perhaps convicted, but here the matter ends—none are converted, none sanctified. But we need not wonder at it; if the flock is not visited, and the truth pointedly and personally applied, and each member either brought to duty or dismissed from the Church, we cannot expect any thing like a general waking up among the people. This is a peculiar age; the public mind is unusually excited, humbugged and diverted from the great concerns of the soul's salvation. No common efforts can bring it back; pulpit efforts alone will not do the work; these must be followed by familiar personal intercourse of the right kind. Christ must be preached in the street, the store, the shop, the parlor, the kitchen. There must be less talk about Taylor, Cass, Van Buren and Hale, and more about the Savior of Sinners. Instead of being led away by the exciting subjects of the times, ministers should take firm ground, and see to it that the soul and life of the Church is not destroyed. We must not be afraid nor ashamed to be called men of "one idea," if that idea is the one great idea which filled the heart, the head and hands of our Redeemer during his sojourn on earth—viz: the salvation of a world of lost sinners. Every minister should be able to say to his flock, in private as well as in public, "I am determined to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified."

Your visiting should not be too formal. Some ministers are too cold, stiff and formal in their visiting; have too little soul life and spirituality. To be useful, you should become thoroughly acquainted with all "the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made you an overseer;" you should be familiar with the peculiarities of each one—his trials, besetments and dangers; even the children should claim your attention and advice.—But who is sufficient for these things? None but those in whom the spirit of Christ dwells. Saul, the proud, unsanctified Pharisee, did not feel any concern for souls, as such; to be sure he was zealous to advance the interests of his Church, his sect, and was ready to fight against everything that seemed to oppose it; but "Paul, the apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God," "was ready not only to be bound, but to die for the name of Jesus Christ"—ready to offer his all for the salvation of souls. What made the difference? Anything that naturally belonged to him? Far from it; hear him, "not I, but the grace of God that was in me"—"not I, but Christ that liveth in me." This is what we need as ministers—an indwelling Christ; where Christ is permitted to dwell, there will be feeling deep and strong for the salvation of souls; there will be action, fruit. Is there not need of a reformation among us on this point? "Does the love of Christ constrain us" to make sacrifices, and labor and toil "with travail night and day," that by all means we may save some? Are ministers generally as much concerned for the spiritual welfare of the souls committed to their care as farmers and drovers are of their flocks or herds? When one is sick or crippled, how soon does the owner of a sheep or steer find it out, and administer the proper remedy. When one is absent, how soon is it known, and some one sent in pursuit. Are not souls worth more than sheep or oxen? Should not ministers feel a deeper interest in their welfare than a farmer does in his brutes? The Lord complained of the shepherds of Israel, that they had scattered his flock, and had not visited them; and then adds, "behold I will visit upon you the evil of your doings; and will gather the remnant of my flock, and bring them to their fold again; and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall hunger no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall any be lacking, saith the Lord." Let the guilty take warning: deliverance will arise to Israel from another quarter if they altogether hold their peace.

Pray, not Preach.

Prayer is prayer, preaching is preaching, talking is talking. Some ministers preach their prayers—make a tolerably good sermon. Spin it out, and spin it out, sometimes exhort with all long suffering and patience till every knee is callous from kneeling! Awful! From our little smattering of theology, we had supposed, a distinction shold be made, always, that prayer, strictly speaking, was prayer, and that preaching was preaching. Reader, are we in the dark on this point.—Gol. Rule.

Set the Time and Keep it.

Keep it punctilliously, don't vary a hair's breadth. When you say Monday, mean Monday. When you say Tuesday or Wednesday, mean Tuesday or Wednesday. When you say 6 o'clock, mean 6 o'clock. When you say twelve mean twelve—not half past twelve. Time is precious. The sure way to make punctual is, to be punctual, scrupulously so. Time is precious, infinitely; gold cannot purchase it. Better rob your neighbor of gold, precious gems, than to rob him of a moment. Set the time and keep it!—Gol. Rule.

Be short---Very short.

Short as pie-crust. Don't hang on, and hang on, spin it out and spin it out. Gather up your burning thoughts in focus, avoid circumlocutions; condense, abbreviate; come to the point, speedily —be short; dispatch things; do what you do, with your might. Duties on duties rush, rise like mountain Alps; duties momentous, infinite; even the soul's salvation hangs on a pivot; time is short; our life is a shadow, a vapor, a speck; a lightning's flash and we are gone, gone! Be short, cut it off, off, off with it, cut it off! Grasp the first duty, the present duty, finish it; run to the next, run, RUN! death is at our heels, eternal death, eternal life; choose which. Do up your business, do it up, quick; do it well, finish it, dispatch it; do it with your might—come to the point; bring every thing to a focus, burning, melting, scorching! hasten, flee, run, fly, fly on the wings of love, fly, on, ON, ON! —Golden Rule.

What! not up Yet!

Lie in bed 'till seven, eight o'clock? Abominable! Man, woman, child, servant, all, all should be on your knees ere the sun beams in your casement: "ere fresh morning streak the east, with first approach of light." On your knees, pouring out your very soul to God. Morning is the prime, the golden "bowl" of life. Lose the morning, you lose all! Up, up, "shake off dull sloth."

> "Sweet is the breath of morn, her rising sweet,
> With charm of earliest birds; pleasant the sun
> When first on this delightful land he spreads
> His orient beams, on herb, tree, fruit and flower,
> Glist'ning with dew."

Up, up! thou dreamer, up from that bed of sloth. up, shake thyself, tune thy harp early—tune it to God's praise. "As the door turneth upon its hinges, so doth the slothful upon his bed.—Gol. Rule.

THE RATIFIED TREATY.

Treaty of peace, friendship, limits, and settlement, between the United States of America and the Mexican republic, concluded at Guadalupe Hidalgo on the 2d day of February, in the year 1848.

In the name of Almighty God:

The United States of America and the United Mexican States, animated by a sincere desire to put an end to the calamities of the war which unhappily exists between the two republics, and to establish upon a solid basis relations of peace and friendship, which shall confer reciprocal benefits upon the citizens of both, and assure the concord, harmony, & mutual confidence wherein the two people should live, as good neighbors, have for that purpose appointed their respective plenipotentiaries—that is to say, the President of the United States has appointed Nicholas P. Trist, a citizen of the United States, and the President of the Mexican republic has appointed Don Luis Gonzaga Cuevas, Don Bernardo Couto, and Don Miguel Atristain, citizens of the said republic, who, after a reciprocal communication of their respective full powers, have, under the protection of Almighty God, the author of peace, arranged, agreed upon, and sign the following

Treaty of peace, friendship, limits, and settlement, between the United States of America and the Mexican republic.

Article I.

There shall be firm and universal peace between the United States of America and the Mexican republic, and between their respective countries, territories, cities, towns, and people, without exception of places or persons.

Article II.

Immediately upon the signature of this treaty, a convention shall be entered into between a commissioner or commissionors appointed by the General-in-chief of the forces of the United States, and such as may be appointed by the Mexican government, to the end that a provisional suspension of hostilities shall take place, and that, in the places occupied by the said forces, constitutional order may be re-established, as regards the political, administrative and judicial branches, so far as this shall be permitted by the circumstances of military occupation.

Article III.

Immediately upon the ratification of the present treaty by the government of the U. States, orders shall be transmitted to the commanders of their land and naval forces, requiring the latter (provided this treaty shall then have been ratified by the government of the Mexican republic, and the ratifications exchanged) immediately to desist from blockading any Mexican ports; and requiring the former (under the same condition) to commence, at the earliest moment practicable, withdrawing all troops of the United States then in the interior of the Mexican republic, to points that shall be selected by common agreement, at a distance from the seaports not exceeding thirty leagues; and such evacuation of the interior of the republic shall be completed with the least possible delay; the Mexican government hereby binding itself to afford every facility in its power for rendering the same convenient to the troops on their march and in their new positions, and for promoting a good understanding between them and the inhabitants. In like manner, orders shall be despatched to the persons in charge of the custom-houses at all ports occupied by the forces of the United States, requiring them (under the same condition) immediately to deliver possession of the same to the persons authorized by the Mexican government to receive it, together with all bonds and evidences of debt for duties on importations and on exportations not yet fallen due. Morever, a faithful and exact account shall be made out, showing the entire amount of all duties on imports and on exports collected at such custom-houses or elsewhere in Mexico by authority of the U. States, from and after the day of ratification of this treaty by the government of the Mexican republic; and also an account of the cost of collection, and such entire amount, deducting only the cost of collection, shall be delivered to the Mexican government, at the city of Mexico, within three months after the exchange of ratifications.

The evacuation of the capital of the Mexican republic by the troops of the United States, in virtue of the above stipulation, shall be completed in one month after the orders there stipulated for shall have been received by the commander of said troops, or sooner if possible.

Article IV.

Immediately after the exchange of ratifications of the present treaty, all castles, forts, territories, places, and possessions, which have been taken or occupied by the forces of the U. States during the present war, within the limits of the Mexican republic, as about to be established by the following article, shall be definitively restored to the said republic, together with all the artillery, arms, apparatus of war, munitions, and other public property, which were in the said castles and forts when captured, and which shall remain there at the time when this treaty shall be duly ratified by the government of the Mexican republic. To this end, immediately upon the signature of this treaty, orders shall be despatched to the American officers commanding such castles and forts, securing against the removal or destruction of any such artillery, arms, apparatus of war, munitions, or other public property. The city of Mexico, within the inner line of intrenchment surrounding the said city, is comprehended in the above stipulations, as regards the restoration of artillery, apparatus of war, &c.

The final evacuation of the territory of the Mexican republic, by the forces of the U. States, shall be completed in three months from the said exchange of ratifications, or sooner if possible; the Mexican government hereby engaging, as in the foregoing article, to use all means in its power for facilitating such evacuation, and rendering it convenient to the troops, and for promoting a good understanding between them and the inhabitants.

If, however, the ratification of this treaty by both parties should not take place in time to allow the embarcation of the troops of the United States to be completed before the commencement of the sickly season at the Mexican ports on the Gulf of Mexico, in such case friendly arrangement shall be entered into between the general-in-chief of the said troops and the Mexican government, whereby healthy and otherwise suitable places at a distance from the ports not exceeding thirty leagues shall be designated for the residence of such troops as may not yet have embarked until the return of the healthy season. And the space of time here referred to as comprehending the sickly season shall be understood to extend from the first day of May to the first day of November.

All prisoners of war taken on either side, on land or on sea, shall be restored as soon as practicable after the exchange of ratifications of this treaty. It is also agreed that if any Mexicans should now be held as captives by any savage tribe within the limits of the United States, as about to be established by the following article, the government of the said United States will exact the release of such captives, and cause them to be restored to their country.

Article V.

The boundary line between the two republics shall commence in the gulf of Mexico, three leagues from land, opposite the mouth of the Rio Grande, otherwise called Rio Bravo del Norte, or opposite the mouth of its deepest branch, if it should have more than one branch emptying directly into the sea; from thence up the middle of that river, following the deepest channel, where it has more than one, to the point where it strikes the southern boundary of New Mexico; thence westwardly, along the whole southern boundary of N. Mexico (which runs north of the town called Paso) to its western termination; thence, northward, along the western line of New Mexico, until it intersects the first branch of the river Gila; (or if it should not intersect any branch of that river, then to the point on the said line nearest to such branch, and thence in a direct line to the same;) thence down the middle of the said branch and of the said river, until it empties into the Rio Colorado; thence across the Rio Colorado, following the division line between Upper and Lower California, to the Pacific ocean.

The southern and western limits of New Mexico, mentioned in this article, are those laid down in the map entitled "Map of the United Mexican States, as organized and defined by various acts of the Congress of said republic, and constructed according to the best authorities. Revised edition. Published at New York in 1847, by J. Disturnell." Of which map a copy is added to this treaty, bearing the signatures and seals of the undersigned plenipotentiaries. And, in order to preclude all difficulty in tracing upon the ground the limit separating Upper from Lower California, it is agreed that the said limit shall consist of a straight line drawn from the middle of the Rio Gila, where it unites with the Colorado, to a point on the coast of the Pacific ocean distant one marine league due south of the southernmost point of the port of San Diego, according to the plan of said port made in the year 1782 by Don Juan Pantoja, second sailing-master of the Spanish fleet, and published at Madrid in the year 1802, in the Atlas to the voyage of the schooners Sutil and Mexicana, of which plan a copy is hereunto added, signed and sealed by the respective plenipotentiaries.

In order to designate the boundary line with due precision, upon authoritatives maps, and to establish upon the ground landmarks which shall show the limits of both republics, as described in the pesent article, the two governments shall each appoint a commissioner and a surveyor, who, before the expiration of one year from the date of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty, shall meet at the port of San Diego, and proceed to run and mark the said boundary in its whole course to the mouth of the Rio Bravo del Norte. They shall keep journals and mark out plans of their operations, and the result agreed upon by them shall be deemed a part of this treaty, and shall have the same force as if it were inserted therein. The two governments will amicably agree regarding what may be necessary to these persons, also as to their respective escorts, should such be necessary.

The boundary line established by this article shall be religiously respected by each of the two republics, and no change shall ever be made therein, except by the express and free consent of both nations, lawfully given by the general government of each, in conformity with its own constitution.

Article VI.

The vessels and citizens of the U. States shall, in all time, have a free and uninterrupted passage by the gulf of California, and by the river Colorado below its confluence with the Gila, to and from their possessions situated north of the boundary line defined in the preceding article; it being understood that this passage is to be by navigating the gulf of California and the river Colorado, and not by land, without the express consent of the Mexican government.

If, by the examinations which may be made, it should be ascertained to be practicable and advantageous to construct a road, canal, or railway, which should in whole or in part run upon the river Gila, or upon its right or its left bank, within the space of one marine league from either margin of the river, the government of both republics will form an agreement regarding its construction, in order that it may serve equally for the use and advantage of both countries.

Article VII.

The river Gila, and the part of the Rio Bravo del Norte lying below the southern boundary of New Mexico, being, agreeably to the fifth article, divided in the middle between the two republics, the navigation of the Gila and of the Bravo below said boundary shall be free and common to the vessels and citizens of both countries; and neither shall, without the consent of the other, construct any work that may impede or interrupt, in whole or in part, the exercise of this right; not even for the purpose of favoring new methods of navigation. Nor shall any tax or contribution, under any denomination or title, be levied upon vessels or persons navigating the same, or upon merchandise or effects transported thereon, except in the case of landing upon one of their shores. If, for the purpose of making the said rivers navigable, or for maintaining them in such state, it should be necessary or advantageous to establish any tax or contribution, this shall not be done without the consent of both governments.

The stipulations contained in the present article shall not impair the territorial rights of either republic within its established limits.

Article VIII.

Mexicans now established in territories previously belonging to Mexico, and which remain for the future within the limits of the U. States, as defined by the present treaty, shall be free to continue where they now reside, or to remove at any time to the Mexican republic, retaining the property which they possess in the said territories, or disposing thereof, and removing the proceeds wherever they please, without their being subjected, on this account, to any contribution, tax, to charge whatever.

Those who shall prefer to remain in the said territories, may either retain the title and rights of Mexican citizens, or acquire those of citizens of the United States. But they shall be under the obligation to make their election within one year from the date of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty; and those who shall remain in the said territories after the expiration of that year, without having declared their intention to retain the character of Mexicans, shall be considered to have elected to become citizens of the United States.

In the said territories, property of every kind, now belonging to Mexicans not established there, shall be inviolably respected. The present owners, the heirs of these, and all Mexicans who may hereafter acquire said property by contract, shall enjoy with respect to it guaranties equally ample, as if the same belonged [illegible] United States.

Article IX.

Mexicans who, in the territories aforesaid, shall not preserve the character of citizens of the Mexican republic, conformably with what is stipulated in the preceding article, shall be incorporated into the union of the United States, and be admitted at the proper time (to be judged of by the Congress of the United States) to the enjoyment of all the rights of citizens of the United States, according to the principles of the constitution; and in the mean time shall be maintained and protected in the enjoyment of their liberty, and secured in the free exercise of their religion without restriction.

Article X.

[Stricken out.]

Article XI.

Considering that a great part of the territories which, by the present treaty, are to be comprehended for the future within the limits of the United States, is now occupied by savage tribes, who will hereafter be under the exclusive control of the government of the United States, and whose incursions within the territory of Mexico would be prejudicial in the extreme, it is solemnly agreed that all such incursions shall be forcibly restrained by the government of the United States whensoever this may be necessary; and that when they cannot be prevented, they shall be punished by the said government, and satisfaction for the same shall be exacted—all in the same way, and with equal diligence and energy, as if the same incursions were meditated or committed within its own territory, against its own citizens.

It shall not be lawful, under any pretext whatever, for any inhabitant of the United States to purchase or acquire any Mexican, or any foreigner residing in Mexico, who may have been captured by Indians inhabiting the territory of either of the two republics, nor to purchase or acquire horses, mules, cattle, or property of any kind, stolen within Mexican territory by such Indians.

And in the event of any person or persons, captured within Mexican territory by Indians, being carried into the territory of the U. States, the government of the latter engages and binds itself, in the most solemn manner, so soon as it shall know of such captives being within its territory, and shall be able so to do, through the faithful exercise of its influence and power, to rescue them and return them to their country, or deliver them to the agent or representative of the Mexican government. The Mexican authorities will, as far as practicable, give to the government of the U. States notice of such captures; and its agent shall pay the expenses incurred in the maintainance and transmission of the rescued captives; who, in the meantime, shall be treated with the utmost hospitality by the American authorities at the place where they may be. But if the government of the United States, before receiving such notice from Mexico, should obtain intelligence, through any other channel, of the existence of Mexican captives within its territory, it will proceed forthwith to effect their release and delivery to the Mexican agent as above stipulated.

For the purpose of giving to these stipulations the fullest possible efficacy, thereby affording the security and redress demanded by their true spirit and intent, the government of the U. States will now and hereafter pass, without unnecessary delay, and always vigilantly enforce, such laws as the nature of the subject may require. And finally, the sacredness of this obligation shall never be lost sight of by the said government when providing for the removal of the Indians from any portion of the said territories, or for its being settled by citizens of the U. States; but, on the contrary, special care shall then be taken not to place its Indian occupants under the necessity of seeking new homes, by committing those invasions which the United States have solemnly obligated themselves to restrain.

Article XII.

In consideration of the extension acquired by the boundaries of United States, as defined in the fifth article of the present treaty, the government of the United States engages to pay to that of the Mexican republic the sum of fifteen millions of dollars.

Immediately after this treaty shall have been duly ratified by the government of the Mexican republic, the sum of three millions of dollars shall be paid to the said government by that of the United States, at the city of Mexico, in the gold or silver coin of Mexico. The remaining twelve millions of dollars shall be paid at the same place, and in the same coin, in annual installments of three millions of dollars each, together with interest on the same to the rate of six per centum per annum. This interest shall begin to run upon the whole sum of twelve millions from the day of the ratification of the present treaty by the Mexican government, and the first of the instalments shall be paid at the expiration of one year from the same day. Together with each annual instalment, as it falls due, the whole interest accruing on such instalment from the beginning shall also be paid.

Article XIII.

The United States engage, moreover, to assume and pay to the claimants all the amounts now due them, and those hereafter to become due, by reason of the claims already liquidated and decided against the Mexican republic, under the conventions between the two republics severally concluded on the eleventh day of April, eighteen hundred and thirty-nine, and on the thirtieth day of January, eighteen hundred and forty-three: so that the Mexican republic shall be absolutely exempt, for the future, from all expense whatever on account of the said claims.

ARTICLE XIV.

The United States do furthermore discharge the Mexican republic from all claims of citizens of the United States not heretofore decided against the Mexican goverment, which may have arisen previously to the date of the signature of this treaty; which discharge shall be final and perpetual, whether the said claims be rejected or be allowed by the board of commissioners provided for in the following article, and whatever shall be the total amount of those allowed.

ARTICLE XV.

The United States, exonerating Mexico from all demands on account of the claims of their citizens mentioned in the preceding article, and considering them entirely and forever cancelled, whatever their amount may be undertake to make satisfaction for the same, to an amount not exceeding three and one quarter millions of dollars. To ascertain the validity and amount of those claims, a board of commissioners shall be established by the government of the U. States, whose awards shall be final and conclusive; provided, that in deciding upon the validity of each claim, the board shall be guided and governed by the principles and rules of decision prescribed by the first and fifth articles of the unratified convention concluded at the city of Mexico on the twentieth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and forty-three; and in no case shall an award be made in favor of any claim not embraced by these principles and rules.

If, in the opinion of the said board of commissioners, or the claimants, any books, records, or documents in the possession or power of the government of the Mexican republic, shall be deemed necessary to the just decision of any claim, the commissioners, or the claimants thro' them, shall, within such period as Congress may designate, make an application in writing for the same, addressed to the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs, to be transmitted by the Secretary of State of the United States; and the Mexican government engages, at the earliest possible moment after the receipt of such demand, to cause any of the books, records, or documents, so specified, which shall be in their possession or power, (or authenticated copies or extracts of the same,) to be transmitted to the said Secretary of State, who shall immediately deliver them over to the said board of commissioners: Provided, That no such application shall be made by, or at the instance of, any claimant, until the facts which it is expected to prove by such books, records, or documents, shall have been stated under oath or affirmation.

ARTICLE XVI.

Each of the contracting parties reserves to itself the entire right to fortify whatever point within its territory it may judge proper so to fortify for its security.

ARTICLE XVII.

The treaty of amity, commerce, and navigation, concluded at the city of Mexico on the fifth day of April, A. D. 1831, between the U. States of America and the United Mexican States, except the additional article, and except, so far as the stipulations of the said treaty may be incompatible with any stipulation contained in the present treaty, is hereby revived for the period of eight years from the day of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty, with the same force and virtue as if incorporated therein; it being understood that each of the contracting parties reserves to itself the right, at any time after the said period of eight years shall have expired, to terminate the same by giving one year's notice of such intention to the other party.

ARTICLE XVIII.

All supplies whatever for troops of the United States in Mexico, arriving at ports in the occupation of such troops previous to the final evacuation thereof, although subsequently to the restoration of the custom-houses at such ports, shall be entirely exempt from duties & charges of any kind; the government of the U. States hereby engaging and pledging its faith to establish, and vigilantly to enforce, all possible guards for securing the revenue of Mexico, by preventing the importation, under cover of this stipulation, of any articles other than such, both in kind and in quanty, as shall really be wanted for the use and consumption of the forces of the United States during the time they may remain in Mexico. To this end it shall be the duty of all officers and agents of United States to denounce to the Mexican authorities at the respective ports any attempts at a fraudulent abuse of this stipulation which they may know of, or may have reason to suspect, and to give to such authorities all the aid in their power with regard thereto; and every such attempt, when duly proved and established by sentence of a competent tribunal, shall be punished by the confiscation of the property so attempted to be fraudulently introduced.

ARTICLE XIX.

With respect to all merchandise, effects, and property whatsoever, imported into ports of Mexico whilst in the occupation of the forces of the United States, whether by citizens of either republic, or by citizens or subjects of any neutral nation, the following rules shall be observed:

1. All such merchandise, effects, and property, if imported previously to the restoration of the custom-houses to the Mexican authorities, as stipulated for in the third article of this treaty, shall be exempt from confiscation, although the importation of the same be prohibited by the Mexican tariff.

2. The same perfect exemption shall be enjoyed by all such merchandise, effects, and property, imported subsequently to the restoration of the custom-houses, and previously to the sixty days fixed in the following article for the coming into force of the Mexican tariff at such ports respectively; the said merchandise, effects, and property being, however, at the time of their importation, subject to the payment of duties, as provided for in the said following article.

3. All merchandise, effects, and property, described in the two rules foregoing, shall, during their continuance at the place of importation, and upon their leaving such place for the interior, be exempt from all duty, tax, or impost of every kind, under whatsoever title or denomination. Nor shall they be there subjected to any charge whatsoever upon the sale thereof.

4. All merchandise, effects, and property described in the first and second rules, which shall have been removed to any place in the interior whilst such place was in the occupation of the forces of the United States, shall, during their continuance therein, be exempt from all tax upon the sale or consumption thereof, and from every kind of impost or contribution, under whatsoever title or denomination.

5. But if any merchandise, effects, or property, described in the first and second rules, shall be removed to any place not occupied at the time by the forces of the United States, they shall, upon their introduction into such place, or upon their sale or consumption there, be subject to the same duties which, under the Mexican laws, they would be required to pay in such cases if they had been imported in time of peace, through the maritime custom-houses, and had there paid the duties conformably with the Mexican tariff.

6. The owners of all merchandise, effects, or property described in the first and second rules, and existing in any port of Mexico, shall have the right to reship the same, exempt from all tax, impost, or contribution whatever.

With respect to the metals, or other property, exported from any Mexican port whilst in the occupation of the forces of the United States, and previously to the restoration of the custom-house at such port, no person shall be required by the Mexican authorities, whether general or State, to pay any tax, duty, or contribution upon any such exportation, or in any manner to account for the same to the said authorities.

ARTICLE XX.

Through consideration for the interests of commerce generally, it is agreed, that if less than sixty days should elapse between the date of the signature of this treaty and the restoration of the custom-houses, conformably with the stipulation in third article, in such case all merchandise, effects, and property whatsoever, arriving at the Mexican ports after the restoration of the said custom-houses, and previously to the expiration of sixty days after the day of the signature of this treaty, shall be admitted to entry, and no other duties shall be levied thereon than the duties established by the tariff found in force at such custom-houses at the time of the restoration of the same. And to all such merchannise, effects, and property, the rules established by the preceding article shall apply.

ARTICLE XXI.

If unhappily any disagreement should hereafter arise between the governments of the two republics, whether with respect to the interpretation of any stipulation in this treaty, or with respect to any other particular concerning the political or commercial relations of the two nations, the said governments in the name of those do promise to each other that they will endeavor, in the most sincere and earnest manner, to settle the differences so arising, and to preserve the state of peace and friendship in which the two countries are now placing themselves; using, for this end, mutual representations and pacific negotiations. And if, by these means, they should not be enabled to come to an agreement, a resort shall not, on this account, be had to reprisals, aggression, or hostility of any kind, by the one republic against the other, until the government of that which deems itself aggrieved shall have maturely considered, in the spirit of peace and good neighborship, whether it would not be better that such difference should be settled by the arbitration of commissioners appointed on each side, or by that of a friendly nation. And should such course be proposed by either party, it shall be acceded to by the other, unless deemed by it altogether incompatible with the nature of the difference, or the circumstances of the case.

ARTICLE XXII.

If (which is not to be expected, & which God forbid!) war shall unhappily break out between the two republics, they do now, with a view to such calamity, solemnly pledge themselves to each other and to the world, to observe the following rules: absolutely, where the nature of the subject permits, and as closely as possible in all cases where such absolute observance shall be impossible.

1. The merchants of either republic then residing in the other, shall be allowed to remain 12 months, (for those dwelling in the interior,) and 6 months (for those dwelling at the seaports,) to collect their debts and settle their affairs: during which periods they shall enjoy the same protection, and be on the same footing, in all respects, as the citizens or subjects of the most friendly nations; and, at the expiration thereof, or at any time before, they shall have full liberty to depart, carrying off all their effects without molestation or hinderance: conforming therein to the same laws which the citizens or subjects of the most friendly nations are required to conform to. Upon the entrance of the armies of either nation into the territories of the other, women and children, ecclesiastics, scholars of every faculty, cultivators of the earth, merchants, manufacturers, and fishermen, unarmed and inhabiting unfortified towns, villages, or places, and in general all persons whose occupations are for the common subsistence and benefit of mankind, shall be allowed to continue their respective employment unmolested in their persons. Nor shall their houses or goods be burnt or otherwise destroyed, nor their cattle taken, nor their fields wasted, by the armed force into whose power, by the events of war, they may happen to fall; but if the necessity arise to take anything from them for the use of such armed force, the same shall be paid for at an equitable price. All churches, hospitals, schools, colleges, libraries, and other establishments, for charitable and beneficient purposes, shall be respected, and all persons connected with the same protected in the discharge of their duties, & the pursuit of their vocations.

2. In order that the fate of prisoners of war may be alleviated, all such practices as those of sending them into distant, inclement, or unwholesome districts, or crowding them into close and noxious places, shall be studiously avoided. They shall not be confined in dungeons, prison-shops, or prisons; nor be put in irons, or bound, or otherwise restrained in the use of their limbs. The officers shall enjoy liberty on their paroles, within convenient districts, and have comfortable quarters; and the common solders shall be disposed in cantonments, open and extensive enough for air and exercise, and lodged in barracks as roomy and good as are provided by the party in whose power they are, for its own troops. But if any officers shall break his parole by leaving the district so assigned him, or any other prisoner shall escape from the limits of his cantonment, after they shall have designated to him, such individual, officer, or other prisoner, shall forfeit so much of the benefit of this article as provides for his liberty on parole or in cantonment. And if any officer so breaking his parole, or any common soldier so escaping from the limits assigned him, shall afterwards be found in arms, previously to his being regularly exchanged, the persen so offending shall be dealt with according to the established laws of war. The officers shall be daily furnished by the party in whose power they are, with as many rations, and of the same articles, as are allowed, either in kind or by commutation, to officers of equal rank in its own army; and all others shall be daily furnished with such ration as is allowed to a common soldier in its own service: the value of all which supplies shall, at the close of the war, or at periods to be agreed upon between the respective commanders, be paid by the other party, on a mutual adjustment of accounts for the subsistence of prisoners; and such accounts shall not be mingled with or set off against any others, nor the balance due on them be withheld as a compensation or reprisal for any cause whatever, real or pretended. Each party shall be allowed to keep a commissary of prisoners, appointed by itself, with every cantonment of prisoners in possession of the other; which commissary shall see the prisoners as often as he pleases; shall be allowed to receive, exempt from all duties or taxes, and to distribute whatever comforts may be sent to them by their friends; and shall be free to transmit his reports in open letters to the party by whom he is employed.

And it is declared that neither the pretence that war dissolves all treaties, nor any other whatever, shall be considered as annulling or suspending the solemn covenant contained in this article. On the contrary, the state of war is precisely that for which it is provided, and during which its stipulations are to be as sacredly observed as the most acknowledged obligations under the law of nature or nations.

ARTICLE XXIII.

This treaty shall be ratfied by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof; and by the President of the Mexican republic, with the previous approbation of its general Congress: and the ratification shall be exchanged in the city of Washington, or at the seat of government of Mexico, in four months from the date of the signature thereof, or sooner if practicable.

In faith whereof, we, the respective plenipotentiaries, have signed this treaty of peace, friendship, limits, and settlement; and have hereunto affixed our seals respectively. Done in quintuplicate, at the city of Gaudalupe Hidalgo, on the second day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eighteen hundred and forty-eight.

N. P. TRIST, [L. S.]
LUIS G. CUEVAS, [L. S.]
BERNARDO COUTO, [L. S.]
MIGL ATRISTAIN, [L. S.]

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, August 17, 1848.

☞Rev. Geo. Brown, the President, requests us to announce that Rev. James Robinson is held for the opening sermon for the ensuing Session of the Pittsburgh Conference, at 9 o'clock.

THE TREATY.—We have had it in view to publish this important document, ever since its ratification, but have been waiting for a convenient opportunity, by first disposing of a considerable amount of communications on hand. We place it before our readers this week, using for copy the Washington Union, (government paper.) There will doubtless be a general wish to become acquainted with its provisions.

FATHER MATHEW.—This so called apostle of Temperance in Ireland, we are told, is about to visit this country. His name has acquired considerable popularity, from the repute of his having administered the pledge to so many thousands. We apprehend that he will be honored and glorified here, beyond his deserving. From information communicated to us by an intelligent clergymen recently from Ireland, we understand that this Theobald Mathew is not only a cunning Jesuit, but a dishonest man. Our Irish friend vouches for the following statement. Mathew employed an artist to cast medals of two kinds; one plain, at two cents, which he sold at about 25 cents, another more valuable, at about one dollar, and sold them for about three dollars. Great multitudes received these medals at his hand, so that he must have taken up immense sums of money by the operation. Meanwhile the artist who cast the medals, could not get his pay, though he presented his bill amounting to three thousand pounds, again and again for settlement. He finally had his reverence arrested and imprisoned. The report was now diligently circulated that the great and good Father Mathew had broken himself purchasing medals. Sympathy was at once excited abroad, and great sums were made up, amounting finally to some five thousand pounds, when the devoted dupes of the Jesuit, as our friend represents, paid off the claim of these three thousand pounds, and handed over to Mathew the remaining clever sum of two thousand pounds, or about ten thousand dollars. Wonder if his reverence will not find dupes in this country to buy his medals, kneeling at his foot as in Ireland, and load him with a rich reward in cash for his visit to America.

ASTONISHING IMPROVEMENT.—We learn by an extra of the Anglo-Saxon, that the publishers of that paper are about to issue in pamphlet, the proceedings entire of the Buffalo Free Soil Convention, taken down by Mr. O. Dyer, the celebrated Phonographic Verbatim Reporter. They say: "The report will be the most accurate ever made of any deliberative body. It will contain word for word, the whole proceedings of the Convention, from the time it is called to order, to its adjournment, sine die—including not only the motions, speeches, &c., of the Delegates, but also the feelings exhibited, and the passing remarks, the interruptions by the audience, and every other symptom of satisfaction and dissatisfaction incidental to a large radical and revolutionary Convention."

The publishers desire to spread this publication abroad throughout the United States, for the purpose of proving the "vast superiority of Phonography over every other system of quick writing." This is certainly a great experiment, and if successful, (of which we feel quite confident,) it will be found an improvement in the art of reporting, worthy of general attention and patronage. Periodical and News Agents, and others, will do well to send their orders in season, to Andrews & Boyle, Spruce Street, New York.—Price, 12½ cents. $8 per hundred to the trade.

GODEY'S LADIES BOOK.—The September number is received. The embellishments are Dr. Johnson's first interview with Oliver Goldsmith; Jessie; My Mistress's Bonnett; Fashion plate, Music, Model Cottages, Ladies Work Department, &c., &c. Mr. Godey takes the lead for engravings. Three dollars in advance procures a copy of the "Book," and also a copy of the Ladies' Dollar Newspaper. Single numbers of the Monthly are sent for 25 cents, post paid. L. A. Godey, Publisher, Philadelphia.

Putnam Female Seminary.

From the Annual Catalogue of this Institution, just published, we take the following abstract.

Miss Mary Cone, Principal and Teacher of Mental and Moral Philosophy. Miss M. A. Bailey, Teacher of Chemistry, Botany and Geology. Miss M. F. Sanborn, Teacher of Mathematics, Natural Philosophy and Astronomy. Miss C. S. Humphrey, Teacher of Primary Department. Mr. F. Timmell, Teacher of Languages, Drawing and Painting. Mr. H. D. Munson, Teacher of Vocal and Instrumental Music. None are admitted as members of the Institution under fourteen years of age. The course of Instruction occupies four years exclusive of preparatory studies. Those who do not wish to study the languages can complete the English course in three years, and receive a certificate of the same. The Bible will be studied throughout the course. The Seminary building is a brick edifice 110 feet long, by 45 wide, and three stories high; and was erected and fitted up expressly for this object, at an expence of twenty thousand dollars.

Terms, &c. The year is divided into two terms, one of twenty-five, the other of sixteen weeks. Two vacations in the year. The winter term will commence Wednesday, October 4th, and close, March 29th next. The summer term will commence Wednesday, April 20, 1849, and close August 9th following. Tuition. Winter Term, $12 00. Summer Term, $8 00. Extra charges for Music, Drawing and Painting, and French. Expenses. For board, washing and a seperate room for every two pupils, furnished, lighted and warmed (when necessary) $2 00 per week for the winter term, and $1 75 for the summer term. Those who do their own washing, are allowed 25 cents deduction per week. Bills paid in advance for the short term, and half in advance for the long term. The Primary Department is designed for pupils under fourteen years of age. Tuition. Winter Term, $6 00. Summer Term, $4 00. Putnam, where this Institution is situated is a pleasant, and remarkably healthy village, on the west bank of the Muskingum river, opposite Zanesville, with which it is connected by a convenient bridge.

WESLEYANS IN THE SOUTH.—A call having been received from North Carolina for a minister, the last Allegheny Conference of the W. M. Connection sent Rev. A. Crooks to labor there. Without delay, he proceeded across a wide spread mountain region to that far off destination, and soon entered upon his duties. We believe that he met with little serious opposition. In the last number of the True Wesleyan we find a letter from Br. C. stating that he now has 140 members, having had an increase of 100 since his commencement last fall. On the 1st inst., when he wrote, he was upon the point of starting for Ohio, as the time of Conference is at hand.

THE QUESTION SETTLED—ANIMAL MAGNETISM A SCIENCE.—The Ohio State Journal gives information of a rare suit case which recently came off at Columbus. The charter of that city authorises the city Council to exact license money for all lectures by travelling lecturers, when the lectures are not scientific. Mr. Keely, a travelling Mesmerizer, paid license for the privilege of lecturing there, and afterwards brought suit against the city, to recover back the money he had paid for license, upon the claim that his lectures were scientific. Facts of a surprising character were elicited from physicians and others under oath. The city finally concluded, by advice of counsel to pay back the money. This, of course determines Animal Magnetism to be a science in the latitude of the capital of Ohio.

U. S. CONGRESS.

Senate, July 29.

A motion was made to take up the bill granting a tract of land to Asa Whitney for the purpose of constructing a railroad from Lake Michigan to the Pacific Ocean. Messrs. Hale and Benton opposed the motion, stating they could never consent to give away one hundred millions of acres to one man at a swoop. Messrs. Niles and Bell favored the motion. Mr. Benton moved to lay the motion on the table, which was carried. Yeas, 27.—Nays, 21.

House, August 2.

The discussion on the bill to establish a territorial government in Oregon was terminated.—The House refused to pass an amendment striking out the Wilmot Proviso, by a vote of 88 Yeas, to 114 Nays. The bill was then passed, Yeas, 129.—Nays, 71.

Senate, August 3.

The Civil and Diplomatic bill being under consideration, an amendment was adopted, inserting an appropriation of $50,000 to extinguish the claims of the Spanish Government, (i. e. for the value of the Armistad Captives!) Yeas, 24.—Nays, 21. We hope that for the cause of justice and the honor of the country, the House will disagree to this enactment.

SEARS' MAGAZINE.—We have received a double number for August and September. It is full of solid, instructive reading matter, and contains numerous interesting embellishments. Terms of the Magazine, $2, in advance. Address Robert Sears, New York.

THE WREATH.—The July number is now received, having missed us at the ordinary time. It contains an excellent mezzotint engraving of Gallileo in Prison. The persecuted philosopher is represented as a man of shrewdness and penetration. He is immured in the prison of the Inquisition, by decree of an ecclesiastical court, for the then strange and heretical doctrine of the rotundity and mobility of the earth. Yet in the confinement of his cell he is drawing diagrams upon the wall, in illustration of his favorite theory.—A painted flower also accompanies each number of the Wreath, and a piece of Music. Like that of Sears' the reading matter is solid and instructive. $1 per annum. J. Van Court, Publisher, Philadelphia.

THE WASHINGTON TRIALS.

The trial of the prisoners of the Pearl, commenced before the U. S. Criminal Court, on the 27th ult. Daniel Drayton, Supercargo of the Schooner, was first arraigned under the charge of feloniously stealing and carrying away two slaves of the value of one thousand dollars, of the goods and chattels of one Andrew Hoover. The Baltimore Sun gives the following account of the opening of the trial.

Mr. Key appeared alone for the U. States; Hon. H. Mann, D. A. Hall, Esq., and James M. Carlisle, Esq., counsel for Drayton & Sears; Ratcliffe, Esq., for English.

Before the jury was sworn, Mr. Mann rose and stated that he had a preliminary motion to make, viz: that as the Government had framed two sets of indictments, the court should direct the attorney of the U. S. to elect which set of cases he should try, & that after so doing, an entry of acquittal should be made on the other cases. He supported his motion briefly. Mr. Key replied, and Mr Carlisle followed in support of the motion. Mr. C. commented with earnestness upon the point of law, and urged as a reason why the court should interfere to prevent this double charging, the enormous expense of four thousand dollars costs, unnecessarily accrued, to the Government, by this system of charging different offences upon one state of facts.

Mr. Key here rose, and with much warmth repelled any inference that he had, for his own ends, framed these double indictments. He said he cared not what the cost was—if it were fifty, or a hundred thousand dollars, & if he thought it necessary, he would not hesitate a moment to promote the ends of justice, even if he were put out of office the next day for so doing.

The Court, in a long opinion and review of the cases cited, decided that it could not direct the District Attorney to elect, although personally, his Honor said, he was opposed to the practice, which has been unbroken in this court. Mr. Carlisle then claimed a right to challenge peremptorily twenty jurors. Mr. Key objected; and point argued on the meaning of the 4th section of the act of Maryland of 1737, ch. 2.—This act makes the offence punishable by death, and of course the right to challenge accrued; the act of Congress makes such offences punishable by imprisonment. The United States contended that the right to challenge is only in favorem vitæ; this case not being punishable by death, therefore the right to challenge does not attach. The Court sustained the objection. The defence took an exception. The jurors were then sworn.

Mr. Key opened the case in a brief exposition of the law, and of the nature of the offence, and its alarming character, and a statement of the evidence.

The examination of witnesses, and the arguments of counsel for the plaintiff and for the prisoner, occupied a full week, and closed on the eighth day. The verdict of the jury after twenty one hours deliberation was, Guilty. Drayton is on trial under a second indictment.

MARKETS.

LATEST DATES.

Putnam & Zanesville—Flour, $4.00; Wheat, 65; Corn, 30; Oats, 19;

Cincinnati—Flour, $3.60@3.70; Wheat, 00; Corn, 00; Oats, 00.

Pittsburgh—Flour, $4.12@4.25; Wheat, 80; Oats, 30.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Once more, before the close of this conference year, it is my painful duty to record the death of another dear sister belonging to this station.—Oft, indeed, since my sojourn in this city, has the pale horse and his rider been permitted by Providence to enter our peaceful fold; and as oft has some precious spirit been taken hence!—The insatiate archer, it should seem, with wily eye, has levelled his fatal darts at the selectest members of the flock. And how unerring his aim! Aye, who can stay his hand, resist his force, or ward off his mortal stroke? Our estimable and exemplary Sister consort of Br. William Barnhill, is now with Christ in Paradise. Though quite unexpectedly, yet sofily and safely, she passed over Jordan, on July 13, 1848, in the 45th year of her age.

LYDIA BARNHILL,

Sister Barnhill united with the Methodist Protestant Church in the year 1837, and sustained a uniform and consistent christian character to the day of her death. As a wife and a mother she was an example to her sex. She loved her own home; and there she gladly greeted her friends. And in one prime respect, particularly, was she a pattern to professors of religion, viz: the complete mastery she had over that most unruly and mischievous of all our members, the tongue!—If a matter was spoken in her hearing, that could possibly do harm by being spread abroad, with the sacred confidence of a CHRISTIAN was it kept close, and not revealed to another confidant.—Who ever knew of Sister Lydia Barnhill's name being brought in question on account of tattle? Would to God, in this respect, all were like her.

But the best of families, not unfrequently, suffer the severest afflictions. How inscrutable are the ways of Providence to human reason! But here is the Christian's joy and hope, he knows that whatever He does, is right. During the last three years, what an amount of affliction has befallen the family of Br. Barnhill. Yet, doubtless, all designed for good. And this the light of eternity will reveal. In less than three years, 'thrice has their peace been slain.' Two very interesting daughters were first taken away by death, and now the wife and mother! The latter of the daughters, Catharine, a young woman of rare amiability, and a devoted Christian, a member of the Episcopal Methodist Church, loved and admired by all, was brought to the grave's mouth a year ago; but, it appeared, in answer to prayer, was raised again. Last spring she was again brought low; and after an illness of a few weeks, she sweetly fell asleep in the arms of the Savior. And about two months after, the mother was suddenly taken with the Bilious Fever, which shortly assumed a typhoid character, then soon and suddenly was she numbered with the dead. Leaving a husband and four children in great distress, to realize their loss. And the burden of responsibility in the family now mainly rests upon a young daughter, who has been greatly afflicted for several years. May the Lord sanctify these afflictive visitations to the spiritual and eternal good of the surviving members, that finally they may be a "whole family in heaven!"

W. REEVES.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 9, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Another Sabbath-School Celebration.

BROTHER BASSETT,—DEAR SIR: As you were not out to the Sunday-School Celebration last week, at Springfield Chapel; perhaps it may not be improper for me to give you a brief account of it.

Undoubtedly you recollect that the Chapel, five miles west of this place, is situated on the verge of a beautiful grove, which seems to have been left from the encroachment of the husbandman, on purpose for such an occasion; and one could not help thinking, in entering this cool and shady retreat, of a kind Providence which has so richly provided for all our necessary wants. "Man made the city, but God made the country."

At ten o'clock, the schools which had already arrived formed a procession, and went out to meet, and escort in the schools from Gratiot.—When I arrived at the Grove what should be heard but the sweet sounds of vocal music from the returning procession.

As they turned off into the grove, pains were taken by one of the spectators to count them as they passed in; from this fact we are permitted to say that the procession amounted to not far from 500. Rustic seats and a treat of cold water were very acceptable to the children on their return. The audience was then called to order by the Marshall (R. Cowan.) when the exercises were commenced by singing and prayer.

Brother Dustin of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was announced, to address the Children & Teachers. I cannot begin to give you a report of his remarks but they were very appropriate, and interspersed with anecdotes, reminiscences, &c., of an interesting nature, calculated to encourage the heart and cheer the mind of his large and attentive audience. As he closed, they were called to their feet, and united in singing another hymn which fairly made the grove vocal with echoes.

Brother Hoagland of the Metho dist Protestant Church was then introduced, to address the Pacents, which was done in a masterly manner. He was very happy in his remarks, and made us feel that it is a glorious work in which we are engaged, and that in future we must be more efficient, more devoted, more faithful.—In short, both of the speakers evidently showed that the Sunday-School efforts had not been lost upon THEM, but were well versed in all its operations.

After singing another hymn the audience was invited (by an old friend of Sunday Schools,) to raise a collection for the purpose of defraying the incidental expenses. They appeared to give liberally; it being understood that the nine schools present were to share equally in the ballance that might be left after paying the incidentals, which ballance was to help in replenishing their respective libraries.

The children, and in fact the whole congregation partook of the refreshments with a zest and relish not to be mistaken.

The exercises were closed by singing the beautiful parting hymn in the Union Hymn Book 527.

"How pleasant thus to dwell below."

The children conducted with a great deal of decorum through the whole of the exercises, & a happy impression was visible upon every countenance.

Had you been present, dear Sir, you could not but have shared in the general good feeling which seemed to prevail.

Yours truly,

J. M.

Putnam, August 14, 1848.

News of the Week.

BURNING OF THE STEAMER WHITE ROSE.—We have received a Cairo Delta Extra, of the 25th, containing the following item of news:

"This morning about 1 o'clock, the Louisville and Cairo packet White Rose caught fire, at our wharf, and was quickly consumed. The fire is supposed to have been communicated to the Ladies' cabin by some one in search of the musquito bars.

"She was pushed off from the wharf boat Mazeppa, and floating out in the middle of the Ohio, then burned to the water's edge."

The White Rose was owned and commanded by Captain Goodrich, and not insured to the amount of a cent. She had on board two hundred tons freight owned principally in Louisville, and partly by the Captain.

Fortunately no lives were lost.

Indian War.—The Lake Superior News of the 24th ult., mentions a sanguinary encounter between a party of Chippeways and Sioux in the vicinity of Sandy Lake. The Chippeways, about eighty in number, were out on a fishing excursion, and unarmed, when they were surprised by a war party of the Sioux, who massacred some seventy af the number, among whom was young Hole-in-the-day. The Chippeways at the Point seemed bent on the most summary vengeance.

Allegheny.—We understand the Councils of the city of Allegheny, have passed resolutions enjoining the Mayor to employ whatever force he may deem necessary to preserve the peace. They have also appropriated one thousand dollars for the purpose of aiding in the apprehension of those engaged in the assault of the operatives in the Penn Factory, on Monday last.

Arrests.—Up to eight o'clock last night, sixteen persons, ten males and six females had been arrested, under charge of being concerned in the factory riot of Monday last, of them only two commitments had been made; the remainder were discharged on bail.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

Bank Failure.

The Canal Bank at Albany has failed, which has created some uneasiness in the public mind in regard to others. It is a Safety Fund Bank, one of the oldest in that State, and as it is one of a league of banks, having no deposite of securities as a guarantee for the payment of its notes, as the free banks have, there is some apprehension least its failure may be the forerunner of several more; as there are a number of the Safety Fund Banks in the interior of the State that have a large circulation in proportion to the specie in their possession.

Some hard cases are related of losses consequent upon this failure. In one case a forwarding house which had $13.000 in the bank on deposite, loaned the bank its draft on New York for $30,000 more, on the plea that the bank was temporarily short. The whole amount is swallowed up. In another case, a director drew his check for $3.500, and when he presented it he was pursuaded to lend the bank his note for the same amount, which was passed off as cash, and he can now pay it with the money he received on his check. It is stated that $50 000 of tellers' checks were found among the cash items. The following banks had deposits in the Canal Bank: Bank of Geneva, $70,000; Bank of Ithaca. $50, 000; Seneca Co. Bank, $30,000; Ogdensburg Bank, $25.000; Lewis Co. Bank, $12,000; Iron Bank, Conn., $30,000.

There were some twenty other Banks which had accounts there, making an aggregate of over $300,000 of balances.—Van Court's Count. Detector.

Rev. Joshua Monroe is appointed Presiding Elder of the Allegheny District, in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in place of Rev. J. W. Miner, deceased.

Important from Washington.—The Hudson Bay Company, it is stated in dispatches from Washington to the eastern papers, have made proposals to our government to sell out all their possessions. The proposition was discussed on Friday in secret session of the Senate.—Balt. Sun.

Francisco de Arrangois, a special commissioner from the Mexican government, passed thro' Mobile on the 25th ult., on his way to Washington. The particular object of his mission was not learned.

An Important Decision was made one day last week, in our county court, by Judge Magruder, which is likely to affect seriously the interest of our farmers and planters. The decision was made in the case of Pike & Neale, (plaintiffs) vs. Chandler Shaw, (defendent). Suit was brot by the plaintiffs against the defendent to recover the amount of a certain draft, which they said they had accepted and paid upon the faith of a promise by defendent to consign to them certain produce, out of which the amount of the draft was to be deducted. The plaintiffs attempted to prove that the draft was merely an accommodation and not a draft for value received; but in the absence of testimony to that effect, the counsel for the defendent prayed the court to instruct the jury that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover, which prayer was granted, and the Judge instructed the jury accordingly.

This decision must necessarily produce a change in the usual mode of doing business, and make commission merchants much more careful in future in granting accommodations to their agricultural friends where the mere promise of an individual is the only security given.—Port Tobacco (Md.) Times.

The Suspension Bridge.—Completion of the Foot Way.—The suspension bridge is no longer a mere picture on paper, but a magnificent reality. To-day the entire foot-way, over a thousand feet in length, and two feet in width, will be completed, and before sunset Mr. Ellet will have driven across it with a horse and buggy. Hereafter it will be used as a common highway between the dominions of Her Majesty and those belonging to Uncle Sam, and any staunch royalist or sturdy republican can walk across it on payment of 25 cents.

The towers for the great bridge will be commenced forthwith, just in rear of those that sustain the cables for the foot bridge, and before the year 1850 shall be numbered among the past, the whole work will probably be completed, and a train of cars will pass over it. The main difficulties are already overcome; hereafter all will be plain sailing.

The number of those who visit the bridge as a matter of curiosity is quite large, and the income derived from that source is sufficient to pay a handsome interest on the amount expended.—Buffalo Courier of Saturday.

Terrible and Destructive Tornado.—A destructive tornado commenced in Ripley, Maine, on Thursday last. It commenced its destruction on a space about ten rods wide, which kept increasing to the width of half a mile, and nearly fifteen miles long, passing through Dexter and into Garland. Fifteen houses were completely demolished in the town of Ripley. A schoolhouse, with the scholars assembled, was lifted and turned round. A large barn and other buildings in Dexter, were destroyed and scattered out of sight. A large rock was rolled over. Great hemlock and other trees were twisted off, and whirled with fearful force high in the air. Crops, fences, stone walls, and everything in its course were swept to instant destruction. It was accompanied by a loud and startling roar.

Drowned.—An interesting little boy, about 6 years of age, named George Robinson, son of Mr. J. Robinson, currier, in Thames street Fell's Point, was accidently drowned in the dock, near Kerr's wharf, yesterday afternoon. He was in a boat with three men, as we understood, and fell overboard.—There were a hundred persons on and about the wharf, but whatever effort they made was ineffectual to save him. The body was recovered in about thirty minutes, too late for resuscitation, as every means were used for that purpose. Coroner Conway held an inquest, and a verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts.

New Flour Mills in Michigan.—We see it stated that within the last eighteen months not far from sixty new flouring mills have been erected in Michigan. There is an immense surplus of grain in the peninsular State, particularly in the northern part, but the erection of so many new mills will have the effect of causing a less amount from that region to reach Buffalo in the berry, than heretofore. In Macomb county alone nine mills, with forty runs of stone, commence business this fall.—Rochester Courier.

Burnt at Sea.—The whale-ship Cassander, of Providence, Captain Dewing, was burnt at sea on the first of May, in lat. 34 S., lon. 45 W. The crew took to the boats and were ten days without food, during which time two men died. They then succeeded in reaching St. Martha Grande, and prompt measures were taken by the President of the Province of Laguna for the relief of the sufferers,

PITCAIRN'S ISLAND.

The Honolulu (Sandwich Island) Friend, of May 1st, has among its advertisements, a card of Mr. George Nobbs, for many years pastor and schoolmaster on Pitcairn's Island, who seeks employment at Honolulu, with a view to the removal there of his family of ten children—the arable part of Pitcairn's Island being too small to produce a supply of food adequate to the necessities of the rising generation. Mr. Nobbs, in a private communication to the editor of the Friend, gives the following information:

"More than twenty years ago, I left England for the express purpose of visiting Pitcairn's Island, and to remain there if I could render my talents available to the inhabitants. The proprietor of a small vessel of but eighteen tons burthen, hearing me express my anxiety to obtain a passage to Pitcairn's Island, remarked, it was a spot he had long desired to visit, and if I would assist him in fitting out his vessel, he would go with me. I accepted his proposal, advanced him what money I could command, and embarked from Callao de Lima, with no other person than the owner of the little cutter, and in six weeks arrived here in safety.

"Five months after my arrival, John Adams departed this life. After his decease, the superintendence of the spiritual affairs of the island, and the education of the children, devolved on me chiefly; and from that time to the present, (with the exception of ten months, during which period I was banished from the Island by brute force, and recalled by letters of penitential apology,) I have been with them, and have lived to see the labor of my hands prosper; for there is not a person on the Island, between the ages of six years and twenty-five, who has not received, or is not receiving, a tolerable education.

"There is one untoward but prominent object on the horizon of paternal affection, and which, though imperceptibly, yet rapidly approaches our increasing colony, and that is the imperious necessity of a separation; for so very limited are the available portions of the island, that some families who number ten or twelve persons, have not five acres of arable land to divide among them.

"Animal food is a luxury obtained with difficulty once or twice in the week, and though we have, by dint of very hard labor, been enabled to obtain cloth and other indispensable necessaries from whale ships in exchange for potatoes, yet this resource is beginning to fail us; not from scarcity of visitors, but from inability on our part to supply them.

"This is the exact state of affairs at present; how much it will be aggravated ten years from this may be imagined, but cannot be fully realized even by ourselves. Whether the British Government will again interest itself in our behalf is doubtful; if it does not, despite the most assiduous industry, a scanty allowance of potatoes and salt—the Tibuta and Maro will be the unchanging food and raiment of the rising generation."

The Largest Yet.—The Fifth street market yesterday was the largest ever seen in this city—the wagons numbering upwards of one thousand, extending westward to Smith street. In all of the cross-streets, there were also a number of wagons, and for two squares they occupied both sides of the way. When it is considered that every pound of eatables which is displayed in our markets is sold, a good idea may be formed of the extent of the city. To look upon the long trains of wagons pouring into the city from every quarter and by every road, one wonders that enough of people can be found to consume it, and for the most part, in one day: yet, again it is a matter of equal wonder with those who move through our streets, encountering the busy thousands, where enough of provisions can be found to feed them.—Cin. Com,

Great Robbery.

The Little Miami Railroad office, at the depot, was broken into night before last, and robbed of money to the amount of $2.800 and $3,000! The rascals effected entrance into the office by cutting a hole in the door-jam in which to get a bearing with a piece of rail-iron, and with this they pryed the door open. They broke open three drawers in the desk, and finding the key of the iron safe, opened it. Of the amount stolen, $550 was in gold and silver, the balance in paper.

Connected with this robbery is one singular circumstance. The watchman who slept in the building is missing, and a bullet, supposed to be from his pistol, was found lodged in the woodwork.—Some think that being awakened by the noise, he had fired at the thieves, and is now in pursuit of them. It is singular that he should not have awakened upon the crash of the door; but, doutless, accustomed to the rumbling of the cars he could not be awakened by ordinary sounds; and probably too, the burglars made more noise in opening the drawers and safe, than in breaking open the door, two or three chisels, entirely new, used no doubt by the thieves, were found lying upon the floor.—Cincinnati Commercial.

That Rolling Mill.—On Friday last, we stopped a few minutes to take a view of the Rolling Mill and Nail Factory now in process of erection in that part of the town. The main stack, sixty feet in height is completed, besides which there will be, when in full operation, twelve or fifteen others, thirty-five feet in height; but how many of these will be at once put up, we are not advised. They have been much detained by the contractor for the timber not meeting his engagement; but they expect to be supplied in a few days with the remainder, when a much stronger force of hands will be put on, and the work crowded to completion. The building is one hundred and seventy feet in length, by one hundred and twenty in breadth, being much larger than the largest iron establishment in Pitsburg; and taking the iron in the pig, they will turn it out in every variety of Cut, Rolled or in Nails. The work will be partly under way this fall, and by spring they expect to employ from one hundred to two hundred hands. The works will then be extended as may be thought proper. The owners are of the go-ahead school, and are entitled to the warmest wishes of the public for their success.—Z. Gazette.

Drowned.—On Monday last, Simeon, son of Edward Langly, was drowned by falling into the river, near Bishop's Boat Yard. He was about nine years of age, and though the body was very soon recovered it could not be restored to life.—Zanesville Gazette.

☞When Dr. Franklin applied to the King of Prussia to lend his assistance to America, it is said that the King asked, "what object would you attain?" "Liberty, Sire," said the Dr., "which is the birth-right of all men." "I was born as a prince and am become a king," was the answer. "and will not use the power I possess, to ruin my own trade."

The answer was worthy the frankness of the King; yet Liberty is a plant which is not confined to one soil or country but easily acclimated. The King of Prussia has at length found his trade becoming unpopular. The present King has concluded that it is best to use his power to foster the liberty which his ancestor feared.

Melancholy Accident.

On Saturday evening, as the train of cars from Washington was proceeding towards this city, a melancholy occurrence took place, which resulted in the death of a man named Richard Barry, of Laurel. When the train arrived at the short curve within a quarter of a mile of the Annapolis junction, the deceased was discovered lying diagonally across the track, with his head resting on one of the rails, and notwithstanding the engineer immediately reversed the engine, and did all within his power to prevent the train from advancing, the cars passed over him, mangling his body in the most dreadful manner. It appears that about fifteen minutes previous the deceased started from the junction, in the direction of the curve, in a state of intoxication, and was warned of his danger, which he either did not comprehend or wholly disregarded. The conductor, Mr. Ferry, had his remains removed to the junction house, and gave them in charge to Mr. Thos. Owings, the agent of the railroad company, who had them conveyed to the residence of his family, near the Avondale Factory, and has made every arrangement for their interment, sparing no pains in alleviating the distress of the family and relieving them from all expense consequent upon this mournful event. The deceased was about forty-five years of age, and leaves a widow and seven children, in indigent circumstances, to mourn his untimely end. An inquest was held over his body by John M. Capron, Esq., who rendered a verdict in accordance with the above fact, unanimously agreeing the accident was unavoidable, not the least blame attaching to the conductor or any one connected with the train. —Balt. Sun.

Distinguished Arrivals.

The famous Kit Carson, bearer of dispatches from California, arrived in Baltimore on Friday evening, and stopped at Barnum's until Saturday morning, when he departed for Washington.—It is expected he will return to Baltimore to-day. Commodore Stockton, of the United States Navy, arrived here on Saturday, from Washington, and stopped at the United States Hotel, until last evening, when he took the evening train of cars for Philadelphia. The Hon. John M. Clayton, and Captain Edwards, U. S. Army, also arrived here, and stopped at the United States Hotel.—Mr. Crayton proceeded in the evening train of yesterday for Philadelphia.

"The Court of Inquiry," we suppose, is happily at an end. The day to which it adjourned, (1st August) is passed, and, hearing nothing of it, the conclusion is that the only remaining charges (General Scott's against General Worth) are in effect withdrawn, and the Court discharged from their consideration.—Balt. Sun.

An Emigrant's Suffering.

The little narrative we give below, the New York Express is assured is an "o'er true tale." A strange fatality seems to have followed the poor wanderers as soon as they set foot upon our shores:

Some weeks since a party of Germans, some 120 in number, with comfortable means, arrived at this port from Havre. Among them was a family of the name of Freiburg—husband, wife, and three children. One of the children was detained at the Marine Hospital, Staten Island, sick with the small pox, and the other members of the family proceeded on the way to their destination—Buffalo. When they reached Schenectady county, the wife and two children were taken sick with the small pox, and were placed in the poor-house for recovery, and the husband proceeded onward. When he reached within about a mile of Fort Plain, as he was standing on the deck of the canal boat, while passing the lock, he struck his head against the bridge over him, and his brains were dashed out. On this information coming to the knowledge of the unfortunate wife, she immediately proceeded to the scene of the latter disaster, and found that the party with whom they had been in company had proceeded onward, taking with them the luggage of this unfortunate family, in one of the trunks of which was upwards of $300. The poor woman, without a penny in her pocket, took to the road on foot for this city, to look after the child which was left here, and reached this city on Friday, and made application to the Commissioners of Emigration, who took charge of the poor woman, and immediately forwarded communications to their different agents on the route, to forward the sufferer as quickly as possible after the party and her property, in which praiseworthy endeavor it is hoped they will be successful."

Telegraph West.—By the new line of Morse, the Frederick Examiner says that in all probability a telegraphic communication will be complete between Baltimore city and Wheeling in the course of three or four weeks.—Baltimore Sun.

On the 27th an agent of the Post-office Department seized, on board the steamship Niagara, at Boston, a large number of letters, which had been smuggled aboard by passengers and others, to avoid to the retaliatory postal law of 24 cents now levied by our government.—Cincin. Commercial.

Religion in Russia.—It is officially stated that there are in Russia 2.770.000 Romanists; 2.400.000 Mahommedans; 1.200.000 Jews; 1,-750.000 Lutherans; and 14 360 Reformed or Calvanistic. Number of the Greek clergy in Russia 35.944, and 11.380 churches.

Dead Letter Office.—Not less than 4.000.000 dead letters, it is said, were received at the General Postoffice during the year 1847! The contents of 2,782 of the most valuable exceeded $20,000! This department of the Postoffice is a dead loss to the government of more than $180,-000 annually!

Bitten by a Snake.—We learn that a little boy living with Mr. May, near Potosi, was bitten by a rattle snake early this week. Clay was applied to the bite, and the boy was made drunk with whisky, and is likely to receive but little injury. A dog bitten by the same snake, swelled up and died.—Wis. Herald.

Late from Mexico.

New Orleans, Aug. 2, '48.

An arrival to-day brings accounts from Vera Cruz, of Thursday last.

Another contest had taken place between the Government forces under General Bustamente and the insurgents, commanded by Paredes, in which the latter were defeated.

Bustamente's forces had entered Guanajuato, and it was considered that the opposition to the existing government of Mexico had been effectually put down.

The Guerilla Chief, Jarauta, it affords us much gratification to learn, was taken prisoner, and was immediately executed, a fate he richly deserved. He who to others showed no mercy, could not have expected it from others.

Kent Camp Meeting.

The camp-meeting of the Methodist Protestant Church, for Kent (Md.) circuit, broke up Friday morning. The Chestertown News, says: "Notwithstanding the weather was unfavorable at the commencement of the camp, it was attended largely. On Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. Reese, of Baltimore, preached to a very large congregation, and we take pleasure in bearing witness to strict attention and order which every where prevailed on that day. An eloquent and impressive sermon was preached on Monday morning by Rev. Levi Reese. A large number has been added to the Church.—Baltimore Sun.

Men who want Farms.

A few days since a wealthy German emigrant, named Herr Rodenberger, arrived in this city with his family of 11 persons. For over 20 years he was a burgomaster in Rheinsheim, but being compromised in some of the revolutionary movements he was obliged to fly for safety. A large portion of his wealth still remains in Germany, but he brings with him about $25,000 in specie, which is to be expended in purchasing lands for a farm. Enjoying a high character in Germany, he has been empowered to purchase lands for about 100 families who intend emigrating during the season. He left this city last evening for Albany, though his point of destination is Zanesville, Ohio.—New York Sun.

Drowned.—A laboring man in the employ of ———Gill, whose name was George Wolf, was drowned yesterday morning in the Scioto, near Hayden's factory. He had ridden the horses of his employer into the river, and becoming entangled in some way was thrown off, probably injured by a blow from one of them. An alarm was soon given, & he was taken from the water in less than half an hour, but all efforts to restore him to life were without avail. He was of German extraction, and has, as we have been told, parents residing in the city.—Ohio State Journal.

Murder in Illinois.—We learn from a friend, just returned from a professional tour through the counties below, the particulars of a murder perpetrated in Waynesville, Pulaski county, on the 26 ult. The names of the parties were Edward H. Horrell, Esq., a lawyer of the place, and Dr. Joseph Dallenger. The cause of ill blood was one of an aggravated nature. It appears that Dr. Dallenger made a charge, publicly, prejudicial to to the hitherto irreproachable character of Mrs. Horrell. On Sunday, Mr. Horrell, in the presence of witnesses, refuted the slanderous charge by unmistakeable evidence. He then told the Doctor that it was his intention to kill him, and would do it if it were any other day but Sunday. On the Monday following, Dr. Dallenger rode to Waynesville. On the rode he was told that Horrell awaited his arrival, swearing to take his life. He did not heed the warning, however, but went on and as he passed into town, Horrell, with a rifle, from a covert, shot him dead. The grand jury of the county has found a bill of murder in the first degree against Horrell.—Dr. D. was formerly of Cole county.—Miner's Prospect.

Two sudden deaths occurred in Philadelphia on Saturday—Miss Margaret Kurston and Dr. John Kelly the victims.

Fatal Accident.—On Sunday, the Philadelphia News states, James Taylor, a conductor on the Reading Railroad, was run over near Reading, and instantly killed.

From the Religious Telescope.

Is He Free!

Is the man who is addicted to any useless habit, such as chewing, smoking, or dram-drinking, free in a gospel sense! No, not he. Hear him say, "I can't quit it." Then own yourself a bond slave. "Of whomsoever a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage."—"Whomsoever the Son makes free, he is free indeed."

Louis Phillippe and the Number Thirteen.—The cabalistic number thirteen is attached in a most singular manner to the life of the King of the French, as appears by the following, written in 1843, Louis Phillippe was born in 1773; he emigrated in 1793; his emigration finished in 1813. He has reigned and governed for thirteen years. In thirteen years the Count of Paris will be of age. The King has thirteen chateaus, Le Tuilleries, Le Louvre, Le Palais Royal, L'Elisse Bourbon, Neuilly, St. Cloud, Menden, Versailles, Compiegne, Fontainbleau, Eu, Pau, and Le Raincy. The Civil List has a total of thirteen children and grand-children. His life has been in danger thirteen times since 1830. And lastly, since his birth he has seen thirteen governments succeed each other in France, including his own.

Bible Translation.

The difficulties of this work are not duly appreciated. The missionaries in China—American and British—are preparing a new translation of the Holy Scriptures, and have been compelled to leave for the present the name of the Supreme Being blank, from the difficulty of finding a term in all respects free from objection. The Missionaries are divided in opinion as to the proper term, but like Christian men, have amicably resolved to submit their different views to the religious literati of Europe and America. The writer remembers a similar difficulty having arisen in the translation of the Tartar language. The knowledge of such difficulties may serve to give a character of intelligent directness to the intercession of Christians on behalf of Missionaries

NOTICES.

☞Our Philadelphia Correspondent is informed that one of our merchants will call upon him within a few weeks, in case he should have any favors to send as heretofore.

DEDICATION.

The new Methodist Protestant meeting house at Jacksontown, Licking County, will be first opened for Divine service, at 11 o'clock, Sunday, September 10th. Ministers on their way to the Muskingum Conference, are invited to call and spend the Day with us.

E. S. HOAGLAND.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE.

The tenth session of the Onondaga Conference will commence on the 6th of September, at 10 o'clock, A. M. at Sand Bank Village, Oswego Co., NY.

Ministers and Delegates will please call at the parsonage house, opposite the M. P. Church, and Rev. Francis Pierce, Sup't. will direct them to places of entertainment during the session.

IRA H. HOGAN, Pr.

Wm. W. Sterricker, Sec.

Portage Ct., Ohio Dist.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will commence August 19, at Prospect meeting-house, two miles east of Freeport. We invite Brothers Peat, Graham, Thornburg, Swaney, Guest, Laney and Carter. Come, brethren, without fail and help us.

WM. CHAPMAN.

Twin-Creek Ct., Ohio Dist.—We expect to commence a protracted meeting at Liberty, 6 miles West of Dayton, on Friday, September 2d, with the view of having the labors of some of the brethren from the north on their way to Conference. Hope we shall not be disappointed.

J. NUPTY.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego, N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange ch. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgomery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attala county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

Springfield Ct., O. District.—We have appointed a Protracted Meeting at the Concord Meeting House, to commence Thursday, August 31st., and to continue over the next Sabbath. We trust that some of the ministerial brethren north of us will observe this notice, & make it suit to come at the commencement and stay over Sabbath with us. It will be directly on the way to Conference. Come, brethren, I shall look for at least an equal divice of laborers with Br. Hunt. Concord is six miles south of Springfield, on the Cortsville road.

Will Br. Young call with us, on his way to Lebanon?

R. ROSE.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

Tanners Creek Ct.—Ind. Dist.—Our 4th Quarterly Meeting will be held at the E. Fork Meeting House, near Brother William Smith's, commencing on Saturday, September 16, 1848. We cordially invite our esteemed President, Brother T. Shipp, and Brother T. Finkbine, and all other brethren from the Indiana and Ohio Districts that can attend.

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

Coshocton Ct., Musk. Dist.—The next Quarterly Meeting will be held at the M. P. Chapel, near Br. A. Ferguson's, commencing on Saturday, Aug. 19th, at 11 o'clock, a. m. Cannot Brs. A. H. Bassett, T. Potter and W. Duling, assist us?

W. ROSS, Sup't.

Bellvue Ct., Musk. District.—Our fourth Quarterly Meeting will be held at the South Sand Ridge Class, York Tp., Sandusky County, commencing on Saturday, August 12, 1848. This meeting I respectfully invite brothers W. Shultz, G. Read & J Jack of Bucyrus Ct., Br. R. Rice of Thompson, and all other brethen who can attend.

A. S. ROBISON.

Lima Ct., Ohio Dist.—Br. Bassett: By your permsion, I would publish through the Recorder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on the Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it wa be on the road to Conference. Come, brethren, and help us.

J. L. BORTON.

Clarksville Ct., Ohio Dist.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August 1848. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected; and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local, together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst, to prepare the ground.

E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt

Columbia Ct., Musk. Dist.—Br. Clancy is informed that his meeting for this circuit will be held at Waterloo Meeting-house, six miles west of Athens; at which time we intend holding our fourth quarterly meeting. We invite Br. C. J. Sears to be with us.

G. M. SCOTT

Woodsfield Circuit, Muskingum District.—Please give notice that the meeting of Brother Clancy, our President, for this circuit, will be at Lewisville, 7 miles west of Woodsfield on the Summerfield road. Call on Brother Francis Allen. Brother H. T. Lawson is invited to attend this meeting if possible

N. LINDER,
Superintendent.

Kalida Ct., Ohio Dist.—We solicit ministerial aid at our fourth quarterly meeting, which will be held on the 12th of August, in the town of Gilboa. The brethren have requested me to invite Brother William Hamilton of Richwood, Union Co., to attend upon that occasion, & see his old friends. We also invite Brothers Graham, Swaney and Berton, and as many others as can attend.

G. W. THORNBURGH, Sup't.

Newark Circuit, Musk. District.—Our fourth quarterly meeting will be held at Irville, on the 1st Saturday and Sunday in August next. Any ministering brethren who can do so, are requested to attend and assist us on the occasion.

W. H. MARSHALL.

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Truxton Circuit, August 19th and 20th.
Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

T Potter,	O.	J Gay,	Ia
G Clancy,	"	Mrs. A Young,	"
B F Rose,	"	W Barnet,	"
I C Hunt,	"	S Hozey,	Pa
G Brown,	"	J C Hazlett, 1 sub	"
H G O Carey,	"	W Reeves, 2,	"
G W Thornburg,	"	J H Johnson,	Conn
P M—Cincinnati,	"	P M—Greenupsburg,	Ky

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts
G Clancy	J Boileau,	9	52	2 00
S Hozey,		9	26	2 00
W Hibbs,		10	30	2 50
J C Hazlett,	W Shafer,	10	44	2 00
G W Thornburg,	A Hough,	9	41	1 00
W Barnet,	A Dickinson,	9	23	2 00

Br. C J Sears, we have discontinued the paper of the dec'd brother, due us for 31 numbers. $1 will do, if pd before Conference.

Br Reeves, certainly Br J J B paid in advance, and is credited in our book. We are surprised with the oversight we made in our haste.

The P M at Cincinnati notifies us that A Sweney does not take his paper. Will Br. Finkbine please see to this?

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	12
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	8
Rev. S. P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa,	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

OBITUARY.

DIED—At Chambersburg, Pa., on the 2d inst. Hon. Alex. Thompson, aged 62, formerly Member of Congress.

——In Wayne township, June 24th, Mr. James Allen, in his 87th year, formerly of Martha's Vineyard, Mass., but for more than 30 years a citizen of this county.

——At Zanesville, on the 12 inst. Col. Daniel Converse, aged about 72. He was an early pioneer of the Muskingum Valley.

Advertisements.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT.

The best Remedy ever discovered for

External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheum, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, Sun Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1,00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholie in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either external or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Stanhope's Celebrated

CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

All orders for the above medicine should be addressed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern, Baltimore,

A NEW SUPPLY OF

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

Snethen's Sermons.

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the office of the Western Recorder.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. Levi R. Reese.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

Poet's Corner.

"LOOK OUT WHILE THE BELL IS RINGING!"

BY GEO. W. BUNGAY.

With lungs of fire, and ribs of steel;
With sighing valve, and groaning wheel;
With startling scream, and giant stroke;
With showers of sparks, and clouds of smoke
The iron steed the train is bringing;
So look out while the bell is ringing!

The gazing, gaping crowds stand back,
Will ye be crushed or clear the track?
Now all aboard and off again!
The drones behind can't reach the train
They stumble, where the switch is swinging,
So look out while the bell is ringing!

Just so, the engine of reform,
Rolls on through sunshine and through storm;
O'er kings and sceptres, crowns and thrones;
Through sleepy crowds of idle drones,
'Tis freedom's song the mass are singing,
So look out while the bell is ringing!

The slave will doff his yoke and chain,
The drunkard will not drink again,
The soldier throw his sword away,
We see the dawn of that bright day,
Glad news the harnessed lightning bringing;
So look out while the bell is ringing!

Western Sketches.

A WESTERN INCIDENT.

At the close of a long day's ride on horseback, from Adams to McDonald County, in the State of Illinois, I found myself alone, in front of a new fenced farm and log cabin. It was early in May, 1839—and I had been riding through oak openings and across prairies, with only an occasional small settlement, till the bright sun was about to retire behind the western forest. Wild flowers, birds innumerable, an occasional deer, and herds of domestic animals—had successively divided my attention with the splendid agricultural prospects of the busy farmer, here and there seen, with his whole family, in the field, planting their luxuriant soil. I was looking for "my lot of land,"—and I had been directed to the occupant of this very farm I was abreast of, for information of its whereabouts. It had been my purpose to reach its neighborhood that night—but I could go no further without additional directions. I rode up to the door of the cabin, and was met by a tall, grave, benignant looking man, who came out from his house uncovered, to meet and greet a stranger. His face was full of thought. Time, toil, and care, had set their mark upon him—but he looked like an Abraham. He saluted and spoke to me, as if I had been a long-absent friend. I explained the object of my call, and inquired the distance to a certain mill, believed by previous informants to occupy a quarter section near to my own land. He replied to my inquiries with much exactness, but indicated a desire for further conversation.

"May I ask, sir, where you are from?"

"From Vermont, sir," I replied.

"From Vermont? Indeed! that is my native State. What town do you live in, sir?"

"Sp——d," said I.

"Sp——d? why, I used to live in Sp——d; when did you live in that town?"

Giving him my name, I explained to him that I had recently removed thither, from Massachusetts; and that I occupied a little place I had purchased of S—— C——, near the center of the village.

"Why, I studied law in that house, with Judge C——," replied he. "Come, you must n't go any further to-night—Mrs. H. must see you. Let the boys have your horse, and spend the night with us. I will go with you in the morning and help you to find your land."

I dismounted, a fine lad took my horse—and I was ushered into the cabin with an introduction, by name, to Hrs. H. and all the inmates. Such a scene—such a change—thus unexpecedly to be all at once in the midst of an educated New England family—and claimed, too, as a townsman! Mrs. H. and several bright, mannerly children, my respect host, and one other, a quiet looking backwoodsman, were seen together, seated beside the fire, which, though it was not cold, only a little damp and chilly, had been kindled up to prepare the family meal. Question followed question—the table was soon set—a rich feast prepared—and I would n't have exchanged the enjoyment of that evening for all the empty honors and heartless pageantry of any courtly mansion in Christendom.

Saturday had passed, and I had realized in my host all the kindness which our first interview had promised. He had accompanied me through the explorations of the day, and shown me one of the richest tracts of country that human eye ever looked upon.

Sunday morning opened upon this happy family, enrobed with resplendent beauty, which they only can conceive, who have slept amid the vernal odors of an American Prairie. I had learned their story—from the period that my host was an unmarried student at law in Vermont, till I now sat among his children, in the presence of his happy spouse. He had preferred the profession of an EDUCATOR to that of Litigator. Events had made him the owner of the land on which he and his family now resided, years before he had seen it. When, after many toilsome years, and a tedious horse and wagon journey, he had arrived at this chosen land, he had found the man whom I had met by his hearth, on my first arrival, a squatter on his land. A small cabin and and seven enclosed acres constituted this poor man's homestead, and it was but natural that he and his should feel alarmed at the arrival of the stranger who owned it. But no! "He was not to be injured."

"What do you ask for your 'claim,'" said the owner of the patent, "to this 160 acre tract of timber and prairie?"

"Thirty dollars," was the meek reply.

"I'll give it to you," replied my friend. "and you must build yourself another cabin down yonder, and help me to put up an addition to this; and then I shall hire you to work for me and help me to make and fence in my farm."

All this had been done; and a newly settled community had gathered from the cabins of a three mile prairie, to welcome the generous Yankee to his new and delightful home, by assisting him and his poor neighbor in erecting their new dwelling. Another enterprise was now to be proposed.

"I am a schoolmaster," said my friend, "and I am going to build a school house. This must also be our church; and I want you all to come and help me what you can; and then you must all send your children, along with mine, to our new school. I will take anything you have to spare, in payment for their tuition. We will also have a Sunday school. & you must all come and bring your children. When we can get anybody to preach to us, we will hear him; and when we have no minister, we will carry on the meeting, by God's blessing, ourselves."

I had already visited this great hewn-log school house, which was situated in a grove, but a few rods off; and now the hour was come for us to go into the Sunday school. What a sight was here! Within, its walls were hung with maps—its shelves piled up with books, and in one corner lay a heap of shucked corn.

From the doorway we saw the people coming from every side of the prairie; on foot; on horseback; single; by couples, and in groups; young men, and maidens, and children, and aged pioneers, of all faiths, common to southern Protestantism, coming to unite in the study of the Bible, and the worship of the living God. Never passed I a holier day. Never loved I more my fellow man. Rude and rough though the building, plain and rustic the costume, devotion dwelt there. After prayer and singing, in which the New England pilgrim led the way, all were resolved into Bible classes, till, at the appointed hour of eleven, an aged minister, who had arrived, closed the exercises with a sermon and the appropriate benediction. This good Vermont schoolmaster was become the patriarch of this settlement. Be not surprised, then, when I tell you, that I never knew a more heaven-favored man. He, his accomplished consort, and his dear children, with several more since added to their number, are all now alive and well.

I have not been able to visit that settlement since. But I rejoice, now and then, to receive a letter from this venerable Christian Republican. He laid off some of the land around his school house into lots for new comers; and to such as were of useful trades, and peaceable character, these could be had at their own price. The prairie, I learn, is covered with farms; a Christian church has been organized; a post office established; a town has grown up. The beautiful little girl has become, with her man-grown brothers, among the most intelligent and accomplished young people in Illinois. Temperance, patriotism, order, thrift, and prosperity, render that settlement, and others in its vicinity, desirable to the law-and-order-loving emigrant, and the way-worn traveler. And, my dear reader, it is because I know that there are such families and communities in the West, who have no part nor lot in the newspaper-trumpeted outbreaks, and lynch-law brawls of Mormons, nor anti-Mormons, "Regulators," "Flatheads," that I narrate this incident. He who travels only on the great roads, or fashionable thoroughfares, stopping alone at hotels and public places, forms but little acquaintance with the bone and sinew of society in our Western States and Territories. We see, too, what education—a single public spirited, energetic, educated individual or family can do for a settlement. Such are the men and women who are needed at the great West. Such will be the results of your schoolmasters' efforts against ignorance.—Practical Educator.

Movement of the West.

The Cincinnati Herald in the course of an article on the progress of population, makes this statement:

"The movement of the solid mass of the population is continually and systematically West. This movement is, on the whole, with accelerated velocity.

			Miles.
From 1780 to 1800,	the movement west was		13
" 1800 to 1810,	"	"	39
" 1810 to 1820,	"	"	41
" 1820 to 1830,	"	"	37
" 1830 to 1840,	"	"	52

"From this table, it is most obvious that the Gravitation of Population is moving West, at an accelerated velocity, and that this must continue, because of the far greater fertility of lands in the West. The average velocity is more than five miles in each year—so that the Centre of Population is now just about on the Ohio river, & in 1850 will be in Washington, or Monroe county, O.

"But there is a limit to this Gravitation of Population West. This arises from the fact, that the vast plateau of the Rocky Mountains (nearly a thousand miles in diameter) is very inferior land, and cannot sustain more than a sparse population. On the other hand, the Central (that is, the present Northwestern) States are the best lands on the continent. The States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Iowa, will, at some time, contain fifty millions of inhabitants. These States will make the great Central Empire of the North American Continent. They will control its destiny, and control its legislation, and its civilization."

Miscellaneous.

Keen Retort.

Atterbury, Bishop of Rochester, alluding to a bill brought into the House of Lords, said—"That he had prophesied that the bill would be attempted in the present session, and he was sorry to find that he hdd proved a true prophet." Lord Coningsby desired the house to remark that one of the right reverends had set himself up as a prophet; but, for his part, he did not know what prophet to liken him to, unless to that furious prophet, Balaam, who was reproved by his own ass.

The bishop replied—"Since the noble lord has discovered in our manners such a similitude, I am well content to be compared to the prophet Balaam; but, my lords, I am at a loss how to make out the other part of the parallel. I am sure I have been reproved by nobody but his lordship." A burst of laughter followed this castigation.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Express is giving some of the curiosities of "Doggett's New York City Directory," just published. It contains 67,246 names.—The city is canvassed as high as Thirteenth street, three and a quarter miles from the Battery. An examination of the names shows that those of Anglo Saxon origin preponderate, notwithstanding the large influx of Irish, German and other foreigners. The names that are the most frequent are Smith of course; then Brown, Clark, Williams, Miller, Moore, Lawrence, Thompson, Johnson, Jones and Taylor—all English origin. "The notorious name of John Smith is repeated no less than eighty-five times," and thirty-five of them have no distinguishing middle letter.

The following shows the number of names in the directory, compared with the population of the city at various periods:

	Names in Directory.		Population by Census.
1790	4,250		33,131
1800	10,200		60,489
1810	14,590		96,373
1820	23,320		123,706
1830	31,295		202,589
1840	37,125		312,710
1845	61,333		371,223
1848	67,246	(about)	400,000

The first directory of this city was published by David Franks, in the year 1786, when the number of names was 821, but in the following year, the directory, by the same publisher, contained 1,582 names. The population of the city was then probably over 25,000.

INTERESTING TO PRINTERS.—A working engineer at Preston, England, has invented an apparatus for folding newspapers as they are received from the printing machine.

Bible Translation.

The difficulties of this work are not duly appreciated. The missionaries in China—American and British—are preparing a new translation of the Holy Scriptures, and have been compelled to leave for the present the name of the Supreme Being blank, from the difficulty of finding a term in all respects free from objection. The Missionaries are divided in opinion as to the proper term, but like Christian men, have amicably resolved to submit their different views to the religious literati of Europe and America. The writer remembers a similar difficulty having arisen in the translation of the Tartar language. The knowledge of such difficulties may serve to give a character of intelligent directness to the intercession of Christians on behalf of Missionaries

Singular Circumstance.

On the 17th day of September, 1847, a lad seven years of age, son of Mr. Theo. P. Bowker, of this city, accidentally swallowed a copper cent, which lodged at the entrance of his stomach. Medical aid was immediately called, and although the physicians could distinctly feel it with their instruments, all efforts to extricate it were unavailing. He had suffered great inconvenience in consequence of its remaining where it first lodged, and has frequently abstained from eating his regular meals, such was the distress occasioned by food coming in contact with the piece of copper. Thus the matter continued until the 17th instant, a period of ten months, when he was suddenly seized with a violent vomiting, and among other matter threw up the aforesaid cent, which was covered with a thin, firm, scaly substance. The little fellow is now as healthy as ever, and feels greatly relieved at having disgorged the indigestible coin.—Boston Mer. Jour.

GREEN TEA AND BLACK TEA.

There are two or three opinions common in the United States about green tea, which are great mistakes. One is, that the Chinese themselves do not use green tea; this is a mistake.—But they don't use such green tea as is used in England and America. They most commonly pick out the fine and dried parts, and separate them, calling one gunpowder, and another hyson, and another hyson skin.

The second mistake is that the green tea is made by roasting it on copper plates, which turns it green, and gives it its sharp astringent qualities. All the tea made about Zeetung (a good many thousand pounds,) is dried in iron pans.

But if the Chinese do not make green tea on copper pans, they do what is a great deal worse. They mix Prussian-blue with what is sold to foreigners, which gives it the greenish blue color it so often has, and something of its astringent qualities. Prussian-blue is poison; and the only reason why green tea does those who use it at home so little harm is that it requires but a small quantity to color a large amount of the tea.—But still, small as the quantity is, it does harm; and the people not accustomed to the use of green tea, can hardly sleep after drinking it. You may almost always tell whether there is any Prussian-blue in the tea, by drawing off the infusion and placing it in a white cup. If the infusion is perfectly clear, and of a slightly saffron green color, it is all right: but if it has a dirty appearance, as if there was coloring matter suspended in it, then there is some of the Prussian-blue, or something else there.

The Chinese put the Prussian-blue, and such stuffs in the tea, as foreigners have taken a notion that green tea is not green tea unless it is very green. People in England and America don't like green tea, such as the Chinese use, and won't buy it. Well, the Chinese are a very accomodating people, and they laugh in their big sleeves, and say, "Since foreigners want very green tea, we'll give it to them, but they must pay us a little more for making it so green." Little green tea goes to the U. States, that has not more or less Prussian-blue, or some other drug added to it to give it a high color.

Description of Liberia.

—o—

We take the following description of the extent of the Republic of Liberia, its extent, population, settlements, products, &c., from a pamphlet just issued in Philadelphia:

Extent.—Liberia extends from Digby at the mouth of the Poor river, on the north-west, to Cavally river, on the south-east, between 4 deg. 20 min. and 6 deg. 40 min. north latitude, and 7 deg. 30 min. and 11 deg. west longitude, from Greenwich. The length of coast between Digby and the Cavally river is about three hundred miles. The territory of Liberia extends from twenty to thirty miles inland. The right of possession and jurisdiction over all this line, (with the exception of Young Sisters,) has been purchased by the American and the Maryland Colonization Society, and farther purchases have since been made.

Population.—The inhabitants of Liberia, emigrants from the United States and their children, number three thousand five hundred; and seven hundred occupy the Maryland Colony at Cape Palmas. To these may be added about five hundred natives, civilized and admitted to the privileges of the polls and the rights of citizenship in general. The natives residing on land owned by the Colony, and directly amenable to its laws, are estimated from 10,000 to 15,000. The population of the allied tribes in the interior, who are bound by treaty to abstain from the slave-trade and other barbarous practices, is not accurately known, but may be estimated at 150,000.

*Towns and Settlements. — Monrovia on the south side of Cape Mesurado, near the north-western boundary of Liberia, is the capital and chief place of trade. Population 1,000. The other ports, not counting those in the Maryland Colony, are Marshall on the Junk river, Edina, Bexley on the St. Johns river, Basso Cove, and Greenville, on the Sinoe river. The more inland towns and their adjoining settlements, are Caldwell, New Georgia and Millsburg.

Productions of the Soil.—Coffee, sugar cane, rice, cotton, indigo, Indian corn, potatoes, yams, cassadas, bananas, arrow-root and nuts may be produced in any quantity; fruits are various and abundant. These are all grown in Liberia.

Exports.—The chief exports are cam-wood, palm-oil and ivory, to the amount of $123,690 in two years ending September, 1843, according to the official returns. These are brought from the interior.

Imports.—The imports for the two years, as above, amounted to $157,830.

Religious Aspect.—Churches, 23; communicants, 1,500; of whom 500 are natives and recaptured Africans.

Education.—Schools, 16; scholars, 560; of whom 200 are native Africans. The Sunday-Schools embrace a far larger number.

*The statistics of the Maryland Colony at Cape Palmas are not given in this statement.

DROWNED.—Mr. Joseph Lanery, of Beaver County, was drowned near the mouth of Brady's Run, a few days since. Intemperance. He left a wife and several children.

From the Baltimore Sun.

Passage of the Wilmot Proviso.

We yesterday announced that the Oregon bill had passed in the House, containing the Wilmot proviso, or rather the Jefferson proviso, prohibiting the introduction of slavery into the territory. This section, which extends the ordinance of 1787 over the Oregon territory, is in the following words:

"That the inhabitants of said territory shall be entitled to enjoy all and singular the rights, privileges and immunities granted and secured to the people of the territory of the United States northwest of the river Ohio, by the articles of compact contained in the ordinance for the government of said territory, on the thirteenth day of July, seventeen hundred and eighty-seven; [and shall be subject to all the conditions, and restrictions, and prohibitions in said articles of compact imposed upon the people of said territory.] and"

In committee of the whole, the House had stricken out this section, but the House refused to concur in the striking it out of the bill, by the following vote:

Ayes—Messrs. Barringer, Bayly, Beale, Birdsall, Bocock, Botts, Bowdon, Bowlin, Boyd, Broadhead, Wm. G. Brown, Albert G. Brown, Burt, Cabell, Chapman, Chase, Beverly L. Clark, Clingman, Howell Cobb, Williamson R. W. Cobb, Cocke, Crisfield, Crozier, Daniel, Garnett Duncan, Alexander Evans, Featherson, Ficklin, Flournoy, French, Fulton, Gayle, Gentry, Goggin, Green, Willard P. Hall, Haralson, Harmanson, Harris, Haskell, Hill, Hilliard, Isaac E. Holmes, George S. Houston, Inge, Charles J. Ingersoll, Iverson, Jameson, Andrew Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, Geo. W. Jones, John W. Jones, Kaufman, Kennon, Thos. Butler King, La Sere. Ligon, Lumkin, McClernand, McDowell, McKay, McLane, Miller, Outlaw, Pendleton, Phelps, Pilsbury, Preston, Rhett, Richardson, Robinson, Roman, Sawyer, Sheppard, Simpson, Sims, Stanton, Stephens, Thibodeaux, Thomas, Jacob Thompson, Robert A. Thompson, Tompkins, Toombs, Venable, Wallace, Wick, Woodward—83.

Nays—Messrs. Abbot, Adams, Ashmun, Bingham, Blanchard, Brady, Butler, Canby, Catheart, Franklin Clark, Collamar, Collins, Conger, Cranston, Crowell, Cummins, Darling, Dickey, Dickinson, Dixon, Duer, Dan'l Duncan, Dunn, Eckert, Edwards, Embree, Nathan Evans, Faran, Farrelly, Fisher, Freedley, Fries, Giddings, Gott, Gregory, Grinnell, Hale, Nathan K. Hall, Hammons, James G. Hampton, Moses Hampton, Henley, Henry, Elias B. Holmes, John W. Houston, Hubbard, Hudson, Hunt, Jos. R. Ingersoll, Jenkins, Kellogg, D. P. King, Lahm, W. T. Lawrence, S. Lawrence Lincoln, Lord, Lynde, Maclay, McIlvaine, Job Mann, Horace Mann, Marsh, Marvin, Morris, Mullin, Nelson, Newell, Nicoll, Palfrey, Peaslee, Peck, Petrie, Petit, Pollock, Putnam, Reynolds, Richey, Rockhill, Julius Rockwell, John A. Rockwell, Rose, Root, Rumsey, St. John, Schenck, Sherrill, Sylvester, Slingerland, Smart, Caleb B. Smith, Rob't Smith, Truman Smith, Starkweather, Andrew Stewart, Charles E. Stuart, Strohm, Tallmadge, Taylor, Jas. Thompson, Richard W. Thompson, Wm. Thurston, Turner, Tuck, Van Dyke, Vinton, Warren, Wentworth, Wiley, White, Williams, Wilmot—114.

The bill was then ordered to be engrossed, and being engrossed, was read a third time, and under the operation of the previous question, was passed by yeas and nays—yeas 129, nays 71.

Mr. Wentworth moved to reconsider the last vote; which motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Remarkable Case of Rescue from Servitude of a Free Colored Philadelphian.

The New York Tribune says that there has arrived at that port as a passenger from Havana, in the barque Rapid, a colored man, named John Lytle, a native of Philadelphia, who returns to this country after an absence of twelve or fourteen years, within which period his history has been a singular and interesting one:

Some short time ago a gentleman of this city, while traveling in the Island of Cuba, stopped at the ingenio, a sugar estate of a wealthy planter named Don Gaspar Hernandez, about twenty miles from Matanzas.—While examining the machinery of the sugar work, he was addressed in English by one of the apparent slaves employed about them; and the result of a guarded conversation that ensued was to inform him that the slave was in truth a free American citizen, wrongfully held in slavery. His story was this: He had been shipwrecked many years before on the coast of Africa, in the ship Jupiter, employed in the service of the Colonization Society.—With the rest of the crew he had made his way along the coast for about 130 miles to the slave station at Gallinas, where he was well received by the proprietor, Don Pancho Ramon, who promised him a passage in the first vessel to Cuba—from which Island it would be easy to reach the United States. The slave cargo which he thus accompanied being duly landed in the neighborhood of Matanzas, Lytle was cooped with the rest of his color in the "barracoons," and soon found himself at work as a slave on the estate where he was thus found by a stray wayfarer from his own country. He had made more than one unsuccessful attempt for his freedom, and had at this time given up the thought of it in despair. After further inquiries had been made, the case was laid before the Secretary of State, who fully entered into it, and readily responded to the call made upon him to demand the liberation of the man. Our popular and excellent Consul at Havana, Gen. R. B. Campbell, of South Carolina, also entered into the spirit of the instructions which he received from the state Department with his characteristic zeal and ability. The upshot of the whole has been the arrival of the man, as a freeman, at this port, as above stated, with a sum of money of $2.211 33, as his wages during the eleven years of his servitude, with interest, beside his expenses home.

Irish Conference.—The report of the numbers in society has been given, showing a decrease of fourteen hundred, which is less than was feared, considering the immense emigration, numerous deaths, and the distracted state of the country during the past year.

The annual missionary meeting was held on the evening of June 26th, in the Lower Abbey-street chapel. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Newton, D. M'Afee, T. Meredith, R. Huston, & others. The collection was greater than at the meeting last year.

On Tuesday evening, the 27th, four young men who had travelled four years were examined, admitted into full connection; and ordained in the Centenary chapel. The usual questions were asked them by Dr. Newton. The Rev. T. Waugh, who moved their acceptance, addressed them on the necessity and importance of piety, purity and zeal in Christian ministers, and the Rev. W. Stewart, who seconded the motion, dwelt briefly on the faith requisite for the work of the ministry. After the ordination, the President delivered a charge, founded on Tim. vi, 15. Chris. Ad. & Jour.

Advertisements.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED. READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bete superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS.—The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT, Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense; the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he 'offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

FITS! FITS!!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience; Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case:—they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 27 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 12 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years. Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthoff, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HART, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be add

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 47. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, AUG. 24, 1848. WHOLE NO. 463.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

THE BELIEVER'S CONFIDENCE.

PSALMS, 73, 23–27.

On thee, my everlasting Friend,
My confidence is stayed,
For thou dost hold me by thy hand
And bid my heart be glad.

In thee who hast, and still shalt be
My counsel and my guide,
I rest my hope alone on thee,
And in thy name confide.

Whom have I in thy blest abode,
In whom I could delight;
Or who, O Lord, in earth abroad
So pleasing to my sight?

I view thy creatures, and they pant
Thy bounteous hand to see;
This leads my longing soul to faint
With strong desire for thee.

Tho' heart and flesh are failing still,
No anxious thoughts arise;
I have a home in Zion's hill,
A mansion in the skies.

My God, thou art my rock & shield,
And I'll thy name adore,
Thou art my life, my strength'ning hope,
My portion evermore.

H. C. M'BRIDE.

Roseville, Ohio, August, 1848.

Ecclesiastical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett: Writing to you on business, it occurred to me that it would be entertaining & instructive to many of your readers, to furnish from the Mutual Rights of Dec. 1827, the following extract of "Reasons in Plea for reform, by Neale." I know not the proper name of the writer.

M. JARED.

Lafayette, Ill.

Reasons in Plea for Reform in the Government of the M. E. Church.

We think the present government of the church, in many of its leading features, unscriptural.

In assuming this position, we do not wish to convey the idea, that we consider any form of church government, of Divine origin, in the sense, in which this is contended for, by Roman Catholics and high church Episcopalians; but simply to say, that in our view of the subject, the Scriptures furnish, and the practice of the primitive church, as established by the apostles, recognizes the great leading principles of church polity, as they should be acted upon by all persons and churches in all ages.

All governments of human construction, are more or less defective, and must admit of improvement from time to time, and in our estimation, this maxim will apply with peculiar force, to the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the United States. That those who have had a principal agency, in bringing about the present state of things among us, have been influenced by this maxim, is entirely evident from the fact, that the government of our church has been altered, amended, and modified, in various ways, at each session of its legislative council, since its first adoption. This readiness to change and alter, to revoke old and enact new laws, argues a conviction, on the part of its framers and supporters, that it is not perfect, but that it is susceptible af many and important improvements.

It cannot be improper therefore, in any of the members of this establishment, to essay by proper means its further perfection. In view of this, thousands of its members and hundreds of its ministers have been laboring for years, to introduce a mode of government that shall equally secure the rights of the ministry and membership, giving to each a proper share, in all matters of legislation, affecting the interests of the whole body.

At present, the entire business of legislature, in the Methodist Church, in this country, is confined to about one thousand ministers, to the utter exclusion of about seven thousand of their brethren in the ministry; and nearly half a million of the laity! And it is a little remarkable, that there is no church on earth, totally rejecting the representative principle, in matters of government, except the Romish and Methodist Episcopal Church. It may indeed appear invidious, to institute a comparison between the pope of Rome, and his cardinals, and the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the travelling ministry, but the resemblance, so far as legislative prerogative is concerned, is exact. If this be denied, we invite the friends of the reigning state of things, to point out the dissimilarity.

The object of the following pages is, to offer some of the many reasons, why, we think reform in the government of the church essential to its present and future interests.

We are instructed in the scriptures, the "only and sufficient rule of our faith and practice," that Jesus Christ is the Supreme "Head of the church," that "one is our master even Christ," that there "is one Lawgiver," and that our Lord before his ascension, and by the subsequent teaching of the Holy Ghost, instructed his church and people, in all things necessary to be known; in order to their proper discipline upon earth, and final settlement in heaven. From all which it may be fairly inferred. that what should be properly considered the fundamental principles of church government are to be found in the holy Scriptures.—If therefore it shall appear, that the government of the Methodist E. Church in its more distinguishing features, does not accord with these fundamental principles, we humbly conceive it to be the undoubted right, of any one, or more of its members, to ask for a change, the object of which, is to effect such accordance.

Impressed with these views, we proceed to show, wherein we think the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church most defective and plainly unscriptural.—In the first place, we consider the government of the church to be defective and unscriptural, in giving to the ministry, or rather a small portion of the ministry, say one in seven, the supreme legislative control of all its affairs. This in our judgment, is manifestly a violation of the scripture-character, and primitive usage of the church, as these were developed in the apostolic age. All the precepts and maxims of the Gospel, together with all the examples of inspired practice, which can by legitimate interpretation, be brought to bear upon this subject, seem to indicate in no obscure way; that the power to regulate prudentially, the internal organization, & external discipline of the church, in things non-essential, belongs to the great body of the faithful; and not to a privileged few of its members or ministers. In Matt. 20, 25—6, our Lord remarks, "The princes of the gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great, exercise authority upon them, but it shall not be so among you."—Here our Lord expressly forbids lordship and dominion, on the part of the ministry, by assuring them, they shall not act the part toward their people and flocks, in the exercise of rule and authority, that the princes and great men of the gentiles exercised toward them, in claiming, an unnatural and oppressive pre-eminence over them.—That the Methodist travelling ministry, claim & exercise such a pre-eminence, in making and enforcing laws, relating to conscience, is known to every one—and whether this assumption of right, comes within the prohibition above, it requires but very little discernment to determine. In our judgment, it does, by every law of fair construction.

Matt. 23, 8—9, our Lord says, "be not ye called rabbi, for one is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren," this passage plainly teaches a perfect equality among ministers, and as they are not to be called masters, it is morally certain, that Christ intended to teach them, that they should not in any instance usurp or exercise authority over the people, not constitutionally secured to them by their known will, or the terms of the commission, received by ministers from the great Head of the church. A discretionary power among themselves, as masters over the people, is expressly forbidden, and yet this power is undeniably claimed by the travelling ministry of the Methodist Epis. Church. They claim the privilege of saying what is right, of fixing terms of communion, and punishing all delinquency at pleasure; and the local ministry and membership are not at liberty even to listen to their deliberations, in the humble character of servants, to these fortunate, & as legislators, irresponsible masters. 2 Peter, 5. 3, "neither as lords over God's heritage but examples to the flock."—Now if to legislate for a people, in a way that materially affects their present and eternal interests, without their knowledge or consent, thereby definitely requiring passive obedience and non-resistance, is to lord it over God's heritage, it admits of the clearest historical demonstration, that the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church, stands chargeable with the violation of this important precept in relation to all Christian ministers.—In the great commission given to all ministers by our Lord, a little anterior to his ascension, he instructs them to disciple the nations, by teaching them "whatsoever he had commanded." Now we insist upon it, that those ministers who usurp the right of legislation, and enact laws affecting the conscience of Christians, and the communion of saints, without the consent and ratification of those concerned, transcend the definite powers of their commission, and cancel the obligation of the people to obey. The duty of obedience to Christian rulers, is predicated upon the fact, that those rulers, were to require nothing, but what Christ had "commanded," accordingly, in the 5th article of our faith, as subscribed in the book Discipline; it is affirmed of the Scriptures, that "whatsoever is not therein, or may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man." Where then, do we find in the Scriptures, that one, three, or five men, may be rightfully elevated in rank by a solemn consecration, over 'eight thousand' of their peers in the ministry? Where do we read, that one thousand of these should rule all the rest with a rod of iron, or a broken reed as the case may be? Where do we read, that by the will of these self constituted masters, scores, hundreds, and thousands, shall be banished from the church of God, for inattention to rules and regulations, that had no existence, until the visions of inspiration had ceased for eighteen hundred years!

Western Sketches.

MR. MAGOON'S SPEECH.

The following is the speech of Rev. Mr. Magoon, of Cincinnati, before the American Baptist Home Missionary Society, at its late session in N. York, on a resolution offered by him:

He moved that the great valley of the West is an inviting field, which will amply repay cultivation. Eastern character, said he, is wondrously transformed in the West. Let your Yankee start for that promised land, sleep the first night in Albany; the next in Buffalo, which he would find a dreadful nice village; go to the Niagara, in whose awful tones he would hear the first key-note of the great anthem of the West; let him step on board a steamer, and go 1585 miles up to Chicago, and by the time he had arrived there he would get some new idea; let him go forth to those boundless prairies, spangled with flowers, and billowy with the luxuriant grass, over which the voices of a thousand feathered warblers make melody, and through which a countless myriad of buffaloes and deer roam—those magnificent prairies, to which the steppes of Asia, and the pampas of South America bear no comparison—those limitless prairies, in whose verdure the lies down to his evening rest, over which the horizon closes without a bound—and he might well feel new ideas of grandeur and glory. Let him go down the Mississippi, and behold at New Orleans the ships of every nation under the sun, and see the men and hear the language of every division of our species; let him go back, hugging up the smoke-stack or the shady side of the wheel-house, as the weather may be, whittling and speculating, and pumping every passenger dry with his interminable questions—let him stop at Cincinnati, the heart of the mighty giant—the hem of whose garment only he had seen—let him see this, and he will see a fraction of that valley which might make a corona of States fit to gem the diadem of the world—he will see room for all the exiled kings of the world to pitch their tents—room, even, for Victoria to give ample farms to all her children, past, present and prospective—aye, tho' God should bless her for time to come with the fulness he has vouchsafed to her for the past six years. Let your Yankee see all this, and his ideas will begin to expand; he becomes a Yankee enlarged. So much for the extent of this western field. The growth of the West is talked of—always talked of—talked to death. Innumerable myriads are constantly going over the blue summits of the Alleghanies, with ultimate purposes to scale even the sterile peaks of the Rocky Mountains—to make their homes over all the broad country, from the snows of the north to the balmy breezes and effeminate luxuriousness of the south. No less than one and a half millions of the descendants of the Puritans are now in our West, cultivating their farms, and looking after the dimes. According to a statement made by a member of Congress, in 1860 there will be thirty-one millions of souls in this Union, eighteen millions of whom will be in the great valley of the West. The increase in that region for ten years, 1830 to 1840, was 74 per cent., and in the north-west no less than 108 per cent. At this rate of increase, in less than ten years this valley will possess the power and control the destinies of the Republic. A prominent feature in the West is the diversity of character there found. Many New Englanders are there—some fine, noble-hearted men, and some the meanest men I ever knew. There is the open-souled and generous Irishman; the keen, cool, crafty Scotchman; the Englishman, stiff as his own sturdy oak, and some of them as sound at the core as the old monarch of the forest; the fickle and shifting people of middle Europe; and that wonderful magician of the North, who will smoke and drink, and, living on sour beer, will chase a Greek particle through all known literature; the erudite philologist, who smokes and thinks, and thinks and writes ponderous folios, that would break a common skull. When these amalgamate, as they eventually will, they will form oh! what a glorious amalgam! destined to revolutionize, to renovate and bless the world. We must also consider the enterprise of the West. Take Cincinnati, for example. In 1847 her imports and exports amounted to—how much? how much do you think, you who live on the little patch this side the mountains and fancy you own all creation? Why, one hundred and seven millions of dollars! But her educational interest is her greatest glory. The best models of Boston school-houses only serve her, the best teachers only are employed by her, 10,170 of her children enjoy access to her higher schools. And at this moment she is leading the world in the purest of the fine arts, Sculpture, and in the strictest of the exact sciences—Astronomy.—Opulence is there to support these enterprises, and has lately opened a gallery of the Fine Arts, and which may safely challenge the continent for its superior. The people of the West, are all enterprise. I know a man who worked to the age of 40 years to feel himself a breathing place in the woods, and then went with his son and son-in-law, and sat by them in Miami University to attain a classical education. He was successful, for he said, "Without intelligence I can never be influential." There are no drones in the West unless they are imported; in & around Cincinnati there are fewer loafers than in any place I ever knew. Every man, woman and child has something to do. Those who can't work, those who can't think should stay away from the West, for there the people are walking forward with a quick-step over the shoals and quicksands of time. * * * * * * * *

In the third place, this field will richly reward all culture bestowed upon it. But men who go there want character; and they want three kinds of sense—common sense, cultivated sense, but most of all a divine sense, learned in the school of Christ emanating from the cross. Some of our young men, I am aware, graduate from the New England College, their ordinary habiliments scarce sufficing to hold their august persons, with great proficiency in the application of Latin terms, armed with the President's diploma and recommendatory letters, all which may be well; but this is not what the West requires—there he would be asked to do, for can do is the only talent there demanded. The education soaked in from the outside like Thompsonian bath is useless there. There is no field for such preachers. Blackboard knowledge and Latin roots, emptiness in the head, green glasses over the eyes, dyspepsia in the stomach, and a diploma in his hand, do not suit the people—they want what the Scotch call "gumption"—they want men like Ringgold's flying artillery, who knew how to load and fire in the hottest of the fight.—There is no need to wait for a church to call a pastor in the West; he can call his church himself. With a log cabin for a vestry, he can have around him a cathedral whose arches were wrought and wreathed, whose roof was adorned in a way the temples of Greece never knew—the blue sky is visible through its dome, the setting sun streams in between its pillars, and there, in a garb, as simple as the sublime truth he tells, he can preach the word of life; there is no need of fine linen in double quantity—linen under and linen over his garment—he will not want two shirts. With such men we should do nobly—oh! that we had them east, west, north, south, and every where; with such men the people would turn to God, and put their trust in him.

It is not only for our cotemporaries we desire this, but for the myriads whose fathers are yet unborn—for those who will fix their temple-domes on the peaks of the Rocky Mountains, in that golden age of the Anglo-Saxon race, and gaze over an empire of three hundred millions of christians, and hear the murmur of the Pacific and the roar of the Atlantic join in the mighty jubilee of love and glory to God through all that mighty valley of the West. Then would the present laborers in this field behold the unspeakable glory of which they are now sowing the seed, come to fullness—

"When wrapt in fire the realms of either glow,
And heaven's last thunder shakes the world below."

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

LETTER FROM MR. COAN, SEPTEMBER 7, 1847.

During the year I made six tours in Hilo and Puna, examined schools, and preached or lectured some four hundred times. I have also made numerous excursions and pastoral visits at and around the station, for conversation, prayer, religious instruction, &c. When at home, my house has been thronged most of the time, from morning till night, with natives; some desiring books, others medicine; some asking advice, others having difficulties to settle, and others wishing to converse on the things of religion.

There have been inquiries at the station, and through all the field, during the year. One hundred and seventeen, as you will see by the statistical table, were added to the church by profession. In several parts of the field there have been refreshing evidences of the presence of the Spirit. While many members of the church have slumbered, many others have been active, zealous and efficient in the work of the Lord.

[Mr. Coan was also enabled to report, that not less than one hundred candidates for admission to the church stood on his list at the close of the year.]

The church has been remarkably peaceful; and knowledge and stability are increasing among the members. Several protracted meetings have been held, with happy results; and I have spent several days in conference, prayer, &c. with nearly one hundred of my native deacons and helpers. I also spend considerable time with them, as I meet them in little clusters of three, five, ten, &c. when I pass through the field on my tours. Such seasons are devoted to consultation and prayer, and to giving them more specific and particular instruction in regard to the duties of their several stations.—Some of these leaders are growing men; and they are giving me much assistance by their active and energetic labors, and much consolation by their steadfastness, prudence and spirituality. Others, again, fail and bring pain and sorrow upon the pastor, and scandal upon the name of Christ.

There is not one of the members of the church who can boast of perfection, or who can be held up as a model of all that we wish to see in a saint. There is not one of them who does not sometimes give his pastor pain by his defects; and yet there is a host of them, over whom we rejoice as the children of God and the heirs of heaven. We feel sure that the Lord hath wrought a great and marvellous work here; & every passing year, though it developes human depravity, and gives us painful evidence of the self-deception of some and of the dark hypocrisy of others, confirms our conviction and our assurance that the hand of the Lord was in the great and protracted revival, the fruits of which have been here gathered. That there should be many tares and much chaff in the harvest, was to be expected, and was in fact expected. But we can truly say that amidst all the humiliating and deplorable evidences of man's ruin, as seen in the fickleness, the stupidity, and the hypocrisy of many who once "did run well," we have nevertheless great reason to praise God and take courage, for the thousands who hold on their way and give more or less evidence of the new birth. Making allowance for all the disadvantageous in the case, I know of no churches in our own land, in whose piety I have, on the whole, more confidence than in that of the Sandwich Islands Christians.

In contributions at the monthly concert, and in other beneveolent acts and labors, they have done about as usual, during the past year, and as has been from time to time reported. They have also built or rebuilt two or three meeting-houses at out-stations, and done something to improve other places of public worship.

Attendance on public worship has been uniformly good on the Sabbath; and at our weekly lectures and prayer meetings we have as large a proportion as is common in our country; yes, larger. This holds true throughout the field; in which about thirty congregations assemble regularly on each Lord's day. Probably you would see in these thirty congregations as large a proportion of the population of Hilo and Puna, as you could find in any country or community worshipping on the Lord's day.

Schools—Romanism—General Progress.

Our common schools are all in operation, and are doing as well as could be expected. All the Protestant children of a suitable age are enrolled, and all attend school, more or less regularly. The papists have organized some half dozen schools in Hilo and Puna; but, so far as I can learn, they are in operation but a small part of the time, & even then they are very thinly attended. Their schools on this island have the appearance of little else than a pretext to keep their children from Protestant schools, and, by their easy and lax discipline, to tempt the lazy and the discontented pupils in our schools to join them.

So far as I can learn, popery remains about stationary. I know of no important change in regard to the Romanists since my last report, except the location of a priest at Hilo, and the effort to collect their scattered children and organize them in schools. They have erected no permanent buildings in this field, and it is my impression that they have not increased in numbers for three years past. They have had accessions and secessions, from time to time, but all confined to an ignorant, vicious, credulous, or unstable class.

[In closing his remarks on the present condition of his field, Mr. Coan adds this valuable statement: "Physical improvements are constantly advancing at Hilo. The face of society and of nature is greatly changed. We see the transformation in dress, furniture, houses, manners, streets, yards, fences, productions, &c., &c. This is all desirable, so far as it is attended and controlled by good sense, sound morals and true religion."]

Our afflicted brother Paris, with his motherless children, has taken up his abode at Hilo. They form a portion of our family, except that for study and lodging they occupy the mission-house which was vacated by the removal of Mr. Wilcox. His plan is to make tours in Kau, as I do in my field, preach to seamen, and render me aid in my labors. By this arrangement one of us can usually be at the station, while the other is absent on tours; and it will also give a home to his children, while he makes his pastoral visits to his people in Kau.

We are now engaged in fitting up a small chapel and reading-room for seamen. The funds for this object are generously supplied by ship-masters and sailors, and by some of the foreign residents of this port.

The United States ship-of-war Cyane, Captain Du Pont, has lately made us a visit of two weeks. The Captain, who is a very intelligent man, spent much of his time in our family.—The crew had liberty on shore, and we heard of no riot, quarreling or misconduct among them. This we attribute to the absence of alcohol.—Captain Du Pont, with his officers and crew, put ninety-four dollars into my hands as a donation for the seamen's chapel. Oh, that the wealth which is lavished upon ou navy any army, were all consecrated to enlighten and to bless the world, rather than to curse it with devastation & blood!

Miscellaneous.

Take care of your things—Take care.

All of them, every thing God has given.—"Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost." Some folks are wasteful, loose, slack, slovenly, very. Leave out their tools, hoes, shovels, rakes, pitchforks, baskets, etc. These should be picked up, housed safely, carefully—a place for every thing and every thing in its place.

Husbands are wasteful, wives are wasteful, children are wasteful—children are permitted to eat to the full—fairly gormandize, stuff themselves, then scatter to the winds! We knew a poor, miserable piece of a wife, poor as poverty could make her, always living upon the hand of charity, a real slapdasher for extravagant wastefulness! Load her down with good things—fruits, vegetables, meal, flour, meat, bacon, cheese, eggs, jellies, etc. etc—the whole calabang would be launched at once into the frying pan and bake pan; the table would be loaded down, groaningly, with the richest variety, sufficient for a little army; and the residue, after the feast, was dashed into the street, or into the swill tub! Fine times! What next?—lie down, sleep like a pig—calm as a clock. Wake up, nothing to eat—every thing swept clean as a whistle; nothing to eat, pennyless, breadless, meatless, senseless, brainless! This is pauperism with a vengeance! We have now this moment one or two bright specimens in our mind's eye.—Golden Rule.

The Grateful Milliner.

A gentleman from one of the Provinces, went to a fashionable establishment in Paris, to purchase a bonnet for his wife, which he requested the mistress of the establishment to select for him. The lady selected a very elegant hat, and when the gentleman inquired the price, she answered that it had been paid for. The gentleman was much surprised; and desired an explanation.

"Sir," said the lady, "ten years ago you bought some apples of a little girl in the streets of Paris. The poor child had not enough money to change a gold piece that you gave her, and when she mentioned that her mother was very sick at home, you told her to keep the money till she had enough to change it. The little apple merchant now stands before you. I have married a rich man, and must beg of you to accept the hat as a testimony of my gratitude for a gift which saved my poor mother from much suffering."—London Paper.

"I Cannot tell a Lie."

In the war of the Revolution, while General Lafayette commanded in the American army, a part of the troops were encamped near the water's edge. One summer evening, a soldier, who was an excellent swimmer as well as fifer, took his fife with him to the water, and engaged in fifing and swimming at the same time. The music reached the ear of Lafayette. Early the next morning, he sent an officer in pursuit of the man who had thus disobeyed the orders of the camp. The soldier was a man of Connecticut and a man of truth. When arrested by the officer, he considered that, perhaps he might escape a severe punishment by denying the deed. On a moment's reflection, however, he said to himself, "I have always spoken the truth—I cannot tell a lie." With this principle in his mind, he came into the presence of the General, who asked if he were the individual who played upon the water the evening previous; to which he replied, "I am." "To-morrow, then, at such an hour, I wish you to repair to my tent."

He came at the appointed time. The General then informed him, that the tune which he had heard the evening before effected him very much—that on a former occasion it had been played at the funeral of a dear friend of his who had died in his native country. Since then, until now, he had never met with an individual who could play it. "For the purpose of indulging in the melancholy pleasure of hearing it once more, I have," said he, "sent for you." The General, after being agreeably entertained with the conversation and music of his guest, dismissed him with his thanks and some money from his purse, as an expression of his satisfaction for the performence.

"I cannot tell a lie," boys, is a good rule to follow.

American Marble.—Our citizens had an opportunity recently of examining a noble block of American statuary marble. It was taken by Messrs. Ripley and Barns from their extensive quarry in Rutland, Vermont, some fifty feet below the surface. This is the largest block of marble ever quarried in this country. It weighs nine thousand six hundred pounds. It is as pure and white as the best East Boston sugar, and is what geologists class as translucent. It is the purest marble yet found in America, and equal to any ever brought from Italy; tough, with a fine grain, takes a fine polish, and will stand our climate much better than the Carrara marble. This block was taken from Rutand to Whitehall on the railroad, thence down the canal to Troy, and over the Western Railroad to this city. Our sculptors may now look to Rutland, and not to Italy, for their material.—Boston Trans.

THE HAPPY MAN.

In walking down Second street, on my way to the Arsenal, I found a crack in my boot, and recollecting the old adage, "a stich in time saves nine," I popped into the first cobbler's shop I found, to get it mended. Unlooked-for pleasures are generally most relished. I had no expectation of meeting with a philosophical cobbler. Pulling off my boot I looked at the man. What an expressive forehead! What an expressive eye! There is truth in Physiognomy, exclaimed I to myself. That fellow's brain's are not made of green peas! As he was fixing the boot, I thought of a man with capacities for intellectual pleasure and improvement, "lofty and lordly," wasting his whole existence, pent up in a small room, knocking away with his hammer, and bending from morning till night over a lap-stone and a piece of leather. I took another look at the man, and while the glorious sun was rolling in his golden course, and all nature smiling in her most gorgeous and superb scenery, moving the gaze and filling the beholder with sublime feelings, here, said I to myself, sits a man perpetually straining his eyes to poke a hog's bristle through a little hole. What an employment for a man capable, if properly instructed, of measuring the distance to Mercury! It is impossible that he can be happy—he is out of his sphere. Just as he got the thread through the third hole, I spoke to him and said, "Your room is very small; are you happy here?" He answered with some energy, "Happy!" Yes, as happy as the day is long, and would not exchange situations with the President. I don't interfere with politics; but I know all about them."

"But are you happy in your employment, confined all day in this small room?"

"Yes, certainly. The fact is, half of the world don't know how to be happy. I was for a while humbugged about happiness, but, sitting on my stool and reflecting seriously one day, I got the secret. I thought to be happy you must be rich and great, and have an inconveniently large house, and a table groaning with every thing.—But I soon found all that was stuff. I am happier here with my last and hammer, than thousands with their fine houses and splendid equipage, & have a great deal of enjoyment, in looking out of my little cabin, and laughing at the follies of the world. They don't see me, and it does them no harm. Between you and me, the world is busy pursuing mere shadows; one wants to be rich, another to get into office—never satisfied; but here am I, mending old shoes, contented with my lot and situation, and happier by far than a King. Indeed I am thankful that heaven in its wrath never made me a King, for it is poor business."

By this time my boot was ready, and wishing to prolong the conversation with a man who displayed so much real practical Philosophy, I said—

"Have you no distressing cares to vex you, no anxieties, no sleepless nights, no bills to meet, no pangs for yesterday, no fears for to-morrow?"

He stared at me a moment, and said, "No, none. The only cares which I have are comforts. I have a wife, the best in the world, and two children which are comforts for any man to enjoy. As to bills, I have none to meet. I never buy on credit, and never buy what I do not really need. As for the fears of to-morrow, I have no fears, but trust in a kind and over-ruling Providence, believing that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, and resignation to Providence to be the truest Philosophy."

What a noble fellow, said I, to mend a crack in a boot! Himself a piece of noble workmanship! I felt inwardly the truth of the saying,—"Contentment is a kingdom;" and after I left my philosophical cobbler, I thought much about him, and am satisfied that his philosophy was sound, and that mankind in general have yet to learn the secret of being happy. His situation in life is obscure, but

Honor and fame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies.

"Contentment is a kingdom;" would that the whole human family realised this sentiment more fully, and practiced many of the maxims of the cobbler—such as never to buy on credit, and never to buy what they do not need, and trust more to our Heavenly Father, who has promised to give us whatsoever we ask in his name.—Boston Cultivator.

Value of one Leaf.

There was once a caravan crossing, I think, the north of India, and numbering in its company a godly and devout missionary. As it passed along, a poor old man was overcome by the heat and labors of the journey, and sinking down, was left to perish in the road. The missionary saw him, and kneeling down at his side, when the rest had passed along, whispered into his ear, "Brother, what is your hope?" The dying man raised himself a little to reply, and with great effort succeeded in answering, "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin;" and immediately expired with the effort.

The missionary was greatly astonished at the answer; and in the calm and peaceful appearance of the man, he felt assured that he had died in Christ. "How, or where," he thought, "could this man, seemingly a heather, have got his hope?" And as he thought of it, he observed a piece of paper grasped tightly in the hand of the corpse, which he succeeded in getting out.—What do you suppose was his surprise and delight, when he found it was a single leaf of the Bible, containing the first chapter of the first epistle of John, in which these words occur. On that page the man had found the Gospel.—Children's Miss. News.

True Hospitality.

The eccentric but brilliant writer, Ralph Waldo Emerson, has the following admirable remarks on this topic:

I pray you, Oh! excellent wife, cumber not yourself and me to get a curiously rich dinner for this man and woman who have alighted at our gate; nor a bed chamber made ready at too great a cost; those things, if they are curious in them, they can get for a few shillings in any village; but rather let this stranger see, if he will, in your looks, accents and behavior, your heart and earnestness, your thought and will which he cannot buy at any price in any city, which he may well travel twenty miles, and dine sparsely, and sleep hardly to behold. Let not the emphases of hospitality lie in bed and board; but let truth and love, and honor, and courtesy, blow in all thy deeds.

Correspondence.

[Correspondence of the Western Recorder.]

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 4, '48.

Mr. Editor,—If once there lived a Brutus who could stand up before the clamoring populace of the imperial city, and proudly ask if there was "one so base that he would not be a Roman," or if it well becomes in modern days the man of Britain's Isle not only to boast of the land he terms his own, but even to impress as with an iron pen the young mind of his first born boy the sentiment that England is the world's great centre, her source of light, and the mainspring of all her noble acts, and in fact the axis around which all other nations politically revolve, I say if this feeling thus strongly developed by the human race of every clime is justifiable, then who will check the rising emotions which may occasionally swell the bosom of that man who has had the name "American" once graven on his brow, and felt, if e'en but once the balmy breeze of freedom that "cooled his spirit's fever" and thrilled his soul with life. Nay, I have even thought that patriotic pride, mingled with a due proportion of gratitude to the Giver of all, of a right should find a permanent abode in the breast of every American citizen. Let Columbia's favored son while he stands beneath the waving folds of our country's banner and traces with eager gaze the rising circles of her soaring eagle, let him challenge the world of nations for a spot of earth so pure or nobility so true, and let him forever defy the iron heel of tyranny or the despot's vain attempt to tarnish for one moment the unsullied lustre of our country's glorious stars.

It has been my privilege, Mr. Editor, for a few years past to travel over several of the little nations of our union, little when contrasted with the whole 30 in one, yet one of them has a greater number of square miles than has both England and Wales, and either one of many has more extent of territory and is of far more importance in its existence on the earth than are the kingdoms of Norway, Sweden, and others which we might name, and I assure you that from the orange and palmetto groves of Georgia and Carolina, to the abrupt and craggy bluffs over which the eternal pines of Maine, N. Hampshire, & Vermont hold converse with the stars, from the luxuriant hills and fertile valleys of your western sphere to the shores of the broad Atlantic, there needs no words of comment or of argument to convince the intelligent citizen that all is surpassingly beautiful and magnificently grand. When therefore I sit down as on the present occasion, to attempt to portray or define those scenes which are "peculiar to a single point," I confess a feeling of diffidence lest the reader should imagine that I claim superiority for said locality or Iste faveo sententia, but if you please we will attend for a few moments to a brief sketch of some things which may interest us, in this "the land of steady habits."

Who has not heard of New Haven, "the city of elms," the beautiful and romantic, first planted by an humble few, who fleeing from the chains of their oppressors, caused to rejoice by their praises and devotions, the land which was then a "wilderness" but now "blossoms as the rose?" Since the first settlement 210 years have passed, the bones of our pilgrim fathers have long mouldered in the grave; their children and their children's children have passed away and been forgotten, but the traces of their foot-prints are seen on every hand. I see from my chamber window in various directions those high and graceful spires which denote the temple of God; these are indications of the visible germ of those seeds of piety that were sown beneath the forest trees, which occupied the same position, their beauty and skill manifested in the architectural proportions of our fine buildings, public and private. What man is there who will say that these had not their origin in the chaste & unadulterated taste of the Puritans? The diversity of objects, both historical and descriptive, for which New Haven is noted, we could speak of with pleasure had we favorable opportunity. The literary advantages possessed, together with the quietude and neatness of a city of 20 000 inhabitants, the wideness of its streets, which are laid out at right angles, similar to those of Philadelphia, but much more beautifully arched & shaded with our ancient and majestic elms, the ocean breezes so constantly enjoyed, with the Italian skies, and balmy air, peculiar to New England, each tend to render this place a favorite resort for lovers of science, literature, the arts, and we may add health and pleasure. But I pass to notice our business facilities. These are rapidly increasing from day to day, and the city is daily enlarging her borders. Manufacturing is of course extensively carried on, for without these we could not exist and thrive. Trade is not quite on a par with some of our sister cities, but in this particular she is gaining. Already she spreads her iron arms in four different directions over the surrounding country, and the rattling of whirling wheels, together with the martial neigh or her iron horses, which are heard at a distance nearly every hour in the day, and other causes not necessary to specify, show plainly that in business enterprize we are in keeping with the spirit of the age.

One additional statement and I close. It is to be regretted that there is not that cordial, hearty friendship existing here among those who should be friends, in different walks of life, and which is so prominent a feature at the west. There is a splendid show of aristocracy which spices too freely the common sense of many of our citizens, but we rejoice to know that with many of our men of sense this beautiful folly is growing smaller and still smaller. Heaven grant that it may become "beautifully less," until like some waning meteor it dies in the distant horizon, and is numbered with the things that were.

Yours, with much respect,

J. H. J.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, August 24, 1848.

WANTED—Any number or quantity of responsible new Subscribers, to commence with Volume Ten. Brethren will please bring as many names of such as they can to the ensuing Conferences.

☞We stop the press to give notice that a private letter just received from Brother Z. Ragan, informs us of the serious illness of Brother. G. Brown, President of the Pittsburgh Conference. He has been confined to his room three weeks by sickness, but is thought now to be convalescent. Brother B. desires us to state that it is not probable he will be able to attend the session of his Conference. Was ever the seat of Geo. Brown before vacant in his Annual Conference? Our prayer is that he may yet receive strength, if it please God, to reach there even this time also.

☞We regret that it is out of our power to attend the session of the Pittsburgh Conference next week. The Ohio Conference of which we are a member meets but a few days later, at a distance of from 300 to 400 miles, so that it is impossible to attend both. Br. Joseph Burns has kindly consented to act as our Agent at the Pittsburgh Conference. Brethren, all, who have on hand dues or payments in advance for the Western Recorder, will oblige us by making payment to him for us. Also, dues for pamphlets. Names of new subscribers, and orders for the Annual Register for 1849, can also be reported to Brother Burns, with any information touching the business of the Western Recorder.

☞The second General Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Connexion, holds its session in New York, City, commencing Oct. 4th, 1848.

Removal of the Seat of Government.—Mr. Vinton of Ohio, speaking in his place in the U. S. House of Representatives, in faver of an appropriation for an improvement in Washington city, expressed himself as decidedly opposed to the removal of the seat of government from that place. He remarked:

"It had been said that other cities would willingly pay a large bonus for the privilege of having the seat of Government removed within their limits. He trusted the seat of Government would never come into his State. Ohio could not afford to give the city of Cincinnati to this Government. The Government, if it removed, would never be located in a State. It must be placed in a wild place, in some unoccupied spot, where the public buildings requisite might be erected. But, for one, he did not choose to see the Government go away from this spot, where such large amounts had been expended in providing for it the requisite accommodations."

Missouri Conference, M. P. Church.

In February last we published some notice of the last session of the new Conference in Missouri, which we abstracted from the Meth. Protestant. This was professedly its fourth session.—We expressed our surprise that this new conference did not report itself either by representative or by leter to the last General Conference, & that the rule of Discipline was not complied with, requiring the proofs of its legal organization to be reported in writing to that body, and that therefore it was not recognized. We added, that we should be gratified to learn of the existence of a prosperous Conference of our Connection in Missouri. But we were not satisfied that due regard had been had to the rule of Discipline, thus far, in the organization and proceedings of the Conference,—that if we could learn that all has been made right, we could gladly concur, & make the same known to our readers. Our remarks having been copied into the Methodist Protestant, in the number of that paper for May 27 we meet with a response thereto, by Rev. B. F. Nowlin of Missouri, which we take pleasure in copying below. This should have been done at an earlier period, but was inadvertently omitted. It seems by this brother's statement, that it was the misfortune, not the fault of the Missouri brethren, that they were not represented in the General Conference of 1846, and their interests and claims properly attended to. No reflection therefore, of course, rests upon them. What we have now to request, is that they publish promptly their Minutes after their ensuing, session embracing the statistics of the District, for the information of the church. We expect in a few weeks to issue the Annual Register of M. P. Church for 1849, embracing the statistics of the church, and should be glad to receive information in time, to make report of the Missouri Conference.

Missouri Conference.

Dear Brother.—From the notice taken of the Missouri Annual Conference, as published in an extract from the Western Recorder, in a late number of the Methodist Protestant, we in Missouri seem to be in quite a dilemma from which there is no escape, especially if left to the mercy of the worthy editor of that periodical.

Now the state of the case is this, after taking all the preparatory steps as laid down in the Discipline for the sitting off a new conference, we felt ourselves legally authorized to organize, subject to the action of the ensuing General Conference; we accordingly did so, and prepared our delegates to meet that body at its session with all the necessary evidences of our organization, with petitions, memorials, &c.; not doubting but that they would go on, nor were we informed of the failure until it was too late for any other means to be resorted to. As soon as the failure was known many were discouraged, having been struggling hard for life as a Church. But having learned through the Church paper, that we were recognised and the State of Missouri was set off into an annual conference, we again took courage and breasted the storm. At the last session of our Annual Conference, the Church at St. Louis requested to be recognized by us, and that body not doubting but St. Louis was within our bounds gladly recognized them and sent them a preacher, and the first thing that we have seen to create suspicion that all was not right was the fact that we were not named in the list of Annual Conferences in the last edition of our Discipline, supposing that the General Conference in her clemency was willing to give us a trial for our life.

Now I have no wish to see our brethren depart from, or trample on, the rule of the Church so as to compromise, in any degree, the true spirit of our Discipline; but I shall be glad to learn through your columns the most advisable course to be pursued by us. Our itinerant brethren are doing all that could be expected from them to sustain our cause; surrounded by enemies on every hand, and nowto go back and start anew would be death to our cause in Missouri, and to remain in a state of uncertainty would paralize all our efforts.

Our good brother, the editor of the Recorder, seems to think us regardless of order and the law of our Church. I will inform him that there are those among us who, for the sake of the principles inculcated in our Church polity, stepped out with the first west of the Mississippi river—those who have almost worn themselves out in the struggle for the economy of our Church—those with no other reward but a good conscience have labored at their own charges, and are willing to labor—those who have spent hundreds in endeavoring to disseminate our principles & sustaining our cause in the far west, amidst many discouragements, and a formidable host arrayed against us; but, hitherto, thus far the good Lord has led us on, and we wish to know it, through the negligence of one or two, a damp will be, by our own brethren, thrown over our feelings, and our prospects blighted just as we saw (or at least hoped we saw) the bow of promise. I know this will be a matter of investigation, and subject to the decision of the next General Conference; but without some assurance to present to the public, our enemies, taking advantage of our supposed perilous condition, will make head against us, and our brethren already discouraged will, many of them, despair of success. For the present, hoping our brethren will notice our efforts more friendly, I will close this, wishing it may obtain an early insertion in your paper. May the good Lord bless the Church. Amen.

B. F. NOWLIN.

Greene Co. Mo., April 13, 1848.

The Present Congress.

Dr. Baily, of the National Era, in the last number of his paper draws the following comparison between the two Houses of the National Legislature, and closes by recommending an amendment of the Constitution, by which the Senators should be chosen directly by the people, instead of the Legislatures of the States.

"A residence in Washington, affording ample opportunies for observing the Senate, its composition and action, has greatly abated the admiration with which we once regarded that body. It is more orderly than the House of Representatives—not the "Lower House," as some lovers of English usages affectedly phrase it—not because the members individually are more respectable or dignified, but because their Chamber is better adapted than the hall of the House to deliberative purposes, and their number is only one fourth of the number of Representatives. Take two hundred and thirty men, the elite of the contrary in point of dignity, moderation, and intelligence, seat them in the hall of the House, to consult, discuss, and decide, and they will find themselves unable to maintain quiet order. The discordant echoes of a single speaker, to say nothing of the distracting noises multiplied from occasional undertoned conversations between the members, which in the Senate Chamber would scarcely be noticed, harass the ear, jar on the nervous system, and can hardly fail to produce an irritability unfavorable to decorum and sobriety. There is just as much inattention, restlessness, locomotion, conversation, in the Senate, in proportion to its numbers, during business hours, as in the House.

In real oratory, with three or four exceptions, the House generally has the advantage of the Senate, although the speaker in the former labors under peculiar disadvantages. In the Senate no one hour rule cramps the mind, and confounds it in its effort to range over a vast subject within the space of sixty minutes. No distracting echoes perplex its consecutiveness of thought. No physical agony is required to secure a hearing. The speaker may rise no higher than a conversational tone, and yet be distinctly understood in every part of the Chamber. But in the House, the voice, except in peculiar cases, where great art has succeeded in modulating it so as to avoid confused echoes, must be strained to its utmost extent, and then, not unfrequently, the louder it is, the more indistinct becomes the enunciation. Despite these disadvantages, with the three or four exceptions mentioned above, the Representatives, as a body, excel the Senators in the vigor and warmth of their oratory.

In relation to age, and experience in public life, the Senate, on the average, has not the slightest advantage over the House. As to intellectual ability and practical wisdom, take New York and New England, and, with the exception of three or four men, their Senators scarcely reach the average of the House of Representatives; while the Senators from Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois, with perhaps one exception, positively fall below the average. Leaving out of the comparison some half a dozen Southern Senators, the Senators and Representatives from the slaveholding States stand upon a common level in these respects. Then take the Senators whom we have excepted, as being above the average of the House in intellectual ability and practical wisdom, and they can easily be matched, at least in the latter point, by many members of that body.

Col. Curtis, of the Cincinnati Commercial, an independant paper, has lately visited Washinging city. We copy a few passages from his "Notes by the Way," in the last "Commercial," embracing some accounts of his visit & observations at the Capitol. We cannot help thinking that Curtis is no office seeker, or he would use less freedom in speaking of the unworthy course of Congressmen of the different parties. If his account is true, however, which we cannot question, they certainly ought to be exposed, that the country may know how our public servants, under large pay, spend their time. The following is under date, August 4.

I took a "hasty" supper, and hurried to the capitol; for, as the session was drawing to a close, I expected some important business was transacting, as members of the House, mostly, still held themselves away from their suppers. What was my astonishment, as I looked upon the floor, to hear a gentleman, on the Whig side of the room, making a most violent and enthusiastic speech just like we hear from the stump, in favor of Gen. Taylor's election, and he was followed by another gentleman, on the other side of the room, against Taylor and in favor of Cass! These speeches were each for "Buncombe," both had them printed and ready for mailing today to the constituency, and for general circulation in the newspapers of these two great party divisions. I do not know how this looks to the people, but it seemed to be insulting to the nation, and the intelligence of the whole voting population in particular. Has it come to this, that the members of our National Congress charge the people eight dollars per day, and all the expenses of the House, to make political speeches in favor of this, or that man's election, and incidentally for their own? If Congress once assembled can elect themselves again, and have pay for helping their own elections; and if Congress can be in session as long as it pleases, and electioneer all or half the time in favor of the nominees of the two great parties for the Presidential Chair, and be instrumental in placing whom they please in the White House, what remains for the people to do? Nothing, absolutely nothing but to obey the will of the office holders! Alas! our Congress has become a rostrum for foul mouth party rancor. Here the speakers stand and speak to the nation, and counsel the honest electors how they should vote! How can the people refrain from taking such 'disinterested' advice, given 'gratis' by men sent here to make good and wise laws at eight dollars per day, and mileage by the thousand when that advice is to send them back again? If such be not the direct, it is the indirect advice given by these gentlemen. It half past 12 this morning before the House adjourned, & a hard time they had of it. Poor fellows, how they are to be pitied—obliged to be up so late at work, so busily for the 'people.' We are very much mistaken if the country believe it necessary for Congress to attend to any such business as President making or electioneering of any kind, at any time, but especially at the fag end of an elongated session, distinguished for its indolence above all its predecessors.

L. G. C.

Under date of August 6. Col. C. gives the following amusing observations upon the U. S. Senate.

At an early hour this morning I went into the gallery of the U. S. Senate, because from that point I could observe matters and things better. The Naval Appropriation Bill was being considered, and amendments giving claims for money to Individuals and companies for alleged services, were constantly offering and being considered, and alowed, or not, as their merits seemed to demand. While this was going on, I was "taking notes" of the body present, merely for amusement. They read as follows:

No. of Senators grey headed,		12
"	" with bald heads,	15
"	" reading newspapers, (at a time)	7
"	" who spoke on the bill, in all,	20
"	" who scratched their heads when they rose to speak,	10
"	" who wore gold spectacles,	17
"	" who wore silver spectacles,	3
"	" who had on black coats,	39
"	" who wore white vests,	8
"	" wore calico, or figured light vests,	6
"	" who wore light neckerchiefs,	12
"	" with curly hair,	8
"	" of light complexion,	20
"	" are corpulent (including Lewis)	6
"	" paying attention at a time, generally,	12
"	" who chewed tobacco!	20
"	" with hair ROUGHED back,	23
"	" with hair parted on the crown,	2

☞The following article from the Alton Telegraph, on the prevalence of suicides, contains some correct views, and closes with a good suggestion. We concur with the Editor of the Telegraph in the opinion, that the too common practice of publishing such tragic acts is of injurious tendency, and may tend to multiply them. From such a conviction, it has been our habit to refrain from giving in our paper the details or even the announcements of such occurrences. We do upon reflection recollect one instance which we published some months ago, for the purpose of pointing out the evil tendency of novel reading. It was the case of a young lady of Pittsburgh, who precipitated herself into the Monongahela river, and perished. On examination, a novel was found secreted in her bed, with the place indicated where a similar tragedy was detailed. Such pernicious books, and newspaper tales of the like character, we doubt not, have much to do in exciting to rash acts, the minds of the unwary.

SUICIDES,

Have of late become alarmingly frequent in different parts of the Union and do not appear to be confined to any one class of persons, but, on the contrary, like some fatal epidemic, number among the victims people of every age, sex, & condition.—The rich and the poor, the old and the young, the matron and the maiden, the professional man and the mechanic, and the laborer, the farmer and the clergyman, all appear to be affected by the same dreadful disease—for a disease, or at least a sort of mania, it evidently is, let the form it assumes in different individuals be what it may. To what primary cause it should be attributed, seems, however, difficult to imagine. It, like the Irish, the citizens of the United States were in danger of immediate starvation; or if, in common with some of the French, and other Europeans, they had been in a moment reduced from affluence to poverty, and deprived of the means of subsistence by the late revolutionary movements; it might be supposed that the fear of want may in many cases be the leading motive to self-destruction. But, such is not the case here. The greatest abundance every where prevails; and, although riches sometimes make unto themselves wings, and fly away from the possessor, in this country as well as in others, yet the avenues to independence are open to all, and every man, however poor, may always find the means of providing comfortably for his family.

It may, then, be asked, why are suicides so common among us, that almost every newspaper, as it is issued from the press, records one or more instance of the voluntary abandonment of of life To such a question, it may perhaps be impracticable to give a satisfactory answer. It is, however, probable that the causes leading to this fatal delusion are almost as various as the names and dispositions of those who become affected by it; and that only few, if any, of the victims, have been actuated by precisely the same motives. But, while this is freely admitted, the question may still arise, whether the very general publicity given to acts of this kind by the newspaper press, may not, in some measure, contribute to their frequency? We have already expressed the opinion, that this contempt, or loathing of life, by which individuals are led to throw it away as a worthless boon, or an intolerable burden, is a disease; and we are inclined to the belief that, to a certain extent, it is infectious, and, under favorable circumstances may, by sympathy, and the force of example, be communicated to susceptible persons, who, should, therefore, be removed, as far as possible, from all such influences. Be this, however, as it may—we are persuaded that no possible good can result from the publications to which we allude; and we think that our brethren of the press could abandon the practice without injury to the public interests, to themselves, or to the reputation of their respective journals.

CONVENTION AT BUFFALO.

The Editor of the Watchman of the Valley who attended, devotes nearly a page of his paper to an account of his tour and visit to the Convention, and its proceedings. He says that the Convention was in many respects a remarkable one.

"1. For its immense numbers—estimated at from fifty to seventy thousand. Any thing like an accurate estimate is impossible. The number was quite too large for any one to know who was there or how many. I expected to meet many old and valued acquaintances, from both East and West. They were there indeed, as I learned from seeing their names in connexion with the proceedings; but to find them in such a multitude was utterly impossible.

"2. The Committee was remarkable for the character of its members. They were a mass of sober, intelligent, and moral people. I mingled extensively with the crowd, and not a profane or angry word did I hear within the tent; not a whiskey breath did I find there. To the religious exercises connected with this meeting, a devout and reverential attention was universally given.

"3. It was remarkable for the courtesy, harmony, and kind feeling that characterised all its proceedings. All fears of conflicting minds and interests were happily dissipated when delegates came to compare views. The platform, which was all, and even more than the most strenuous Liberty men asked, was adopted with entire unanimity. As to candidates, no one had any partialities to gratify; one object and one spirit pervaded the mass. Principles and not men, were all that was sought for. The sole wish of every one was to get a Ticket that would best secure that great object. The informal balloting, noticed in another column, was designed simply to elicit the different views of delegates; it was not a conflict between rival candidates. I believe it was the choice, all things considered, after this informal trial, of every man that voted for Hale, to have Van Buren nominated. In nominating the Vice President, there was a courtesy exchanged between East and West, unknown here in such proceedings. The western delegation proposed Mr. Adams unanimously. Massachusetts strenuously remonstrated, insisting on a Western, and would not consent till the West had tried again and found that Mr. Adams was their choice over all others.

"4. Another remarkable thing in this connection was, that we had morning prayer-meetings, at five o'clock connected with it, for three mornings in succession; and excellent and soul-stirring meetings they were. Here is the secret of the good feeling and unanimity that pervaded the meeting."

The following resolutions were adopted by the Convention.

Resolved, That we, the people here assembled, remembering the example of our fathers in the days of the first Declaration of Independence, putting our trust in God for the triumph of our cause, and invoking His guidance in our endeavors to advance it, do now plant ourselves upon the National Platform of Freedom, in opposition to the Sectional Platform of Slavery.

Resolved, That slavery, in the several States of this Union which recognise its existence, depends upon State laws alone, which cannot be repealed or modified by the Federal Government, and for which laws that Government is not responsible. We therefore propose no interference by Congress with slavery within the limits of any State.

Resolved, That the proviso of Jefferson, to prohibit the existence of slavery, after 1800, in all the Territories of the United States, Southern and Northern; the votes of six States and sixteen delegates, in the Congress of 1784, for the proviso, to three States and seven delegates against it; the actual exclusion of slavery from the Northwestern Territory by the Ordinance of 1787, unanimously adopted by the States in Congress, and the entire history of that period, clearly show that it was the settled policy of the Nation, not to extend, nationalize, or encourage, but to limit, localize, and discourage, slavery; and to this policy, which sould never have been departed from, the Government ought to return.

Resolved, That our fathers ordained the Constitution of the United States, in order, among other great national objects, to establish justice, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of Liberty; but expressly denied to the Federal Government, which they created, all constitutional power to deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due legal process.

Resolved, That, in the judgment of this Convention, Congress has no more power to make a slave than to make a king; no more power to institute or establish slavery than to institute or establish a monarchy; no such power can be found among those specifically conferred by the Constitution, or derived by just implication from them.

Resolved, That it is the duty of the Federal Government to relieve itself from all responsibility for the existence or continuance of slavery wherever that Government possesses constitutional authority to legislate on that subject, and is thus responsible for its existence.

Resolved, That the true, and, in the judgment of this Convention, the only safe means of preventing the extension of slavery into territory now free, is to prohibit its existence in all such territory by an act of Congress.

Resolved, That we accept the issue which the Slave Power has forced upon us, and to their demand for more Slave States and more Slave Territories, our calm but final answer is, no more Slave States and no more Slave Territory. Let the soil of our extensive domains be ever kept free, for the hardy pioneers of our own land, and the oppressed and banished of other lands, seeking homes of comfort and fields of enterprise in the New World.

Resolved, That the bill lately reported by the Committee of Eight in the Senate of the United States, was no compromise, but an absolute surrender of the rights of the non-slaveholders of all the States; and while we rejoice to know that a measure which, while opening the door for the introduction of slavery into territories now free, would also have opened the door to litigation and strife among the future inhabitants thereof, to the ruin of their peace and prosperity, was defeated in the House of Representatives, its passage, in a hot haste, by a majority, embracing several Senators who voted in open violation of the known will of their constituents, should warn the People to see to it, that their representatives be not suffered to betray them. There must be no more compromises with Slavery; if made, they must be repealed.

Resolved, That we demand Freedom and established institutions for our brethren in Oregon, now exposed to hardships, peril, and massacre, by the reckless hostility of the Slave Power to the establishment of Free Government for Free Territories—and not only for them, but for our new brethren in California and New Mexico.

And whereas it is due, not only to this occasion, but to the whole People of the United States, that we should also declare ourselves on certain other questions of national policy, therefore,

Resolved, That we demand cheap postage for the people; a retrenchment of the expenses and patronage of the Federal Government; the abolition of all unnecessary offices and salaries; and the election by the People of all civil officers in the service of the Government, so far as the same may be practicable.

Resolved, That river and harbor improvements, when demanded by the safety and convenience of commerce with foreign nations or among the several States, are objects of national concern; and that it is the duty of Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional powers, to provide therefor.

Resolved, That the free grant to actual settlers, in consideration of the expenses they incur in making settlements in the wilderness, which are usually fully equal to their actual cost, and of the public benefits resulting therefrom, of reasonable portions of the public lands, under suitable limitations, is a wise and just measure of public policy, which will promote, in various ways, the interests of all the States of this Union; and we therefore recommend it to the favorable consideration of the American People.

Resolved, That the obligations of honor and patriotism require the earliest practicable payment of the national debt, and we are therefore in favor of such a tariff of duties as will raise revenue adequate to defray the necessary expenses of the Federal Government, and to pay annual instalments of our debt and the interest thereon.

Resolved, That we inscribe our own banner, "Free Soil, Free Speech, Free Labor, and Free Men," and under it will fight on and fight ever, until a triumphant victory shall reward our exertions.

Ohio District.

Twin Creek Circuit.—We learn by private letter from Br. Yonkey, that Br. Nutty lately held his fourth quarterly meeting at Sister Clark's. Quite a good season was enjoyed, which resulted in an accession of two to the church. People generally appeared to take quite an interest in the meeting, and a good impression it is thought, was made upon the minds of unbelievers. Br. N. had the assistance of Father White and Br. Stibbens. Also Br. J. H. Thomas and J. H. Flood, who labored faithfully, and appeared to be at home.

Wright's Paper.—Wright's Casket.—We have lately received from the publisher, specimen numbers of these two publications. They are each issued monthly at 25 cents a year.—The "Paper" is a sheet of sixteen large pages, in double columns, suitable for binding, and containing good embellishments. It is devoted to the "dissemination of useful knowledge," and is under the direction & supervision of the 'American Society' instituted for that purpose. So far as we have had time to examine, we think the "Paper" an instructive & useful work. The "Casket" is a large sheet for the ladies, devoted to their improvement. It discards silly tales, and other deliterious matter, and appears to be closely filled with valuable reading matter. A lady to whose inspection we submitted the numbers, admires the work very much. Address A. E. Wright, Philadelphia.

Shall we be favored with a copy of the August paper?

Br. Bassett:

You will oblige me by publishing the following correction of errors, which appear in my letter published in the Recorder of August 3.

First column, lines 38 and 39, for "these are," read, "there are."

Second column, line 5, for "national," read, "rational."

Same column, line 24, for "never," read "now."

Yours, very sincerely,

WM. McGWIGAN.

Lynchburg, Aug. 12, 1848.

MARKETS.

LATEST DATES.

Putnam & Zanesville—Flour, $4.00; Wheat, 65; Corn, 30; Oats, 19;

Cincinnati—Flour, $3.75; Wheat, 65; Corn, 29; Oats, 24.

Pittsburgh—Flour, $4.20; Wheat, 75@80; Oats, 25.

☞The Zanesville Courier of yesterday has the following intelligence by telegraph, important if true.

THE IRISH INSURRECTION!

THE INSURGENTS VICTORIOUS!!

Six Thousand British Killed and Wounded.

DUBLIN PREPARING TO STRIKE.

New York, Aug. 21.

The New York Tribune has received its Irish correspodence, written in cipher to avoid the vigilance of the English authorities.

From this we learn the thrilling tidings that the Irish people have won a great victory at Slivenamore.

General McDonald was killed, and six thousand British troops were killed and wounded.

The road for three miles was covered with the dead.

Kilkenny and Limerick were taken possession of by the people.

Dublin was to rise on Sunday to free the prisoners from the jails.

[This is far different from our account of this morning. But that was drawn from British sources. It is evident that Ireland is now in the midst of a death-struggle—a struggle for liberty.]

THE IRISH NEWS.

NEW YORK, AUG., 22, P. M.

The Irish news is producing great excitement. The "Tribune's" secret correspondence must have some foundation, but the English censorship is very stringent.

A letter from Dublin, dated the 2d, says: Six Thousand British troops, under McDonald and McGregor, tried to force a passage over the mountain of Slivenamore, seven miles South of Cork. The insurgents met them. The troops fired, but the Irish fell flat on their faces; the fire passed over them, and they charged, with shouts, while other parties of the insurgents made an attack in the rear, cutting up the British tremendously.

Slivenamore is well supplied with provisions and ammunition, is 17 miles in circumference, 3 miles from base to summit, and is surrounded by bog.

The American packets arriving at Liverpool are searched by the Police, for members of the American "Irish Brigade" and armed sympathizing confederates.

FROM ILLINOIS.—Our friend J. R. Johnson gives us an account of an interesting meeting lately held in Knox county, Illinois. A friend having finished a new frame barn, desired first to worship God in it before filling it with the products of the field. The meeting of the President, Br. Strong, was accordingly held there, the first Sabbath in August. His labors were blessed of the Lord,—sinners, old and young, crowded to the anxious seat together, and many were enabled to rejoice in God their Savior. A class of sixteen members was organized. Further particulars will no doubt be given by Brother Bagley. The place spoken of, is four miles east of Knoxville.

News of the Week.

Mexican Laws and Decrees Concerning SLAVERY.

At the present crisis in our national affairs, the public attention is strongly drawn to the legislation of Mexico concerning slavery in that republic. We have great pleasure in laying before our readers the following seasonable and authentic information upon the subject, which has been furnished to us from the Department of State:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 12, 1848.

GENTLEMEN: In answer to numerous inquiries made at the department by members of Congress and others, in relation to the laws of Mexico concerning slavery, I herewith communicate to you, for publication, correct translations of the decree of President Guerrero, of the 15th September, 1829, and of the act of the Mexican Congress of 5th April, 1837, on the subject. The original of the decree may be found in volume 5, page 149; and that of the act, in volume 8, page 201, of the "Collection de Leyes y Decretos del Congreso General de la Nacion Mexicana."

Yours, respectfully,
JAMES BUCHANAN.

Messrs. RITCHIE AND HEISS.

ABOLITION OF SLAVERY.

The President of the Mexican United States to the Inhabitants of the Republic.

BE IT KNOWN—

That, being desirous to signalize the anniversary of independence, in the year 1829, by an act of national justice and beneficence, which may redound to the advantage and support of so inestimable a good; which may further insure the public tranquillity; which may tend to the aggrandizement of the republic, and may reinstate an unfortunate portion of its inhabitants in the sacred rights which nature gave to them, & the nation should protect by wise and just laws;—conformably with the dispositions of the 13th article of the constituent act, employing the extraordinary faculties which have been conceded to me, I have resolved to decree—

1. Slavery is and shall remain abolished in the republic.

2. In consequence, those who have hitherto been regarded as slaves are free.

3. Whensoever the condition of the treasury shall permit, the owners of the slaves shall be indemnified according to the terms which the law may dispose.

MEXICO, Sept. 15, 1829.

A. D. JOSE MARIA DE BOCANEGRA.

Law for the Abolition of Slavery in the Republic.

ART. 1. Slavery is abolished, without any exception, throughout the whole republic.

2. The owners of the slaves manumitted by the present law, or by the decree of September 15, 1829, shall be indemnified for their interests in them, to be estimated according to the proofs which may be presented of their personal qualities; to which effect, one appraiser shall be appointed by the commissary general, or the person performing his duties, and another by the owner; and, in case of disagreement, a third, who shall be appointed by the respective constitutional alcalde; and from the decision thus made, there shall be no appeal. The indemnification mentioned in this article shall not be extended to the colonists of Texas, who may have taken part in the revolution in that department.

3. The owner to whom the original documents drawn up with regard to the proofs mentioned in the preceding article, shall be delivered gratis—shall themselves present them to the supreme government, which will authorize the general treasury to issue to them the corresponding orders for the amount of their respective interests.

4. The payment of the said orders shall be made in the manner which may seem most equitable to the government, with the view of reconciling the rights of individuals with the actual state of the public affairs.

April 5, 1847.

Steamboat Explosion---50 Fives Lost!

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 14th—P. M.

The steamboat Edward Bates colapsed a flue near Hamburg, Illinois, yesterday morning, killing fifty of the deck passengers and crew. The dead were buried at Hamburg, and the wounded brought to this city.

Destructive Fire.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 15th.

A fire occurred this morning which destroyed a large bagging factory on the corner of 6th and Market street. The loss is estimated at $80,000, which is partially covered by insurance.

A subscription of $1,000,000, or twenty thousand shares, to the capital stock of the Pennsylvania Railroad, on the part of the county of Allegheny, Pa., has been finally closed by the county commissioners.

From the Watchman of the Valley.

THE RETURNED VOLUNTEERS.

We wish to aid in fixing indelibly upon the public mind and upon the page of history, some facts connected with the condition of the returned volunteers. We speak only of their physical condition, although both their intellectual and moral calls for notice. These are American troops, volunteer troops who have been in a war of only eighteen months, and have shown as soldiers a spirit of self-denial, of courage and noble daring worthy of all praise. By their valor and self-sacrifices they have carried out the designs of the government, and won for the American arms a most distinguished military renown.—Their bloody work thoroughly accomplished they are recalled by a government possessed of the most ample resources for their comfort and reward. But when the conquering heroes return, what is their appearance and condition? It is painful to write it, much more to witness it.—While we look upon the whole Mexican war with unmitigated abhorrence, we cannot but view the condition of our returned troops with mingled pity and indignation. To see an American army of citizen volunteers returning in triumph, but in rags, is too bad. To see them marching in triumphant procession through our streets, under triumphant arches, escorted by thousands to the banqueting hall unwashed and unshaved; without stockings or shoes, bare headed and bootless, in some cases without even a shirt, to say nothing of their feeble, sickly, dying condition is enough to make any American blush for shame, and enough one would think to excite the deepest disgust and loathing of all war.

The press throughout the land speaks of the great destitution of the returned volunteers as revolting, shameful, and cruel. Says a Massachusetts paper, "the returned volunteers present melancholy pictures of the effects of war."—Says another, "an instructive though melancholy sight, that encampment presents." After a most graphic but painful description of the Massachusetts regiment, depicting their appearance, their privations and sufferings, the Boston Traveller remarks, "Such shocking inhumanity on the part of those in authority is almost incredible, but the appearance of the men bitterly attests the truth. The pomp and parade of their formal reception, for the glorification of their officers and the stay at home war men, must have been anything but palatable to the victims of such cruel injustice."

Says the Pathfinder, "We visited the quarters of the Massachusetts regiment, near this city, and in common with thousands of our fellow citizens, cannot refrain from expressing our surprise and mortification at finding such undeniable evidence of hard usage and ill treatment as was exhibited to us in the appearance of the soldiers. We had no idea of such a scene of misery and destitution, such a want of cleanliness and clothing, and such an utter prostration of body and mind as was manifest on all sides."

Says another paper speaking of the public reception, "Last Saturday was a sad day for Boston. To make a spectacle of two hundred miserably clothed and half-starved men—men carrying daggers and looking daggers, and breathing imprecations against those by whose agency they felt themselves to have been crushed—to make such a mock show of sympathy was altogether indescribable to Bostonians."

These are but specimens that come to us from all parts of the land and from all parties. The Cincinnati press has spoken as it ought in reference to the Ohio troops. Their condition has never been fully made known. The public protest of their officers reveals facts the most revolting. The individual testimony of the soldiers confirm them. Said a friend of ours who was one of them, "The horrors of the middle passage best illustrate our condition and sufferings, homeward." Stowed like Africans in a slaveship, fed on food alive with vermin; sick, without medicine, clothing or money! This young friend said that he had only nine cents from the time he left Mexico till he got home. We were informed that two young men jumped overboard below this city, swam ashore, walked up to the city in the night, and prepared themselves decently to take their places in the procession next morning.

But this caps the climax. We heard a known and respectable citizen make the following statement: that sixteen volunteers were brought in an omnibus from the camp to attend the public dinner at Marchant's stable, who were too feeble to walk. That they were all more or less covered with vermin; four of them had neither shoes nor coats; some had no hats or shirts, and one had neither shirt or pantaloons, but a Mexican blanket only! And this at a public dinner in honer of their heroic and triumphant exploits!

We pretend not to say where the blame of all this evil lies. Probably it belongs to different parties. The Government most certainly deserves censure. The officers in some cases at least, are blameworthy, while most of the suffering was the natural result of war.

At the public dinner in old Fanueil Hall, when General Cushing arose to speak, his troops spontaneously hissed him down, and neither his influence nor that of his friends could secure a hearing. Would that the entire body of volunteers throughout the land could have an opportunity of expressing their sentiments towards the general government, on the subject of an invading war, equally as effective. Let the parties who hope for success in the coming presidential election by an appeal to the martial spirit of our people, heed the timely suggestions of Burritt and gather the half-starved, half-naked, crippled and wounded volunteers, and march them round the land as a perfect demonstration of the truth of their arguments and a living illustration of the beneficial results that might be expected from their success.

Passage of the Oregon Bill.---Disgraceful Scene.

It will be seen by the proceedings of the Senate, that at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, that body having remained in session twenty-four consecutive hours, the Oregon Territorial Bill was passed, as it came from the House, with the Missouri Compromise stricken out. The whole night had been consumed in an endeavor on the part of the Southern members to stave off the final action on the bill, by killing time. It was, however, finally passed by a vote of 29 to 25.

During the debate, it will bee seen by our report, that quite an exciting & rather a disgraceful scene, occurred between Senators Benton and Butler—the end of which may probably not be yet; unless it is to be regarded merely a Senatorial bluster.—Baltimore Sun.

IRISH NEWS EXCITEMENT.—The news by the Acadia produced a strong sensation in both New York and Philadelphia. The Herald says, that in New York it far exceeded even that of the reception of the news of the French revolution. There was a crowd of probably one thousand persons around that office; and the gathering at Vauxhall Garden, on Monday night, was larger and more enthusiastic than any of the previous Irish Union meetings.

The Causes of Irish Misery--Oppression and Misrule.

"A Methodist Preacher" in the Christian Advocate and Journal, repelling the misapprehensions of a former correspondent of that paper, gives the following synopsis of the wrongs and woes against which Ireland is now contending:

1. The British Government has confiscated nearly every acre of land on that beautiful island from the original native owners, and has bestowed them on favorites, generally non-resident foreigners. At one time, out of the 20,000,000 acres of which the island is composed, there was a confiscation of 12,634,711. At another time, 1,718,-320. In this way the land has been wrested from those whose ancestors had held and cultivated it before the period of authenticated history, and has been given in large districts from 113,-000, to 92,000 acres, down to smaller portions, so that, according to the London Times of last month, there are in all Ireland only about 8,000 proprietors of the soil in fee simple.

2. These proprietors, from caprice, taste, or misconceived ideas of interest, do not cultivate more than two-thirds of their vast domains, for the cultivation of a small portion of them, in most instances, will bring them in a princely revenue. The remainder must then be preserved for pleasure grounds, hunting, or pasturage, so that, according to a recent survey, there is at this time 4,600,000 acres of good land that is unimproved. Thus the earth, or the land which the Lord hath given to the children of men for their use, and on which they were to subsist, by the "present order of things," is actually wrested from them at the point of the bayonet, while they to whom it was originally given are left to starve and die for the use of it.

"He takes my life who takes the means by which I live."

Shakespeare never put forth a more truthful saying.—Who then are the destroyers of the hundreds of thousands in that fairest, richest isle of the ocean, if it be not those who have originated, and who still continue the "present order of things?" None dare say that there is an unwillingness on the part of the Irish laborer to work. The same London Times, as all know, a violent anti-Irish paper, says that laborers from Ireland have inundated England, that there ar at this time in Lancashire, 106,000 of them; and that in Scotland and England there are at least one million Irish laborers, including their children.—Would not these have worked in their own country could they have found employment?

3. As the system of tenantry can never develop the wealth and resources of any country, so, of course, it has not done it in Ireland. The cultivator will not make permanent improvements, when he knows that his rent will be raised on him the next year on that very account.—For this reason, even the land which is cultivated yields far less than it would under another system.

4. Again, the rent which goes to the proprietors, their agents, and the middlemen, as they are technically called, amounts to about $65,-000,000 per annum, $40,000,000 of which are sent off annually to absentee landlords, never to return to benefit the country in any form. This immense sum is an entire draught from the labor of the country, and must inevitably deplete any country almost to fainting.

5. Once more; the Church, as established "by the order of things." Out of a population of 8,000,000, perhaps there is not even 600,000 who feel an interest in it, and scarcely any of this small portion belong to the producing class. Yet the labor of the country is obliged to support this church in the enormous sum of about $35,-000,000 per annum. And according to an uncontradicted speech in Parliament, the "present order of things" forces, at the point of the bayonet, a nominal but legal parish to pay to the legal but nominal rector from 3,000 to $20,000 for religious services, when in fact there has not been a sermon or a rector in some such parish for twenty-five years.

Here then is about $100,000,000 to be raised by the labor of Ireland; for all property, in every country, is the result of labor. And the more that is taken from the laborer, the less he must have on which to live.—And the present order of things takes to the starving point. It is impious, and insulting to Heaven, to say that there has been a famine in Ireland; for in the very year in which we were hurrying vessels with provisions to her, she sent off to England the produce of her own soil, and the labor, in many instances, of the very hands that afterwards died of starvation. more than $25,000,000 worth of good and wholesome provisions. Ten bushels she sent to others for the one which she received. If a farm raised fifteen tons of hay, and some one carry off twelve tons of it, and the cattle starve and die, did they come to their death by a famine inflicted by the providence of God, or by the covetousness of the "present order of things."

In conclusion, let the above state of things be fastened by the sword and bayonet on the fairest part of New England, and in three or four generations there would be about as much squalor, beggary and wretchedness among the descendants of the present sober, virtuous, and industrious inhabitants of Connecticut, as there has been in Ireland. The like cause would produce the same effect in every country.

Homestead Exemption.

The last Legislature of Wisconsin, passed a law exempting not only the homestead, but appertenances, to an unlimited value. The Madison Argus says the effects of this law will be to strike out of existence seven-eighths of the property in Wisconsin. We make these remarks to put our readers on their guard when asked for credit by a citizen of Wisconsin.—Cin. Com.

New Counterfeit.

A new and dangerous counterfeit has made its appearance among us, and has already found pretty general circulation, one man in Maysville having been roped in with four hundred dollars of it. It is a ten on the Troy Bank, New York, purporting to be under the "Safety Fund," and bears well counterfeited signatures, made, evidently, with a pen. The principal head vignette, is a locomotive and train in prospective, and those on the ends are, one a steam ship, the other a vessel of war under sail. The bill we saw is marked letter C. It will be well enough for the public to be on the look-out.—Cincinnati Commercial.

TIGHT LACING.—A learned doctor, referring to tight lacing, avers that it is a public benefit, inasmuch as it kills all the foolish girls, and leaves the wise ones to grow to be women.

We are credibly informed that the proprietors of the Penn. Cotton Factory, in Allegheny, have shipped about $30,000 worth of their raw cotton to Philadelphia—thinking it preferable to sell it in the raw state, rather than risk manufacturing it here.—Pitts. Gaz.

During the month of July, just closed, eleven thousand three hundred and fifty eight passengers passed over the Little Miami Railroad.

Destructive Fire.--Half a Million of Property Destroyed.

The New York Tribune contain the following account of a most destructive fire:—Yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock, a fire broke out in the extensive brandy distillery of Edward Minturn, in Williamsburg. On account of the inflammable material that was stored on the premises, the whole building was wrapped in one sheet of flame. The firemen were quickly in attendance, and several engines from Brooklyn and New York were on the spot, but on account of the thoroughfare (First street) being so narrow, only a few could be brought to bear on the flames, at a time. The destructive element spread with alarming rapidity to their neighboring houses, & the scene was truly terrific. Fears were entertained that a set of stables, belonging to Mr. Polly, and in which were about 300 cows, would catch fire, & every effort was now made to save the animals, but before all could be got out, the stables were added as fresh fuel to the fire. A lumber yard, belonging to Lockwood & Keefe, was then seen bursting out in flames. The firemen used almost superhuman efforts now to prevent the flames extending to some large vessels that were on the stocks, and fortunately with success. At 5 o'clock the flames were partially got under, but four hours after, fitful flashes could be seen bursting with the smoke from the smouldering ruins. No idea of the loss can a present be ascertained, but many suppose that $500,000 is far below the amount. The principal sufferers are Polly & Minturn.

Statistics of Emigration.

It appears, from the accounts just laid before the British parliament by the Colonial Land and Emigration Commissioners, that the total number of persons who emigrated from the United Kingdom during the year 1847, was 258,270. The number is remarkable, as about twice as great as that of any previous year.—Of the 20 years immediately preceding 1847, the four which were marked by the largest emigration were 1832 (when the number was 103,148;) 1841—118,500; 1842—120,300; and 1846—129,-850. The season of 1841-2, like that of 1846-7, was one of severe pressure upon the means of the laborer and the small capitalists, arising in both instances, from want of employment and high prices of food; and the spring of 1831 come at the close of a period of three years during which trade was also restricted and the prices of food unusually high.

The average annual number for the ten years ending with 1837, was about 63,000 and for ten years ending with 1847, about 104,000. Thus the emigration of 1847 exceeded the decennial average in the proportion of five to two; while that of 1832 exceeded it only as about five to three.

As to the direction of this stream of emigration—during the last twenty years, about half the emigrants of each year have gone to the United States; and of the late years the number moving in that direction has increased. A large proportion also, of those landed at the ports of the British North American Colonies, especially the mere laborers, find their way to the States within the first year or two. Deducting an average of seven or eight per cent. for all other places, the remainder go to our North American Colonies.

In the four years 1838-41 there was a considerable increase of the emigration to Australia and New Zealand. In 1841 the number reached 42,000; but since that year the annual average has not exceeded 3 or 4,000.—Boston Signal.

Missionary Colony at the West.

We announce to our readers the interesting fact that measures are now on foot in this place for the establishment of a Christian Missionary Colony at the West. Several families residing here, some of them among the earliest settlers and founders of the Oberlin colony, are expected to enlist in this enterprise. The site of the contemplated colony is on the Missouri river, below Council Bluffs. The missionary advantages of this situation are two-fold—it commands the frontier white settlers, and the Indian tribes across the river. An efficient and devoted minister of the gospel has been invited to engage in this work, and it is hoped and expected that he will accept.

This movement is the result of a deep conviction that the time has come for such an effort to be made. It is well known that for several years the establishment of Christian Colonies in the West—a measure at one time greatly in favor among the Eastern Churches—has been almost wholly discontinued. This, we suppose, has not resulted from any doubt of the utility of the measure, but from the general declension of Christian activity in the churches. We believe it is time to revive this excellent policy, so much blessed of God, wherever acted upon. We believe it the plain, manifest duty of Christians to plant the institutions of a pure religion in the new western settlements. There is a vast work to be done in this way. The families enlisted in the proposed undertaking, are solicitous to have Christian families from different parts of the country unite with them. In their behalf this statement is made, and their hearty invitation is hereby extended to individuals and families that may feel drawn by the love of Christ to devote themselves to so good a work. It is expected that several families will go out in the fall.

Individuals desiring more definite information on this subject will please address J. A. THOME, Oberlin.—Ob. Evan.

A Lawyer once jeeringly asked a Quaker if he could tell the difference between also and likewise. "O yes," said the Quaker, pertly, "Erskine is a great lawyer; his talents are admired by every one: you are a lawyer also, but not likewise.

"The Christian Herald of the African Methodist Episcopal Church."—This is the title of a new Weekly paper, just issued, in this city, by Rev. A. B. Green, by authority of the General Conference of the African M. E. Church. It is of the medium size, and well filled, and we wish it great prosperity in enlightening and improving the population for which it is more especially designed. We hope the various classes of our citizens will encourage the worthy enterprise, by subscribing for the paper.—Pitts. Gaz.

A FATAL SNAG.—The steamer Autocrat, on her recent trip from New Orleans to St. Louis, came in contact with a projecting snag, which passed up through the boiler deck, throwing down a temporary scaffolding between decks, which had been erected for the accommodation of soldiers, and upon which a number were sleeping. Five of them were precipitated into the river and drowned. Their names could not be ascertained.

AN ABORIGINAL DELEGATE.—A chief of the Oneida tribe of Indians, has been elected lay delegate to the next National Episcopal Convention, from the Diocson Convention of Wisconsin.

DISTRESSING AND FATAL ACCIDENT.—We learn from a gentleman of Williamsport, that a son of Mr. Samuel Besore, residing about two miles from Williamsport, in Virginia, was instantly killed on Saturday last, by a tree falling upon him, which crushed out his brains. The boy was about two years of age, and was playing, unobserved by the father, with an infant brother, in some bushes, near where the tree was being cut down, and when the tree began to totter, Mr. Besore looked in the direction to which it was about to fall, and observed his children—but alas! too late to give them timely warning.—Hagerstown Herald.

CONFIMATION BY THE SENATE.—The following additional officers for the territory of Oregon have been confirmed by the Senate: Kintznige Pritchett, of Pennsylvania, Secretary; William P. Bryant, of Indiana, Chief Justice Supreme Court; James Turney, of Illinois, Peter H. Burnett, of Oregon, Associate Judges District Court; Isaac W. R. Bromley, of New York, Attorney of the United States; Joseph Meek, or Oregon, Marshal.

NOTICES.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

BR BASSETT: I wish to say to ministers & delegates of the Pittsburgh Conference through the Recorder, that on approaching Fairmont, on their way to the Annual Conference, they will assemble at the Methodist Protestant Church at the east end of the town, where they will find the committee waiting to receive them and conduct them to their lodgings. Good pasture has been provided near town, and every pains will be taken to render them comfortable during the sitting of Conference. It would be desirable that they get in as early on Monday as possible, as some horses will have to be taken to the country where they will be well taken care of by the brethren.

D. R. HELMICK.

August 10, 1848.

DEDICATION.

The new Methodist Protestant meeting house at Jacksontown, Licking County, will be first opened for Divine service, at 11 o'clock, Sunday, September 10th. Ministers on their way to the Muskingum Conference, are invited to call and spend the Day with us.

E. S. HOAGLAND.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE.

The tenth session of the Onondaga Conference will commence on the 6th of September, at 10 o'clock, A. M. at Sand Bank Village, Oswego Co., NY.

Ministers and Delegates will please call at the parsonage house, opposite the M. P. Church, and Rev. Francis Pierce, Sup't. will direct them to places of entertainment during the session.

IRA H. HOGAN, Pr.
WM. W. STERRICKER, Sec.

Twin-Creek Ct., Ohio Dist.—We expect to commence a protracted meeting at Liberty, 6 miles West of Dayton, on Friday, September 2d, with the view of having the labors of some of the brethren from the north on their way to Conference. Hope we shall not be disappointed.

J. NUTTY.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego, N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange ch. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgemery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attala county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

SPRINGFIELD CT., O. DISTRICT.—We have appointed a Protracted Meeting at the Concord Meeting House, to commence Thursday, August 31st., and to continue over the next Sabbath. We trust that some of the ministerial brethren north of us will observe this notice, & make it suit to come at the commencement and stay over Sabbath with us. It will be directly on the way to Conference. Come, brethren, I shall look for at least an equal divide of laborers with Br. Hunt. Concord is six miles south of Springfield, on the Cortsville road.

Will Br. Young call with us, on his way to Lebanon?

R. ROSE.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs. C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

TANNERS CREEK CT.—IND. DIST.—Our 4th Quarterly Meeting will be held at the E. Fork Meeting House, near Brother William Smith's, commencing on Saturday, September 16, 1848. We cordially invite our esteemed President, Brother T. Shipp, and Brother T. Finkbine, and all other brethren from the Indiana and Ohio Districts that can attend.

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

LIMA CT., OHIO DIST.—Br. Bassett: By your permsion, I would publish through the Recorder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on the Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it wa be on the road to Conference. Come, brethren, and help us.

J. L. BORTON.

CLARKSVILLE CT., OHIO DIST.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

Camp meeting Notice.

There will be a Camp-meeting on Zanesville ct. to commence on Thursday, the 24th of August 1848. Said meeting to be held about 1¼ mile S. W. of Brownsville on the farm of Mr. Adam Winegarner. The President and Conf. Missionary are expected; and all our ministerial brethren Itinerent and local, together with all the lay members and friends who can, are earnestly and affectionately invited to attend. The co-operation of the brethren of Newark Circuit, is especially relied upon. Brethren are requested to meet on Saturday morning 29th inst, to prepare the ground. E. S. HOAGLAND, Supt

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Savannah Circuit, August 26th and 27th.
At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

D C Carson,	O.	C Springer,	O.
R Rose, 1 sub	"	A R Brown, 2 subs	"
P M Brownsville,	"	D R Helmick,	Va.
C H Williams,	"	W M'Gwigan,	"
P M—West Lodi,	"	J R Johnson, 2 subs	Ill.
T Finkbine,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts
R Rose,	P Batrd,		10	45	2 00
G Williams,			10	46	2 00

The P M at West Lodi, Ohio, notifies us that D Stellar does not take his paper from the office. Will Br Robinson please see to that case, and report to us?

Br S Catlin informs us that John Conner, a subscriber at St Clairsville, has left the country. He owes us for a volume and a half of our paper. Those who move away without paying, or making any excuse, may expect us to expose them occasionally.

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	19
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa,	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

OBITUARY.

DIED—At Baltimore, Maryland, on the 14th inst. MR FIELDER ISRAEL, an aged member of the Methodist E Church.

Advertisements.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT

The best Remedy ever discovered for
External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheum, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, Sun Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1,00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholic in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. BLAKE'S SANATIVE LIFE PILLS, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either external or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Stanhope's Celebrated CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

For sale by G W Thompson, Jas S McCleary, Zanesville, H G O Cary, Dresden: D W Culberson, South Zanesville; Jas Bell, Otsego; Claypool & Lynn Nashport; L H Dugan, Duncan Falls; J W Howly, Blue Rock; J Dean, Putnam; Shepard & Brother Taylorsville.

All orders for the above medicine should be addresed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. LEVI R. REESE.

Poet's Corner.

"HE STANDETH AT THE DOOR AND KNOCKETH."

In the silent midnight watches,
List—thy bosom door!
How it knocketh, knocketh, knocketh—
Knocketh evermore!
Say not 'tis thy pulses beating:
'Tis thy heart of sin;
'Tis thy Savior knocks, and crieth
"Rise, and let me in!"

Death comes down with reckless footstep,
To the hall and hut:
Think you Death will tarry knocking,
Where the door is shut?
Jesus waiteth, waiteth, waiteth—
But the door is fast:
Grieved, away the Savior goeth;
Death breaks in at last.

Then 'tis time to stand entreating
CHRIST to let thee in:
At the gate of heaven beating,
Wailing for thy sin:
Nay! alas, thou guilty creature!
Hast thou then forgot?
Jesus waiteth long to know thee,
NOW HE KNOWS THEE NOT;

Reformatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

USE OF TOBACCO:

NO. IV.

FRIEND BASSETT: Having expressed the opinion that the use of tobacco caused the death of thousands a year, and as a necessary consequence those who used it were guilty of shortening their lives, and the habit suicidal, I propose to offer some medical testimony as to its tendencies, and effects upon the constitution, which taken in connection with the large number which practice this habit, will serve to shew the necessary consequences—a large number of victims. Very much testimony could be adduced to this point, but a few must suffice, otherwise my articles would extend quite too far. The first is from the Journal of Health, a periodical published in Philadelphia by an Association of Physicians, 1829.

TOBACCO.

It is really surprising that a single individual could be found, after experiencing the distressing sensations almost invariably produced by the first use of Tobacco, would be willing to risk their recurrence a second time: still more so, that any one should again and again resort to the "noxious weed," until, its immediate effects being lessened by habit, it becomes an article of luxury, from the use of which it is found difficult to refrain.

The extreme nausea—pain of the head, vertigo—the cold, death-like sweat, and general exhaustion, experienced by the novice in chewing, snuffing and smoking, we should imagine would be fully sufficient to prevent the use of Tobacco from becoming a habit. Yet, such is "the folly and infatuation of the human mind," and the power of custom and example, in opposition to prudence and the dictates of nature, that one of the most disgusting productions of the vegetable kingdom, "in all places where it has come," to use the quaint expression of Sir Hanse Sloane, "has much bewitched the inhabitants, from the polite European, to the barbarous Hottentot."

Did this "modern herb" possess a tithe of the virtues ascribed to it by Dr. Thorus in his Pætologia; did, in fact, the least benefit result to the system from its habitual use, there would then be some reason why, "with all its loathsomeness of smell and taste," it should have become so general a favorite. But we know, on the contrary, that all who habituate themselves to its use, sooner or later experience its noxious powers.

Tobacco is, in fact, an absolute poison. A very moderate quantity introduced into the system—even applying the moistened leaves over the stomach—has been known very suddenly to extinguish life. The Indians of our own country were well aware of its poisonous effects, and were accustomed, is is said, on certain occasions, to dip the points of their arrows in an oil obtained from the leaves, which being inserted into the flesh, occasioned sickness and fainting, and even convulsions and death.

It must be evident to every one, that the constant use of an article possessing such deleterious properties, cannot fail, at length, to influence the health of the system.

In whatever form it may be employed, a portion of the active principles of tobacco, mixed with the saliva, invariably finds its way into the stomach, and disturbs or impairs the functions of that organ. Hence most, if not all, of those who are accustomed to the use of tobacco, labor under dyspeptic symptoms. They experience, at intervals, a want of appetite—nausea—inordinate thirst—vertigo—pains and distension of the stomach—disagreeable sensations of the head—tremor of the limbs—disturbed sleep, and more or less emaciated.

According to Bœrhaave, "when this celebrated plant was first brought into use in Europe, it was cried up for a certain antidote to hunger; but it was soon observed, that the number of hypochondriacal and consumptive people were greatly increased by its use."

Dr. Cullen informs us that he has observed "several instances" in which the excessive use of snuff has produced effects similar to those occurring in persons from the long continued use "of wine and opium;" that is, "loss of memory, fatuity, and other symptoms of a weakened or senile state of the nervous system, induced before the usual period."

The almost constant thirst occasioned by smoking and chewing has, in numerous instances, it is to be feared, led to the intemperate use of ardent spirits.

This thirst cannot be allayed by water; for no insipid liquor will be relished after the mouth and throat have been exposed to the stimulus of the smoke or juice of tobacco: a desire, of course, is excited for strong drinks, which soon leads to intemperance and drunkenness.

The use of snuff destroys entirely the sense of smell, and injures materially the tone of the voice; while chewing and smoking vitiate the sense of taste. Hence those who make use of tobacco, to any extent, have certainly one, and frequently two, of the external senses less perfect than other individuals. But this is not all. Polypus of the nose, and other serious affections have been traced to the use of snuff.

Sir John Pringle, who, we are informed, was very liberal in its use, experienced in the evening of his days, a tremor of his hands and a defect of memory. Being in company with Dr. Franklin at Paris, he was requested by the Dr. to observe that the former complaint was very common to those people of fashion who were great snuffers. Sir John was led by this remark to suspect that his tremors were occasioned by his excessive use of snuff. He, therefore, immediately left it off, and soon after, the tremor of his hands disappeared, and at the same time he recovered the perfect exercise of his retentive faculties.

Cases could be mentioned in which epilepsy, consumption, and other serious diseases have been brought on in young people by the excessive use of tobacco.

We have ourselves known individuals, in whom very severe and dangerous affections of the stomach—tremors of the limbs, and great emaciation, were referrible to excessive smoking and chewing, and which were removed only after these habits were entirely relinquished. One or two of these cases, we are sorry to say, occurred in females, from the filthy practice of chewing snuff; and in a class of society where it was to be hoped a refinement of taste and exalted notions of female delicacy, would forever have precluded the introduction of so detestable and pernicious a habit.

A REFORMED TOBACCO USER.

Putnam, O.

Narrative.

From the Churchman's Monthly Penny Magazine.

THE DYING ROBBER.

AN OCCURANCE IN IRELAND.

During the awful visitation of the cholera a clergyman of the Church of England, after a day spent in visiting many a sick and dying person, had retired early, fatigued and exhausted, to his bed, hoping to enjoy, for a few hours, the repose which he so much needed. He lay for some time, but he could not sleep; the scenes he had witnessed that day—the countenances of the dying, some racked with agonizing pain, and some in the livid death-like torpor of the collapsed state—seemed still before him, and nervous feverishness from this excitement, banished sleep from his eye-lids. "O!" thought he, "that men were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!" "Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound of the gospel; they will walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance; and when they pass through the valley of the shadow of death, they will fear no evil; for thou art with them; thy rod and thy staff they comfort them;" and he shuddered at the fearful contrast which that day had presented to him, in the case of too many. The clock struck twelve, and he had just fallen into a slumber, when a knock at the hall door aroused him: he heard it opened, und in a few minutes his servant entered the room. "Sir, there is a man below who says he must speak with you." "Ask him his name and business." Mr. T—— rose, dressed himself in haste, and taking the candle left by the servant, descended into the hall. The man stood close to the door. Mr. T—— approached, and held the light to his face, which he seemed rather anxious to conceal. The countenance which he beheld was appalling; dark and thick mustachios covered his upper lip; the beard was long and neglected; the eye was sunk, and exhibited an expression of being long familiarized with crime, and reckless of its consequences. "What do you want with me?" said the clergyman. "I want you to come to a dying man, who wishes to speak with you." "What is his complaint?" "Cholera." Mr. T—— hesitated; and at length said, "I cannot go with you; you do not even tell me your name, nor the place to which you would lead me; I fear to trust my life in your hands."

"You need not fear," said the stranger; "what end would it serve to take your life?" Come with me, take no money, and, on my honor you are safe." Mr. T—— gave another glance at the man, and the word honor, connected with the appearance of such a being, made him smile. "Sit down," said he: "I will go with you." He went again to his chamber, committed himself to the care of his Heavenly Father, prayed for his blessing on the visit to the dying man, and felt so strengthened and assured by his communion with Heaven that he seemed to have lost all apprehension of accompaying his ferocious-looking guide.

He followed the man through many a street of a large and populous city; it seemed as if they traversed it in the whole length thereof, so tedious did the way appear. The watchmen were calling the hour of one, and still they proceeded. At length they came to a street, long and narrow, with houses bespeaking wretchedness, and well known as a quarter of the town remarkable for the vice as well as the poverty of its inhabitants. Here the guide stopped, and took out of his pocket a knife, and began to scrape away some earth from the ground. "I can go no farther with you," said the clergyman; but considering he was so much in the power of the man as he could be in any possible situation, his courage revived, and he watched with intense interest, the movements of his strange companion. After some time, he opened a small trap door, which disclosed a vault of considerable depth, from whence no ray of light proceeded. "Fear not, sir," said the man, as he let himself down by a rope fastened at the inside. Mr. T—— felt at this moment the awful horror of his situation. He might have fled, but he knew the man might soon overtake him, and in the dark he could scarcely find his way back. He therefore determined to see the end of this strange adventure, and committing himself again to the care of the Almighty in a short ejaculatory prayer, he watched at the end of the pit, until he saw a light glimmer within it, by the faint rays of which, as it approached nearer, he saw the man place a ladder firmly, ascend a few steps, and entreat him to descend, assuring him again of his safety. He did descend into this pit of darkness, which reminded him of the descent of the prophet into the den of lions; for at the bottom, stretched upon the ground in different attitudes, he beheld a number of men, savage and ferocious as beasts of prey, who, raising their haggard countenances, stared wildly upon him. Their appearance appalled him. "Have I," thought he, "got into the region where hope never comes that comes to all?" The vault was large; the candle which the man held scarcely enlightened where they stood, and left the other end in pitchy darkness. The man then led the clergyman to the farthest end, where, in a corner, stretched upon some straw, lay a man dying of cholera. Here was a picture of human nature brought to the last extremity of wretchedness, cramped in every limb, his eye sunk and hollow, and his skin exhibiting the blue-black hue attendant on this awful malady when there is scarce a hope of recovery.—Mr. T—— shook in every limb: he had been used to patients in this dreadful malady, but here was one in such a state as he had never before witnessed. "Did you wish to see me?" he asked the dying man. "I did," he replied, in a clear and distinct tone. "Why do you wish to see me?" "Because," said the man, "some short time ago, I wandered into your Church, and heard you read what I wish you to read to me again: I want to hear it again before I die. O! it has never left my mind; night and day it sounded in my ear. I thought I could hide myself from God, but the darkness hideth not from him; he has found me out, he has laid his hand heavily upon me, and soon shall I appear before him, covered over with my crimes. And did not I hear you say, sir, that God would slay the wicked—that he would say: Depart from me, ye bloody men? O God! I have sinned against thee; there can be no hope for a wretch like me." Every nerve in his body seemed convulsed with agony; and he fixed his eye eagerly on the clergyman, waiting anxiously to hear again that portion of Scripture which had first convinced him of his sin. "Tell me some verse that will bring it to my memory," said the clergyman. "Oh, it told me," said the dying man, "that God knew my down-sitting and my up-rising; that he understood my thoughts, that he compassed my path and my lying down, and was acquainted with all my ways; and there was not a word on my tongue but God knew it altogether. That if I could climb into heaven he was there; if I went down into hell he was there also." The clergyman then knew that it was the 139th Psalm that had carried conviction to this the poor sinner's heart. He prayed that this might be the work of the Holy Spirit; and, taking out his Bible, he read the 139th Psalm.

"O! that is it, that is it," said the dying man, in a low voice: "thank God, I have heard it again." The clergyman then said: "The blood of the Lord Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."

"To save sinners!" said he: "but oh! not such sinners as I have been." "Yes, such as you," said the clergyman. Hear what comfortable words are here:—"If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our sins." Hear what God says: "Come now and let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." "How? how?" said the man eagerly; "what must I do to be saved?" "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved. Your past sins will not condemn you; Christ is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by him." The man stretched out his hands, with upraised eyes, as if imploring mercy: "God be merciful to a poor sinner!" he faintly uttered, and in that attitude his soul departed.

The clergyman looked around him; the light of the glorious gospel can illumine even this dungeon of darkness and horror, thought he; on him who lay in darkness and the shadow of death has this light now shined. The rest of the men had kept at a distance, from the idea that something mysterious must pass between a dying soul and his spiritual instructor, which others were not to hear, "corrupted" as their minds were, "from the simplicity that is in Christ." But he determined not to depart without a word of exhortation to them; and coming forward in the midst of them, he spoke to them of the awful state in which they were sunk; invited them also to come to Jesus, and obtain from him a full and free pardon for all their past offences. "You know not, my fellow-sinners," said he, "how soon each of you may be summoned, like that poor man, before the awful bar of God. Cholera is sweeping this city, from one end to the other: there is contagion in that corpse; I know not but this may be the last time I may have an opportunity of declaring the Gospel to poor perishing sinners. I am a dying man addressing dying men; but, oh! let the love of Christ who poured out his blood upon the cross to save lost sinners, speak to you and urge you to quit this pit of destruction, a faint type of that hell to which sin must lead you; return to habits of industry; nothing but idleness and crime would have brought you to this place.

"It is true," said the man who lead him there, "it was crime brought us here—we are a gang of robbers. Our lives, Sir, are in your hands; but, as a minister of religion, I depend on your not betraying us. We could not now get employment—no one could trust us." "Trust in the Lord," said the clergyman; hear his words—"Let him that stole, steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands that which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth."—Farewell; we may never meet again in this world; but a time will come when we shall meet; and oh! on that awful day, may I find that this message of mercy has been blessed to all your souls!" The man conducted the clergyman, until he was past the dark narrow street, and could find his way easily to his home, when he returned with sensations of astonishment at the strange and almost romantic scene he had just witnessed; it almost appeared to him like a dream: but he blessed God for sending him as his messenger to declare the gospel to that poor sinner—to proclaim liberty to this wretched bond-slave of Satan. "Oh!" said he, "is not this a brand plucked out of the fire."

This is no fictitious narrative; it is truth, however romantic it may seem. What an important testimony does it afford to the efficacy of God's word, when applied to the heart by the holy Spirit! The simple work of God, as read in the ordinary service of our Church, was "quick and powful: it was sharper than any two-edged sword, it pierced even to the dividing assunder of soul and spirit, and was a discerner of the thoughts and intents of that heart, like what was said by the Samaritan woman, it told this robber "all that he ever did." He had wandered into the church by accident, as he thought; but was it chance? No. May we not hope that this poor man was one of those rare instances of a mercy which has no bounds, extended at the last hour—so that none need despair? An arrow of conviction was sent into his heart which rankled there till a messenger was sent to speak peace to his soul, and pour the gospel balm into his wounded conscience; and he who has all hearts in his hands, so disposed the hearts of his ferocious and hardened companions in guilt, as to induce them to consent to have the clergyman sent for whom he wished to see, although it exposed themselves to danger, and put their lives, as they said, in his hands.—The Church.

AN ALTERNATIVE.—L' Eco di Savonarola says:

"We have heard, by letters, that there are upwards of fifty priests in Italy who intend to leave the church of Rome, if the Pope will not permit them to take lawful wives. God grant that this example may be followed by that portion of the ecclesiastics who have not been plunged into the darkest criminality by the law of celibacy."

TRUE.—A gentleman, connected with the National Road Stage Company, in speaking of the different routes across the mountains, and the usual wear and tear of horses and men, remarked, "We could get along, if we could rest our teams on the Sabbath. Our drivers and horses would last longer and do more service; and therefore to rest on the Sabbath would be an advantage in every respect."

A Few Simple Facts Useful to Every One.

It has frequently happened that valuable lives have been lately lost by persons who have taken saltpetre (nitrate of potash) by mistake for Glauber's or Epsom salts. The appearance, and even taste of these articles are too similar to be readily distinguished by people in haste, or those who are not much in the habit of administering medicines. A very little elementary knowledge of their chemical properties, which are extremely unlike, might prevent intense suffering, or even loss of life from the effect of taking into the stomach saltpetre, instead of either of the intended harmless drugs. Therefore, when a dose of Glauber's salts are to be taken, and the box, or bottle, is not properly labeled, or a suspicion arises that there may be a mistake, throw a small portion on some burning coals, and if it only damps the fire, or crackles a little, like common salt, it is the desired salts, which are incombustible; but if it is saltpetre, (one of the component parts of gunpowder,) it will deflagrate, or burn, with sparkling rapidity, and cannot be swallowed without great danger to health.

If, however, the mistake is discovered too late, give as quickly as possible mustard and water, until it acts freely as an emetic; and when the stomach is well cleansed, give flaxseed tea, mallows tea or any other tasteless mucilage; and then administer, if necessary, small doses of laudanum.

Laudanum has often been given by inexperienced persons, or by careless or unprincipled nurses, instead of syrup of rhubarb, or other common medicines, which it much resembles in color and consistence. As soon as it is discovered, if the stomach-pump cannot be resorted to, give emetics of mustard and water, repeated at short intervals, until the laudanum is thrown off; keep the patient in motion to prevent sleep, and then give some warm mucilage.

In order to prevent the excessive, or too long continued effect of an emetic, give Peruvian bark mixed with water, or if that is not at hand, a cup of very strong tea without sugar or milk, and afterwards a few drops of lavender compound.—The nausea can be relieved by the application of a mustard plaster laid over the "pit of the stomach," made by mixing mustard with whisky, or hot water, and kept on until the skin becomes red, or the burning extreme, say fifteen or twenty minutes. If kept on too long the blister becomes very sore and is difficult to heal. A piece of very thin muslin, or gauze, should always be placed between the skin and the plaster, to prevent it from sticking, and to facilitate its removal.

When arsenic, which strongly resembles magnesia, has been given by mistake, or with poisonous intent, large doses of magnesia, speedily administered, will often prove an excellent antidote.

If insects are taken into the stomach, their lives can be destroyed by swallowing strong vinegar, in which salt has been dissolved.

The air of a vault, or well, that has long been shut up closely, is unfit for respiration, and is fatal to animal life, if taken into the lungs. This is owing to an accumulation of carbonic acid gas, which, being heavier than common atmospheric air, naturally sinks to, and remains at, the bottom of the cavity, and therefore is not easily detected. Such places should be entered with extreme caution, and the presence or absence of the noxious vapor ascertained, which can easily be done by lowering a lighted candle to the bottom of the well, or vault. If it continue to burn freely, the air is fit to breathe, and the place may be entered with impunity; but if it promptly extinguish a lighted candle, after repeated trials, danger lurks at the bottom, and means must be taken to expel the gas, before the life of a fellow creature is exposed to certain destruction.

The knowledge of the distinction between arteries and veins is one of the utmost practical importance, particularly to people residing in districts remote from surgical aid, where those who receive serious wounds may actually bleed to death for want of such easily-acquired information. The arteries are composed of no less than four very firm, strong, elastic membranes, or coats, and this, as well as their being generally deeply seated in the flesh, to guard them from injury, renders them less liable to be hurt by accident; but when cut, or wounded, the firmness of these coats prevents their closing, and hence arises the fatal tendency of wounds of large blood vessels, which will remain open till they are tied up, or till death ensues. Another distinctive character is, that the pulse of the heart is felt in the arteries only.

The veins lie near the surface; and bleeding from them may readily be stopped in common cases, by closing the orifices and bandaging in the manner usually adopted by operators after opening a vein in the arm, or foot.

When a person, or animal, is seriously wounded, and a surgeon cannot immediately be procured, ignorant by-standers will often content themselves with laying on a little lint, or cob-web, or some other trifling application, wholly inadequate to the case; they ought to know that when such remedies fail, and more especially when the blood flows from the wound by pulsatory leaps, it should be arrested by mechanical compression until professional aid can be obtained. This can easily be done by the most ignorant person present, by winding a string or bandage tightly above the wound. Those more skilful, or better informed, may take up the severed artery, and twist, or tie it up.

Habits of Christians.

There is a beautiful story told of a pious Quaker lady, who was much addicted to smoking tobacco. She had indulged herself in this habit, until it had increased so much upon her, that she not only smoked her pipe a large portion of the day, but frequently sat up in bed for this purpose in the night. After one of these nocturnal entertainments she fell asleep, and dreamed that she died and approached heaven. Meeting an angel she asked him if her name was written in the book of life. He disappeared; but replied, upon returning, that he could not find it. "O," said she, "do look again; it must be there." He examined again; but returned with a sorrowful face saying, that it was not there! "O," said she in agony, "it must be there! I have an assurance that it is there! Do look once more!" The angel was moved to tears by her entreaties, and again left her to renew his search. After a long absence, he came back, his face radiant with joy, and exclaimed, "we have found it! we have found it! it was so clouded and covered with tobacco smoke that we could hardly see it!" The good woman, upon waking, immediately threw her pipe away, and never indulged in smoking again.—Mother's Assistant.

Remarkable Predictions Verified.—Philip Olivarius, a monk of Orval, in the year 1544 predicted, it is said, all the remarkable events of the present century. The following lines have long been current in Germany: "I would not be a King in 1848; I would not be a soldier in 1849; I would not be a grave-digger in 1850: but I would be whatever you please in 1851."

Advertisements.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LEROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggishness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & all of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

TO THE AFFLICTED. READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

THE CHRISTIAN WREATH

Is published monthly as a RELIGIOUS AND LITERARY PERIODICAL, each number containing 32 octavo pages, with new and beautiful type, and embellished with fine MEZZOTINT and STEEL PLATES, and COLORED ENGRAVINGS of Flowers, Birds, &c. The Publisher intends to issue it with regularity and promptness, and to use his best exertions to make its pages highly interesting and instructive, and thus to secure for it the kind regards of the moral and religious part of the community.

The design of this work is to take the place, in some measure, if possible, of the trashy, frivolous, and in some instances corrupting issues, that are now constantly teeming from the press and deluging the land; and to contribute its quota in the efforts that are making to wake up in the minds of the people a taste for more ennobling, elevating, and pure literature, being fully persuaded of the beneficial results that must follow such efforts, if successful. In these efforts, the publisher and editor earnestly asks the co-operation and influence of those gentlemen, clergy and others, who desire to see a wholesome and sound literature pervade the land, and take the place of that which is not only useless but highly injurious. Art, science, and beauty will be made to contribute their share to the pages of the Wreath, and to go hand in hand in the advancement of Religion, with which they are, more or less, inseparably connected.

TERMS.—The Christian Wreath will be furnished as follows:—1 copy, one year, for $1,00—4 copies, one year for $3,00—7 copies, one year, for $5,00—12 copies, one year, for $8,00—18 copies, one year, for $10,. The volume begins with January.

☞ All orders must be accompanied by the MONEY post paid, to insure attention.

J. VAN COURT, Publisher,
Quary st. near Second, Phila.

DR. M. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

☞ AN AGENT is wanted in every City and County in the United States to procure Subscribers and sell the following Elegant Work, just published and ready for delivery:—

SEARS' NEW AND POPULAR PICTORIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE UNITED STATES:

Containing an account of the Topography, Settlement, History, Revolutionary and other interesting events, Statistics, progress in Agriculture, Manufactures, and Population, &c., &c., of each State in the Union.

Illustrated With Engravings

Of the principal Cities, Places, Buildings, Scenery, Curiosities, Seats of the States, &c., &c. Complete in one Octavo Volume of 600 pages, elegantly bound in gil Pictorial Muslin.

Retail Price $2,50.

☞ We have prepared this volume at great expense: the type large, clear and handsome; paper smooth and white; binding strong and substantial; engravings neat and appropriate. This work is decidedly the cheapest and most popular ever issued from the American press; and, from the orders already received for it, we are satisfied it is destined to have an immense sale throughout our vast extended country. From peculiar circumstances we are able to offer this book extremely low to book-pedlars, postmasters, and others, who may feel disposed to act as agents.

☞ The principles of morality and of a well-regulated FREEDOM are introduced with sufficient frequency throughout its pages; the editor exercising a careful discrimination, while honestly desirous of enlarging its circumference, not to admit within the circle the elements of licentiousness, to which we are liable in the present state of society. Let every parent remember it is to an EDUCATION wisely and liberally provided for our people, America owes her proud superiority over other nations. This will preserve a love of freedom, and detestation of oppression, pure and unadulterated, in the young and rising generation.

☞ As the publisher is desirous of giving this useful Family Work a very extensive circulation, he 'offers the most liberal inducements to Agents,' and is satisfied that any man of good address can make from FIVE to TEN DOLLARS A DAY from the sale of it. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union but will furnish more or less subscribers. A small capital, of from $25 to $100, will be necessary to make a commencement.

☞ No letters attended to unless the postage is paid.—For further particulars, address

ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 128 Nassau St.,
New York City.

METHODIST PROT. BOOK CONCERN BALTIMORE.

THIS establishment is located at No. 4 S. Charles St Baltimore. It keeps constantly on hand the publication of the Methodist Protestant Church, and such other works of a Theological and Moral Character, as are in common demand. The 'Concern' has just published a new edition of Dr. Adam Clark's Commentary on the Old and New Testament Scriptures. Address, Rev. E Y. Reese, Book Agent, Meth. Prot. Church, Baltimore

PHRENITIS!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Bertholf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HATT, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 48. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, AUG. 31, 1848. WHOLE NO. 464.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

COMING LATE TO CHURCH.

BY REV. J. IRONS.

Suppose an earthly prince should condescend
To bid you to his banquet as a friend,
Would you not try all means within your power
To be in court at the appointed hour ?

Shall such attention to a worm be given,
And be refused to the God of heaven ?
Who can expect to be by Jesus blest,
If absent when he comes to meet his guest ?

My brethren, this would never be the case
If we were lively in the Christian race;
Then every hind'rance would be laid aside,
To see and hear of Jesus crucified.

If you complain you have so far to come,
Set out a little sooner from your home;
But those who dwell hard by have no excuse,
Except in idleness, or sleep, or use.

A little less indulgence in the bed—
A little mere contrivance in the head—
A little more devotion in the mind—
Would quite prevent your being so behind.

I grant, lest I should seem to be severe,
There are domestic cases here and there;
Age, illness, service—things quite unforseen—
To censure which I surely do not mean.

But such will not, unless I greatly err,
Among the prudent, very oft occur;
And when they do, you surely should endeavor
To come at last—'tis better late than never.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Building Meeting Houses, Again.

Br. Bassett: As persons differ so widely in their tastes, perhaps it may be well for me to give your readers (by your consent) a second epistle on the subject of building meeting houses; and if they are not disposed to build after the model presented in my other communication, they may perhaps be benefitted by the following hints. Houses of worship,—like dwelling houses—should combine durability, neatness and comfort. These may be secured by selecting proper localities, using good materials, and constructing them in a proper manner. Brick or frame, should always be used. The idea that a log house is a cheap house is a gross absurdity. A good mechanic should be employed, and the work well executed. The size of a meeting house may depend upon the number of persons to be accommodated. I have seldom seen a church too large, yet I have seen many too small.—The proportions in regard to length and width, is a matter of importance. The length should be at least one fourth greater than the width, and on no account less. The ceiling should be high—15 feet at least. A high ceiling favors both the speaker and the hearers, in many important respects, and adds much to the beauty of the building. The windows should be placed in the side walls, sufficiently large and numerous to admit proper light and ventillation, and should be so constructed as to admit of being raised or lowered as desired. Windows should never be placed in the ends of the house, and on no account behind the pulpit. The doors should be placed in the end most convenient for entrance, and the pulpit always at the opposte end. There should be two doors, with an aisle fronting each. The aisle should never be in the centre of the house. The pulpit should be low, the floor not being elevated more than 16 or 18 inches, or the book-board more than 36 inches above the floor of the pulpit. Great care should be taken to keep the house clean & neat, properly heated and ventillated. Above all things, the "filthy weed" should be kept out of God's temple, and especially out of the pulpit. Shame on the Minister who will have the audacity to spirt tobucco juice in the sacred desk! Much might be said in regard to lighting, heating, ventillating, &c., but I will leave this matter to able pensr. Were more attention paid to this subject, and more care taken to render the house of God a place of comfort, much more good might be done. What preacher can preach well, or what audience hear profitably, when they are uncomfortably situated? I would fain indulge the hope that the day is not for distant when every Methodist Protestant Society will have a pleasant place in which they can worship God, and this can only be accomplished by proper exertions on the part of the preachers and people. Let not the love of the world, or careless indifference to this important matter prevent us from erecting temples to the Most High; but let each lend a helping hand, and soon we shall see our infant branch of Zion taking a more prominent stand among the many agencies now operating to advance the cause of Christ in the world.

Praying for the prosperity of every noble cause,

I am, &c.,

ADELPHOS.

Bourneville, Ohio, August 17, 1848.

Written for the Western Recorder.

REFLECTIONS FROM MY COTTAGE IN THE GROVE.

In centuries that are past there were three dispensations, first that of the Father, then the Son, and after his ascension to the Father, came the dispensation of the Spirit. There are now three spiritual dispensations that christians have to pass through, before we are fully established in the faith. While we are under the dispensation of the Father we not only believe the bible, but have strong desires to serve and please God, with now and then a glimmering ray of light discovering to us our depraved condition, and convincing us of the need of a Saviour. If we contend earnestly we soon usher into the dispensation of the Son. Our language is now changed; we can bless God for the gift of his Son, and say, Glory to God, I will praise him. Tho' he was angry with me, his anger is now turned away and he comforts me. Let it be remembered the Saviour is now a transient visitor, he does not dwell always with us. He said, If I go not away, the comforter will not come. I think here is where many fall, and go back again to Egyptian darkness. But let us not be discouraged, though the Saviour my leave us alone, but wait in the use of the means of grace until the Comforter comes. It is by an agonizing, wrestling spirit & unyielding faith, that we are enabled to claim the Comforter. Our language is now changed, and become more sublime than ever before. We can now say, I know that my Redeemer lives, and cry Abba, father, by the spirit of adoption, with an unwavering tongue, and say, it is not I that speak, but Christ that speaketh through me; not I that live, but Christ that liveth in me. His Spirit is now my ever abiding comforter, leading and guiding me into all truth. Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, and good will to men. Tell me ye sons of light, in what language can I convey the feelings of that soul? Human language fails. We are now in the path the prophet saw cast up for the ransomed of the Lord to pass over. Let us not fancy ourselves in this path because wo belong to some church, but let it be remembered this is a high and a holy way, and none but those that are redeemed from under the curse of the broken law or condemnation can travel therein; but with such, their days glide sweetly on, all peaceful and serene. They now live a moment at a time, and that by trusting in redeeming love. Leaning on the cross, they now live by faith in the Son of God, looking not at things that are seen, but at things that are not seen. They are eternal, and fade not away. All fear that hath torment, unbelief, doubts and all other evil dispositions, are now driven out, as with a scourge of small cords. Nothing remaining there but the beating of the heart, while the stream of grace and glory decends in our souls, thanksgiving and praise is constantly ascending up to heaven for all that we enjoy both spiritual and temporal.

This is the way to live, and keep ourselves unspotted from the world; neither shall anything be able to seperate us from this love and power with God, though we may have to fight against principalities and powers, and spiritual wickedness in high places, and that too sometimes where we would least look to find it. Our Saviour tells us one half of the virgins only were wise enough to have oil in their vessels. They all no doubt could pass along through this world as good Christians, and no doubt thought so themselves. Can I imagine their feelings when their lamps went out? O no, no! Neither can they be described with a pen. The Holy Spirit had no doubt followed them all through their journey, inciting them to walk in the more excellent way, but they refused, as many do now-a-days, the offer of mercy. A. Y.

Randolph, Ia.

Missionary Intelligence.

From the Missionary Herald.

CANTON, CHINA.

LETTER FROM DOCT. BALL, OCTOBER 4, 1847.

Since the middle of January I have been assisted in the Fuh-kien sevice by Thum Tsae, who was baptized six years ago in Singapore.—His attention, as he says, was first directed to the Christian religion, by a tract which he received from me on the highway, in one of my excursions into the country for distributing tracts.—After reading the tract, his mind was excited to make further inquiries respecting this new religion. He wrote a letter to me, asking for more books and for more light on this interesing subject. This led to an interview. He became a regular attendant on a meeting held in my house on Sandays, and an interesting inquirer, frequently coming during the week to receive instruction. He lived some few miles in the country, and so was unable to attend the two weekly meetings that were held at night. After some weeks of instruction, he desired to make a profession of religion, and become a member of Christ's church. About this time I left Singapore for China; and this man, together with the little prayer meetings and the Sunday meeting, was committed to the care of Rev. Mr. McBryde.

Not long after this, he was examined by Messrs. Abeel and McBryde, and baptized by the latter. He continued at his regular business, as gardener or farmer, attending on the service of different missionaries, till last year, when he come up to Hongkong. He has borne an excellent character among the missionaries who have known him. He manifests an ardent zeal for the salvation of souls. He does not wait to be urged to address his countrymen. "He need not be wound up," to use the language of another, "before he can run;" but he can speak, and then speak again and again, from his own promptings. He receives regular & almost daily instruction in the Scriptures, with others, from a member of my family.

[An additional notice of this Chinese assistant, furnished by Doct. Ball's eldest daughter, will be read with interest. It is as follows:]

He seldom converses on any other subject than that of religion; and it is most interesting and profitable to listen to him. Early & late is he engaged reading the Bible or some religious book; & and he never allows an opportunity of talking to who understand him to pass unimproved. I have often been rather amused at his conduct. When he sees me alone he comes and asks if I am well; and after a little while I miss him. But in a few moments he will return with his Testament in his hand; and if I happen to be disengaged, he begs me to spend a little time in explaining those verses or portions of Scripture which are not perfectly clear to his mind; and often I have spent one or two hours at a time reading and talking with him. But he will never say it is enough; and I have always been obliged to tell him that I could not, at that hour, spend more time with him. I have counted on one occasion more than twenty leaves turned down at different places in his Testament, which he desired to be explained. A missionary friend of ours, not long ago, wished to examine him; and various important questions were asked, to all of which he gave most satisfactory and interesting answers.

We regret that he does not does speak the Canton dialect, for his opportunities of proclaiming the glad tidings of salvation would be far greater. I once spoke to him of attempting to learn this dialect; but he seemed to think he was rather too old. (He is now fifty years of age.) He watches every junk that comes in; and he is soon on board with his bundle of tracts, of which he gives away but few, spending the most of his time lecturing to those on board. Oh how jealous he is, and how anxious that others may taste, as he has done, and see that the Lord is good! He is evidently a praying Christian; and, indeed, religion seems to be his meat and drink.

When he sees females coming to us, he often comes and says to me, "Preach, preach to the women! Their hearts are not as hard as those of the men; they will listen; and tell them to repent." So you see, he is not only busy himself, but anxious to keep others at work.

He mourns that so few are converted, and that of the few who profess Christ, many, as we fear, are false to him. He said one day to me, "Oh, last night, when partaking of the communion, the tears rolled down my cheeks, as I was thinking of the love of Jesus." My father has had but little time to devote to him; and this is the reason of my seeing so much of him. I feel that it is a privilege to have him in the house. He is kind and pleasant in his manner; and, when conversing on the subject of religion, quite animated.

Western Sketches.

New York and Cincinnati.

Few persons, even among our on own citizens—entertain adequate notions respecting the extent and magnitude of western business. If I were to assert that the exports of Cincinnati surpassed those of New York, I should startle even intelligent persons here, and incur ridicule elsewhere, if the assertion were left without its proper evidence. The proof is as easily made, however, as the statement. The exports of New York in 1847 amounted to $52,879,274. This exceeded the exports of 1846 by sixteen millions, and the exports of 1846 exceeded those of any previous year.

The exports of Cincinnati for 1847, which was the first year during which any registers of exports was kept, were in value $55,735,252, being an excess over those of New York amounting to nearly three millions of dollars. I might insist on a still great disparity being exhibited in the fact, that over five millions of dollars of the New York exports, consisted of specie, an article in no degree an industrial product, & whose export in fact ought to be deducted from the business operations of New York rather than be permitted to swell their amount.

These statistics serve distinctly to show the vast superiority of interior to foreign commerce as a means of adding to the wealth of any community. The probability is that five times the amount of productive industry was sustained in our shipments over theirs—the great body of their exports, being merely forwarding of the products of the West.—Cist's Advertiser.

THE MIGHTY WEST.

The Lakes and Western Waters—The Great Valley of the Mississippi.

We allude very frequently to the progress of the mighty West. It is almost impossible, however, to say too much upon a subject of such magnitude. Densely populated as many of the Western States already are, they are only in their infancy. Ohio, for example, which started into existence but the other day, comparatively speaking, ranks now as the third State of the Union, in point of personal and real property. The istimate is $740,000,000, little more than $100,000,000 behind Pennsylvania.

Wisconsin, although one of the youngest States, is of immense extent. She has an area of 47,000,000 of acres, and is, we believe, the largest State in the West. The population continues to pour in by thousands, and wealth to increase from year to year.—The troubles in the Old World will give emigration a new impulse, will induce not only laborers and mechanics, but many capitalists to settle in the West. It has been well said that "the strength of a nation is in her international resources. Like the heart in the human system, there is seated her vital principle. If it be in a healthy condition, the whole commerce of the country must flourish. What then, with our inland lakes, our mighty rivers, and our millions of virgin acres, is likely to be the condition of the future? Who will attempt to venture a prophecy? With regard to our lakes, the following facts in relation to the principal, speak in eloquent language.

		Length	Breadth
Ontario	Miles	180	52
Champlain	"	105	12
Erie	"	240	57
St. Clair	"	18	25
Huron	"	270	105
Michigan	"	340	83
Superior	"	420	135

But let us turn for a moment to the Father of Waters. In the following table will be found the navigable length of the Mississippi and its tributaries:—

	Miles Long		Miles Long
Mississippi	2,000	St Croix	80
St Peters	120	Chippeway	70
Black	60	Wisconsin	180
Rock	250	Iowa	110
Cedar	60	Des Moines	250
Illinois	245	Maumee	60
Kaskaskia	150	Big Muddy	5
Chion	60	Forked Deer	195
Big Hatchee	75	St Francis	300
White	500	Big Black	60
Spring	50	Arkansas	600
Canadian	60	Neosho	60
Yazoo	300	Tallahatchee	300
Yallabusha	130	Big Sunflower	80
Little Sunflower	70	Big Black	150
Bayou de Glaze	90	Bayou de Clare	140
" Rouge	40	" Fourche	60
" Placquemine	12	" Teche	96
" Sorrele	12	" Chien	5
Grand River	12

We now continue the information with regard to the Missouri, the Ohio, and the Red River.

MISSOURI AND BRANCHES.

	Miles Long.		Miles Long.
Missouri Proper	1,100	Yellowstone	300
Platte River	40	Kansas	150
Osage	270	Grand	90

OHIO AND BRANCHES.

	Miles Long.		Miles Long.
Ohio	1,000	Allegheny	200
Monongahela	60	Muskingum	70
Kanhawa	65	Big Sandy	50
Scioto	50	Kentucky	62
Salt River	35	Green	150
Barren	30	Wabash	400
Cumberland	400	Tennessee	720

RED RIVER AND BRANCHES.

	Miles Long.		Miles Long.
Red River	1,500	Washita	374
Saline	120	Little Missouri	50
Bayou de Arbourne	60	Lake Caddo	75
" Bartholemew	150	Sulphur Fork	100
" Bœuf	150	Little River	65
" Macon	175	Kiamichi	40
" Louis	30	Baggy	40
Tensas River	150	Bayou Pierre	150
Lake Bistenaw	60	Atchafalaya	360

We have gathered the foregoing from an able article in the May number of the Merchants' Magazine. It will be seen that the sum total of the extent of the navigation of this table of the rivers, as here given, is 9,697 miles, which, added to that of the Mississippi and its branches, which, as stated, is 6,797 miles, makes a total of 16,674 miles. The amount of tonage of the whole of these waters, (including the Mississippi and its branches,) is 426,278 tons; four thousand boats, besides steamboats, being employed constantly on these waters, as reported in the Cincinnati Memorial of 1842. In that year the amount commerce amounted to $70,000,000. And to bring up that to the year 1846 at the average rate of increase 5¾ per cent, which is the ratio of increase, the result will be $86,000,000; which extended to the present year, will make the increase $15,066,000; which, added to $86,000,000, will stand at the immense sum of 101,066,000. This, it must be understood, relates exclusively to the way commerce of these rivers, and has no connexion with the direct river commerce which belongs to New Orleans.

These are startling facts, and tell an eloquent story of the Mighty West. With regard to the coming time, it is remarked that the Great Valley of the Mississippi (we allude to the whole region beyond the Alleghany and the Rocky Mountains) contains about 1,000,000 square miles. Now, supposing two-thirds of this to be good arable land, we have for the result 666,666 square miles capable of the highest clutivation, and endued with a degree of fertility which appears almost inexhaustible. The population of the fertile portions of Europe is estimated at 110 persons to the square mile.—Now we have numbered the square miles of fertile land of the great valley to be 666,666. This, according to that calculation, will suppose the great valley capable of sustaining 73,332,260 persons. We have not put too high an estimate on the ability of this valley, in comparing it with the fertile plains of Europe. Indeed, as far as the fertility of the soil is in question, the valley has greatly the advantage, a greater portion being still clad in in its primeval forest. It has another advantage, the great facilities of exporting their produce, thereby adding to their commerce, which is the fountain of wealth, which the countries of Europe are very much in need of. It may be said, that those countries are intersected in every direction by canals and railroads; but these are expensive vehicles of transportation, creating for their completion an immense national debt, and cannot compare with the ready cheapness of these waters, which nature has made to gush in the most appropriate places.

Now, in Great Britain, whose area embraces an extent of 119,924 square miles, the proportions to the square mile is much greater than we have mentioned; the whole population of that country being, in 1840, 26,782,445; thus making, for each square mile, 222 persons. According, then, to the occupation of 222 persons to the square mile, as in Great Britian, the great valley, after throing aside one third of its lands, which we think too much, can support a population of 148,399,851. From these facts the future grandeur of the great valley may be estimated.

Ladies' Department.

USEFUL RECEIPTS

BY A FIRST RATE HOUSEKEEPER.

Composition Cake.—One pound of flour, one of sugan, half a pound of butter, seven eggs, half a pint of cream, and a gill of brandy.

Tea Cake.—Three cups of sugar, three eggs, one cup of butter, one cup of milk, a small lump of pearlash, and make it not quite as stiff as pound cake.

Loaf Cake.—Five pounds of flour, two of sugar, three quarters of a pound of lard, and the same quantity of butter, one pint of yeast, eight eggs, one quart of milk, roll the sugar in flour; add the raisins and spice after the first rising.

Pint Cake.—One pint of dough, one teacup of sugar, one of butter, three eggs, one teaspoonful of pearlash, with raisins and spice.

Soft Gingerbread.—Six teacups of flour, three of molasses, one of cream, one of butter, one table spoon full of ginger, and one of pearlash.

Wafers.—One pound of flour, quarter of a pound of butter, two eggs beat, one glass of wine, and a nutmeg.

Jumbles.—Three pounds of flour, two of sugar, one of butter, eight eggs, with a little caraway seed; add a little milk if the eggs are not sufficient.

Soft Cakes in little pans.—One pound and a half of butter rubbed into two pounds of flour, add one glass of wine, one of rose water, two of yeast, nutmeg, cinnamon and currants.

Diet Bread.—One pound of flour, one of sugar, nine eggs, leaving out some of the whites; a little mace, and rose water.

Wonders.—Two pounds of flour, three quarters of sugar, half a pound of butter, nine eggs, a little mace and rose water.

A light Cake, to bake in cups.—One and a half pounds of sugar, half a pound of butter, rubbed into two pounds of flour, one glass of wine, one of rose water, eight eggs and a half a nutmeg.

Sponge Cake.—Five eggs, half a pound of sugar, a quarter of a pound of flour.

Another.—One pound of sugar, nine eggs, the weight of four eggs of flour, beat the yokes and whites separated; mix the sugar and eggs together before you add the flour; a little nutmeg.

Another.—Five eggs, three cups of flour, two of sugar, and a little cinnamon.

Pound Cake.—Three eggs nine spoons full of butter, three of sugar, and three hands full of flour.

Cream Cake.—Four cups of flour, three of sugar, one of butter, one of cream, five eggs, one tea spoon full of pearlash; rub the butter and sugar together, then add the rest.

Shrewsbury Cake.—One pound of flour, three quarters of a pound of sugar, three quarters of a pound of butter, four eggs, one nutmeg, one glass of brandy.

Clove Cake.—Three pounds of flour, one of butter, one of sugar, three eggs, two spoons full cloves; mix it with molasses.

Cake.—One tea cup of butter, two of sugar, three of flour, and four eggs.

Cookies.—One tea cup of butter, one of sugar, one egg, and flour.

To boil Ham.—It should be boiled in a large quantity of water, and that for a long time—one quarter of an hour for each pound—the rind to be taken off when warm. The ham is most palatable when cold, and may be sent to the table with eggs, horseredish and mustard. This affords a cheap repast at any time of day.

Bread Pudding.—One pound of soft bread or biscuit, soaked in one quart of milk, run through a seive or cullender; and seven eggs, three quarters of a pound of sugar one quarter of a pound of butter; nutmeg, cinnamon, one gill of rose water, one pound of rasins, half a pint of milk; bake three quarters of an hour, middling hot oven.

Rice Pudding.—Half a pint of rice, six ounces of sugar, two quarts of milk; salt, butter and allspice—put cold into a hot oven, and bake two and a half hours.

Indian Pudding.—Three pints of scalded milk, several spoons full of the Indian meal; stir well together while hot, let it stand until cooled, add four eggs, half a pound of butter, spices and sugar—bake four hours.—Buffalo Emporium.

Miscellaneous.

Difference of Time.

In computing the time of Telegraph dispatches allowance should be made for the difference of longitude between Western and Eastern cities. The difference of longitude between Cincinnati and the principal eastern cities is nearly as follows:

Difference of Longitude	Difference of Time.
Boston, 13 deg. 23 min.	Boston, 53 min.
N. York 10 " 10 "	N. York, 40 "
Philad.. 9 " 17 "	Philad., 57 "
Wash'n, 8 " 25 "	Wash'n, 30 "

Of course in the above mentioned cities, lying east of Cincinnati, sunrise, meridian and sunset take place earlier than at the latter place. For instance, when it is 12 o'clock, or meridian, at Washington, it is just 11½ o'clock at Cincinnati.

It would seem by this statement that it is perfectly possible, to obtain in Cincinnati, at half past eleven o'clock, news of an event which did not occur at Washington until twelve o'clock.—Cist's Adv.

A Swinish View of Human Affairs.—The Chronotype says:

"Pour a bucket of swill into a trough before a dozen swine, and you have the aptest possible illustration—homely to be sure—of our present state of society."

This illustration is both piggish and priggish, and very far from true, besides, men are more hoggish than hogs, in one respect; for they are not content with filling their own bellies, but after getting all they want, they then heap up and keep to themselves infinitely more. No individual quadruped of the porkine race ever was guilty of appropriating to his own use a kernel of corn beyond what was necessary for his present use.—If men must be compared with hogs, we think that hogs in strict justice, should be allowed the benefit of the comparison.

Make Progress.

Let us strive every day, for some superiority to the preceding day, something that shall distinctly mark the passing scene with progress, something that shall insure a humble hope that we are rather less unfit for heaven to-day than we were yesterday. The celebrated artist who has recorded that he passed no day without drawing a line—drew it not for repetition but for progress; not to produce a given number, but to forward his work, to complete his design. The Christian, like the painter, does not draw his lines at random; he has a model to imitate as well as outline to fill. Every touch conforms him more and more to the great original. He who has transfused most of the life of God into his soul, has copied it most successfully.—H. More.

During the sitting of the Buffalo Convention, the pocket of the Rev. James Heath, a clegyman of the Methodist Protestant Church at Chagrin Falls, Cayahoga county, Ohio, was picked and his pocket-book taken, containing $2 in money, two notes for $192, and his certificate of ordination as a deacon and elder.

CULTIVATION OF THE MIND.

It has sometimes been thought that the cultivation of the mind would be an injury to those who obtain their livelihood by manual labor; that supposing every man, be his occupation what it may, were to have his mind highly cultivated, it would render him uneasy in his lot. Nothing can be wider from the truth. A single word will explain it,—and that is, that as you raise men toward equality in intellect and education, you bring them nearer actual equality,—and this distinctions of property and occupation will sink away to nothing. Was Washington any less respected when he became a practical Farmer, than when at the head of the Nation? No cultivated, intellectual man, can be degraded by his employment. It is the MIND that makes the man, and that makes one man equal to another; and if I were to solve the problem how to make a whole community contented, I would raise them as near to an equality in education as possible. The two best educated nations on the face of the earth, are, it is supposed, Denmark and the United States. The Government of the one is Despotism, and that of the other, its opposite, Republicanism. And yet the inhabitants of these two countries are probably the best contented of any in the world.

An educated mind has so many resources within itself, that it has not to depend upon outward circumstances for happiness. A man with a cultivated intellect would feel neither disgrace or uneasiness to have you find him at the anvil; nor would you, if you had a mind rightly educated, respect him any the less. I well recollect calling in my College days, to deliver a letter of introduction to a gentleman whom I found cleaning out his barn-yard, with his leather apron girded round him and his team his only helpers. I knew that he had led men in battle in other days, and that then he was the honored Governor of one of the New England States: and I received a lesson from him by the call which I trust I shall never forget. The interview made a deep impression on my heart. What must be the contentment of a community who needed so little of government that their Chief Magistrate might till his own little farm, and gain his bread by the sweat of his brow?

A very great number of our most valuable inventions and improvements are to be traced to intelligent men in the common walks of life.—And I have no doubt that in proportion to the intelligence of the mass of community will be the advancement of the world towards its final glory. I might occupy a volume in illustration of what I mean.

An intelligent man was a soap-maker. He noticed that after all the alkali had been exhausted, the ley would rapidly corrode his copper kettles. Unable to explain the phenomenon, he took some of it to an eminent chemist. On analyzing it, the chemist discovered a new substance, hitherto unknown viz: the metal called Iodine. Further investigation traced this to the ashes, then to the sea-weed from which the ashes had been made,—then to the ocean, to salt springs, and to all marine substances. A physician in Germany reads the account, and recollects that he had heard that burned sponge had been known to cure the horrible, and till then incurable disease called the Goitre,—which afflicts whole districts in the South of Europe. He conjectures that it is Iodine in the sponge which affects the cure, and he accordingly applies the Iodine to the Goitre, and it is found that it is almost an infallible cure. Thus a world of misery is prevented by the shrewdness of the soap-boiler.

A few years since, the scurvy was the terror of the seas. Whole crews were cut down, and more than one case has been known, in which the bodies of the dead, sewed up in sail-cloth, have lain rolling on the deck, day after day, because the crew were too much withered to raise them over the nettings and commit them to the deep. Admiral Hosier, who sailed for the West Indies with seven ships of the line, during the last century, last all his men twice over, during the single voyage, and himself died of a broken heart before he reached home. What a blessing did that man bestow, who informed the world that the simple acid of the lemon taken daily would banish this fearful disease! It is now almost unknown even in the most crowded ships.

The discovery of Franklin, a man at that time in common life, by which the lightnings of heaven are brought under the control of man, is an example in point. In France and Germany, where the lightnings are far more destructive than with us, this discovery is valued as it ought to be.

I might lead you to look at the Light-house as it was, and as it now is, to see the immense improvements which have been made, and in consequence of which life is saved in multitudes of instances. I might point you to the Life-boat, which will now shoot out in the howling storm, and which will ride over any raging of the deep, and show you that it is to the intelligence of every day laboring mechanics, that we owe this valuable machine for saving human life. I might take you over the sections of Europe where the atmosphere is poisoned by malarious exhalations, and show you what an amount of sickness and death have been prevented by Quinine—a simple discovery, but of immense value.

Once more. It was found that the steel dust which was created by grinding needles, and which is inexpressibly minute, filled the atmosphere, filled the eye and the lungs, and invariably caused consumption. Gauze veils of the finest texture were tried, but all to no purpose. No veil could prevent it from entering the eye and lungs. At last a workman notices a child playing with a magnet,—drawining the needles and the steel-dust after it,—as we have all done in childhood. The discovery is now made. A veil of fine magnetic wire is drawn over the face, and the air is strained pure,—all the dust of the steel being attracted and held by the wire, and the labor grinding needles is now hardly more dangerous than any other business.

I have adduced these examples,—they might be greatly extended—and wonders, like those achieved by the cotton-gin and by vaccination, might be dwelt upon almost indefinitely,—not because they are of course new, but because they show you that mind and intelligence in the workshop are as valuable, and of as much use to the human family, as if they were employed in writing folios. One single fact brought into notice—one single phenomenon brought into view, and its explanation obtained, may be unmeasured in its results upon the world. Usefulness and respectability come from the union of a good heart and an intelligent mind, and are to be monopolized by no station or occupation. Seek then, to obtain these as your own.—[Todd's Hints to Young Men

Correspondence.

Written for the Western Recorder.

A LETTER FROM OREGON.

Mt. Pleasant Valley, Champoes county, Oregon Territory, April 1st. 1848.

MR. EDITOR OF THE WESTERN RECORDER:

DEAR BR.—I sit down to write to you a letter, not to display the abilities of a writer, but to do duty. I am still living in Oregon, on the farm which I first settled. It is a beautiful, fertile valley, I think hardly second to any. It is a part of the Great Santeam Valley, is upwards of 40 miles in length, and varying in width from 5 to 16 miles. Two things that pertain to this Valley are remarkable. There is no clear day but you can see snow and grass, there are several Mountains in sight, that are always covered with snow. They are Mt. Hood, Mt. Jefferson and others, while the hills and valleys abound with grass. There was a scarcity in some places the winter before last, but last winter and all other winters since we have been here, we have had a good supply even the year round. In this valley I desire to live and to die and be buried, (this I think will take place before long,) and from this valley to arise to meet the Lord in the air, and so ever to be with the Lord. But before all this takes place it may be there is a little work to be done. There is a small beginning of a Methodist Protestant Church in Oregon which occupies my thoughts, and deserves attention. But what can I do? I am getting old. My lungs shattered, and my throat this moment while I write is paining me. We have organized two small classes, with each a leader, and have good meetings. We have one preacher who joined us from the Missionary Baptist Church, and one exhorter, but no Methodist Protestant Minister has crossed the mountains except myself. We are not known here by any body except the Episcopal Methodists, and of course they know us very unfavorably. They say our leaders were bad men, backsliders who had been turned out, aspirents for office, &c., well we want this thing met properly, but we have neither men, books, or documents for the work, and it is my present design to call the attention of the Methodist Protestant Church to this most of all important points. Oregon is at this time attracting the attention of both the civilized and religious world, and shall the Methodist Protestant Church remain inactive and take no notice of lovely Oregon? Forbid it, Gracious Heaven. But it is time enough yet, says the sluggard, strike while the iron is hot, says the smith. Time enough, always proves time little enough, says the industrious and enterprising. The religious condition of Oregon is now and has been very unhealthy. The Roman Catholics and the Methodist Episcopal Churches are the only two wealthy churches in the land. The Roman Catholic Church is I think doing well. The Methodist Episcopal Church has been in a most deplorable condition so much so that its own members refused to join her communion. I have been requested to organize, but I have not been able to attend to the call, so I have only organized in two places, and in both of these we had more or less members of our own church. The Methodist Episcopal Church has in this country a large fund of money which was collected from your friends and mine, with others for Indian Mission purposes. But it is being laid out on what is called a white Mission. The plain matter of fact is this, as I understand it. Our friends have contributed their money for Indian Mission purposes, but it is being laid out to pay the quarterage of Bishermen in this country than many that donated it. But it will doubtless be said this is none of my business. But if I have several brothers, sisters & friends in the M. E. Church who have given their money to Indian Mission purposes, will it not be right for us to let them know how their money is expended? I have heard of no people in this land speak harder of the doings of the Methodist Missionaries than the Methodists themselves. We want some preachers to come here of the right stamp, bringing with them the right sort of books, More's life of Wesley with others.

Now my precious brothers, if I should attempt to speak of this most highly favored country, in view of its natural resources and advantages, I scarcely know where to begin or end. The commercial advantages are doubtless before the world in a very envious point of light. Its mineral resources are beginning to be developed. Iron, Copper, Lead, Coal, Salt, Limestone and the like are here. The productive powers of the earth are beyond all former conception. I have seen vegetable growths in this valley go far ahead of any thing, of which I ever remember to have read in the Agricultural Works of the States. There are beets in this valley, the size of which is rather marvelous. Weighed before several competent witnesses, one weighed 23 lbs., and measured 26 inches in circumference. Another measured three feet in length, 27 inches in circumference and weighed 32 lbs. The wheat crop of this country is very fine. But the present prospect for the coming season was never so good before. This country is now annually exporting its thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of Wheat,—Flour,—Lumber,—Butter,—Cheese, &c., and will doubtless soon be able to send off large quantities of Beef, Pork, Hemp, Tobacco—as well as Salmon. In fact such is the condition of things here, that money, good hard money is as plenty as it has been at any time in any part of the states where I have lived. The flood of immigration to this land from the states and from other countries, is a matter of vast importance to this country. 1500 wagons come in last fall and we are looking for more the coming fall. These besides what come by water, are forcing up the population very fast.

As it regards the commercial interests of Oregon, she doubtless will soon be able to export largely beyond what she will import, and of course the balance of trade will be in our favor. Then money will be plenty. The climate is healthy—then with plenty of health and plenty of means we can serve the good God, spread religious liberty and scripture holiness over this delightful land, and finally reach the only better country than this, which is Heaven. I now ask, will not Brethren cut loose and pull up stakes, and come over and help us?

Before we close, a word about the War. You will doubtless have heard of the war with the Indians, before this letter comes to hand. The War commenced with the Kince Indians. These Indians killed their Missionary Dr. Marcus, his wife and twelve other men whom the Dr. had collected round him as mechanics, and made prisoners of the women and children, and treated the women in the most brutal manner, compelling them, both married and single to submit to their brute-like insults. The news of the massacre reached Oregon city while the Legislature was in session, whereupon it immediately declared war against the Kince Indians and ordered 500 men, mounted riflemen, to proceed immediately to the Kince country, in order to punish this outrage, unprovoked and uncalled for, for there are no whites settled in or near the Kince country, it being estimated to be two hundred miles from the white settlement to this Kince country. The war is in rapid progress and it is hoped that our boys will soon teach these civil savages that such outrage upon the lives & character of civil, unoffending men and women must not go unpunished. This young country is illy prepared for War, but a braver set of men never shouldered arms than are now in the field of action. And we pray God to grant them success.

Now if this letter shall chance to meet the eye of any person wishing to come to Oregon, I can inform them that the north road to this country is immediately through the Kince country, but the south route is some three hundred miles south, so there need be no danger apprehended from these Indians. The south route is now thought to be decidedly preferable to the old, or north route. It is thought that our Indian difficulties that are now begun, will not be likely to end until Uncle Sam takes hold of the country and spreads his laws and protection round about us.—This we think he ought to have done a long time ago. In fact some of our folks are saying that if he does not do something for us before long, that we will not claim kin with him. Our government has sent an express to Washington city, to see if any thing can be done for us in this matter of difficulty.

A word about the Recorder, have we no good old friend who can send us their old papers? Oh we love them like GOLD.*—Now my dear friends, I must bid you adieu. Excuse my long winded letter, and make the best you can of it with all its wants and imperfections.

I am your unworthy fellow laborer in the Kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ,

E. E. PARRISH.

BROTHERS BASSETT AND SPRINGER.

*We would gladly be sending you both "old papers" and new, if we could get them to you, but have not as yet learned that the mail arrangements between the States and Oregon have been carried into effect. [ED.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Lebanon, Ohio, August 22, 1848.

BROTHER BASSETT: When I parted with you at your own house in Putnam, I intended to have written long before this. But many things have transpired since that time to divert my attention from this matter. 1. My own state of health—the very day I left your house I become quite indisposed, had some difficulty in reaching my home, and have not been entirely well since. 2. The health of family—one year ago last June, my son Wm. Franklin lost his youthful and amiable companion by death. She left four little helpless children, the youngest two or three months old, they have ever since that mournful event, found a home and eat bread at the table of their grand-mother, endeared to us by a thousand tender associations. When I reached home I found the youngest, James G. Evans much reduced by affliction, it lingered and pined away until the 15th August, when it closed the scene of its sufferings, and went to its eternal rest in heaven. My wife also has been and still is much afflicted. All this will afford some apology for my not writing sooner.

I cannot communicate much at present, but wish to say for the information of all concerned, 1. that the Ohio Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will commence its session in this place on the 6th day of September next. Rev. Thomas H. Stockton will preach the opening Sermon at 10 o'clock A. M. The Preachers and delegates are requested to call at the Church where they will be received by the committee of arrangement, and conducted to their lodgings.

Again, I wish to say that a Home Missionary Society has just been organized in this Station, the special object of which is to raise a fund for the purpose of sustaining ministers and preachers, employed in fields of labor where we have no organizations. The terms of membership from 50cts to $1 per year to be paid quarterly. It is thought that this Society will raise $100 annually to be appropriated as the Society shall direct. This you see would pay the salary of a young man in a place where otherwise we could have no access for want of means of support.

Now if all the Circuits and Stations in the bounds of the Ohio Annual Conference would organize similar societies, what a sum might be raised, and how many preachers might be employed and sent to new fields of labor, where our principles are unknown. And how many new Societies, Circuits and Stations might be thus formed. What an impetus would this give to our cause & what an influence would it exert in the spread of our liberal principles.—Will our Brethren think of this—will they act? Do they love our cause enough—have they interest enough to contribute 50cts or $1 per year for so laudable an object? We commenced the plan not only to our own but to other Conferences. Let us send Missionaries into every city, village and neighborhood, till the banner of free grace and Mutual Rights, shall be planted in every valley, and wave in triumph from the top of every mountain and every hill, from east to west, and from north to south.

I have spent a happy year in Lebanon, with the exception of my afflictions. Never did I labor among a better people—respectable, intelligent and devoted to the cause of Christ. We have a beautiful meeting house, 60 by 40, with a fine basement above ground, (not yet finished,) a beauful cupola in which is placed by the citizens and corporation the town clock. Our congregations are large, respectable and attentive; we have had a revival meeting that lasted some 4 or 5 weeks. 85 members have been added to the Church, we shall however, lose a number by removals, deaths, &c. We have also an interesting Sabbath School which numbers about 100. We have 6 classes which embrace a membership of 220.

The church is in a good condition, peace reigns in our borders. There is also a feeling of Christian Charity flowing out towards sister Churches, and I hope that in our cause of action as well as by our profession, we shall breathe glory to God in the higest, on earth peace and good will toward men. I shall try to write soon again.

Yours truly,

WM. B. EVANS.

Catawba, Aug. 28, '48.

BR. BASSETT: For sometime past there has been quite a backwardness on the part of the brethren of this Conference, in reporting to the President as the Discipline requires, the condition of their several fields of labor. I acknowledge that I am equally guilty with many others: but now as the year is about to close I wish to say a word or two concerning my field during the last year. All things considered, the past year has been one of prosperity for 'Old Union.' We have had a great many bright conversions,—and received an addition to the circuit of about one hundred members, though the nett increase will not be so many. Some have removed, and a few have run well for a season, and then were hindered. O! that the backslider may be speedily reclaimed. Our fourth quarterly meeting was held at middletown, commencing on the 12th inst., and closed Monday night. At this meeting we had the very acceptable labors of Brother Peat, of Richwood circuit. We trust that good was done.

On last Saturday we commenced a protracted meeting in the Flat Woods, near Middleburg, which proved to be a refreshing season to all who attended. Up to Wednesday morning when I left, the meeting was very interesting, and four or five had been powerfully converted. The meeting was continued by Brother Sessions and others; and I hope that it will be the means of establishing the cause of religion more permanently in that region. The unstationed ministers and preachers of this ct. have been industrious, and their labors have been blessed. Br. Sessions of Woodstock, feeling that he had a work to do, has been travelling regularly on the circuit for near six months. In him I have found a pleasant fellow-laborer.

Your Brother in Christ,

O. P, STEPHENS.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, August 31, 1848.

WANTED—Any number or quantity of responsible new Subscribers, to commence with Volume Ten. Brethren will please bring as many names of such as they can to the ensuing Conferences.

BANK NEWS--BAD.

The Zanesville Courier of yesterday has intelligence by Telegraph from Cincinnati, that the Banks of that city have thrown out the paper of the Norwalk and Sandusky banks. Both are reported broke. Sorry for that. Please, keep from sending us that sort, just now.

ANNUAL REGISTER, M. P. CHURCH, 1848.—This work is now in press, and will be issued within a few weeks. A copy will be sent to each Subscriber for the Western Recorder, who pays $2 in advance for vol. 10.

LETTER FROM OREGON.—Our readers generally, as well as the numerous friends and acquantances of Rev. E. E. Parrish, formerly of Ohio, will be interested in the perusal of the letter we lately received from him, now settled in Oregon. That same new Territory, will shortly have to be called the West, when this valley of ours loses the name.

☞ Our absence at Camp Meeting, and preparing to attend Conference, compose our apology for our lack of attention to the Editorial Department this week.

OUR ABSENCE.—On the day this paper is issued, the editor expects to start for Cincinnati, in view of attending before his return, the Session of the Ohio Conference, at Lebanon. On his return, he will hasten on to Cambridge, to attend the Session of the Muskingum Conference. Meanwhile, our friend, "the printer" will render faithful attention to the interests of the paper. Our readers will probably also hear from us each week.

WELCOME.—A clever parcel of short articles, on useful topics, by our correspondent at Norfolk, Va. Just received.

RESULT OF THE WASHINGTON TRIALS.—Daniel Drayton, the charterer of the schooner Pearl, convicted at Washington of stealing negroes, has been refused a new trial, and sentenced to hard labor in the penitentiary for twenty years, being ten years in each case. Edward Seares, convicted of aiding and abetting, has been sentenced to pay a fine of one hundred and fifty dollars, in each case, seventy-four in number.—The costs amount to $1,330. The fine and costs amount to $12,430. English was acquitted.

SALEM ACADEMY.—We have received a copy of the Fifth Annual Catalogue of this Institution. It is situated at South Salem, in the western part of Ross County, Ohio. From personal acquaintance, we consider the location, not only pleasant, but remarkable for healthfulness and morals. An object of the Institution is to educate and prepare Teachers, both male and female, for common schools, or more learned professions. Rev. John C. Thompson, Principal, and Teacher of Mathematics. Rev. J. T. Irwin, Teacher of Latin Language. Rev. J. A. I. Lewes, Teacher of Greek Language. The Natural Sciences are divided amongst the Teachers. Number of Males in attendance during the year, 73. Number of Females, 25. The institution has two sessions per year, of 21 weeks each. The Winter Session commences second Wednesday in October. Boarding can be obtained at $1,25 per week. Address, South Salem, Ross County, Ohio.

MORE D. D's.—The Masonic College, Ky., has conferred the degree of D. D. upon Rev. Edward Stephenson of Kentucky, and Rev. Isaac Ebbert, President of St. Charles College, Mo., formerly of Ohio Conference, Methodist E. Church.

THE IRISH NEWS.—Quite a controversy has been going on amongt the eastern journals in reference to the truth of the New York Tribune's account of the victory of the Irish insurgents, which we published last week. The British authorities have done their best to suppress the Irish Journals, and let only their own story go abroad. The Tribune's news was clandestinely received, but we believe it is generally credited.

CAMP MEETING.—We had the pleasure of being present during part of the Camp Meeting just closed, near Brownsville, in Zanesville Circuit. General good order prevailed, and the meeting was a profitable one. A goodly number of conversions took place, but we are not prepared to announce fully the results. We trust that the Superintendent, Br. Hoagland, will furnish our readers with some of the particulars.

AMERICAN PULPIT.—The August number is received. It contains a sermon on the Battle of Life, by Rev. M. Trafton, of the M. E. Church, Springfield, Mass., several sketches of sermons, and a ministerial miscellany. Terms, $1 per year. Address, S. Chism, Worcester, Mass.

EVANGELICAL PREACHER.—The August number contains a sermon on the Ministry of Reconciliation, by Rev. B. I. Lane, Pastor of the Old Cambridge Baptist Church, Mass. A sermon by Rev. Edwin Eaton, Chaplain, U. S. Navy, Pensacola, Fa., on the sure Fulfilment of the Scriptures, and a ministerial miscellany.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

How oft it is exemplified, that

Worn by slowly rolling years,
Or broke by sickness in a day,
Man's fading glories disappear,
His short lived beauties die away.

On the present occasion, we record the death of

SARAH SWIGERT,

Wife of Elisha Swigert, of the vicinity of Chili, Coshocton county, Ohio. She was born of respectable parents in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in the year 1766. She was married to Elisha Swigert in the year 1794. With her husband she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in the fall of 1799. She remained a member of said church in good standing for 37 years, when she joined the Methodist Protestant church. In the communion of this church she remained until death.

For a number of years before her death she was a subject of great affliction. A cancer made its appearance on her head which by the application of medicines was removed from the surface, but soon it was found that it had only left the surface to cause a more fatal stroke by attacking the brain, this caused reason gradually to leave its throne, and for some time before her death she was not capable of looking to the interests of her own domestic concerns, but her aged companion and children saw well to her interests, and tended much to sooth her cares and sorrows in her declining years. But after a while death brought an end to her suffering. She died on the 14th day of June, 1848 in her 82nd year, after having sustained the character of an affectionate wife for 54 years. She was kind as a mother and neighbor, and for 49 years she was a zealous member of the christian church. As her end drew near, she appeared to be sensible of its approach, she commended her companion, and children to God, and charged them to "serve the Lord with their might." Friends of the deceased observed this charge; and that you may meet the departed in heaven is the prayer of J. H. HAMILTON.

Coshocton County, Muskingum District, August 15, 1848.

FOREIGN NEWS.

From the O. S. Journal.

Arrival of the Britannia.

LATEST FROM IRELAND.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26, P. M.

The foreign news was received at Boston this morning by pigeon express, beating the newspaper associations entirely. I have consequently but a meagre report of the Irish news, and shall not probably be able to send anything more before to-morrow, until which time there will be no reliable accounts.

O'Brien was arrested on Saturday evening at Thales Railroad, while procuring a ticket for Limerick, where he purposed seeking refuge among his friends. The Government was still supreme, and every day lessens the probability of an outbreak.

O'Brien was lodged in jail in Dublin. He expressed himself as having but little hopes of seeing the object for which he struggled accomplished, as the people in the mountains seemed afraid to harbor him. His wife and family were freely admitted to the prison to see him, and he at all times appeared cheerful.

FURTHER FOREIGN NEWS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28, 1848.

Brown and Shipley's Liverpool Circular, gives some ground of uneasiness in regard to the harvest in England, & of the potato crop, the weather being variable.

The war between the Danes and Prussians has affected the European trade injuriously. Cotton is heavy and languid, the market being in favor of buyers, particularly the fair quailities. Quotations reduced one-eighth. Uplands 4 1-8; Orleans 4 3/4; other grades unchanged; though unattainable in quantities. Sales of the week, 30,000 bales.

Corn declining 31 to 26, occasioned by an overstock in the potato market. Meal 15s. Flour unchanged—market dull. Wheat firmer; 8s. 6d. for 70 lbs. Provisions moderate, and prices steady. Lard active, prices unchanged. Money plentiful, stocks tolerably steady.

Charles Albert is utterly defeated. Milan is in the possession of the Austrians.

The cholera had reached Berlin.

It is rumored that the Emperor of Austria has resigned; the rumor is credited at present.

France and England will interfere to adjust the difficulties between Austria and Italy.

The exact position of Russia in regard to the Germanic Confederation is not generally understood.

Another conspiracy against the present Spanish Ministry has been discovered at Madrid and completely suppressed.

IRELAND.

The correspondent of the Freeman's Journal says that a communication has been made to the government of Ireland, through certain of the Catholic clergy, that proscibed gentlemen will surrender themselves to the authorities on receiving assurances that they will not be punished capitally. Since this, another proclamation warning vessels that the penalty of treason attaches to those concerned in favoring the escape of any traitors, has been promulgated by the government.

Irish accounts say that the South is ripe for rebellion, and only want leaders: that the disaffection is not crushed—but that when the troops go into winter quarters, then mischief will commence. Until then, the leaders determine to remain passive.

News of the Week.

DUBUQUE, Aug. 18.

Upper Mississippi Telegraph.—A Flash from Iowa—Iowa, the utmost extreme of civilization—land of Black Hawk and his warriors—speaks by lightning to Mr. O'Rielly, in congratulation, that by his energy she is made the possessor of this last and greatest triumph of genius and science.—Cin. Com.

Daring Robbery.—From the St. Marys Sentinel, we learn that a robbery and almost a murder was committed near that place. A drover named Arthur had been to Shane's Prairie to buy cattle, but being taken sick started for home, and when about twenty-three miles south of St. Mary, two ruffians demanded his money. Arthur drew a pistol and snapped it, but the cap only exploded. One of his assailants then shot him through the abdomen and he fell. The ruffians then beat him with clubs, and robbing him of $1,600, left him for dead. He was soon after found, cared for, and hopes entertained that he will recover. A number of persons have been arrested on suspicion of being the perpetrators of the outrage.—Cin. Com.

Arrested for Murder in Indiana.—On the 9th instant, four persons were arrested for the commission of the horrid murder of Louisa, wife of Alfred Griffin, in Scott county, Ia.; an account of which we gave some time since. The names of the individuals arrested, are Samuel Clark, Wily Baker, Wm. Baker, and——Beason. The following facts, elicited on their examination, we copy from the Madison (Ia.) Banner:

About 8 o'clock, on Saturday night, the 5th instant, Samuel Clark and William Baker went to Alfred's house and asked if he was there.—Louisa answered that he was not, and begged them for God's sake to go away and not hurt her or her children. As soon as Clark heard her answer he fired through the door three times with a rifle. One of the balls, supposed to be the first, passed through her arm, and penetrating into the left breast, lodged in the spine, killing her instantaneously. Clark then broke open the door, dragged the woman by her heels from the bed on which she lay, out on the porch, and there left her. She was found in that position in the morning.

Beason and Wiley Baker were acquitted; Wm. Baker was permitted to become State's evidence; and Clark was committed to jail to await his trial at the next term of the Circuit Court.

Senators Robbed.—We are informed that Gen. Sam Houston and Gen. Rusk, Senators from Texas, on their way home, were robbed on a steamer at our wharf yesterday morning before daybreak, together, of about 60 dollars and a watch. The thieves got into their state-room, and "revelled in the Halls," to the contentment of their desires. Now, if we had a police on duty at an early hour, say 2 or 3 A. M., these things would not so frequently happen.—Cin. Com.

Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad.—The St. Louis Republican says that the survey of the route for this road will be commenced at Vincennes, in a few days, and the line run from thence to St. Louis. Mr. Ellis, President of the Company, has returned from Cincinnati, having obtained the funds necessary for the purpose. Mr. Mitchell, who is connected with the Cincinnati, Observatory, and distinguished for his scientific and practical information, has been appointed to survey and locate the routes. Mr. Mitchell will immediately form his corps of Engineers, and will be in Vincennes this week. After the route from Vincennes to St Louis is surveyed, the route to Cincinnati will be commenced.—Pitts. Gaz.

Fatal Malady.—A correspondent of the Albany Evening Journal, writing from Greene, in Chenango county, on the 10th inst., says:

"I reached home last night, but what changes have taken place since I left (two weeks) here! There have been twenty-four deaths in this little village, and the cause baffles the skill of all our physicians, in Binghamton, Oxford and Norwich. R. W. Baker and Mrs. E. R. Gray were buried yesterday. It is very gloomy times here. The bells do not toll, as the effect upon the sick is bad. Several families have fled to the mountains."

The Great Tunnel of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

The Alexandria Gazette publishes the following extract of a letter from a citizen of that place, dated Cumberland, Aug. 20, 1848.

"I will attempt a brief description of my visit to the tunnel of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal. Favored by an invitation from one of the contractors to accompany him and several other gentlemen, which was gladly accepted, we set out in the early train, the distance from this being twenty-five miles; then a walk of one mile bro't us to the river, which was crossed. The first thing in order was to view the 'work' going on, the most novel part of which was the process of making brick, a minute description of which would lengthen this beyond my present leisure. Suffice it to say, they have 1½ millions burnt and ready to lay, 1½ millions ready to burn, and the process of making going on at the rate of 44 m. per day. Other materials preparatory to the process of laying brick are in a forward state; in short all is ready for that process as soon as the engineer shall give the workmen the orders.—The view of the works of art and nature being over, being guided by a polite friend, with a small lamp in hand, four of the party mounted the tow path and entered the tunnel at the west end.—Here the eye is forcibly struck with the magnitude of the work. Advancing by a narrow, and at present a rugged pathway, guided as aforesaid with a dim light, we proceeded 2,000 feet, when we arrived at the opening of two shafts running up to the top of the mountain, each 800 feet.—Whilst at this point two blasts were let of at the east end of the tunnel; the reverberation was tremendous. From thence we proceeded to a point near the east end, where 50 men were at work, each with his little lamp, (reminding one of the story of the lower regions,) removing what is called the heading, about thirty yards of which yet remains. Returning, eight other blasts were let off, which, no doubt, if Gen. Taylor had been present, would have reminded him of the battle field of Buena Vista. On entering the tunnel, the opposite end presents a light about the size of a street lamp, increasing in size as you approach it. This work is being prosecuted with vigor, (as, indeed, I have reason to believe the whole line of work is,) there being in all 250 men on this section; the work in the tunnel being prosecuted day and night, there being a double set of hands. The tunnel proper is 3,232 feet long.

"The formation is one continuous slate rock, which is apparently very hard, but, on being exposed, readily yields to the action of the atmosphere and becomes disintegrated.

"There appears to be but one opinion prevalent in this place, apart from the contractors, and that is the work will be completed by the time contemplated in the contract, (that is my opinion.) Great order and healthfulness prevail on the works, and but one man on the sick list at the tunnel."

The Senate in Session on the Sabbath.—The night session of the U. States Senate for Saturday night, the 12th inst., continued throughout the night and until 10 o'clock on the Sabbath. This unusual hang was caused by the strife between the friends and opponents of Slavery extension, by a debate on the Oregon bill. The Southern members wished incorporated in the bill the Missouri Compromise,—not because it would effect any thing either for or against slavery in the Territory, but with a view to the influence it would have on Territories farther south—supposing that the adoption of said compromise would be acknowledging the legality of establishing slavery in all the terrritories south of 36½ degrees. The bill was finally passed a few minutes before 10 o'clock on Sunday morning, without the compromise, giving one more triumph for "free soil." The bill for the government of Oregon having passed both branches, it was signed by the President, and is now a law. Gen. Shields was appointed governor, but he has since declined serving.—Rel. Tel.

Mad River and Lake Erie Railroad.

This important work of internal improvement is now finished from Lake Erie to its junction with the Little Miami Railroad, at Springfield, a distance of one hundred and thirty-four miles, and will be open for travel with the beginning of next week. Being by far the most extensive work in the State of Ohio, which has been prosecuted to a successful conclusion by the enterprise of individuals; it has, as yet, yielded no income to the stockholders, the resources of the company having been, to this time, appropriated to the construction of the road. From the experience of the past, however, as well as from the present appearances, there is every reason to believe that the enterprise of the projectors will be richly rewarded by rapid, abundant and permanent income, and a large and increasing profits on their investments in future.

The capital stock of the company is four millions of dollars; the construction will not fall far short of two millions of dollars. The company has 16 lacomotive engines, 15 of which are in constant use upon the road, and there is a demand for more services than they are able to perform. The receipts of the road during the months that are past will not vary much from thirty thousand dollars; and when it is recollected that in a day or two the line of railroad transportation will be complete from Cincinnati to Lake Erie by this route, thus furnishing the cheapest and most expeditious as well as the safest and most comfortable road between the east and the west, it cannot be unsafe to predict a very considerable increase both of business and profit.—O. S. Journal.

Geology of Cincinnati.—Under our office windows a vault is being dug. As it is determined to go down to the gravel it is dug very deep. After diging thro' various kinds of soil, chiefly clay, at 35 feet in depth the workman reached a stratum of blue clay, which is one of the characteristics of this region. But at 49 feet in depth they reached a log of wood, of thirty inches in diameter. As this was several feet below the stratum of blue clay, it seems that this could hardly have been on the surface at any time since the memory of the white settlers. A tree at fifty feet below the top of the soil, indicates that the whole of the depth has been made by deposites. But how long since? That tree may have been there thousands of years.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

An underground counterfeiters' den was discovered in Brighton, Mass., on Wednesday last, by some workmen repairing a house. The earth partially gave way, and brought to light a room of some twelve feet in depth, with plank sides and top. The roof of this underground den was about four feet below the surface, and was entered by a trap door and a pair of steps.—Several kegs, one of which was about half full of counterfeit American half dollars, all of the date of 1833, were found within. Attached to the keg was what is supposed to have been a machine for polishing the coin. A sack, in which to deposit tools, was also got out. The house was formerly occupied by a sailor, who was afterwards drowned at sea.

From the New York Sun.

Awful Conflagration at Albany.

MELANCHOLY LOSS OF LIFE.

Upwards of Five Hundred Houses Destroyed.

Loss Estimated at $2,000,000.

Albany, August 17—9, P. M.

The district of city burnt is bounded South by Herkimer street, to Church, thence west along to Lydius street, crossing Lydius street. The fire proceeded north along Union street to Hudson st. Although no houses were burned in Hudson st., the line of that street was the boundary of the fire. The eastern boundary was the dock, along which, with the exception of 3 or 4 stores, the fire burned. Those acquainted with Albany, will find that about one-eighth of the city is in ruins.

The streets burned are Herkimer, on the south (the Herald's account says the north) side from the Dock to Church, Lydius on both sides from Dock to Union, Dennison street, entirely, Hamilton from Dock to Union, Division from Dock to Union, S. Broadway from Herkimer to near Hudson, Church from Herkimer, to S. Broadway, a portion of Dallius street, Liberty from Lydius to Hudson, and Union mostly on both sides from Lydius to Hudson. On South Broadway the Eagle Tavern, United States Hotel, and the Townsend House, are among the principal buildings burnt.

At Townsend House the fire was checked on the east side of the street by the rain, on the west side by the rain and brick store on the corner of Hudson. The entire of the pier from Hamilton street Bridge to the cut used by the Boston Ferry boat is completely swept away. Here the fire communicated to the freight-barges, &c., destroying several. The destruction here was immense.

The floats used in the Basin for the storage of property was burned. 8 or 10 freight barges belonging to the Hudson River and Swiftsure Lines, the schooner "Collent" of Boston, and the schr. Eliza Matilda of Boston, was much damaged.—The Columbia street Market and three or four buildings north of it, was destroyed.

It is impossible to estimate the loss. Two millions may cover it, but this is mere guess-work.—The number of buildings of all kinds destroyed cannot be less than 500.

The insurance is also large, but it is doubted whether all can be made available. To a Providential change of the wind from the south to the north, followed soon after by a drenching rain, can the preservation of our city from a more wide-spread ruin, be ascribed. Had not the wind changed, the power of man could not have stopped the conflagration, and it must only have stopped, by reaching the northern bounds of the city.

The firemen of Troy, West Troy, and Schenectady were here in full force. The conflagration it Liberty street was stopped by blowing up houses. It is feared that several lives were lost; rumor says as many as ten; but there is no positive information. The Museum and other places of entertainment are closed.

From the New York Tribune.

Particulars—1,500 Families made Homeless—One-fourth of the City in Ruins—Damage nearly $5,000,000—Unparalleled Destruction.

Correspondence of the Tribune.

ALBANY, Thurs., Aug. 17—6 P. M.

The fire—some particulars of which have already reached you by telegraph—broke out at 12½ o'clock in Johnson's stable, between Bleecker and Herkimer streets, back of the Albion Hotel. There was a strong gale of wind from the south, which drove up Broadway, extending both sides of that avenue, and crossing to Dallius st. The engines were promptly on the spot, but to no effect; and the flames continued to rage with unabated fury, driving toward State street. At 2½ o'clock the fire had already spread with such amazing rapidity that four steamers lying outside the piers—the Hendrik Hudson, Isaac Newton, Rip Van Winkle, and Santa Claus—had barely time to fire up and escape the danger. The flames raged uncontrolled on the pier, totally destroying the whole range of wooden warehouses. The Basin was filled with canal boats in flames, with no possible chance of escape—and the wind being rather on the increase, five or six barges loaded with merchandise, were also fired, together with several schooners, brigs, and other light craft. The two floats were destroyed—in fact, all became one field of fire, from the Basin to the Boston Ferry.

Men leaped into the water to escape the raging flames, and many perished thus. Among them are supposed to be a number of emigrants.

At 4 o'clock, assistance arrived from Troy, and the Fire Department commenced blowing up buildings, but with little effect and less judgement. Had they destroyed five or six at once, it would have been sufficient to stay the progress of the devouring element; yet instead of this, they took one at a time, and of course the flames immediately leaped over the comparatively small opening, and were not stayed.

Men, women, and children were flying in all directions, carrying with them what little effects they were able to snatch as they escaped. Some, however, had only time to get from their houses; and two persons, a Mr. Johnson and his wife, were burned to death, and several others are missed and are supposed to have perished in the flames.

The fire still continued with unabated fury, and the engines had little effect; something like two hundred houses being already destroyed, merchants in State street began clearing their stores of goods.

At 5 o'clock, the fire had extended to the head of Hudson street,—all below being in ashes. A tempest had been rapidly gathering, and rain commenced pouring down in torrents, but seemed only to increase the fury of the devouring element. The wind just now began changing, and hopes were entertained that Hudson st. would stop the destruction. This hope, however, was doomed to be blasted. The flames continued to advance, steadily and unbroken, until 5½ o'clock, P. M., they were within seven or eight doors of State street. The fire was finally got under by blowing up the houses.

Within four hours 500 houses were laid in ashes, including the Albion Hotel, Eagle Tavern, Townsend House, and the largest wholesale merchandise houses, together with nearly 100 canal boats, loading and unloading at the wharves—seven or eight barges loading with merchandise from New York, and six or eight schooners and brigs. Nearly one-fourth of the city is destroyed.

The damage cannot fall much short of Five Millions of Dollars.

Some succor should be instantly sent from your City to those thus rendered homeless. A number are entirely ruined. Our streets for ten or 12 blocks, parallel with Broadway, are lined with 1,500 families, and large numbers of women and children, with nothing left to shelter them from the driving storm. Most of them, including many Dutch and Irish emigrants, have lost all they possessed in the world. The emigrants' loss is the more painfully felt from their utter inability to re-supply what has been destroyed. There are hundreds of instances of the most painful destitution.

In haste, yours, truly,
W. P. K.

LATER FROM VERA CRUZ.

Suppression of the Revolution, &c.

Telegraphed for the Baltimore Sun.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15, 1848.

An arrival from Vera Cruz to-day, brings us dates to the 21st instant.

The revolution under Paredes has been entirely suppressed, and the Indians who had joined with him disarmed. The prisoners taken have also been discharged, pledging themselves in future to support the government.

Most of the Americans left in Mexico have gone to Yucatan, and will doubtless afford efficient aid in putting down the Indians.

LATER FROM YUCATAN.

NEW ORLEANS, August 18—9 P. M.

The telegraph is working through from New Orleans to Boston to-day, and I expect this will reach you in time for to-morrow (Saturday's) paper.

By an arrival this morning, we have later news from Yucatan. At Campeachey, on the 5th inst., the whites defeates the Indians in numerous engagements. They have also recovered most of their lost towns.

The city continues unusually healthy during this season of the year.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18, 7 P. M.

TERRIBLE DEATH.—Mr. Wm. Brown, a conductor on the Camden and Amboy Rail-road, met with a violent death this afternoon, near Bordentown. He was walking on the top of the cars whilst in rapid motion when his head came in contact with a bridge, killing him instantly.

Cost of Mobs.—Application have just been presented in the Philadelphia County Board for payment of damages for property destroyed by the mobs in 1844. The Board have appropriated for this purpose $203,222.07, and the State granted $58,272,12. The present claims now presented amount to $5.914.25, making the whole cost of riots $267.409,32.

Profanity a Disqualification for School Teaching.—The State Superintendant of Common Schools for the State of New York, in answering inquiries in reference to the qualifications of teachers of common school, has decided that profanity is a disqulification. His letter is so much to the point we will copy the greater portion of it:

"Among the qualifications required for a school teacher, a good moral character is not the least imporant. He may be a proficient scholar, and may possess undoubted ability to impart instructions with success, but if his instructions is immoral in its tendency, it is worse than ignorance.

"Profanity is not less a violation of morality than falsehood, drunkenness or theft. It begets a recklessness of thought and action—a moral vacuum where every vice may find a sure receptacle: and in a teacher of youth, a person entrusted with their character, their prospects and their usefulness—it should not and cannot be allowed.

"Our refusing to grant certificates to teachers who are addicted to habitual profanity, is therefore in strict accordance with the rules of this department, and meets my approbation.

Yours, respectfully,
CHRISTOPHER MORGAN.
Sup't Common Schools.
Mr. D. D. Keaton, Town Superintendent."

THE WASHINGTON SLAVE CASES.—The second trial of Edward Sears, in the Pearl case, at Washington, for stealing the slave of Samuel Breveton, resulted, on Thursday, in a verdict of not guilty. The counsel in these cases, Messrs. Carlisle and Mann, then proceeded in an argument to sustain their motion for a new trial in the case of Drayton, who was found guilty in the first trial of these cases of stealing slaves from Mr. Andrew Hoover.

RIGHTS OF AMERICAN CRUISERS.—A decision relative to the slave trade has just been rendered by Judge Kane, of Philadelphia, in the case of Lovett vs. Lieut. Bispham. The Lieutenant had seized the brig Malaga on the coast of Africa, suspected of engaging in the slave trade, and sent her home, and the proprietors brought an action for damages. Decision rendered for the defendant, thus establishing the right of American cruisers to detain and search vessels suspected of being connected with the slave trade.

Revolt in a Workhouse.—A very serious affair happened at the workhouse of the second municipality, New Orleans, about 4 o'clock, on the morning of the 10th, by which one of the prisoners lost his life.

Three men by the names of John Irvin, John Lyons and Huey Fowler, who have been confined in that establishment a short time on the charge of vagrancy, made an attempt to escape by scaling the walls, and in getting over by means of a plank, alarmed the watchman, by the name of Michael Queenin, who arrived just as Irwin was on the plank, and after the other two had succeeded in getting over. He hailed Irwin and ordered him to come down, which the latter did not regard, but continued his efforts to escape, when the watchman seized the plank, and Irwin dropping on the ground, a fierce struggle ensued.

In the struggle they neared the cistern, where an axe was lying, which was seized by Irwin, who made a blow with it at the officer, and was preparing to repeat the attack, when Queenin retreated a few paces, and, drawing a pistol, shot the scamp, the ball entering the right nipple, breaking two ribs, and perforating the right lung, the wound causing almost immediate death.

The noise by this time brought out Captain Williams, of the House of Refuge, who attempted to stop Lyons and Fowler, but without effect, and in consequence, both of these scamps are now at large.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

A Singular Case.—Dr. Dougherty relates the following singular case in the New Jersey Medical Reporter:—

"Mrs. F., aged 22, asked advice relative to constant headache and palpitation. On examining the chest stethoscopically, what was my surprise to meet with the heart beating on the right side exactly corresponding with its normal place on the left. She stated that she never received any injury, nor been the subject of any inflammation of the chest. Percussion gave a clear sound over the heart's normal location; while by the dullness it clearly defined the organ in its new quarters. In view of the frequent concomitance of malposition of other viscera. I explored the hypocondria, and detected the liver on the left instead of the right."

Western Sabbath Union.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—During the last summer a public meeting was held in this city to take some measures to promote the more general observation of the Sabbath Day. A general committee consisting of five gentlemen, from as many denominations of christians, was appointed to secure the services of an efficient agent, and take preliminary steps for the formation of a general Western Sabbath Union.

This committee secured the services of Rev. O. S. Powell, as a temporary agent for the period of five months. He visited the principal towns in this region of the State in furtherance of the objects the committee were appointed to secure; and also obtained subscriptions and pledges, principally in the city, to sustain the pecuniary operations of the proposed Union.

On the 22d of June last a large and highly respectable convention assembled at Xenia, and as a part of its proceedings formed the proposed Western Sabbath Union. Its objects are to promote in all appropriate ways for a voluntary association, the better observance of the Lord's Day.

This new association has secured the services of Rev. W. Kenney, of the Methodist Church, Wheeling, Va., as a general agent; and he has entered on his duties. His object will be by the use of the pulpit and the press, by the formation of auxiliary societies, by addressing ecclesiastical bodies, and by all other appropriate means to elevate the public regard for the Sabbath, and lead both individuals and corporations to its better observance. The committee solicit for him the sympathy and co-operation of all the friends of the Sabbath. Communications for him should be directed to the care of the Methodist Book Concern, in this city.

Any communications with reference to the general operations of the Society may be addressed to the Secretary.

CINCINNATI, August 14th, 1848.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that, on Tuesday, 15th inst., the house of James Strong, of Perry tp., some nine or ten miles east of Zanesville, was consumed by fire; and the most melancholy fact was that the mother of Mr. Strong perished in the flames.

At the time of the fire the family was absent, except Mr. Strong, who, being indisposed, was laying down, and his mother, who lived in an apartment by herself. When he was awakened by the noise, he ran, to her apartment, and on bursting open the door, the flames drove him back. Assisted by the neighbors, a portion of his furniture was saved. After the fire, the bones of the old lady were found behind the door, making it probable that she missed her way in endeavoring to escape. She was between 70 and 80 years of age. How the fire originated is not known, and it would be useless to publish idle surmises.—Zanesville Gazette.

Dreadful Accident.

Burkett's new Flouring Mill, about two miles north of Milton, Miami county, fell in, with a tremendous crash, on Tuesday, the 14th inst., just as the workmen, eight in number, had returned from supper, were on the lower floors of the building. Two of them, who were near the door, escaped, and the six others were caught in the ruins. Two of them, Diffra and Little, extricated themselves without assistance, but the others were buried under the fallen timbers to the depth of ten feet, and remained in that position two hours and a half. Davis Curtis, a young man of about twenty-two years of age, was taken out dead; Washington Deacon, mill-wright, badly hurt, and not expeced to live; Mr. Gilbert, seriously injured, and his recovery doubtful; James Niles, thigh broken and toes mashed; Henry Diffra and Thomas Little slightly wounded.

The fall of the building was owing to the imperfect material and construction of the stone pillars in the centre. These gave way, and the entire structure, except the walls, was instantly precipitated into the underground basement.—These walls themselves fell in about a year ago, but fortunately no one was then injured.—Dayton Journal.

M. P. Church, Cincinnati.

The Protestant Methodists of our city have shown a commendable zeal during the past year in extending the means of grace to the more destitute sections. Besides remodeling their central house of worship on Sixth st., they have purchased a house on Elm above the canal, and built a new one on George st. west of Cutter. This new house was dedicated to the worship of the Triune Jehovah on Sabbath last. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Stockton.—We congratulate our Methodist brethren on their great success in this enterprise. We understand that the have finished their house without incurring a debt. They have also been blessed with spiritual influences and many added to their number.

With new facilities for doing good, and the restored health of their faithful and self-denying pastor, Rev. Mr. Dalby, still great success may be expected. The church on Elm street, is also paid for. Interesting Sabbath Schools have been kept up in these churches, and also another near the river.—Watchman of the Valley.

CLEVELAND AND COLUMBUS RAILROAD.—This is only a future existence, though little less certain than if it were present. The Clevelanders are very sanguine of the success of the project. Liberal subscriptions have already been secured, sufficient to warrant the presumption that adequate funds for its construction will be forthcoming. The enhanced value wich it will impart to the land and the produce in the line of its route will doubtless more than the expense of building it. When completed it will present Eastern travel and transportation an option between it and the Sandusky road. In this competition it will have the disadvantage of being a more expensive road, as some of the country through which it must pass is quite hilly. For travel it will be the most eligible route, bringing Cleveland within sixteen hours of Cincinnati instead of twenty-four, as it now is.—Watchman of the Valley.

The New Comers.—The statistics of immigration from Europe for the seven months past, present some curious facts, as regards the influx into New York.—During that time, says the Express, the almost incredible number of one hundred and ten thousand four hundred and three persons arrived from foreign countries; during the eighth preceding months, 120,952. This year the relative number of Irish and German immigrants has been in favor of the former; last year the total of Germans was greater. During the last month arrived 24.722, viz: 7.962 Germans, 10,740 Irish, 2,235 English, 1.566 Scotch, 106 French, 34 Duch, 120 Swiss, 63 Spanish, 114 Welch, 431 Norwegians, 85 Swedish, 91 from the West Indies, 1 from Denmark, 3 from South America, and 1 from Poland. Where do these people all go? Who can tell.—Pittsburgh Com. Jour.

Beauties of the Peculiar Institution.

A father Emancipates his own son, and his mother—He dies, having devised his property to his son—the Supreme Court of Mississippi declares the act of emancipation to be an offence against morality, pernicious and detestable as an example—declares the son & mother to be the slaves of the more distant relations of the father—sets aside the father's will, and gives the property devised to the son to the distant relatives.

The case of Hinds vs. Brazealle, of which a synopsis is presented above, illustrates in a very striking manner, the practical workings of slavery. It may be found in the 2d volume of Howard's Mississippi Reports, page 837.

The facts are these. Elisha Brazealle, a Mississippi planter lived with a colored woman, his slave, as his wife. By her he had a son named John Monroe Brazealle. In 1826, he left Mississippi, and resided for some time in Ohio, bringing with him his son and the mother of his son for the purpose of emancipating them.—While in Ohio, he executed a deed of emancipation, setting both free, and shortly after, returned with them to his residence in Jefferson county, Mississippi. Some years afterwards he died, having made a will, in the which he recited the deed of emancipation, declared his intention to ratify it, and devised all his property to his son, acknowledging him in his will to be such.

The more distant relations of Elisha Brazealle—how distant does not appear—filed a bill, claiming to be heirs at law, and as such, not only entitled to the property devised, but to the possession of their relatives, John Monroe Brazealle, and his mother, as property also, on the ground that the deed of emancipation and the will were void under the laws of Mississippi.

This claim, which shocks every principle of justice, and every sentiment of humanity, was sustained by the Supreme Court of Mississippi.

Some passages of the opinion of the Court, delivered by Chief Justice Sharkey, whose own name seems more appropriate than his official designation—are worthy of especial notice, as illustrating the inversion and subversion of all moral distinctions, by the adoption of the idea of property in men.

'To give it, the deed of emancipation, validity, would be, in the first place, a violation of the declared policy, and contrary to a positive law of the State. The Policy of a state is indicated by the general course of legislation on a given subject, and we find that free negroes are deemed offensive, because they are not permitted to emigrate to, or remain in the State. They are required to leave the State in thirty days after notice, and in the meantime give security for good behavior, and those of them who lawfully remain, "must register and carry with them their certificates or they may be committed to jail." It would also violate a positive law, passed by the legislature, expressly to maintain this settled policy, and to prevent emancipation. "No owner can emancipate his slaves," but by adeed or will properly attested, or acknowledged in court and on proof to the legislature that such slave has performed some meritorious act for the benefit of the master, or some distinguished service for the State, and the deed or will can have no validity until ratified by the special act of the Legislature.

'The state of the case shows conclusively that the contract had its origin in an offence against morality, pernicious and detestable as an example. But above all, it seems to have been planned and executed with a fixed design to evade the rigor of the laws of this State.

'The acts of the party in going to Ohio with the slaves and there executing the deed and his immediate return with them to this state, point with unerring certainty to his purpose and object. The laws of this state cannot be thus defrauded of their operation by one of our own citizens. * * * The consequence is, that the negroes John Monroe and his mother, are still slaves, and a part of the estate of Elisha Brazealle. * * * John Monroe being a slave, cannot take the property as devised; and I apprehend it is equally clear, that it cannot be held in trust for him.' * *

Thus the learned and humane Sharkey, Chief Justice of the High Court of Errors and Appeals of the State of Mississippi, cautiously avoiding the well known principle of law declared even by the Courts of Lousiana, that a slave once enfranchised by being removed by his master's consent beyond the jurisdiction of a State where slavery is not tolerated, can never be re-enslaved, declares that the merciful act of Brazealle in taking his son and wife into Ohio for the purpose of emancipation, is a fraud on the operation of the 'laws of Mississippi,' and with one fell swoop consigns the mother and son into perpetual slavery, and their property bequeathed to them by their husband and father, to distant and unknown relatives.—Cincinnati Herald.

Religious Toleration in New Granada.

Our readers are already aware that this South American Republic has become of special interest to the inhabitants of this country, in consequence of the late treaty, which secures the right of way across the Isthmus of Panama to the government and people of the United States. In that arrangement we have not doubt that the interests of both countries will be promoted.—Along the line of transit, towns will spring up and attract immigrants from all countries. Immigration is greatly desired by the government of New Granada, and in order to secure it; they have determined to offer large inducements in the shape of lands and privileges. Among these privileges is the most ample religious toleration. A pamphlet issued by by the government of New Granada, and to be obtained from the consul in this city, is the source of our information.—N. Y. Recorder.

Mansfield Railroad is fifty six miles in length, extending into the heart of one of the richest sections of the State. The quantities of wheat which it brings to the Lake, I am told, are immense. The cars and ware-houses are so constructed as to dispense with bags and the labor of shoveling, the grain being conveyed from one to the other through what I should call grainducts. The road is now in a process of extension to Newark.—Watchman of the Valley.

FIRE.—The Cincinnati Gazette of Monday morning, states that a fire occurred at Steubenville, on Sunday about noon, which destroyed fifiy buildings. No particulars are given.—Z. Gaz.

Terrible and Fatal Accident.—The Reading Gazette of August 19, says, a brother of Mr. Daniel Heller, of Boyerstown, in this county, lost his life last Monday, by a horrible accident. He was in a field ploughing; and as is supposed, the horses took fright and ran away; dragging him along to a considerable distance. No person witnessed the accident, but as his body was found entangled with the plough, and horribly mangled, it's supposed that he killed.

Progress in Protestantism in France.

The Rev. Mr. Roussel, writing to the N. York Evangelist, says: "I have, within a few days, been invited into several churches which have expelled their curates and who ask me to organize Protestant worship in the midst of them. In a single Department, twenty curates have been driven out. The station at Mansle, which I founded, not receiving aid as formerly from the Society, has found a way to sustain their Protestant schools, by causing them to be adopted as village schools, and consequently aided by the State. They have even given the dwelling of the expelled Romish curate to the Protestant preacher! Further, the edifice which I built at Mansle, and which was to remain my property until its cost was defrayed by Protestant subscriptions, has been purchased by the commune, to be paid in annual instalments of 1000 francs. Here, then, a commune of two thousand souls, which less than two years since was wholly Catholic, has now sent away its Romish priest, paid for Protestant schools, bought a Protestant church, and even offers to pay its pastor!"

A Sad Case of Drowning.—On Saturday night last, near twelve o'clock, a party of ten persons left the city, in carriages, for the Middle River ground, about thirteen miles from Baltimore, for the purpose of fishing. Arriving at the place, and procuring three boats, one of which was a small batteau, they pulled off about a mile from the shore, and commenced fishing, at some distance apart. In a few minutes, a cry was heard from one of the boats, in which were Mr. E. S. Fryer, his son William, a little boy ten years of age, a friend, and a colored boy, aged twelve years, named Benj. John Willis, belonging to Mr. Louis Gouley. The other boats immediately hurried to the spot and found the boat sinking, and the whole four persons in the water, struggling for life. To draw in Mr. Fryer and his friend, was but the work of an instant, but they could not succeed in saving the two youths, notwithstanding they resorted to all human efforts. It was dark, and the whole party were completely bewildered by the sad occurrence. Previous, however, to the arrival of the boats, Mr. Fryer had struggled with all the feelings of a parent, in order to save his son, but it is thought that the lad facilitated his own untimely end, by clinging to the long sea-grass, in hopes of saving himself. When Mr. Fryer was lifted into the boat, he was so exhausted as to be scarcely able to speak, and almost in a state of phrensy on account of the loss of his child. The colored boy sustained himself upon the surface of the water, until one of the boats was within a yard of him, when he made an unsuccessful attempt to catch hold, but sunk to rise no more. The search for the bodies was continued throughout the day on Sunday, but was unsuccessful. Yesterday morning, Mr. Fryer, accompanied by a number of friends, again proceeded to the scene of the disaster, and continued the search with grappling irons, and at about one o'clock succeeded in recovering the body of the colored boy; and at four o'clock in the afternoon, recovered the body of his son. They returned to the city last evening, from their sad errand.—Balt. Sun.

Struck by Lightning.—During a thunder storm which passed over Charleston on Friday night last, the schr. Benjamin Harrison, Capt. Douglas, lying in the stream, was struck by lightning. The fluid shivered the foremast, then descended into the hold, starting some of the plank, splintered several of the timbers, and passed out of the cabin window of the schooner. The captain and crew were in the cabin at the time of the disaster, and were stunned by the force of the shock, but received no material injury.—Charleston Courier.

NOTICES.

Muskingum Conference.

☞The opening exercises of the sixth session of Muskingum Annual Conference, M. P. Church will commence at Cambridge, O. Wednesday, nine o'clock A. M. September 13th 1848. It is desired that the members will be prompt in their attendance.

GEO. CLANCY, President.

☞Members of the Conference, on reaching Cambridge, will please call at the M. P. Meeting House, where they will find a committee to conduct them to their places of entertainment. Pasturage for horses is provided, at places a short distance from the village.

J. NICHOLS, Sup't Cosh Circuit.

PITTSBURGH CONFERENCE.

BR BASSETT: I wish to say to ministers & delegates of the Pittsburgh Conference through the Recorder, that on approaching Fairmont, on their way to the Annual Conference, they will assemble at the Methodist Protestant Church at the east end of the town, where they will find the committee waiting to receive them and conduct them to their lodgings. Good pasture has been provided near town, and every pains will be taken to render them comfortable during the sitting of Conference. It would be desirable that they get in as early on Monday as possible, as some horses will have to be taken to the country where they will be well taken care of by the brethren.

D. R. HELMICK.

August 10, 1848.

DEDICATION.

The new Methodist Protestant meeting house at Jacksontown, Licking County, will be first opened for Divine service, at 11 o'clock, Sunday, September 10th. Ministers on their way to the Muskingum Conference, are invited to call and spend the Day with us.

E. S. HOAGLAND.

Twin-Creek Ct., Ohio Dist.—We expect to commence a protracted meeting at Liberty, 6 miles West of Dayton, on Friday, September 2d, with the view of having the labors of some of the brethren from the north on their way to Conference. Hope we shall not be disappointed.

J. NUTTY.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego. N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge. Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange ch. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgomery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attala county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE.

The tenth session of the Onondaga Conference will commence on the 6th of September, at 10 o'clock, A. M. at Sand Bank Village, Oswego Co., NY.

Ministers and Delegates will please call at the parsonage house, opposite the M. P. Church, and Rev. Francis Pierce, Sup't. will direct them to places of entertainment during the session.

IRA H. HOGAN, Pr
WM. W. STERRICKER, Sec.

SPRINGFIELD CT., O. DISTRICT.—We have appointed a Protracted Meeting at the Concord Meeting House, to commence Thursday, August 31st., and to continue over the next Sabbath. We trust that some of the ministerial brethren north of us will observe this notice, & make it suit to come at the commencement and stay over Sabbath with us. It will be directly on the way to Conference. Come, brethren, I shall look for at least an equal divide of laborers with Br. Hunt. Concord is six miles south of Springfield, on the Cortsville road.

Will Br. Young call with us, on his way to Lebanon?

R. ROSE.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs. C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

TANNERS CREEK CT.—IND. DIST.—Our 4th Quarterly Meeting will be held at the E. Fork Meeting House, near Brother William Smith's, commencing on Saturday, September 16, 1848. We cordially invite our esteemed President, Brother T. Shipp, and Brother T. Finkbine, and all other brethren from the Indiana and Ohio Districts that can attend.

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

LIMA CT., OHIO DIST.—Br. Bassett: By your permission, I would publish through the Recorder, that we intend holding a camp-meeting on Lima circuit, to commence on the 24th day of August next, to be held on the Old Camp-Ground, about three miles down the river from Westminster.

Brother Young will remember that we expect his second visit at that place. We also invite Brothers L. Ensminger, T. Graham, and G. W. Thornburgh, likewise all other ministers, who find it convenient to visit us at that meeting: the brethren at the north will remember it wa be on the road to Conference. Come, brethren, and help us.

J. L. BORTON.

CLARKSVILLE CT., OHIO DIST.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

At Home Circuit, September 2nd and 3d.
Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

Z Ragan,	O	P M—Bellfontaine,	O
T H Scott, 1 sub.	"	W B Evans,	"
D C Carson,	"	C J Sears, 1 sub.	"
J McDowell,	"	O P Stephens, 2 subs.	"
Jos Burns,	"	E E Parish,	Oregon
Dr H Cox,	"	P M—Edinburgh	Ia
P M—Swan,	"	W M'Gee,	Va
P M—Groton,	"	M Stewart,	Pa
Dr D B Dorsey,	"

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	cts
G W Johnson,	P R Hitt,	10	44	4	00
W Munhall,	W S Nisely,	10	9	2	00
A S Hursey,	J Shunk.	11	26	3	00
R Wilkinson,		8	52	2	00
P M—Belfontaine,	W B Rovand,	"	45		25
O P Stephens,	J Crowder,	10	46	2	00

Br. T. H. Scott, we are greatly obliged for that new subscriber, though your name is not Burns.

BOSTON OLIVE BRANCH.—Your paper of Aug. 19th, failed to reach us. Please supply us with that number, and we will reciprocate when called upon.

HYMENIAL.

MARRIED—On Wednesday, August 30th, 1848, by Rev E S Hoagland, Rev JOS H HAMILTON, of the Muskingum Conference, to Miss CHARLOTTE RODMAN, of Muskingum County, Ohio.

——On the 17th inst., by Rev Wm Duling, Mr HUGH TRIMBLE, to Miss MELONA BUKER, all of Muskingum County, Ohio.

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	19
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa,	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	6
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	6
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	5
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

TO THE AFFLICTED.
READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by falling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bot superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev.

LEVI R. REESE.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern, Baltimore,

A NEW SUPPLY OF

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

Smethen's Sermons,

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the office of the WESTERN RECORDER.

Poet's Corner.

TIME TO ME THIS TRUTH HATH TAUGHT.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Time to me this truth hath taught:
('Tis a truth that's worth revealing,)
More offend from want of thought
Than from any want of feeling;
If advice we would convey,
There's a time we should convey it,
If we've but a word to say,
There's a time in which to say it.

Oft unknowingly the tongue
Touched on a cord so aching,
That a word or accent wrong,
Pains the heart almost to breaking:
Many a tear of wounded pride,
Many a fault of human blindness,
Has been soothed or turned aside,
By a quiet voice of kindness.

Many a beautious flower decays,
Though we tend it e'er so much;
Something secret on it preys,
Which no human aid can touch.
So in many a lover's breast
Lies some canker grief concealed,
That if touched is more oppressed,
Left unto itself is healed.

Time to me this truth hath taught,
'Tis a truth that's worth revealing—
More offend from want of thought
Than from any wnat of feeling.

Reformatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

USE OF TOBACCO.

NO. V.

Mr. Editor: In continuation of the eminent medical testimony, of the tendency and effects of tobacco upon the constitution, you will please next publish the following letter from Dr. A. Robbins, a distinguished member of the medical profession in the city of Troy, N. Y., which is found in the late work of Rev. Mr. Lane on the Mysteries of Tobacco.

Yours, &c.,

A REFORMED TOBACCO USER.

Pittnam, O.

Rev. Mr. Lane,

Sir,—In accordance with your request that I would state some of the results of my observation of the effects of the habitual use of tobacco, I herewith present you a few remarks, together with several cases, that are yet in my memory. My opinion of the nature and use of this drug, which was first formed by professional reading, and afterwards confirmed by seeing, is this. It is a powerful medicine, possessed of peculiar properties, adapted to the cure of a certain class of diseases, and as such not suitable to be used in any form by those who are in health. The common experience of mankind teaches that strong medicines cannot be used habitually on a healthy system without producing disease, or shortening life. That it is, in many cases, a valuable medicine, is, therefore, an argument against, and not in favor of, its habitual use. I believe it to be in its nature, what is termed a sedative, that is; a substance which lessens vital action directly, and tends to extinguish life. This appears from its promptly reducing the normal action of the digestive organs, as well as by its lessening the inflammatory action of any particular part to which it is applied, and by its producing death without the intervention of inflammation, when taken in sufficient quantity.

In ascribing the fatal effects in the following cases to tobacco as the cause, I would be understood as inferring this as the most obvious or probable cause, or that other sufficient causes seemed to be wanting. This premised, I proceed to say that I have witnessed several cases of fatal disease induced by the use of tobacco.

1st. By chewing. Its fatal effects in producing epilepsy by this mode are well known to some living witnesses to the following two instances which came to my knowledge.

A son of Mr. ——, of Troy, had acquired the habit of chewing this drug long before he arrived at the age of 20. He became subject to frequent attacks of epilepsy. It was soon discovered by his friends that the epileptic seizures never occurred except when using tobacco. The experiment was tried of depriving him of his bevored cud. This could not be done in any other way than by confining him to one room, which was done, I think, in one instance, three months. During his confinement, and consequent abstinence, he had no epileptic attacks. As soon as he was permitted to go out, he would procure his favorite drug from some friendly hand, and be very soon brought home in one of his fits.—These would occur daily so long as he had access to the poisonous article, until, at length, he became idiotic and died. The particulars of this case I had from my partner, who often attended the young man, and who, as well as many of the neighbors that often performed the friendly office of conducting him home senseless, never doubted the agency of tobacco in inducing those attacks.

Another case, in this city, of later date, came under my own care. A son of Mr. ——, of the age of 15, was taken home from a public school on account of having experienced several attacks of epilepsy, and placed under my professional care. After a few attacks, it was discovered, during one of the seizures, that he had tobacco in his mouth. Directions were given for regulating his diet, and he was advised to omit the use of tobacco, which he promised to do.—Whilst he abstained from the use of this, he was free from any epileptic attack. The attacks, however, frequently returned, and on every occasion of the kind, notwithstanding his own efforts at reformation, tobacco was found either in his mouth or pocket. The administration of medicines was finally given up as unavailing, and after dragging out ten years of a life useless to his friends, and perhaps to himself, he died. If it were lawful to make experiments on human beings to demonstrate the effects of a particular noxious agent in inducing disease or death, I know of no set of experiments which could be more satisfactory in producing undeniable results than those voluntarily carried out by this young man.

2nd. By snuffing. A lady of this city, who was in the habit, although otherwise neat, and a good housekeeper, of taking snuff to an extent that rendered her person, her room, and furniture offensive, was seized with an unpleasant sensation on the skin of the right temple, extending by degrees to a part of the forehead. This was at first slight, and accompanied with tingling sensations, or partial numbness. She had taken medical advice and used various remedies before applying to me. Being at first sanguine of success, I applied a great variety of counter-irritants, with remedies for the general health, and for improving the condition of the digestive organs, without perceiving even a temporary amelioration of her symptoms. The sense of numbness slowly pervaded her right side, and she became affected with turns of faintness, sometimes even in the open air, so as to lose the power of voluntary motion, but not her consciousness. The numbness at last extended to the lower extremity of the right side, and she died paralytic, after lying in a helpless state for many months. Having been acquainted with the subject of the above case for many years, and knowing her otherwise good and correct habits, and her excellent constitution, I could impute her fatal disease to no other cause than her excessive use of snuff.

A middle-aged gentleman of this city, very industrious, of regular habits, and temperate withal, possessed of an excellent moral and religious character, had been, for a few years, addicted to the excessive use of snuff. He was suddenly seized with hemiplegia or palsy of one side.—He partially recovered, but in a year or two afterwards died with a second attack of the same disease. The only cause to which his disease could be reasonably imputed seemed to be his use of this deleterious narcotic.

3rd. By smoking. This mode of using the substance in question has sometimes produced apoplexy. It is true, there are not many recorded facts to prove this, nor is it to be expected that direct experiments can be instituted to demonstrate clearly this sudden, overpowering, and irreparable effect on the nervous system, except such as individuals may madly perpetrate on themselves. On this point, the well known facts in relation to the two Silesian brothers, mentioned by the celebrated Tissot, are not irrelevant.—They were smoking for a wager, and both fell down and died in an apoplectic fit, the one smoking his 17th, and the other his 18th pipe. But as such experiments must and ought to be rare, it may be proper to institute the inquiry, whether a more moderate use of the pipe has a tendency to produce the above named disease. It is well known that two opposite conditions of the brain obtain in different cases of apoplexy; the one attended with a high state of arterial action, and great fulness of the vessels of the brain, and denominated the sthenic or entonic form; the other occurring in a low state of action, with an actual deficiency of blood and of nervous power, and hence called the asthenic or atonic form. If my view of the nature of tobacco, given above, is correct, we should expect it to produce the latter form. If it can be shown that the symptoms arising from the smoking of tobacco are similar to, or identical with the premonitory and progressive symptoms of that form of apoplectic seizure, I think the tendency is then fairly proved. But the symptoms of this form of apoplexy as given by a modern standard writer* are the following: "alarming vertigo; a feeling of faintness; sickness at stomach and vomiting; disturbance of the senses, especially of sight; loss of memory; partial loss of sense, consciousness; and voluntary motion; weak, irregular, and sometimes quick pulse, with more or less of sleepiness." Now, the question of the similarity of these symptoms to those produced by tobacco smoking, may be submitted to the memory and experience of those who have some time or other been made sick by smoking tobacco. On those who have never had this experience, my argument is lost, unless they will try the experiment. Further, as apoplexy has its related and associated forms of nervous disease which falls short of real apoplexy, and, as the degrees of excess in the use of tobacco may be less or more in different individuals and different cases, we should naturally expect to find lower or higher degrees of nervous disease induced by its use in different persons. Now, as there are some species of apoplexy accompanied with palsy or terminating in it, we should expect to find cases where smoking as well as snuffing has preceded a paralytic attack. Accordingly, we do find that such cases are more numerous than those of apoplexy. The influence of snuffing in aggravating the symptoms of nervous disease which have been of increased frequency within the last ten or twelve years, especially among females, will be readily admitted by medical men, as I have often proposed the omission of the habit with very obvious and successful results.

If it be asked whether these views are sustained by the authority of medical writers, I would make one or two references. The use of snuff and of tobacco in any of its forms is named by Dr. Copland, an eminent modern systematic writer, as an exciting cause of apoplexy. By the same writer it is numbered among the predisposing causes of the same disease. The celebrated Dr. Cheyne, in giving an analysis of 50 perfect cases of apoplexy, gives the following as causes: 1st. Drunkenness. 2nd. The form of the body. 3d. The temperament. 4th. Gluttony. 5th. Indolence. 6th. Mental anxiety.—7th. Fits of passion. 8th. External heat. 9th. The use of tobacco.

4th. By swallowing it. This is done to a certain degree in ordinary chewing, as well as in snuffing and smoking, but there are cases of chewing in which the saliva is habitually swallowed. A gentleman of my acquaintance informed me some years since that he was well acquainted in New York with a young man belonging to a very respectable family in Liverpool, employed as a commercial agent, who during a two years' residence in New York, so far copied the manners of his new associates as to acquire the habit of chewing tobacco. On his return to his home, unwilling to give up his Yankee habit, and equally unwilling to suffer the disgrace attached to the habit among his respectable acquaintances, he adopted the plan of swallowing his saliva while chewing, in order to avoid discovery. His health soon began to fail, and he was placed under the care of a physician, who could discover no disease upon him except a generally debiliated state of the body, and whose remedies were of no use in restoring him to health. When reduced to a very low condition, he informed his physician that he had been in the habit of chewing tobacco and swallowing the saliva, but his information was communicated too late, and he shortly after died.

* See Copland's Med. Dict.

(Conclusion next week.)

Explosion at Washington Arsenal.—We learn from the National Intelligencer, that Adam Alburger, pyrotechnist, was dreadfully injured by an explosion in the laboratory at the Arsenal, in Washington, which took place on Monday about 9 o'clock. No hope is entertained of the poor man's recovery. It is a remarkable coincidence that three years ago, precisely, on Monday, a German laborer named Eiring, was blown up while employed in the building being, as on Monday, completely unroofed and almost demolished.—Baltimore Sun.

The acting Governer of Pennsylvania has issued his proclamation for an election for Governor the 2nd Tuesday in October.

Narrative.

PRAYING IN A STORM.

The following most interesting narrative by a pious clergyman in Ireland, was first published in the Sailor's Magazine.

"Returning by the Bedfast night-coach, from the Dublin clerical meetings, to my distant parish in the North, I found myself placed opposite to a gentleman, whose appearance engrossed, rather than attracted, my most profound attention. His age, as he afterwards told me, was sixty, and perhaps I should have conjectured as much, although exposure to weather, cares, anxieties and dangers, with a certain air of seriousness, which seemed, as it were to preside over all spoke more than the effects of time, the progress of my fellow traveller's earthly pilgrimage. In truth his countenance was such, as no observant physiognomist could contemplate without interest, or mark its amiable and diversified expression, without respect and love. The coach, in which we sat, had scarcely cleared the pavement, and was rolling along the silent highway, when my companion addressed me with great ease and politeness: a few minutes sufficed to show, that the predominating sentiments of his heart was religion.—His conversation was almost exclusively of that character; and as he poured out the rich stores of gospel truth and experience from the exhaustless treasury of a converted soul, the night insensibly wore away, and the sun was long risen, as we changed horses at the last stage. Little more than an hour remained, and I parted probably forever, from the man by whose conversation I had been inexpressibly captivated. I felt, as may be easily conceived, a strong desire to learn his history, and thus fix more permanently on my mind, the impression he had made.—He had already told me, that he had commanded a vessel between Liverpool and America—accordingly I asked him whether the turning of his heart to God had been caused by any sudden danger, or was of gradual growth. My question seemed to please him, and he replied to it with the utmost courtesy—

'Near the close of the late war,' said he, 'I was waiting in part with a fleet of other merchantmen, till a convoy should arrive, it being unsafe to sail without such protection.' 'My habits,' observed he, 'had always been exceedingly irregular, to give them no stronger term, and I passed the period of detention in practices that I cannot look back upon without shame and sorrow. At length the signal to weigh anchor was made. My ship, like many others, was so short of hands that I was glad to accept of any man that offered, however inexperienced. At the moment of departure, a boat came along side, out of which, a tall, robust man climbed actively upon the deck, and gave himself in as a seaman willing to engage for the voyage. The wind was blowing almost a gale, and under such circumstances, I was glad to get, even the addition of one equivocal hand to my scanty crew.

"This pleasure, however, was of short duration. This new comer was soon found to be of a most quarrelsome, untractable disposition, a furious blasphemer, and when opportunity offered, a drunkard. Besides all these disqualifications, he was wholly ignorant of nautical affairs; or if not, feigned himself so, in order to escape duty. In short he was the curse and plague of the vessel, and refused obstinately to give any account of himself, his family, or his past life. At length, a violent storm arose—all hands were called on deck, and too few, as I thought, to save the ship. When the men were all mustered to their quarters, behold the sturdy blasphemer was missing, and on going below to seek him, what was my surprise, at finding him on his knees, repeating the Lord's prayer with wonderful rapidity, over and over again, as if he had bound himself to countless recitations.—Vexed at what I believed hypocrisy or cowardice, I shook him roughly by the collar, exclaiming, 'say your prayers in fair weather!' He rose up, observing in a low voice, 'God grant I may ever see fair weather to say them.' In a few hours the storm abated, and another week brought us in port. I immediately paid this man off and he disappeared, and the incidents of the voyage, so trival in their nature, were soon effaced from my recollection. Four years passed away, during which time I was twice shipwrecked, and once badly hurt by the falling of a spar, yet I persevered in a life of profligacy and contempt of God. At the end of this period, I sailed from England for the port of New York, and after a very heavy and tedious voyage, entered that port on a Sabbath morning. The streets were thronged with multitudes, on their way to the many churches, with which that city abounds. But I was bent on a very different occupation, determining to drown the recollection of perils and deliverances in a celebrated tavern, which I had too long and too often frequented. As I was walking leisurely towards the haunt, I was met by a very dear friend, the quondam associate of many a thoughtless hour. After our greetings and salutations were over, I seized him by the arm, saying, 'you shall come along with me to the tavern!' 'I will do so,' replied he, 'on condition that you come with me first, for a single hour, into this house, (pointing to a church,) & thank God for all his mercies to you on the deep. I was ashamed to refuse, so we both entered the church together; a dense crowd filled the seats and even the aisles; after much difficulty, we succeeded in reaching a position right in front of the pulpit, and about five yards distant from the preacher. My attention was soon rivetted, as was all that vast assembly; and the features and voice of the preacher, though I could assign no time or place of previous meeing, yet seemed not wholly unknown, particularly when he spoke with animation. At length the preacher's eyes fell upon the spot where we stood. He suddenly paused—still gazing upon me, as if to make himself sure that he labored under no optical delusion, and then, with a voice that seemed to shake the building, he cried out, 'say your prayers in fair weather!' The whole audience seemed lost in amazement, and considerable time elapsed before the preacher himself sufficiently recovered self-possession, to recount the incidents that had led to this thrilling scene. He at length told the whole story; and remarked with deep emotion, 'that the words which his captain had uttered in the storm fours years ago, and who now stood before him, had clung to him by day and by night, after his landing, as if an angel had been charged with the duty of repeating them in his ears; and feeling the holy call as coming directly from above, to do the work of his master, he immediately entered upon study for the ministry, and that he now was, through grace, such as they saw and heard.' At the conclusion of this affecting address, he called on the audience to join him in prayer, that the same words might be blessed in turn to him who had first used them. But (continued this captain in his narration,) God had out run their petitions, for, before the preacher had finished the recital of the story I felt my heart melting undr the mighty workings of God's Spirit, bringing down high looks and lofty imaginations, and subduing within me every thing that exalteth itself against God. So that when the assembly was dismissed, I willingly exchanged the tavern for the house of the preacher, where I tarried six weeks, and then parted with my spiritual father, and spiritual son and with a heart which has ever since sought and found its pleasure only in the service of my Saviour; and have for the most part enjoyed those holy and happy assurances, that advancing years have only hallowed, and strengthened, and sanctified.'

The above is an extract, and it needs no comment of mine. I would only say to all who are living in the sunshine of prosperity; to all who are calculating upon a death-bed repentance; to the youth, who are waiting for a more convenient season, to the rich who fare sumptuously every day, and to all who are now sailing on a smooth, unruffled sea, say your prayers in fair weather!

NEWS ITEMS.

Dreadful Accident.—Thos. Sullivan, a worthy mute, at Albany, was run over and killed by the Troy train on Saturday evening.

By an advertisement in the Highland News, we perceive that a meeting of the stockholders of the Hillsborough and Cincinnati Railroad Company, is called on the 18th inst. The reports of all the surveys made will then be presented and the stockholders will choose from them. This work we look on as not only important to this city but the country through which it may pass. We hope the work will soon be commenced and speedly finished.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Settlement of Damages.—The Utica and Schenectady Railroad Company have settled with J. R. Howard, Esq., of Felt's Mills, N. Y., for the death of his son, killed by a collision of the cars, in May last. The president of the company proposed to pay all the incidental expenses attending the accident, including the physician's bill, coffin, sending the remains home, &c., and two thousand two hundred dollars besides. This offer was promptly accepted, & the money promptly paid over to Mr. Howard.

Acquittal of Sears.—The trial of Edward Sears in the Criminal Court at Washington, as one of the slave stealers on board the Pearl, resulted on Saturday afternoon in his acquittal.—Mr. Mann addressed the Court that day in defence of the prisoner, then the District Attorney replied. The jury were out about half an hour. The principal witness against Sears was Chester English, one of the white men found on board the Pearl.—Baltimore Sun.

Colleges in Ohio.—The Cleveland Herald states that Ohio is only about fifty years old but it has more Colleges in it than any state in the Union. We commend this fact to the attention of those gentlemen East who seem to think this state is filled with rather ignorant "natives"—especially to the preacher who wished to know if the streets of Cincinnati were paved. Ohio contains nearly two millions of inhabitants—and in population will soon be the second State in the Union.—Star in the West.

Perilous Expedition.

From the Prairie Du Cheau Patriot, of July 26th, we learn that Mr. A. Randall, of the United States Geological Corps, accompanied by his assistant, Major M. Dagger, reached that place in safety, a few days previous to the publication of the paper. They had been traversing the North Western wilds since May last, on a geological, zoological and botanical tour, and will report to government the results of their observations.—When near the Canguska river, a tributary of the St. Peters, he encountered and was robbed by a large party of the Sissillon Sioux Indians, who, by signs, ordered him to proceed South, which he was forced to do, leaving many valuable collections.

Mr. Randall spaaks in the highest terms of the country which he traversed, for beauty, agricultural capacity and mineral resources. Coal was found for two hundred miles on the Des Moines, and from indications, heavy deposites of Iron Ore are believed to exist. Gypsum (plaster) in abundance, forming cliffs for miles, was encountered. This must prove of immense value to the west, as this is the first instance of its being known in the great Valley of the Mississippi.—Limestone that makes a superior hydraulic lime, exists in abundance. Limestone, suitable for lime, clays suitable for bricks, rocks suitable for polishing, for grindstones, whetstones, and for building purposes, some of superior quality, are found in abundance along the Des Moines River.

The country over which Mr. Randall passed is the Des Moines, which river he explored from its mouth to its source; also the Chateau du Prairie and the western portion of the Undine region. Throughout his whole explorations there is a great abundance of water power, and, with few exceptions, plenty of timber. Mr. Randall reports that the Fox Indians are much discontented with their new homes, and he thinks our government is likely to have trouble with them. The Fox Indians were axious to get informaton of any parties of the Sioux Indians. Bitter animosities exist between the two tribes. Mr. Randall in his route underwent many hardships and perils.—Cin. Com.

Dean Swift.—When a gentleman, who was trying to persuade him to dine at his house, said, "I will send you my bill of fare," hereplied, "Send me your bill of company."

Queen Victoria's Crown.

The following is an estimate of the value of the different jewels contained in the Queen's crown:

Twenty diamonds around the circle, £1,500 each,	£30,000
Two large centre diamonds, £2,000 each,	4,000
Fifty-four smaller diamonds placed at the angles of the former,	100
Four crosses, each composed of twenty-five diamonds,	12,000
Four large diamonds on the tops of the crosses,	40,000
Twelve diamonds contained in the fleur-de-lis,	10,000
Eighteen smaller diamonds contained in the same,	2,000
Pearls, diamonds, &c., on the arches and crosses,	10,000
One hundred and forty diamonds on the mound,	500
Twenty-six diamonds on the upper cross,	3,000
Two circles of pearls on the rim,	300
	£111,000

Notwithstanding such an nncommon mass of jewelry, independent of the gold velvet cup, ermine, &c., the crown weighs only nineteen ounces, two pennyweights; it measures seven inches in hight, from the gold circle to the upper cross, and its diameter at the rim is five inches.

Advertisements.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT

The best Remedy ever discovered for

External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheum, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, Sun Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1,00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholic in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either ex ternal or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Stanhope's Celebrated

CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

For sale by G W Thompson, Jas S McCleary, Zanesville, H G O Cary, Dresden: D W Culberson, South Zanesville; Jas Bell, Otsego; Claypool & Lynn Nashport; L H Dugan, Duncan Falls; J W Howly, Blue Rock; J Dean, Putnam; Shepard & Brother Taylorsville.

All orders for the above medicine sho uld be addresed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

CLEANING & RENOVATING
LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S
APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other catharties, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisnness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

FITS! FITS!!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respec to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,

(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 12 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Berthelf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

Brother laborer in the cause of Humanity:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. Hatt, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, Post paid.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 49. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, SEPT. 7, 1848. WHOLE NO. 465.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

Mother, Home and Heaven.

"The three sweetest words in the English language, are, Mother, Home, and Heaven."

Mother—
The first fond word our hearts express,
In childhood's rosy hours:
When life seems full of happiness,
As nature is of flowers:

Heaven—
The end of all a Mother's prayers—
The Home of all her dreams;
The guiding star to light our path,
With hope's encheering beams.

Chide mildly the Erring.

BY J. W. PATTON.

Chide mildly the erring!
Kind language endears:
Grief follows the sinful—
Add not to their tears.
Avoid with reproaches
Fresh pain to bestow,
The heart which is stricken
Needs never a blow.

Chide mildly the erring!
Jeer not at their fall,
If strength were but human,
How weakly were all!
What marvel that footsteps
Should wander astray,
When tempests so shadow
Life's wearisome way!

Chide mildly the erring!
Entreat them with care!
Their natures are mortal,
—They need not despair!
We all have some frailty,
We all are unwise,
And the grace which redeems us,
Must shine from the skies.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

"THEY MADE LIGHT OF IT."

NO. I.

At a camp meeting in the County of H——— Va., there were gathered together many persons, amounting to hundreds. There were also a goodly number of ministers present. The meeting progressed day after day till near its close, and yet there had not been converts. The preaching seemed to be in plainness and earnestness, but no visible success attended the efforts. After a very serious and awful discourse, the preacher gave the usual invitation for persons to approach the altar, but none come thereto. Then an old and plain man arose in the stand to exhort. He stood for a minute motionless and silent; all eyes were fixed on him and all ears were in waiting to catch the first sentence from his lips, when in a solemn and significant manner he said:—"What shall I say?" Again he paused. And while breathless silence seemed to prevail among the hearers and preachers, and all were apparently awfully solemn, a dry leaf loosed itself from the action over the seats and stand, and the speaker's eye caught the leaf in the commencement of its descent and intently watched it as it continued to fall. His solemn gaze at the falling leaf attracted the attention of every one present and each eye was fixed theron. It was slow in its descent, for there was not a breath of air to disturb its movement. Just beneath that leaf there sat a gay and vain young Lady; she looked up and saw it coming toward her and tried to evade it. But the press of persons was too great, she could not and it fell upon her despite her efforts. The minister now resumed his exhortation and took as a text that dry leaf and particularly addressed himself to her on whom the leaf had fallen, as though supernaturally urged to do it. It was an awful time, at the conclusion of the exhortation many with tender hearts approached the altar. But the vain Miss on whom that harmless leaf had fallen would not humble herself. Friends surrounded and besought her to yield her heart to God; every consideration was urged, but all to no purpose. That day the camp meeting closed and left many a poor sinner unsaved. "They had made light of the gospel" and now "the harvest was past and the summer was ended, and they were not saved." All left the spot where hope had dwelt and returned to their home again. Some there had received their last call; at least there was one. The Circuit preacher was called in a very few days after the close of this meeting to attend the funeral of one who attended that camp meeting. Who do you think it was? It was none other than that vain young lady on whom the leaf fell and to whom the preacher addressed himself, and whose friends urged to turn to Christ. "She made light of the invitation," and in one week's time she was gone.

ADIEL.

Norfalk, Va.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett: Permit me to call forth my tardy pen, once more, and charter its services for a few moments in the transmission of a small cluster of thoughts to yourself and numerous readers. Of their value and importance, you will be the better judges, after having surveyed them! The present, appears to be a period of time pregnant with interests of a momentous character, both to the political, and the eclesiastical world, the "wide earth over." The eastern hemisphere is being rudely rocked upon the fitful waves of political commotion—a dark portentions cloud stretches its sable form, far over the dusky sky—and a deep toned thunder-voice from its oppressed millions, falls with solemn cadence upon the listening ear, calling for vengeance, or restitution, for evils long endured. And our "western world," is not without its bubblings of commotion. The political sea of our own favored land, is being stired from shore to shore, by the cross winds which swept over its irritable bosom. And quite above the din of storm and strife, of both worlds is distinctly heard the demand for the proper enjoyment of that heaven appointed blessing—Liberty! Civil and religious Liberty. But what the end of these things will be, the resolutions of feeling time must unfold. That there is a God, who sitteth at the helm, and guides in the affairs of men and nations, and who can bring order out of confusion, and light out of darkness, we have no disposition to doubt.

And that in this universal overturning of kingdoms and powers, there will be an approximation towards the establishment of "His Throne, whose right it is to reign," we are happy to believe. And to live at such period of time, must be to occupy a position of a more responsible character than commonly falls to the generations of men. It cannot therefore be an unimportent question with us, to know whether we are suitably prepared for the exigencies of such a period. For we have responsibilities that cannot be cast off. Several of the Annual Conferences of our church are soon to be in session; and we shall be called upon to contribute individually, and unitedly, our respective share of influence, either to hasten or retard the arrival of the long looked for, and ardently desired day, of a Savior's universal triumph.

And we hope that we shall not be thought inexcusably impertinent, if we venture to express our desire that all may suitably realize what our responsibilities are, and be found low at the mercy seat, seeking grace which alone will prepare us for successfully meeting them; and shall best subserve the great cause of truth and humanity.

To furnish opportunities for doing, appears to be the work of a divine providence. But to improve those opportunities, when furnished us, belongs to us—and we are commendable or censurable, according to the improvement which we make of them. It is not the wisdom, or cunning craftiness of men, that can render us suitably qualified for meeting such responsibilities. The spirit of our divine Master, and the wisdom which cometh down from above, only, can prepare us for so important a work. And I would humbly suggest to all the Ministers & members of our church, in particular, that they should make it a point of duty with themselves before God, to pray especially for the spirit of Divine grace to rest down upon us, as a people, and so to direct and control in the deliberations and decisions of our Conferences, as shall most effectually promote peace and piety among us, and hasten the great and glorious event of a world's conversion. That the coming year may be one of unrivaled prosperity with our infant Zion—a glorious begining or millennium triumph.

Affectionately, E. A. W.

Elba, August 21, 1848.

Temperance Department.

HISTORY OF KING ALCOHOL.

The history of King Alcohol is a history of repeated wrongs, and ourages and oppressions, all having in direct object, the establishment of absolute tyranny over us.

To prove this let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He refuses to allow us the use of the best of all beverages—cold water.

He gives an ever craving longing for poison and deprives us of appetite for the good and wholesome things intended for men's sustenance.

He makes the nose a light-house, and the face a rum-seller's advertisement.

He picks our pockets, and clothes us in rags.

He steals our friends and doubles our enemies.

He feeds us from the bottle, and lodges us in the open street.

He deprives us of employment, and steals our livelihood.

He heats us in summer, and freezes us in winter.

He sends sickness and pain, and takes health and strength.

He makes our houses ruins, and our lands deserts.

He stamps decay on our frames, and burning shame on our hearts.

He makes our bodies wrecks, and our homes mad-houses.

He sends deep woe to our fathers and broken hearts to our mothers.

He sends our wives to the grave, and our children to the poor-house.

He makes life a loathsome burden, and death a maddening thought.

He sends unnumbered curses, and denies our real advantages.

A king, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is utterly unfit to govern human beings.

A Rum Customer.

An old gentleman in the State of Maine, who was incorrigibly fond of 'the critter'—indulging in potations not only deep but strong—was affected with a constant rheum in his eyes, for which he waited on his physician for advice. The latter told him, at once, that he must leave off from his cups.

'And what will be the konsequenc if I don't dew any such thing?' anxiously queried the friend of Bacchus.

'Why, you will lose your optics, that's all,' was the reply.

'Are you sure of that—is it perfectly settled—a fixed fact, and no mistake, Doctor? Do you really mean to say, that I must quit likker or lose my eyes—now, 'pon 'onner?'

'I am as sure of it as that you have any peepers.'

'Well, then, f-a-r-e-w-e-l-l e-y-e-s!' responded the toper—'them's just my sentiments, old saddlebags!

And suiting the action to the word he drew from his pocket a huge brandy pistol from whose inverted muzzle he treated himself to a long and generous swig, the bare mention of which would have thrown Deacon Grant into spasms. The Doctor sloped.—Yankee Blade.

Western Sketches.

DAYTON, OHIO.

We copy from a letter of W. D. Gallagher, Esq., to the Cincinnati Gazette, the following graphic description of this thriving and beautiful town:—

The handsomest young city in all the wide West, beyond any sort of doubt, is this same city of Dayton. It has a light and airy beauty, (owing in great part to the unusaul width of its streets,) a rural taste, and an architectural advancement, that can be found in combination no where else in transylvanian regions where I have ever been. Many of private dwellings, most of its churches, and of its other public buildings, speak of a refinement which it is vain to look for over most of this tramountaine region. And it is just now puting the cornice on a court-house, which is by all odds the finest and handsomest building in the West. This is built of the Dayton limestone, carefully selected and beautiful hammer-dressed. Its exterior form is that of the plain Grecian temple, with six Corinthian columns in front, nine antes on either side, and two columns and four antes in the rear. It has, therefore, nothing new about it, to charm the beholder. It is the degree of its elevation, the beuaty of its materials, the excellence of its workmanship, and more than all the 'perfection of proportion' which it displays, that pleases, and for my own part I must say, at the expense of seeming extravagant or enthusiastic, that it is the first building I have yet seen, which entirely satisfied the sense of beauty within me. I have visited and walked around it a dozen times to-day, under a cloudy sky, and every time with a feeling of sunshine at my heart. And this, possessing no particular acquaintance with architecture, is the evidence I have of its classic beauty.

The original estimate ef the cost of this building was $62,000. Some alterations in the plan have been made since then, which it is supposed will swell this sum to between seventy and seventy-five thousand dollars. The interior is in too unfinished a state for description. The drawings, however, present an idea of an excellent building in all parts. These were made by one of the architects of Cincinnati, (Mr. Daniel,) and received a handsome premium offered by the city of Dayton for the best plan of a court-house. The building will be a lasting monument, alike of the taste and skill of the architect, and of the liberality and enterprise of the people who have erected it. Mr. Waymire, a very promising architect of Dayton, under whose immediate supervision the work is going on, deserves to be mentioned in connection with the building, for the valuable suggestions he has made, and the vigilance with which he has watched its progress.

Dayton is growing rapidly. You see this in the number of new buildings that meet the eye, in the increase of mechanical employments; and in the larger number of persons who are strangers to each other. The population of the town at this time, is believed to be between 13,000 & 14,000. It suffered much from the unexampled flood of last winter, which inundated about one third of the town plat, but you see nothing now of the ravages of the water. The embankment along the course of the Miami, north and west of the town, has been made higher, and more substantial. It must be a big stream that shall either overflow or break through it hereafter.

We have spent the greater part of to-day in visiting the Cooper Female Academy, the Cemetery, the Hydraulic Works, and the Manufactories of Dayton. These last consist of 7 oil mills, 5 machine shops, 4 flour mills, 4 iron foundries, 4 saw mills, 3 paper mills, (and a fourth building,) 2 cotton mills. 2 woollen factories, 2 brass foundories, 2 turning and sawing machines, 1 edge tool factory, 1 last and peg factory, 1 sash factory, 1 thrashing machine factory, 1 manufactory of woollen machinery, 1 planing machine, 1 gun-barrel manufactory. 1 veneer saw, and 1 corn mill. One of these is on the river, and several on the canal, but most of them are supplied with motive power from the Hydraulic Works. One of the cotton mills run 2,000 spindles, and gives employment to an average of 70 persons. One of the paper mills manufactures an average of 1,100 lbs. of paper per day. The Hydraulic canals receive and convey to the city the waters of Mad River, and are of course, not so large as those at Hamilton, which take up the entire waters of the Big Miami, of which Mad River is a tributary. They are very important, however, and now supply motive power equal to about 50 run of stone.

Dayton is extremely well supplied with schools, and her school-houses are among the best in the State. Two of the four in which the common schools are taght, are not behind the common school buildings of Cincinnati. The Seminary for Boys taught here by our old friend and fellow citizen, Milo G. Williams, is in a highly flourishing condition. The Cooper Female Academy is one of the best educational institutions I have ever visited. With its experienced, capable and devoted Principal, Mr. E. E. Barney, it could not well be otherwise. The building of this school is large, well ventilated, and surrounded by capacious grounds, in grass, flowers, shrubbery, and trees. Its interior arrangement is unusually good, and it is supplied with an excellent apparatus for the philosophical branches of study pursued in it. I has had for the past year an average daily attendance of 125 pupils, among whom I have had the opportunity of learning are a number of young ladies of handsome present attainments and excellent future promise. Mr. Barney's whole energies are given to the performance of the duties of his office, and from the acquaintance I have formed with him, I am convinced that the high reputation which he sustains as an instructor, is well deserved. The four years course of study in this school is a comprehensive one, and its teachers are all 'thorough' in their business.

An object of much interest here, is the Dayton Cemetery, about a mile south of the city.—It is a beautiful grove, of native forest trees, high, rolling and picturesque. Forty acres are comprehended within the inclosure, and the whole has been beautified by the taste and skill of that good and useful man, John W. Vancleve. No one should pass through Dayton, without visiting this quiet, and lovely city of the dead.

We stop a the Voorhes House, kept by our former fellow citizen W. H. Henrie. And an excellent house it is, in all respects. The Major is in the midst of "a land flowing with milk and honey," and provides for his guests the very bestit affords.

A Prairie of Corn.

A correspondent of the Toledo (Ohio) Blade, writes from the Wabash Valley, Ia., as follows:

"I viewed the 1000 acre field of corn (on Wea Prairie,) of the Hon. H. L. Ellsworth, late Commissioner of Patents, where this year 60,000 bushels will probably be raised without hoeing, simply ploughing the corn two or three times. I may say, too, that I saw 5000 acres, all adjoining."

Corn is raised by contract, for 4 to 6 cents per bushel taken in the field. Hogs are raised on clover, oats and corn, and it is not unfrequent to find farms with 1500 of these grunters. On the Grand Prairie no less than 10,000 cattle, from one to four years, were feeding in different herds for the Eastern market—one herdsman taking care of two to four hundred, for a compensation of ten cents per head, per month.

Ladies' Department.

WHISPER TO WIVES.

Study your husband's temper and character; and be it your pride and pleasure to conform to his wishes. Check at once the first advances to contradiction, even of the most trivial nature. Beware of the first dispute.

Whatever would have been concealed as a defect from the lover, must, with great diligence be concealed from the husband.—The most intimate and tender familiarity cannot surely be supposed to exclude decorum.

Let your husband be dear and of more consequence to you than any other human being; and have no hesitation in confessing those feelings to him.

Endeavor to make your husband's habitation alluring, and a delight to him. Let it be a sanctuary to which his heart may alway turn from the ills and anxiety of life.

I know not of female attractions so captivating to men as delicacy and modesty.

If possible, let your husband suppose you think him a good husband, and it will be a strong stimulus to his being so.

No attraction so renders a woman at all times agreeable to her husband as cheerfulness and good humor.

In the article of dress, study your husband's taste; endeavor to wear what he thinks becomes you best.

Make yourself as useful to him as you can, and let him see you employed if possible in economical pursuits.

Endeavor to feel pleased with your husband's friends.

Encourage in your husband a desire of reading out at his leisure hours.

On the day of her marriage a woman's tour of gaiety should be ended.

How indecorous and offensive is it to see a woman exercising authority over her husband, and saying, "I will have it so." "It shall be done as I like," &c.

Never join in any jest or laugh against your husband.

Assidously conceal his faults and speak only of his merits.

In married life confidants are by no means desirable.

Conceal from others any little discord or disunion that occurs between you and your husband.

Never receive the particular attention of any other man.

Be you ever so couscious of superiority of judgment or talent, never let it appear to your husband.

Shun extravagance. Attention to order and regularity will contribute much to the comfort of your husband.

A woman never should appear untidy or badly dressed when in the presence of her husband.

Let home be the sole theme of your wishes, your plans your exertions.

There is an old observation that a mother and daughter-in-law are natural enemies.—But let your manner to your relations in-law be particularly kind and considerate.

In your manner to your servants be firm without being severe, and kind without being familiar. Let your commands to your servants be consistent and reasonable, and then firmly but mindly insist on obedience to them.—It is very disheartning to a poor servant to be continually found fault with. Praise and reward them when you can—human nature will not bear constant chiding.

The Poor Biscuit.

A plain-spoken faithful pastor in the city of——, New York, called by request to take tea with one of his parishioners. At the table everything bore the appearance of plenty and culinary skill. A blessing was invoked—the bell rang, and a servant appeared with the smoking biscuit, white as milk, and light as the honey comb. The good lady looking up with all the seeming honesty which usually prompts such a course, said to her guest:

'I really hope, Mr.——, you will excuse my biscuit, they are so poor; I hoped that I should have something nice, but they are hardly fit to eat,' at the same time extending towards him the dish containing the pride of her table. The good man took one, saying, as he tasted it, with arch gravity:

'They might have been better, ma'am.'

With a sudden motion, the dish was withdrawn, and with a voice in full keeping with the language, she said:

'They are good enough for you.'

Apoligies often conceal, and are employed to gratify a similar vanity.

Young Men's Department.

A True Story with a Moral for Young MEN.

'Poor old man,' said my companion, 'he has seen better days.'

This remark was made in reference to an old man; whose tattered garments, tottering frame, and miserable appearance, indicated an object of charity of the most appalling class.

'You know something of his history, then?' I enquired.

'Oh yes, I have known him a long time. He built that splendid mansion just opposite us, and was for years its opulent possessor. Retired from business, he supposed himself comfortably situated with a competence for life; but alas! the intemperance and extravagance of a son, too much indulged and pampered, together with his own indiscretion, have brought him to his present condition. He lives now upon charity among the very, very men who once looked up to him with admiration almost bordering upon envy.

'And his son—what has become of him?'

'I will tell you. For years he was the most elegantly dressed young man in this neighborhood. Many a time have I seen him leisurely sauntering these streets, or driving furiously over them, a very coxcomb of the first water. He crosed the Atlantic, made the tour of the Continent, and returned a greater fop and a more lavish spendthrift than before the travelled.—Times grew worse, however, with the old man; misfortunes unexpected befell him: his means became limited, while the demands of the young man increased. I happened to be in the counting room of a friend one day where the old gentleman was settling some business, when the son entered about half intoxicated, and demanded of the father two hundred dollars!'

'I am not able to let you have it,' said the old man. 'Times are changed with me, and my means are passing out of my hands.'

Upon this the son began to swear furiously. He knashed his teeth in the face of his father, called him an old fool, and other hard names, and swore the money should be given him. Presently disease came upon the old man's son—he was taken to the alm's house, and died there. The body was offered to 'that old man' for interment, but he was too poor to have it removed.

'I suppose then it was consigned to Potters' field,' said I.

'No,' replied my friend; 'he had no burial. His skeleton at this mement hangs upon wires in the Medical room an anatomical preparation!'—Balt. Protestant.

Young Men, Beware!

Mr. Potter, of Yale College, in a Temperance address lately at New Haven, says: "My heart bleeds as I remember the fate of three of my early companions, who started in life with myself. One of them possessed the finest mathematical mind I ever knew. He would take the ledger and go up with three columns at a time, with perfect ease. He was the first man in America that beat the Automaton Chess player, and he told me he had every move in his head before he entered the room. That man fills a drunkard's grave. Another, who was an excellent accountant, and could command almost any salary, met with the same melancholly fate. Another, possessing the same brilliant qualities, has gone down, not to the grave perhaps, but he is sunk clear out of sight amid the mire and filth of intemperance.—Hartford Courant.

Youth's Department.

A DOMESTIC SKETCH.

BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

It is the duty of mothers to sustain the reverses of fortune. Frequent and sudden as they have been in our own country, it is important that young females should possess some employment by which they might obtain a livelihood, in case they should be reduced to the necessity of supporting themselves. When families are unexpectedly reduced from affluence to poverty, how pitifully contemptible it is to see the mother desponding or helpless, and permitting her daughters to embarrass those whom it is their duty to assist and cheer.

"I have lost my whole fortune," said a merchant, as he returned one evening to his home; "we can no longer keep our carriage. We must leave this large house. The children can no longer go to expensive schools. Yesterday I was a rich man; to-day there is nothing I can call my own."

"Dear husband," said the wife, "we are still rich in each other and our children. Money may pass away, but God has given us a better treasure in those active hands and loving hearts."

"Dear father," said the children, "do not look so sober. We will help you to get a living."

"What can you do, poor things?" said he.

"You shall see, you shall see," answered several cheerful voices. "It is a pity if we have been to school for nothing. How can the father of eight children be poor. We shall work, and make you rich again."

"I shall help," said the youngest girl, hardly four years old. "I will not have any new things bought, and I shall sell my great doll."

The heart of the husband and father, which had sunk within his bosom like a stone, was lifted up. The sweet enthusiasm of the scene cheered him, and his nightly prayer was like a song of praise.

They left this stately house. The servants were dismissed. Pictures and plate, rich carpet and furniture, were sold, and she who had been so long the mistress of the mansion, shed no tear. "Pay every debt," said she; "let no one suffer through us, and we may yet be happy."

He rented a neat cottage and a small piece of ground a few miles from the city. With the aid of his sons, he cultivated vegetables for the market. He viewed with delight and astonishment the economy of his wife, nurtured as she had been in wealth, and the efficiency which his daughters soon acquired under her training.

The eldest one assisted her in the work of the household, and also instructed the younger children. Besides, they executed various works, which they had learned as accomplishments, but which they found could be disposed of to advantage. They embroidered with taste some of the ornamental parts of female apparel, which were readily sold to a merchant in the city.

They cultivated flowers, and sent boquets to market in the cart that conveyed the vegetables; they platted straw, they painted maps, they executed plain needle-work. Every one was at her post, busy and cheerful. The cottage was like a bee-hive.

"I never enjoyed such health before," said the father.

"And I never was so happy before," said the mother.

"We never knew how many things we could do, when we lived in the great house," said the children, "and we love each other a great deal better here. You call us your little bees."

"Yes," replied the father, "and you make just such honey as the heart likes to feed on."

Economy, as well as industry, was strictly observed, nothing was wasted. Nothing unnecessary was purchased. The eldest daughter became assistant teacher in a distinguished female seminary, and the second took her place as instructress to the family.

The little dwelling, which had always been kept neat, they were soon able to beautify. Its construction was improved, and the vines and flower trees were replanted around it. The merchant was happier under his woodbine covered porch in a summer's evening, than he had been in his showy dressing-room.

"We are now thriving and prosperous," said he, "shall we return to the city?"

"Oh, no, no," was the unanimous reply.

"Let us remain," said the wife, "where we have found health and contentment."

"Father," said the youngest, "all we children hope you are not going to be rich again; for then," she added, "we little ones were shut up in the nursery, and did not see much of you or mother. Now we all live together, and sister, who loves us, teaches us, and we learn to be industrious and useful. We were none of us so happy when were rich and did not work. So, father, please not be a rich man any more."

Miscellaneous.

Foes of the Rattlesnake.

The rattlesnake finds a superior foe in the deer and blacksnake. Whenever a buck discovers a rattlesnake in a situation which invites attack, he loses no time in preparing for battle. He makes up to within ten or twelve feet of the snake—then leaps forward and aims to sever the body of the snake with his sharp bifurcated hoofs. The first onset is commonly successful, but if otherwise, the buck repeats the trial until he cuts the snake in twain. The rapidity and fatality of his skillful manœuver leaves but slight chance for his victim either to escape or eject his poison into his more alert antagonist. The blacksnake is also more than an equal competitor against the rattlesnake. When the black and rattlesnake are about to meet for battle, the former darts forward at the height of his speed, and strikes at the neck of the rattlesnake with unerring certainty, leaving a foot or two of his body at liberty. In an instant he encircles him within five or six folds, and then stops and looks the strangled and gasping foe in the face, to ascertain the effect produced upon his corseted body. If he shows signs of life, the coils are multiplied, and the screws tightened—the operator all the while narrowly watching the countenance of the helpless victim. Thus the two remain thirty or forty minutes—the executioner then slackens one coil, noticing at the same time whether any signs of life appear; if so, the coil is resumed, and retained, until the wretch is completely dead. The moccasin snake is destroyed in the same way.

Notes of Doves.

We have already noticed the plaintive notes of doves. These are not, however, the sounds of lamentation, but those of tenderness and love.

The cooing of the Zenaida dove is said to be peculiarly touching, so that one who hears it for the first time, naturally stops to ask—"What bird is that?" Its effect on the feelings is illustrated by an anecdote respecting a pirate, who was associated with a band of the most desperate villians that ever annoyed the Florida coast. This man had frequent occasion to repair to certain wells near which the doves nestled, and their soft and melancholy cry was the means of awaking in his breast feelings that had long slumbered, and of melting his heart to repentance. He was accustomed to linger at the spot, and to contrast his guilty and wretched life with former days of comparative innocence and peace. He said that he never left the wells without increased fears and misgivings respecting futurity, and at last he became so deeply moved by these notes, the only soothing sounds he ever heard during his life of horrors, that he poured out his soul in supplications for mercy, and firmly resolved to abandon his desperate companions and mode of life, and to return to his own family, who were deploring his absence. His escape from his vessel was accompanied by many difficulties and dangers, but no danger seemed to him comparable with that of living in the violation of human and divine laws. At last he reached his former home, and settled in peace among his friends.

Ole Bull, the celebrated Norwegian violinist, is, an English paper says, now working as a journeyman in the manufactory of M. Vuillaume, a Parisian musical instrument maker, in the hope of being enabled to make a violin that shall equal the tones of those made by the celebrated Stradivarius, of Cremona, and for this purpose he has brought from Norway wood more than two hundred years old.

If men knew what felicity dwells in the cottage of the virtuous poor man, how sound he sleeps, how quiet his breast, how composed his mind, how free from care, how easy his position, how moist his mouth, how joyful his heart—they would never admire the noises, and diseases, the throng of passions, and the violence of unnatural appetites, that fill the houses of the luxurious and the heart of the ambitious.

Conference Proceedings

Reported for the Western Recorder.

ABSTRACT

Of the Minutes of the Illinois Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

The thirteenth session of the Illinois Annual Conference of the Methodist Prot. Church, met pursuant to appointment, in the school-room, adjacent to the camp-ground (the new church not being yet in condition to be occupied,) near Springfield, Illinois, August 15th, 1848, and was opened in due form. Br. Waite, who had been appointed by the President to preach an opening sermon, not having arrived the discourse was deferred until evening, when a very impressive and appropriate address, founded, on Matt. 16 chap., 18 verse, was delivered, by the Br. appointed, to the Conference together with a solemn and attentive congregation at the encampment.

Br. Jno. Waite was elected Secretary, and P. Wright assistant Sec.

The following is the corrected roll of the Conference:

Ministers.—Jno. Clarke, Jr., R. Hone, W. H. Collins, R. Wright, A. Dickerson, J. S. Williams, J. Z. Zimmerman, W. P. James, F. Brown, James Hussey, Enos Jewell, Jno. Waite, T. S. Tumelson, J. P. Johnson, R. F. Shinn; J. K. Zimmerman, T. Antrobus, Elijah Lacy, C. A. Kirkpatrick, E. M. Lathrop, Hugh Doyle, B. W. Johnson,* P. Stafford, T. Waller, Lewis Pate, John Collins, E. M. Lathrop, Dr. N. D. Annis, Dr. S. Fisk & O. Hulin, removed from the itinerant list for the neglect of official duty. W. A. B. M'Cuistian and W. Walsh withdrawn. E. M. Lathrop & Dr. S. Fisk, referred for trial, charges being preferred againt them.

*Absent.

Delegates.—Illinois Circuit, J. Biddlecomb, Wm. Hull, Grandview, Circuit. C. Link, Camden, H. Barker, Ebenezar, H. Rentfro, Mississippi, W. Hoggins, Erastus Ameo, Carrolton, D. Tunnell, Vermillion, W. Villers, Nashville, S. Patterson, Salem, Wm. England, Fairfield, Ransom Harris, Newton, H. Small, Springfield, L. Shake, Sullivan, E. Kenedy, Mill Creek, Jas. M'Cabe.

The following brethren ware received into the travelling connection, Lewis Pate, John Collins, Calvin Ament.

Elected to Deacons Orders.—Lewis Pate,* Jas. Neil, Jas. M'Cabe,* J. L. Kirkpatrick, G. W. Stevens.*

Elected to Elders Orders.—R. F. Shinn,* T. S. Tumelson,* John Collins,* Elijah Lacy,* Francis Brown.*

*Present and received ordination.

Report of Stationing Committee.

APPOINTMENTS.

JOHN CLARKE, Jr., President.

Camden Circuit, J. S. Williams, Quincy Ct., to be supplied, Illinois Ct., H. Doyle, J. Z. Zimmerman. sup. ass't., Gandview Ct., R. Wright, Newton Ct., to be supplied, Salem Ct., F. Brown, Alton Ct., to be supplied,* Carrolton Ct., A. Dickerson, Salem C., T. Antrobus, Mississippi Ct.. J. P. Johnson, C. Ament, Rushville Ct., R. F. Shinn, Springfield Ct., W. H. Collins, Vermillion Ct., to be supplied, Mill Creek Ct., J. R. Zimmerman. Fairfield Ct., Elijah Lacy, Ebenener Ct., to be supplied,* Nashville Ct., L. Pate, Kaskaskia Ct., connected with Nashville until it can be supplied, Bath Ct., to be supplied, Sullivan Ct., John Collins, Hland Grove Ct., W. P. James.

Missions.—Salt Creek, to be supplied, Greenville, John Waite.

*G. W. Stevens, appoined by the President.

*S C. Rentfro, " "

R. Horne, Conference Missionary.

P. Stafford, T. Tumelson & T. Waller without appointments, one year, at their own request.

Benj. W. Johnson, transferred to Mississippi Conference.

J. Mills removed out of the District.

E. Jewell & J. Hussey to be employed by the President.

The foregoing report of the Stationing Committee was unanimously adopted by a vote of Conference.

The Stationing Committee is elected by ballot, in the Illinois Conference, and consisted this session of, Jno. Clake, Jr., President. A. Dickerson & T. Antrobus, Ministers. W. England and J. Biddlecomb, Laymen.

Standing District Committee.

J. P. Johnson, R. F. Shinn & J. Newberry Elders. Joel Rice, Benj. Dyre & O. Ames Laymen.

Jno. Clarke, Jr., Conference Steward, and supt. fund.

The Conference was favored throughout, with the attendance of Brs. Bagly and West, visiting brethren from the North Illinois Conference.—The following was unanimously adopted:

Whereas it is a pleasant duty to cherish a cordial fraternal relation and correspondence with our brethren of other An. Conferences.

Therefore, Resolved, That this Annual Conference appoint by election two of its members, a committee of friendly intercourse to visit the approaching session of the North Illinois Annual Conference to be held at Princeton, October next. Whereupon, Brs. J. P. Johnson & Jno. Clarke, Jr., were elected said committee.

PERIODICALS.

The action of Conference, relative to the Protestant Monitor and superannuated fund in the adoption of a report from a committee of investigation, to whom the subject had been referred, is too extended for insertion.—The substance is—that the Monitor has failed to accomplish the purposes for which it was connected with the Illinois Annual Conference. That the connection has ceased—that a special agent be appointed to settle with the Editor as former agent for the sup. fund,—and that a judicial investigation be instituted in accordance with the discipline of the Church. Jno. Clarke, Jr., was appointed special agent to settle, and A. Dickerson to prosecute a judicial investigation and D. Tunnell alternate.

The committee on periodicals reported a recommendation of the printed prospectus of Br. Jno. Waite for the publication of a religious periodical, entitled the Western Fountain, to be devoted to the advancement of Christianity in connection with the Methodist Prot. Church.

Whereupon it was Resolved, That this Conference has entire confidence in the integrity & competency of Br. Waite as Editor and proprietor of such a publication, and should he undertake the enterprize in accordance with his printed prospectus, it be recommeded to the members of this church to patronize the publication.

The following motion offered by Br. Clarke was negatived:

Resolved, That in the judgment of this Annual Conference a sufficient number of paying subscribers cannot be obtained to sustain the proposed publication.

Church Register.

Resolved, That this Conference highly approve of the publication, by Brother Bassett, of the Church Register, and will extend to it all the patronage in our power, by ordering the work, and extending its circulation.

Western Boundary.

Resolved, That our cts, and societies in Missouri, be hereafter recognized as belonging to the Missouri Annual Conference until the question of the legal organization of the Missouri Conference be determined by the next General Conference. The number of members in society so far as reported is, 1927, unstationed ministers, 25. Preachers 15. Itinerant 28. Total, 1995. Parsonages, 4. Houses of worship, 13. Probable cost $7,800.

The next session of the Annual Conference is to be held in the Methodist Prot. Church in York, Clarke county, Illinois, commencing on the first Thursday in Oct., 1849, at 10 o'clock, A. M.

The Conference Steward's report exhibited much less deficiency than has existed for several preceding years. And the general condition of the District is healthy at the present, with quite an encouraging prospect of increased prosperity. The session of Conference has been one of uncommon interest.—Its business has been despatched in a brotherly and dignified manner, and to very general satisfaction. The camp-meeting was blessed of the Lord, in the conversion of souls, and upbuilding of believers. On most of the circuits that have been regularly supplied, and faithfully attended, with the ministry, and means of grace, the past has been a year of prosperity and increase. Yet, as is to be seen by the foregoing list of appointments, there is great destitution of ministerial help in the District, such as urges upon brethren, who love the cause,—are established in its principles, and willing to endure some hardness in its propogation, to come over to our help, from those regions that are more than supplied.

JNO. CLARKE, Jr.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, September 7, 1848.

WANTED—Any number or quantity of responsible new Subscribers, to commence with Volume Ten. Brethren will please bring as many names of such as they can to the ensuing Conferences.

ANNUAL REGISTER, M. P. CHURCH, 1848.—This work is now in press, and will be issued within a few weeks. A copy will be sent to each Subscriber for the Western Recorder, who pays $2 in advance for vol. 10.

☞The first letter of the Editor, since his departure for the Conferences, will be found in our columns of to-day. It is very interesting, and should be read by every reader of the "Recorder." †

☞The absence of the Editor of this paper, will, we hope, be a sufficient apolgy for the non-appearance of editorial matters. Our readers may expect a letter from the Editor each week, which we do know, will be more interesting than any thing we can say. †

☞Our readers will recollect that in our paper of last week, was published a letter from E. E. Parish, of Oregon. Mr. P. alludes to the state of affairs in the Methodist Episcopal Church of that place, and amongst other things mentions, that funds collected here for an Indian Mission, have been appropriated to a white Mission. We understand that the excellent Pastor of the M. E. Church in this place, at the close of his sermon, on last Sabbath morning, took occasion to allude to the "Recorder," and this document, with marked displeasure. He admitted the fact, that such appropriation had been made, but explained satisfactorily the cause. With the explanation, however, there was a decided impression given to his large and respectable audience, that the letter was published at this time, with a design to lessen the Missionary contributions of that C'h. Now, we know, that so far as the Editor is concerned, this is not the case; and that the publication of it at this time, was merely accidental, and we believe without even a knowledge that this is the time for their contributions. We believe the minister to be a good man, and we doubt not, that he spoke as he thought, in this case; but he has a decidedly wrong impression. He has mistaken the character of the Editor of this paper, if he thinks he would condescend to such measures. If the "Recorder" ever unwittingly publishes a misrepresentation, its columns are open—it will as readily publish a correction.—The Editor, doubtless, admitted this communication as he would have admitted a like statement, from what he considered a reliable source, respecting his own or any other church. †

[Editorial Correspondence of the Western Recorder.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 2, 1848.

We were off from Zanesville on yesterday, at 11, A. M. Our coach was thronged, within and without. Inside it was occcupied chiefly by ladies. It fell to our lot for the first twenty miles, to occupy a position which would have suited us much better were we of an aspiring disposition. Our seat was on high, superior even to that of the driver. We however had the pleasant company of a member of Marietta College, on his way to Columbus, it being now vacation time. Friendly clouds kept the sunshine from our brow, and pleasant breezes kept us in comfortable temperature. We of course enjoyed the scenery, and made our observations of the grain and fruit crops, which are generally abundant. From Jacksontown we were accommodated with seats within. It soon appeared however that our condition was not bettered, for, the ladies having left, some three gentlemen (?) annoyed us with fumes of tobacco smoke for a number of miles, till we were favored with some more female company, when we were relieved of the annoyance. In such case, it would be advantageous always to have ladies along. We reached Columbus at about sun-setting, and whilst our supper was in course of preparation at the Neil House, we took a walk with our friend, to see a number of public buildings, and especialy to view the premises of the new State House the walls of which have been raised a few feet above their foundation. The work of erection seems now to be progressing rapidly. Some sixty or more of the convicts of the State prison, we were told, are constantly employed in this work.

A little before 8 o'clock, we took our departure from Columbus, by coach for Springfield. We were excessively crowded, but had mostly an agreeable company. Our chief entertainment for the present nightly journey was derived from a blind boy who sat in immediate contact with us. He is fourteen years of age, and informed us tha he had completed his seventh term in the State Institution for the Blind. He gave us satisfactory information respecting the regulations of that excellent Institution, and its processes of instruction. He desired us to examine his right fore finger, with the end of which, he assured us, he had read two or three times through, the entire Bible, in embossed letter. This, he says, occupies six large volumes. The sense of feeling in the finger, he said, had to be cultivated. He described to us also the apparatus and different modes of writing and printing used by students in the Institution. He answered with remarkable readiness a number of questions in Mental Arithmetic, and entertained us with some interesting songs. He informed us that he had learned to make brushes, and gave us also to understand that he was acquainted with instrumental as well as vocal Music. We were much interested in a remark he made, that many persons have a wrong impression respecting the blind, supposing them the subjects of dissatisfaction and grief, that they were denied the privilege to see; whereas, having never seen, and not knowing what it is to see, they are not prepared to appreciate the satisfaction it would be to see, and therefore they are reconciled to their lot, and never murmur about it.

At half past two this morning, we were at Springfield, and with many others lingered about the hotel for nearly two hours, in waiting for the departure of the train for this city, not wishing to disturb the repose of any of our numerous friends in the town, whom we would have been glad to see. We found that within a few days past the connection had been made with the Mad River and Lake Erie rail road, so that there is now direct communication from Cincinnati to Sandusky city by rail road. This morning, we had the satisfaction to see the train coming in from the north, over a part of the track which had just been finished. Our passenger train left Springfield at half past four. We found ourselves in company with some U. S. troops from Pennsylvania, on their way west. We were allowed twenty minutes for breakfast at Morrow, and were brought through in safety to this city by half past ten this morning. A second track is now being laid, of T rail, and is in use for the first six miles from the city. We were little short of twenty four hours upon the way from Zanesville, more than three hours of which were spent in Columbus and Springfield. The distances are, from Zanesville to Springfield, (by coaches,) 97 miles. From Springfield, to Cincinnati, (by cars,) 84 miles. In all, 181 miles. This is not slow travelling, but the speed will be much accelerated ere long, when the rail road direct to Columbus shall be completed, and then the Central one thence to Zanesville and Wheeling. Amongst the numerous improvements which have recently been put in operation, we observed as we approached the city, the posts and wire of the Telegraph extending up the river, to connect with Marietta, &c. It is now in operation between this place and Ripley. A. H. B.

WEARY OF LIFE.—A Valuable Lesson.—In a letter dated Trenton Falls, August 14th, Mr. N. P. Willis relates the following curious anecdote:

"Among our fellow passengers up the Mohawk we had, in two adjoining seats, a very impressive contrast, an insane youth on his way to an asylum, and the mind that has achieved the greatest triumph of intellect in our time, Morse, of the electric telegraph, on an errand connected with the conveyance of thought by lightning. In the course of a brief argument on the expediency of some provisions for putting an end to a defeated and hopeless existence, Mr. Morse said that, ten years ago, under ill-health and discouragement, he would gladly have availed himself of any divine authorization for terminating a life of which the possessor was weary. The sermon that lay in this chance remark—the loss of priceless discovery to the world, and the loss of fame and fortune to myself, which would have followed a death thus prematurely self-chosen—is valuable enough, I think, to justify the invasion of the sacredness of private conversation which I commit by thus giving it to print. May some one, aweary of the world, read it to his profit.

A LITTLE TOO BIG.—We take the following from the "Zanesville Gazette" of last week, and insert it for the consideration of enquiring horticulturalists:

Fine Apple.

Mr. Wm. Pringle of Wayne township, handed us an apple last week that we have seldom seen equaled. It measured about thirteen inches in diameter, was very mellow and almost sweet.—He does not know the name, but says he wants to find a better kind, if such a thing is, and then he will yield the palm. Send on your apples.

A big apple, that, we should think! Only think of it. "It measured thirteen inches in diameter." Now, according to 'Parke,' this would make the circumference of the apple, THIRTY-NINE INCHES!! Wonder if he has any more of "the same sort" left? †

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITION.—We are authorized to say that the Bridges, to all members of the Agricultural Society and for all they take for exhibition, will be free on the 19th and 20th, of next month, the days of the exhibition. Persons having articles which they design to present, are requested to give at least ten days notice, to Benjamin Wheeler or James L. Cox, that suitable preperations may be made. This is very important and ought not to be omitted.—Zanesville Gazette.

☞We suppose that the Editor of the Gazette will be on hand with that apple, and carry off the prize triumphantly. †

☞It has lately been stated in the English House of Lords, that there are in London, 100,000 children growing up without the least education, and of these 30,000 are thieves and vagrants! This is indeed a deplorable state of things, and shows how deep a depth of degradation a despotic government plunges the people into. Remember, this enormous number of children, all reside within the Metropolis of London! We do not know what the number would be if all were enumerated in each of the other cities of Great Britain, who obtain an existence in this vile manner, but this we do know, that this same state of affairs has been going on from year to year, without exciting the least commiseration amongt the rulers and law-makers of Great Britain. †

YELLOW FEVER IN NEW YORK.—We learn that this disease, in a very malignant form, is prevailing on Staten Island, only a few miles distant from the city. Its first appearance was about the middle of August, and fifty cases have already been reported. The disease is supposed to have been brought from New Orleans by certain vessels lying at Quarantine. †

BANK NOTES.—There has been some uneasiness, for a few days past, in reference to the Sandusky and Norwalk Banks. We learn, however, that the Norwalk Bank is considered sound, and that its notes are taken as usual in Cincinnati, Columbus, and every where else but Zanesville.

The Bills of the Sandusky Bank, we understand, can be cashed at a discount of ten per ct. in Zanesville, and that merchants will take it in goods at a trifling discount—sufficient only for sending it home. †

☞The Foreign News, by the arrival of the Niagara, bringing seven days later intelligence than that brought by the Brittannia, will be found in our columns of to-day. It is very important.

The story of the defeat of the British troops, by the insurgents, is entirely erroneous. †

Religious Intelligence.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Bourneville, O., Sept. 1, 1848.

BR. BASSETT: Having about closed my labors on this circuit for the present Conference year I will make my fourth quarterly report. Since my last we have held three two-day's meetings. The first at Indian Creek commencing August 5th. This meeting resulted in the addition of 14 to the church; I was aided here by Br. P. Baily and the exhorters of the circuit. August 12th, our fourth quarterly meeting commenced in Bourneville. We had very large congregations and a good meeting, 4 joined the church. I was aided by Father Hughey and Br. Kezeria. August 36, commenmenced a two-day's meeting at Stony Ridge School house, near Father Wills'. Here I had no ministerial aid which was available, yet we had a good meeting, 4 joined the church at this meeting. At our quarterly conference we received Br. Payton Bailey, an unstationed minister from the Muskingum District, by certificate. During the Conference year we have received into the church on this circuit 100 members, nearly all of whom promise much fruit unto holiness. I have during the year baptised by different modes 34 adults, and 12 infants on this circuit. My time for leaving this kind people is at hand. May God send them a good pastor next year, and bring them all to heaven. Yours. &c.

C. H. WILLIAMS.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

BR. BASSETT: The past year has been remarkable for deaths on Springfield Circuit. Some that welcomed me here about one year ago are now no more.

Among the deceased we have to number our estimable brother,

JOSEPH NEWLOVE,

Who departed this life on the 25th of March last in the eightieth year of his age. The deceased was born in England, March 8th, 1767, where he received a religious education which prevented him from many of the fatal vices that prevailed among the youth of the day.

In 1802 he embraced religion and united himself to the Methodist Church in England. Shortly after he united with the church, he was chosen to the leadership of a class in which capacity he continued while he remained in England.

In 1821 he emigrated to the United States and settled in Clark County, Ohio, where he resided until he was removed to the Spirit World. Soon after he located in America, he united himself to the M. E. Church, where he was immediately appointed a leader, and continued an examplary official member of that church until the organization of M. P. Church, when Brother Newlove together with his entire class organized under the banner of Equal and Mutual Rights. The class in its new relation ELECTED Br. Newlove their leader, for they had every confidence in his qualifications and integrity. Br. Newlove had to endure all the difficulties and discouragements growing out of a church reformation, but he lived to see a flourishing Conference, and the class to which he belonged enlarged & much encouraged; and a comfortably Meeting House erected for their accommodation. Three days before his death he met his class at the communion table, and at the close of the communion exercise he arose and said, "the nearer he come to the end of his pilgrimage, the more comfort religion afforded him." From this meeting he was conducted to his son Laybourn's, where he remained until he quietly took his leave of time. His remains were followed to the family burying ground by a large procession of both old and young.

Thus closed the life of a man nearly four score years of age. Forty-six years were spent in the church, and nearly the entire time he acted as a leader. He raised a large family of respectable children, which together with many other kind relatives and friends are left to treasure up his counsels and imitate his example of piety and virtue.

Yours in Christ,

R. ROSE.

Springfield, Ohio, August 28th, 1845.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Departed this life, August 9th, 1848, at her residence, Sugar-tree, Henry county, Ill., sister

ANN WILLIBE,

Aged 38 years, she found the emancipating grace of God applied to her sin-sick soul about seven years since and united with the Methodist P. Church last April, and remained until the hour of her death an example of piety. At 4 o'clock, P. M. she fell asleep in Jesus without a struggle or a groan. Sister Willibe has left a devoted husband to the cause of Christ, and six children to mourn her absence, but their loss is her eternal gain. Her funeral was attended on the 20th, inst. by a solemn congregation, which took a deep interest in her death. A discourse by the writer of this notice, from Luke 20 chap. and 36 verse. May God sanctify his Providence to the church and to the neighborhood.

W. WRIGHT.

FOREIGN NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP NIAGARA.

One Week Later from Europe.

Highly Important News.—Capture of Meagher, Leyne, and O'Donoghue.—State Trial, Conviction of Martin.—More Arrests.—Seizure of American Money.—Conflicts with Austrians at Bologna.—Cotton Dull, but Unchanged.—Advance in Breadstuffs.

The steamship Niagara arrived at New York on Thursday evening at six o'clock, bringing 7 days later intelligence from Liverpool, from whence she sailed on the 19th ult.

We make up the following from the Philadelphia North American and Ledger, by magnetic telegraph—papers by the Niagara having not yet come to hand.—Washington Union.

ENGLAND.

On the 12th, the Manchester magistrates struck a blow against club organizations, by arresting fourteen of the chief leaders of the various clubs in different parts of the town. All their papers were seized. The prisoners apprehended have been remanded for a week.

At Hyde, Dakenfield, and Oldham, the chartists have appeared in considerable numbers, parading through the districts armed with pikes and guns, but in all cases upon the appearance of the police or military, they have taken to their heels and dispersed.

At Liverpool, on the 16th, strong bodies of police well armed for an encounter made a sudden attack upon the chartist club in Weller street, Blackfriars, and captured fourteen men. Upon their being searched, they were found to be armed with pistols loaded to the muzzle, three-cornered daggers, spear-heads, and swords, with an ample supply of gunpowder, shot, and tow-balls. Upon one man 85 rounds of ball-cartridge were discovered.

At Ashton-under-Lyne, and other districts round Manchester, considerable excitement has existed for some time past, and the clubs have been unusually active. Mobs have paraded the streets, armed with pikes and guns, and there can be no doubt that some scheme has been concerted with the disaffected in other parts of the kingdom to get up an insurrectionary movement.

IRELAND.

The accounts of the potato crops are gloomy, almost without exception or mitigation.

Numerous arrests have taken place throughout the country; as many as 60 having taken place in Tipperary.

The Roman Catholic clergy of Tuam have got up a memorial to the Queen on behalf of the State prisoners, praying that the prerogative of mercy should be exercised in favor of the insurgents who recently took up arms against the Crown.

The report published in some of the Dublin papers of an affray at Abbeyfeale, turns out to be unfounded. All was quiet there and in the whole county of Limerick.

An active chase is kept up both by land and sea for Mr. Richard O'Gorman. He was traced to Kilrush; but what became of him afterwards no one can tell. It is said that he is in the Derry mountains, at the head of 600 men; but other accounts assert that he escaped in an American vessel. A reward of £300 has been offered for his apprehension.

The State Trials.—Dennis Hoban, printer of the Tribune, pleaded guilty to a charge of having unlawfully printed articles—the object being to deprive Her Majesty of her style, title, and dignity of Queen of the United Kingdom. Sentence was deferred.

In the case of O'Doherty, the jury, after a two days' trial, and a night's confinement without food or fire, had been discharged without delivering any verdict.

The trial of Mr. Martin, the proprietor of the Felon, was not concluded until Wednesday night, when the jury found a verdict of guilty. The court was then adjourned until next morning, when it was expected that Mr. O'Dorherty, one of the registered proprietors of the Irish Tribune, would be again put on his trial.

Arrest of T. F. Meagher, Mr. Leyne, and P. O'Donoghue.—On Sunday morning, about 1 o'clock, these three leaders, while walking along the road between Clonculty and Holycross, were met by a large party of police, who, suspecting them, demanded their names. They immediately complied, and were arrested by Inspector Madden, in the Queen's name. The police fell in, one on either side of each prisoner, and they marched to the barracks at Rathcaupan, about a mile off, where they were brought before the resident magistrate.

That official asked, in the course of the inquiry, whether Mr. Meagher intended to surrender himself; to which he emphatically replied that he did not, and that he scorned the idea of asking for his life; and that the only condition on which he would have ever have been induced to surrender himself was, that all the parties implicated in the movement should have permission to leave the country. Mr. Meagher then proceeded to write some long statement which has not been made public.

General McDonald then arrived with his staff, and ordered the prisoners to be sent to Dublin.—While a special train was being prepared, the prisoners were supplied with breakfast. They looked cheerful and free from anxiety.

Mr. O'Brien has been brought up for the purpose of being examined as a witness in the case of the Queen vs. John Martin. His appearance is greatly altered for the worse.

Amongst the papers found on the person of Mr. O'Brien after his arrest, was a letter purporting to be written by Mr. Duffy, and which is, as Mr. Kemmis believes, in his proper hand-writing, which is of a highly treasonable character, and written but recently after Mr. O'Brien was known to be openly engaged in rebellion.

Mr. Meagher has written a letter in which he indignantly denies making any stipulations with the government for his life.

The Liverpool papers are filled with the particulars of the arrest of the American sympathisers.

FRANCE.

Paris was quiet on Thursday, but every precaution to obviate an outbreak had been taken.

The Journal des Debats publishes a letter from a private correspondent, dated Vigevano, the 8th inst., which states that the Piedmontese army is being re-organized. Col. Cossato had returned from Milan, whither he had been despatched the previous day by King Charles Albert. Marshal Radesky had consented to a first armistice for 3 days, and for an exchange of all the prisoners made during the commencement of the war.—It was believed that the King's head-quarters would be removed from Vigevano to Candia, and thence to Alexandria, where an imposing force was being assembled.

A letter from Toulon of the 10th inst. states that the French fleet, under the orders of Admiral Baudin, had quitted Palermo and proceeded to Cagliari, where the Admiral is to wait the orders of the French government. There have been some serious disturbances at Avignon, in consequence of the success of the legitimist candidates at the municipal election which took place on the 9th instant. The republicans forced themselves into the town hall, and destroyed the ballots. It was found necessary to call out a large military force to restore order.

The Italian journals received in Paris on Monday, announce the entrance of the Austrian army, and that the Duke of Modena had returned to his States, escorted by a foreign corps. Much uneasiness prevails in Paris as to the result of the publication of the report of the insurrection committee and the debate which will follow.—There is much reason to apprehend that, as so many persons are implicated in the documentary and other evidence furnished in the report, that all political parties to save their adherents will strive to the utmost to get up another disturbance.

The state of siege still continues in Paris.—About 4,700 more have been found guilty of having taken part in the insurrecnon, and 2,000 have been set at liberty.

The great debate, in which Louis Blanc, Ledru Rollin, and Caussidiere, are to defend themselves from the impeachment of the committee of inquiry, has not yet come on. Monday is supposed to be fixed. There has has been some fiery recrimination in the Assembly on the question whether the documents referred to by the committee shall be printed. It is certain that the government desires to suppress the evidence, and throw overboard the question. That course is strongly advocated every day by the "National," but General Cavaignac shrinks from the responsibility of such a proposition. The moderates are determined to support the committee. This affair has now become the difficulty of the government.

To proceed in the trial, or to shrink from it, are courses equally surrounded with danger.—The commission on the constitution has concluded the amended draught on its report; the preamble has been slighly modified. General Cavaignac was invited to attend the commission, and expressed himself in a most unqualified manner in favor of the election of the President of the republic by universal suffrage. A resolution to that effect was carried by a majority of the commission. General Lamoriciere expresses his approbation of the chapter of the army, and particularly that article which forbids service by substitute. Marrast is to submit the report to the National Assembly on Monday next at furthermost.

La Presse mentions, but without corroborating it, the rumor that Gen. Cavaignac was about to resign on account of the insupportable fatigue his office imposed upon him.

By recent arrangements, the effective force of the army has been increased, within the last 3 months, by 179,360 men; and consequently, at this moment, amounts to 522,127 men.

In the Committee of Foreign Affairs, on Wednesday, the Italian question was discussed. M. Bastide, Minister of Foreign Affairs, was present; and M. Lamartine delivered a long speech, in which he pronounced, with great energy, in favor of an immediate armed intervention, as being the only means by which France could observe the solemn engagement which he made in the name of the country, and with its evident approbation.

SPAIN.

Accounts from Catalonia state that a band of republicans had invaded the province from France and had entered the town of Mausenet de Cabrenis, where they pillaged the house of the Mayor, and exchanged some shots with the troops, after which they joined a Montemolinist chief.—Engagements between small bodies of insurgents and the Queen's troops are reported—the most important being an encounter at Llona, where the insurgents, 500 in number, headed by Marshale, and other well known chiefs, were disper-ed, after having had four men killed, several wounded, and many horses captured.

GERMANY.

The armistice between Prussia and Denmark has been definitely concluded; and it is given to be understood that French diplomatic negotiation has, in the latter instance, as in the former, joined with that of England, aided in leading to pacific tendencies.

On the 8th instant, the Emperor of Austria and the imperial family left Innspruck for Vienna, where they were expected to arrive on the 12th, and make a solemn entry.

ITALY.

King Charles Albert has finally evacuated Lombardy. General Welden, at the head of an Austrian army, has entered the Papal territories. A hard-fought battle ensued, in which the Austrians were worsted.

The Pope is greatly incensed at this violation of his territory.

A telegraphic despatch received at Turin, on the 12th, at 7 o'clock, A. M., announces the arrival of Charles Albert at Alessandria.

General Welden, who bombarded Bologne, has been disavowed and recalled by his government.

The Bologne Gazette of the 9th contains important news. It appears that the Austrian general, Welden, having levied a heavy contribution on Bologne, and demanded hostages for the payment and for the subjugation of the Bolognese, the people rose and the tocsin was sounded. A conflict ensued, which was said to have been terrible.

An armistice for forty-five days has been concluded between the Austrians and the Piedmontese.

The King of Prussia had arrived at Cologne on the 15th. The reception was enthusiastic, and his meeting with the Archduke was cordial.

The King of the Belgians had addressed a congratulatory letter to the Archduke John.

COMMERCIAL REVIEW.

The weather seems now the only impediment to commercial confidence. Affairs in the Baltic and in Italy are likely to be speedily settled, and nothing therefore remains to interrupt a progressive trade but a destructive potato rot. The harvest on the continent has been nearly completed, and nothing very alarming has been done at home. The weather has been in this locality unfavorable. The harvest is now general, and ten days of fine weather would enable the farmers to get in their crops. From all quarters, we regret to say, the report of the potato crop is disheartening. In the west of Ireland it is hardly less disastrous than in 1846; but as the fine weather seems to have set in in this country, we still indulge the hope that fears have exaggerated the mischief.

Yesterday the weather here was very fine, although we had showers of rain in the evening, and it does appear that whole fields after being attacked have subsequently recovered. The extent of the blight cannot now be estimated, but it is agreed on all hands that the crop is unusually large. The other crops, too, are an average, and the quantity of grain in store is very large.

The state of trade this week exhibits no new feature, and the intelligence from America adds nothing to previous accounts. The demand for cotton, consequent on advices from England, had improved, and the prices of breadstuffs had advanced a little.

Liverpool Cotton Market.—The business of the week has been flat and dull; a great abundance of cotton has been thrown on the market. Upon the whole, prices have kept a uniformly steady state. Fair Uplands 41-8d., and fair Orleans 4¾d. The weather has had a depressing influence on the one hand, while on the other a better state of things in France has encouraged the hope of a better market there. 530 American taken on speculation, and 3.020 American and 25 Surat for export. Sales of the week 28,440 bales.

News of the Week.

The Paris theatres have been re-opened, the government, which is bankrupt itself, voting nearly seven hundred thousand francs to keep those places of public amusement in operation. It probably thinks that if the theatres are open the people will have some place of resort other than the club rooms and will not be plotting mischief.

A Novel Case of Lynching.—Two long bearded gentlemen were detected a short time since stealing two jackets from a stable. The owners of the garments waited until they had accomplished the robbery, when they seized and tied them together, matted their beards, and smeared them with warm shoemaker's wax. As soon as this was cool, applied dry snuff to their noses alternately, & such a concussion of noses, such sputtering as ensued, it would be difficult to imagine. A large assemblage of persons enjoyed the fun immensely.—Saturday Evening Post.

Hymen on the Deep.—During the passage of the packet ship Wyoming, which arrived at this city not long since from Liverpool, an English lady and a Danish gentleman united their fortunes for life, preparatory to settling in our Great West. The minister who made them one, was from far off India.—Saturday Evening Post.

Shocking Occurrence.—The Rochester (N. York) Democrat, of Wednesday last, contains the following details of a horrid event in that vicinity:

"The wife of Mr. W. Tann, Jr., of Pittsford, whose mind has been diseased for some time past, on Sunday afternoon killed two of her children, by holding their heads under water, in an iron kettle, until they were strangled to death. The mother had made similar attempts to take the life of her offspring, but was prevented by those who happened to be in the house. On Saturday, when all were absent except the two children, she accomplished the horrid purpose. One of the children was a little girl about six years of age, and the other still a babe, and both handsome and interesting. The idea that the children would not be well cared for, and be unsuccessful in future life, pressed upon the mind of the mother, and she determined upon ridding them of life and the prospect of future trouble by this act of violence. The family have recently returned from a residence in Michigan.

Great Book Sale.—The largest book sale ever held in the United States will take place in New York on Tuesday next:

From 160,000 to 170,000 volumes by American publishers will be offered, contributed by about 150 publishers. Besides the regular catalogue of 160 pages, closely printed, there are three others, one of 31 pages of English Books, another of 40 pages of American and Foreign Stationary; and a third of 800 cases of Paper, containing about 35,000 reams.

From Jamaica.

By the arrival at New Orleans on the 16th ult. of the bark Saint Mary, Captain Schneider, from Kingston, the 5th ult., files of the Morning Journal of that port, have been received. The legislature of the Island was called together by special act of the Governor, and met on the 3d ult. at Kingston, to provide ways and means for carrying on the administration. The same unsatisfactory state of things exists as at last advices, with regard to general prosperity. The Mercantile Intelligencer says:

"Ruin has already seized the greater part of the population, starvation is fast following in its train, universal gloom is the only feature noticeable in our streets, speculation has ceased, business is almost at a stand, and, in a word, the inhabitants of this Island look forward to the future with distrustful anxiety and dismal foreboding."

The tone of the colonial press is excessively hostile to the administration of the Home Government for its course towards West India interests.

The Mercantile Intelligencer continues:—"Every official return shows that the import of British plantation produce falls off in quantity, while that of foregn produce increases—and consequent upon such increase is the continued and incessant importation in the slaveholding countries of thousands of unfortunate Africans. As for the blockade on the coast of Africa, it is a mockery that, were it not for the dreadful crowding of the poor negroes which is now resorted to on board slave ships, and of which the blockade is the cause, might well be called a farce. * * It is too plain that, for the purpose of seeking a market in Brazil for the Manchester free traders, the accursed system of slavery is to be fostered by England, and that every feeling of justice will be sacrificed to this dishonorable end."

The stopping of payment by the Planters' Bank, at Kingston, on the 24th ult., has already been mentioned. It added to the misfortunes already sufficient, & an effort was made, by public meeting and otherwise, to bolster up the credit of its notes so as to keep them in circulation.

The rush on the Planters' Bank was soon followed by a demand on the Jamaica Bank, which, however, was so readily met, that all fears as to the stability of that establishment have completely subsided.

Two hundred and eighty Africans arrived at Kingston on the 30th ult., in the Dutch bark Rhyne, from St. Helena. They are said to be a healthy set of people.

The ship Glasgow arrived at Morant Bay, on the 26th ult., from Sierre Leone, the 28th June, on which day a captured slaver, having upwards of five hundred persons on board, was brought in.

Battles with the Indians.

A correspondent of the St. Louis New Era, writing from Fort Mann on the 28th ult., gives a detailed account of two battles fought by the Indians of the plains and the Santa Fe Battallion. The first party, under Capt. Griffin, left Fort Mann on the 7th of July. On the 9th of July the command engageb the Indians, who dispersed in every direction. Afterwards another party was sent out, consisting of 100 men, under Capt. Jones, who on the 20th engaged the Indians, drawn up in a grove of timber, and dispersed them. Twenty-one Indians were found dead on the field, and more were supposed to be killed & mortally wounded. These Indians were supposed to be Pawnee. Capt. Jones speaks in the highest terms of the bravery of his men. Capt. Griffin is censured by the writer of the letter, for not pursuing the advantage he had gained.—Cincinnati Commercial.

New Counterfeit.—M. A. Bradley, of the Phœnix Bank, yesterday detected a new counterfeit 5 dollar bill on the State Bank of Ohio, payable at the Troy branch. The general appearance of the paper and engraving is bad, and can easily be detected by comparison with a genuine bill. We understand a number of them were passed in the market yesterday morning.—Cin. Com.

A Great Feat.—A great crowd collected in St. Louis lately, to witness a man climb up a liberty pole 220 feet high, and set the American flag on the top—and then 'haul the pole up after him.' He accomplished the first, but postponed the other until sufficient rain shall have fallen to loosen the earth around it!

Yucatan.—By the arrival at New Orleans on the 15th ult. of the schooner Aparecido, from Campeachy, papers to the 5th ult. were received. The Yucatanese are defeating the Indians at all points, and regaining their former possessions.—They have re-taken Bacalar, Citas, Tinun and Pustunich. An attack upon Valladolid was contemplated.

By the following from El Hijo, of the 24th ult., it will be seen that Mr. Peoples has been at work in earnest in Yucatan.

"In short the American volunteers, who, it is said, have been contracted for by the Government, will soon arrive. Mr. Peoples, who is, we understand, the late editor of the American Star, is at the head of this, and has made the contract with the Government. The volunteers are to come well armed and equipped, and will be paid at the same rate as our own troops. At the termination of the campaign their accounts will be settled in money or land."

The Women of Oregon.

The following spirited reply was given by the young ladies of the Willamette Valley, Oregon, to an appeal from Captain Maxom, that they would use their influence in bringing volunteers into the field. Such ladies are worth fighting for.

"In reply, we hereby, one and all, of our own free good will, solemnly pledge ourselves to comply with that request; and to evince, on all suitable occasions, our detestation and contempt for any and all young men who can, but will not, take up arms and march at once to the seat of war, to punish the Indians who have not only murdered our friends, but have grossly insulted our sex. We never can, and never will bestow our confidence upon such a man who has neither patriotism nor courage enough to defend his country and the girls—such a one would never have a sufficient sense of obligation to defend & protect his 'wife.'

"Do not be uneasy about your claims & your rights in the valley; while you are defending the rights of your country, she is watching yours.—You must not be discouraged—fight on—be brave—obey your officers—and never quit your posts till the enemy is conquered; and when you return in triumph to the valley, you shall find us ready to rejoice with you, as we now are to sympathise with you in your sufferings and dangers." [Signed by fifteen young ladies.]

Lighting Street Lamps by Electricity.—It is proposed to light up the city of London all at one instant. This is to be done by having one stop cock for the main pipe, to let on and shut off the gas, and to have a wire connected with every lamp to send an electric current to ignite the gas.

From Havana and Central America.

The steamship Crescent City, from New Orleans, at New York, touched at Havana, and brings dates from that port, of the 10 ult. Quite a disastrous fire had occurred at Pueto Principe, on the 5th ult., by which the establishment of Senores Belandin and Hornosa were totally destroyed, and a large amount of property lost. A letter to the N. York Herald, dated Havana, Aug. 18, says:

Business here is rather dull. The New Orleans packets arrived here last week, with about $80,000, to purchase sugars. The Philadelphia packets are buying and loading, for their own account which is equal to $3 per box for freight, when, if taken, as freight, this would not pay more than a dollar per box,

Havana begins to feel the effects of the great shock in Europe, by the revolution. Confidence is lost.—Merchants are afraid to trust their old customers. They will rather keep their produce and goods than to run any risk. But one house of reputation has failed here this spring. Many dry goods merchants are failing daily. We have here six hotels, and two have closed doors.

The island is perfectly quiet. Persons can travel day and night, and never be molested nor insulted.

Several segar manufactories have given up business, and more than 20.000 workmen, called oficiales jabaguеros. are out of employ.

A great deal of old silver came in a Spanish man-of-war, from Yucatan, church property, which is selling at auction, at 75 cents an ounce. Many emigrants from that place are arriving daily.

By the arrival of the Crescent City, we also have intelligence from Central America, of a date later than we have heretofore seen. The Herald gives the following summary of the news:

In the Havana papers we find accounts from Central America to the 5th of July, by which it appears the civil war in Guatemala was still going on, and that the government troops under the command of General Carrera, had been defeated on several occasions by the insurgents.

In consequence of certain articles which appeared in the official paper of the government, the French Consul General to the Republic of Guatemala had deemed it due to the respect he owed to his own government, to retire from his official position; consequently there was no representative of the French government in Guatemala. A meeting of French residents was previously held at the Consul's house, and a paper drawn up and signed by them, in which they protested against the malevolent and partial sentiments which the editors of the Gaceta had indulged in regarding France and her new form of government. Things remained in this state at the last accounts, though the government was understood to deny the right of the French Consul to make them responsible for anything published in the official paper, save such articles as were avowedly official ones.

The Congress of the Republic was to assemble on the 15th inst., and it was hoped that their labors would conduce to the quiet of the country.

The celebrated question of the Mosquito Territory, and the position of the British Government with part of Central America, as protectress of the improvised sovereignty of uncertain extent, was not only causing an excitement in Nicaragua, on whose frontiers it more immediately lies, but also in other parts of the Central-American confederation. The State of Honduras has likewise issued manifestos expressive of the disgust with which it views the English in the possession of a position which would give them the mastery of a large portion of the foreign trade.

The Chester County Bank Robbery.—The Germantown Telegraph, noticing the arrest of officer McGowan in Philadelphia, in alleged connection with this robberry, through some singular developments made by R. H. Lackey, says:

"We learn farther, that there is a great probability that a large portion of the money stolen—over $40,000—will be recovered. Lackey, it appears, has turned state's evidence; and we are informed that as soon, as Dr. Darlington, President of the Chester County Bank, from whom the valise, containing the money was stolen—was confronted with Lackey, he instantly identified him as the person who took his seat by him in the car a few moments before the robbery was committed, and who disappeared with the valise. The car agent, also, we learn, recognised him at once."

The Jesuits in Gallicia (Austria,) have received orders to quit that country before the 15th of July. The reverend fathers possess there 5 great establishments, viz: a convent in the capital, a gymnasium at Neusandezc, in the east of Gallicia, another gymnasium and a seminary of philosophy at Tarnopol, in the east, and a normal school to which is attached a sort of penitentiary prison at Starnowicz, in the circle of Sandecz, so that the country was found entirely under the domination of the Jesuits.

From Rio de Janerio.—By the barque W. C. H. Wright the Baltimore Sun has received dates from Rio de Janerio to the 28th ultimo. On the 19th of July the Empress of Brazil gave birth to a prince, heir to the throne, whereat there were great rejoicings and several days holiday. The introduction of slaves into Rio from the coast of Africa continues as successful as ever, notwithstanding the efforts of the English and American squadrons to suppress the slave trade.

Nature of an Oath.—On Saturday, at Philadelphia, a boy aged twelve years, was called to testify, and was asked if he knew the nature of an oath, to which he replied as follows: "If I tell the truth now and be good afterwards, I will go to Heaven." Judge Kelley remarked that the question was never better answered by one so young.

Honorable Politicians.—Col. Field, whig, was elected to the Legislature of Kentucky by one majority, over Jesse Haydon, democrat; but Col. F. has resigned, and they are both again candidates for the Legislature in the county. Field, being elected by one vote, and finding that Haydon had voted for him, resigned, because he failed to vote for Haydon.

Death from swallowing a Peach Stone.—A daughter of Mr. Pitts Southwich, of Newport, R. I., died on Sunday from the effects of swallowing a peach stone. She had just recovered from a fever, which left her nerves very weak, and it is probable that her weakness and fright contributed to her death. She was sixteen years old last week.

Religious Refugees.—There arrived at New Haven, Conn., on Wednesday last, in the schr. Gold Hunter, from Porto Rico, twenty-three passengers, Portuguese, who were forced to leave the Island of Madeira some two years since, in consequence of their religion being obnoxious to the laws of that county. It is stated that they are of the Presbyterian denomination.

Late and Interesting Mexican News.

The brief telegraphic account of Mexican intelligence in the Sun on Saturday, was brought to New Orleans by the British West Island harbor. The Bulletin, of the 21st inst., gives the following more extended account:

She left Vera Cruz on the evening of the 15th instant, and brings us dates from the city of Mexico as late as the 13th instant, at noon. Our latest advice by her from Tampico are also up to the 13th. The news which she brings is somewhat interesing in a commercial point of view. For several days before the English Courier left, the Mexican Congress was debating the propriety of a further reduction of the Tariff, which, if the measure is carried, will have the effect of admitting American cotton at 20 per cent. duty, and entirely abolish all the revenue laws which prohibit articles of any description. The Mexican Congress is using every means in its power to encourage commerce and many further reforms are anticipated.

We learn from our correspondence that the revolutionary movement under Paredes is entirely suppressed, and that his forces are entirely dispersed. Various rumors are current as to his locality, some of which place him in the city of Mexico, and from all we understand, this last rumor is correct. Intelligent gentlemen, who came on the steamer to this city, declare that, protected by only two or three friends, he is concealed in the capital. Don Ramon Giuzascla, one of his principal officers, was taken prisoner on the 8th inst., and has since been tried and shot.

Our Minister, M. Clifford, is treated in the most courteous manner, not only by the Government, but also by private individuals, who seem to be using their best exertions to restore the good feeling which should always be conspicious between sister Republics. Mr. Clifford has expressed his determination to return to the United States in October next. A proposition is before the Mexican Congress to establish consulates only at London, Havre and Hamburg, and to constitute all other offices as supplementary consulates. It is thought that the measure cannot be carried

Vera Cruz is both extremely dull and very healthy. The citizens of the place have organised a police of forty Americans and we learn that they have expressed their determination to keep out all the Mexican regular soldiers. The Castle is manned by seventy-five of the citizens, who relieve each other every week. There is but little business doing.

The only items of interest which we have received from Tampico, are those giving some further details of the progress which the Sierra Madre Expedition is making. The affair is spoken of in the streets in the most public manner. Within the last fortnight, an agent of the company from this city, has visited Tampico, in order to make some definite arrangements for the successful termination of the schemes.

Both in Tampico and in Vera Cruz the best disposition is shown towards the Americans who are still there; and every politeness is accorded to them.

Don Arrillaga, the business agent of Santa Anna in Mexico, came as a passenger in the Severn, bound for Jamacia, where, it is said, he is to marry the daughter of the ex-Dictator.—Letters have been received from Santa Anna in which he has announced to his friends that his wife is insane.

As far as Santa Anna himself is concerned, his power is completely broken in Mexico, and there are no fears that it will ever be revived, On the 1st instant the Minister of War dismissed over 200 officers, who have expressed themselves in his favor and many are to follow in the same way.

We add the following from the Crescent:

The Government is every day gaining strength. We have conversed with several intelligent Mexicans, who assert that the present Government is the most vigorous that has ever existed in Mexico, and that Herrera is daily becoming more popular with the people.

The Arco Iris of the 15th says that there is a fine prospect of bringing the Indian difficulties to an end, and that there will be a treaty of peace between all the tribes and Mexico, soon concluded.

The Seamstresses.—The Seamstresses of New York are about holding a general mass meeting for the purpose of taking into consideration the depressed condition of their trade and the low prices at which the immense competition forces them to labor. Many of these girls have sick and aged parents depending on them for support, and the remuneration they receive, after working from morning till night, and, oftentimes, from night till morning, is scarcely sufficient for them to keep them from actual starvation.—Neal's Gazette.

Deaths in Philadelphia.—The interments in the city and Liberties of Philadelphia for the week ending Aug. 19th were, adults 58, children 116.

The Cholera.—The Sanatory Commissioners appointed by the Parliament of England, have made a remarkable report. It appears that Cholera and Influenza are intimate diseases, both delighting in the same localities, and that the latter is far more dangerous than the former. Last November the Influenza attacked in London 500,000 persons, making for the space of 11 weeks 6,145 deaths per week above the usual number, an excess greater than the entire mortality produced by the Cholera in the twenty-one weeks during which it raged in 1832. On examination, it seems Cholera is diarrhœa, developed to a monstrous form by a peculiar state of the atmosphere, accumulated moist exhalations, with sudden changes of temperature. Influenza is the ordinary "cold developed to an epidemic." Cholera, in its first stages, readily yields to aromatics, opiates, and astringents. Now, having found out the cause, we have but to remove it to prevent its effect; and knowing the cause, we can more intelligently proceed to modify the effect. It becomes then the duty of municipal bodies to remove all stagnant pools, ditches, bad drains, and, if possible, forest lands and marshes contiguous; in fact, to take away, as far as possible, every cause that may engender miasmata.—Pitts. Com. Jour.

Shocking Occurrence.—The wife of Mr. W. Thann, Jr., of Pittsford, whose mind has been diseased for some time past, on Sunday afternoon killed two of her children, by holding their heads under water, in an iron kettle, until they were strangled to death. The mother had made similar attempts to take the life of her offspring, but was prevented by those who happened to be in the house. One of the children was a little girl of about six years of age, and the other still a babe, and both handsome and interesting. The idea that the children would not be well cared for, and be unsuccessful in future life, pressed on the mind of the mother, and she determined upon ridding them of life and the porspect of future trouble, by this act of violence.—Roch. Dem. of 23d ult.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

The following is an extract, of a letter to one of the editors of the New York Journal of Commerce, dated,

"Newfoundland, June, 1848.

"We, Newfoundlanders, have passed a most trying winter, hundreds of families have subsisted, during the season, on an allowance of half a pound of corn meal, a head, per day. Had it not been for this we have good grounds for stating, hundreds must, have died of starvation. Numbers, even at this time, are living in a state of the deepest distress and wretchedness—without food, —save fish—without necessary clothing—without any means of procuring necessaries—and without credit. Last year we had poor fisheries and almost a total failure of the potato crops, so that not only a few families have been destitute, but whole communities—yea every part of the Island has felt the smart. The government, last fall, did much to meet the exigencies of the winter, but really, after doing what, perhaps, it could, it was a mere trifle, considering the thousands looking to it for relief. It is much to be wished that this summer would prove prosperous, both as regards the fisheries and potato crops, for should it turn out otherwise, we apprehend that Newfoundland, during the subsequent winter, will witness gloomier scenes, and will have to pass through heavier trials, than it has ever yet experienced since it became a British Colony. Merchants are feeling the times much; several of them became bankrupts last winter, and many more seem to be only staggering along and struggling against a fall. They will not, because they cannot, issue supplies, in fact many of them can't get supplies to issue. Even salt, an article without which the poor man, here cannot get along, is refused this summer on trust, to scores of planters or fishermen.

The governor has done a good deal this summer to encourage agriculture, by granting supplies of wheat and barley, &c., and we must hope that the result will be a great blessing; but we are not without fears.

Loss of the Steamer St. Nicholas.—The N. Y. Tribune gives the following details of the loss of the steamer St. Nicholas.

We learn from a gentleman just arrived at Norwalk, that the steamboat St. Nicholas, Capt. Rodman, while racing with the Cataline, Thursday afternoon, struck on a rock at the entrance of Sawpit Harbor, and almost instantly filled. She ran about three hundred yards, and nearly reached the dock, when she sunk to within two feet of the hurricane deck.

This took place in such a short time that several passengers, lying in the after cabin below, were floating in the water before they could escape. It is not certainly known whether any one was drowned. The Cataline took off the passengers, 150 in number, and carried them to Norwalk. The St. Nicholas will probably be raised, and restored to her former condition, but but the loss to her owners will be considerable.

Suicide of a Girl Eleven Years of Age.—A mulatto girl, (says the N. O. Delta of the 17th) eleven years of age, named Justine, belonging to Madame H. Desforges, Royal street, between Main and St. Philip streets, committed suicide yesterday, by jumping into a well in the yard of the house and drowning herself. No cause was assigned for the committal of so rash an act. The Coroner held an inquest on the body, when the jury returned a verdict in accordance with the circumstances.

The Affray at Niagara. — Particulars. — A correspondent of the Boston Evening Transcript, writes from Niagara Falls concerning the late difficulty there, as follows: "The engineer of the wire suspension bridge, Mr. Ellet, has been reaping a rich harvest in tolls, which have flowed into his pocket by hundreds of dollars per day, till to-day, when a stop was put to his receipts. The origin of the difficulty is this: Mr. Ellet's contract was that the work should be completed by a given day, which has not yet transpired. The work being completed, he takes the bridge to himself, establishes a toll of twenty-five cents each way, and pockets the money.—The Canadians, seeing the rich profits he is reaping, refused to-day to allow any one to enter Canada over it, and have erected a barricade on the frontier; that is, 200 feet over the Niagara River, in the middle of the Bridge. This soon led to an alarming state of excitement. The Canadians and Americans were in open hostility. Parties were formed, and a fight took place to-day at the barricade, in which the Canadians had the best of it, and in the melee one of the American party was badly beaten, taken prisoner, thrown over the mad river beneath, by his head and heels, and finally released, when he made his escape to the American side, and the Canadians remained at the barricade for the remainder of the day.

The business of the bridge will probably be suspended for a season. The matter in dispute will probably lead to a suit at law. How it will be decided, it is impossible to conjecture. Thro' the influence of a friend from Buffalo, who was well acquainted with the Canadian belligerents, our party was allowed to pass over about half an hour after the battle, they so far removed the barricade as to enable us to climb over it, which was a favor denied to many who had intended to make the passage through to-day. The bridge is a grand and elegant structure, and I have passed over it without the least fear, having perfect confidence in the stability and great strength.—But to fight a battle at such a fearful height, and in such a place, is frightful in the extreme, and chills one's blood. But what will man not do in this nineteenth century? —Pittsburgh Commercial Journal.

Serious Affair.—A quarrel occurred in Boston on Monday evening, between Laurietta Franklin, formerly of Deerfield, N. H., and Mary Jane Kimball, formerly of Bangor, Me., during which the former inflicted two severe wounds with a bowie knife upon the person of the latter. A physician was called to dress the wounds, and does not consider them dangerous, although the injured girl was so weak from loss of blood, that it was necessary to convey her home in a carriage. Both the parties have for some time past been leading dissolute lives, and jealousy is said to have been the cause of the affray. Laurietta was brought before the Police Court, and was ordered to recognize in the sum of $300 for her appearance for examination, in default of which she was committed to jail.—Scott's Weekly Paper.

NOTICES.

GENESEE CONFERENCE.

The Genesee Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will commence its nineteenth session at Loon Lake, Stuben county, New York, on the first Tuesday in October, 1848, at 10 o'clock, A. M. It is presumed that a committee will be in waiting, at the place, as usual, to assign ministers and delegates their respective places for entertainment. A full attendance is desired. And we shall be happy to greet any of our brethren from sister Conferences, who may be pleased to favor us with a fraternal visitation. The post office address of the Conference is "Patchin's Mills, Stuben county, New York." E A WHEAT, Secretary.

Elba, August 21st, 1848.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego, N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange ch. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgomery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attaal county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

DEDICATION.

The new Methodist Protestant meeting house at Jacksontown, Licking County, will be first opened for Divine service, at 11 o'clock, Sunday, September 10th. Ministers on their way to the Muskingum Conference, are invited to call and spend the Day with us.

E. S. HOAGLAND.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE.

The tenth session of the Onondaga Conference will commence on the 6th of September, at 10 o'clock, M. A. at Sand Bank Village, Oswego Co., N. Y.

Ministers and Delegates will please call at the parsonage house, opposite the M. P. Church, and Rev. Francis Pierce, Sup't. will direct them to places of entertainment during the session.

IRA H. HOGAN, Pr.

Wm. W. Sterricker, Sec.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Drs C. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

Tanners Creek Ct.—Ind. Dist.—Our 4th Quarterly Meeting will be held at the E. Fork Meeting House, near Brother William Smith's, commencing on Saturday, September 16, 1848. We cordially invite our esteemed President, Brother T. Snipp, and Brother T. Finkbine, and all other brethren from the Indiana and Ohio Districts that can attend.

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

Clarksville Ct., Ohio Dist.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this ct. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

Onondaga Conference.

LAST ROUND.

Annual Conference, September 6th.

IRA H. HOGAN, President.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

R Rose,	O.	E A Wheat,	N Y
H M'Bride,	"	T Shipp,	Ia
S Lancaster,	"	J Clarke,	Ill
C H Williams,	"	G S Peirson,	Ill
D B Dorsey,	"	Ed Golden Rule,	Ky
Editor,	"	L D Johnson,	N Y

☞ Moneys received during Editor's absence, will be credited when he returns.

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	12
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Painstersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	8
Rev. S P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	6
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa,	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	8
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	5
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	6
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	8
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	5
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	5
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5
Rev A R Brown, Vienna, Ohio,	5

☞ We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

TO THE AFFLICTED.
READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues both superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. Levi R. Reese.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern, Baltimore.

A NEW SUPPLY OF

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

Smethen's Sermons.

For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the Office of the Western Recorder.

Poet's Corner.

"LIVE TO DO GOOD."

BY G. W. BETHUNE.

Live to do good; but not with thought to win
From man reward for any kindness done;
Remember Him who died on cross for sin,
The merciful, the meek, rejected One,
When He was slain, for crime of doing good,
Canst thou expect return of gratitude?

Do good to all; but while thou servest best
And at thy greatest cross, nerve thee to bear,
When thine own heart with anguish is oppress,
The cruel taunt, the cold, averted air,
From lips which thou hast taught in hope to pray,
And eyes whose sorrows thou hast wiped away.

Still do thou good, but for His holy sake,
Who died for thine, fixing thy purpose ever
High as His throne, no wrath of man can shake.
So shall he own thy generous endeavor,
And take thee to his conqueror's glory up,
When thou hast shared the Savior's bitter cup.

Do nought but good, for such the noble strife
Of virtue is, 'gainst wrong to venture love;
And for thy foe devote a brother's life,
Content to wait the recompense above,
Brave for the truth, to fiercest insult meek,
In mercy strong, in vengeance only, weak.

[KNICKERBOCKER

Reformatory.

USE OF TOBACCO.

NO. V.

Concluded from last paper.

That the use of tobacco in its various modes is often instrumental in producing and aggravating morbid growths, both malignant and non-malignant, has been held by some, and I think not without reason.

Mr. ———, of this city, aged 70, a strictly temperate man, who had been for many years in the habit of smoking his pipe, and sometimes a rather short one, was affected with a tumor of a scirrhous character on his under lip in the exact place where he was accustomed to hold his pipe. Excision of the tumor was performed, and the wound healed over smoothly. In the course of a few months, however, the malignant affection reappeared lower on his face, affecting various portions of the chin & parts below the jaw. The tumors soon took on the form of cancer, the ulcers rapidly spreading and destroying the coats of the blood-vessels, until repeated hemmorrhages entirely exhausted him. A clergyman of Connecticut who had regularly performed his pastoral duties for forty years, and who had indulged in the habit of smoking tobacco during his professional life, was affected during the last few years of his life with an indurated tumor of slow but constant growth, extending from under the left ear to the chin, and a little distance around on the other side, compressing the windpipe and filling up the space vertically from the jaw to the collar bone. This tumor though not painful, occasioned great difficulty in swallowing liquids, so that he was often in danger of suffocation during his meals. It was at length the probable cause of his death, for he died under an attack of croup, which but for that might perhaps have been cured.

I witnessed another fatal case of tumor, a few years since, in an eminent clergyman, who had indulged in the habit of smoking, many years, to an extravagant degree. The tumor, which occupied part of the cavity of the abdomen, attained, in less than three years, an enormous size, involving one of the kidneys, and a portion of the liver, and filling one side of the abdomen, and preventing him, for many months before death, from lying in a horizontal posture.

A gentleman with whom I had been acquainted for many years, who had been accustomed to chewing tobacco, became dyspeptic about fifteen years before his death, and left off, for a time, the pernicious habit. In about six weeks from that period, he gained fourteen pounds of flesh, a result similar to what I have often witnessed, and heard of, in others. He resumed the practice, however, in less than a year, a sequence which is also very common. About six or eight years afterwards, he exhibited commencing symptoms of diseased liver. During the last year of his life his complexion grew sallow, he became weak and nervous, had loss of appetite, a quick pulse, difficulty of breathing, enlargement of the liver, which no remedies seemed to control. He died suddenly, and on examination was found to have a scirrous, tuberculated liver, pancreas and omentum, and a scirrhous stomach. The scirrhous portion of the stomach, extended from near the lower orifice, over a surface from 2 to 3 inches in width, entirely around the stomach, the inner surface of which was already in an ulcerated or cancerous state. That the diseased condition above described bore the relation to tobacco of an effect to a cause, may not admit of positive certainty, inasmuch as the predisposing and efficient causes of cancerous disease cannot in most cases be known, yet it is difficult to avoid the belief in this case that tobacco had an important agency either in inducing or aggravating the disease.

It may be proper in this connection, to inquire, by a careful comparison of the symptoms of cancerous or malignant disease on the one hand, with the artificial symptoms produced by the regular and long-continued use of tobacco on the other, whether there may not be a tendency in the continued use of tobacco to produce malignant disease.

Pathologists tell us "that the development of malignant disease depends on a perversion of the nutritive process—that the lymph which exudes through the capillary vessels in the ordinary course of nutrition or some accidental inflammation, appears to have its vitality perverted—so that instead of forming in itself the normal cells but of which the proper tissues of the body are developed, it forms the irregular abnormal cells constituting a malignant tissue. One of the causes of this perversion of function is a peculiar cachexy, or morbid state of constitution which is sometimes congenital, and sometimes appears to be caused by depression of mind and other circumstances that impair the powers of digestion and nutrition. Another cause is its constant local irritation." Now let us ask the veteran tobacco user if he has ever experienced a perversion of function by the lessening of the vital powers, a lowering of the appetite and wasting of the flesh, an occasional depression of spirits and weakening of the mental powers, especially after a tobacco debauch? But as the influence of very obvious causes is not always readily perceived by the person most affected by them, or if perceived, not readily acknowledged, let us see if the connection between the above symptoms and the alleged cause cannot be more satisfactorily made out by the indirect or reversed mode of comparison. If, then, it can be shown that when a person in the daily use of tobacco is laboring under the above symptoms, they mostly disappear soon after omitting the use of tobacco, the cause of such symptoms is clearly made out. But numerous cases within my own knowledge have occurred in which the disuse of such practice has, in a very few weeks, improved the appetite, increased the flesh, increased the vital power and all the bodily functions, and added cheerfulness to mental activity. In fact, the habitual use of this drug is in some cases adopted professedly to remove a corpulent habit of body. —If, therefore, the identity of symptoms in the two cases is established, is not a tendency to produce the disease in question clearly proved?

Again, let us enquire how the treatment of the "cancerous cachexy, as it is called, when the patient is languid, depressed, emaciated, the complexion leaden and sallow, the appetite bad and digestion imperfect," as recommended by modern medical writers, accords with the above views. Dr. Druitt, an approved modern surgeon, directs "that before resorting to extirpation, the general health should be improved by a tonic course, or an alterative plan of treatment. The same course should be pursued, even if extirpation should be impracticable. But we have seen above that the general health is more speedily improved, in the case of those who use tobacco, by omitting its use, than by any other means.—This, then, in the case of one using the drug, would naturally form one of those means recommended. But if the disuse of a thing would aid in removing a disease, it is reasonable to infer that its use would have a tendency to aggravate, if not to produce it.

In regard to the agency of tobacco in producing or increasing malignant disease, there is some reason to believe that what it may not accomplish when used alone, it will accomplish when used in conjunction with other poisons. Some observing medical men have entertained the opinion that the habitual use of tobacco with alcoholic drinks has often been instrumental in inducing scirrhous of the stomach. It may be recollected by many that this opinion was given by the attending physician of the celebrated Dr. Holyoke, who made a post mortem examination of his body. He testified before the legislature of Massachusetts, when about passing the nine-gallon law, that the cause of his death was a scirrhous state of the stomach, a result often witnessed in the case of those who were in the daily and regular or moderate use of tobacco and rum.

On the whole, from the few observations I have made in my professional practice, of the peculiar effects, on the human system, of the different modes of using tobacco, I infer that chewing it has a tendency to produce epilepsy; snuffing, to produce palsy and various nervous affections; smoking, to produce apoplexy; and any or all of these modes, single or combined, to produce malignant or cancerous disease.

Respectfully yours,
AMATUS ROBBINS.

Troy, Aug. 9, 1845.

Biographical.

From the Methodist Expositor and True Issue.

PORTRAITS FROM THE PULPIT.

BY THE LATE MRS. L. A. L. CROSS.

REV. MR. STOCKTON.

I had heard of the stirring eloquence of this distinguished divine, and watched with interest his ardent struggles for the church of which he is pastor. I had read the beautiful effusions of his pen; and longed to listen to his breathing thoughts, as they fall, in burning words, from his lips in the sanctuary. Observing a notice in the papers, that he would preach in the First Methodist Protestant Church on the 12th instant, I determined to gratify my long-cherished curiosty, and accordingly went to hear him.

Soon after I entered the church, a tall, pale, emaciated, corpse-like figure was seen moving up the aisle, with slow and feeble step, whose marked and superior cast of countenance particularly attracted my attention. He ascended the stand, and there was realized my beau ideal of Thomas H. Stockton. He seemed a young man, with his hair prematurely whitened by sickness, sorrow, and toil. His whole aspect and bearing were those of an invalid, and, without utteringing a word, he had enlisted all my sympathies.

When he arose to announce the hymn, his respiration was difficult and painful; his utterance feeble, hesitating, and frequently interrupted by a distressing cough. He prayed in a subdued tone, with a pathos that should have moved and melted every heart. Who could remain untouched, to see that noble man struggling against his infirmity, like an exhaused swimmer, buffeting the proud waves that seem ready to overwhelm him?

The preliminary exercises were protracted to an unusual length, by the singing of two or three hymns in succession, that the irritating cough might have time to subside. These ended, he attempted to speak; but his difficulty of utterance increasing with his cough, he was able only to make a few remarks on the leading points of his subject, and obliged to conclude before he had spoken more than fifteen minutes. He paused; but there was an eloquence in that silence. It was an impressive moment. Youth & beauty were there, frivolity and fashion, with the contrast of age and seriousness and intellectuality; but all sat subdued, and solemn, and thoughtful, under that voiceless appeal. Before us was "the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod." It was a practical lesson on the frailty of human strength, a sermon for the heart. It was as if one of the dead had come out of the grave to admonish us, and shrunk back to his place under the burden of a message but half delivered.—The affecting incident told with more power upon the vast assembly than the most thrilling utterance of genius.

Resolved, however, not to be defeated in my attempt to hear this gifted man of God in his better conditions and happier moods, last Sabbath I repaired again to his church. It was then I saw Thomas H. Stockton in his glory. His commencement was languid and laborious as before, but his thought was compact and solid; his sentences clear, classic, and sparkling; indicating a thorough elaboration of the discourse, both as to matter and style. But when he began to rise and warm with his subject, his enunciation became more rapid, his gestures bold and frequent, his voice full, clear and melodious. Whether his annoying and oppressive cough ceased, I cannot tell; or whether I ceased to observe it, in the wondrous fascination which he threw about his theme. The soul seemed to triumph over the infirmity of the body, and poured forth its rich and glowing conceptions like a shower of diamonds.

Mr. Stockton's fancy is remarkably brilliant and sparkling, yet commonly held in proper subserviency to truth and reason. His subjects are thoroughly analyzed; his logic is cogent and conclusive; his style, finished to the highest point of classic elegance and ornament. There is, occasionally, in the structure of his sentences, something very remarkable—a certain antithetic correspondence of members—a frequency of a peculiar kind of repetition, which, on the printed page, seems rather too elaborate; but which, with the taking accompaniments of voice & manner, appears quite appropriate in the pulpit, and adds wonderfully to his power. His style is an eminent instance of what the French denominate the style, coupe. His sentences are brief and transparent, his enunciation slow and distinct, his entire elocution graceful and emphatic. He seems to be a man of deep evangelical piety, whose heart is evidently in his Master's work, and the fruit of whose labors, I trust, will be realized in heaven. In short, he is worthy of that beautiful effusion of Mrs. Welby, entitled "Pulpit Eloquence"—one of the sweetest productions of her gifted muse, intended as a description of Mr. Stockton, as she recollects to have seen and heard him in her youth.

Of all the pulpit men with whom I am acquainted, personally or by reputation, I know of none with whom to compare Mr. Stockton.—Bating the mechanical structure of sensences to which I have alluded, I should think him more like Summerfield than any other man, living or dead. There is something of the same meekness and humility of aspect, the same chastened sweetness of expression, the same beauty of conception, brilliancy of diction, wealth of imagery, and fervid love. On account of his fondly cherished theory of Christian union, and his plan for demolishing the sectarian walls which divide the Church of Christ, he has been called an enthusiast and a visionary; but oh, his enthusiasm is divine, and his visions are those of heaven! Long may he be honored—a blessing to his brethren and a light in the world, before he exchanges the pulpit for the throne!

Narrative.

THE INDIAN CHIEF.

A BEAUTIFUL SKETCH.

The following beautiful story is literally true, and was first published in a lecture delivered by William Tracy, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., on the early history of Oneida County. It has been altered by somebody, but we have not the means at hand of correcting the alterations, nor are they sufficiently important to mar the beauty of the incident as gracefully related by Mr. Tracy, whose fine pen, we take this occasion to say, it is a reproach to him, that he has suffered to lie idle so long.

One of the first settlers in Western New York was Judge W———, who established himself at Whitestown— about four miles from Utica. He brought his family with him, among whom was a widowed daughter with an only child—a fine boy about four years old. You will recollect, the country around was an unbroken forest, and this was the domain of the savage tribes.

Judge W——— saw the necessity of keeping on good terms with the Indians, for he was alone, he was completely at their mercy. Accordingly he took every opportunity to assure them of his kindly feelings, and to secure their good will in return. Several of the chiefs came to see him, and all appeared pacific. But there was one thing that troubled him; an aged chief of the Oneida tribe, and one of great influence, who resided at the distance of a dozen miles, had not yet been to see him, nor could he ascertain the views and feelings of the sachem, in respect to his settlement in that region. At last he sent a message, and the answer was that the chief would visit him on the morrow.

True to his appointment, the sachem came; Judge W——— received him with marks of respect, and introduced his wife, his daughter, and little boy. The interview that followed was interesting Upon its results, the Judge was convinced his security might depend, and he was therefore exceedingly anxious of making a favorable impression upon the distinguished chief. He expressed his desire to settle in the country, to live on terms of amity and good fellowship with the Indians, and to be useful to them by introducing among them the arts of civilization.

The chief heard him out, and then said:—"Brother, you ask much, and you promise much. What pledge can you give of your faith? The white man's word may be good to the white man, yet it is wind when spoken to the Indian."

"I have put my life in your hands," said the Judge, "is not that an evidence of my good intention? I have placed confidence in the Indian, and will not believe that he will abuse and betray the trust that is thus reposed."

"So much is well," replied the chief, "the Indian will repay confidence with confidence; if you will trust, he will trust you. Let the boy go with me to my wigwam—I will bring him back in three days with my answer!"

If an arrow had pierced the bosom of the mother, she could not have felt a deeper pang than went to her heart, as the Indian made this proposal. She sprang forward, and ran to the boy, who stood at the side of the sachem; looking into his face with pleased wonder and admiration, she encircled him in her arms, and pressing him to her bosom, was about to fly from the room.—A gloomy and ominous frown came over the sachem's brow, but he did not speak.

But not so with Judge W———. He knew that the success of their enterprise, the lives of his family, depended on the decision of a moment.

"Stay, stay, my daughter," he said, "bring back the boy, I beseech you. He is not more to you than to me. I would not risk a hair of his head. But, my child, he must go with the chief. God will watch over him! He will be as safe in the sachem's wigwam, as beneath our own roof."

The agonized mother hesitated for a moment; she then slowly returned, placed the boy on the knee of the chief, and kneeling at his feet, burst into a flood of tears. The gloom passed from the sachem's brow, but he said not a word. He arose and departed.

I shall not attempt to describe the agony of the mother for the ensuing days. She was agitated by contending hopes and fears. In the night she awoke from her sleep, seeming to hear the screams of her child, calling on its mother for help. But the time slowly wore away—and the third day came. How slowly did the hours pass. The morning waned away, noon arrived; yet the sachem came not. There was a gloom over the whole household. The mother was pale and silent. Judge W——— walked the floor to and fro, going every few minutes to the door, and looking through the opening in the forest towards the sachem's abode.

At last as the rays of the setting sun were thrown on the tops of the trees around, the eagle feathers of the chief were seen dancing above the bushes in the distance. He advanced rapidly—and the little boy was at his side. He was gaily attired as a young chief—his feet being dressed in moccasins, a fine beaver skin on his shoulders, and eagle feathers were stuck in his hair. He was in excellent spirits, and so proud was he of his honors, that he seemed two inches taller than he was before. He was soon in his mother's arms, and in that brief minute he seemed to have passed from death to life. It was a happy meeting—too happy for me to describe.

"The white man has conquered!" said the sachem; "hereafter let us be friends. You have trusted an Indian; he will repay you with confidence and friendship."

He was as good as his word; and Judge W——— lived for many years in peace with the Indian tribes, and succeeded in laying the foundation of a flourishing and prosperous community.

Judgment Before Argument.

Long time ago there dwelt in a city of the West, not far from Pittsburgh, a worthy gentleman who held the responsible office of Justice of the Peace. He knew some little about law, and a great deal of natural justice. His decisions frequently excited the indignation of the young lawyers who pleaded before him, but he never suffered himself to be influenced by the statutes which were brought up against his opinions, or the indirect threats of disappointed law expounders. In fact, his office was a court of enquiry in every sense. It was useless to bring law in opposition to his sense of right. He used to say, "I am a justice, and bound to administer justice, and no petty technicalities shall ever make me decide against the teachings of my conscience." It is hardly necessary to say that many curious things happened in the office of this independent justice.

A case was one day brought before the squire, which certainly required his peculiar system of administering justice. John Doe had sued Richard Roe for a just debt, but Richard had, by the aid of an attorney, found a loophole by which he expected to creep out of the necessity of payment. The case wore a very doubtful aspect, and both parties employed lawyers to plead for them.

The squire heard the witnesses patiently, rose to his feet, wrote a few seconds at his desk, seated himself again, and gave signs of being ready to attend to whatever might be said. The counsel for the defence made the most of his quibble in a speech which lasted an hour. When he had concluded, the plaintiff's counsel rose and labored and perspired for another hour to overturn the quibble. He also finished; and then followed a slight pause. The Squire sat still, puffing a segar and apparently quite at ease.—The lawyers both picked up their hats, looked at each other and then at the motionless Squire. At length the counsel for defendant spoke.

"I suppose you'll require a day or two to think about this case, Squire."

"Can't say I'll ever think of it again," replied the Squire, with an air of mingled indolence and indifference.

"What do you mean?' inquired the other lawyer.

"What do you mean, gentlemen?" asked the Squire.

"We wish to know when we may look for a decision," said defendant's counsel.

"You may look for it now if you please gentlemen—here is the docket."

"The docket!"

"Yes. I entered judgment for the plaintiff (looking at his watch) a little better than two hours ago."

"This gentleman, is my———

But the lawyers did not wait until the sentence was finished; nor did they ever again appear before the just justice without being sure that they dealt in plain facts, unaccompanied by law technicalities and quibbles.

A London Printing Office in the Morning.

By 8 o'clock the whole body have arrived. Many in their costume resemble common laborers, others are better clad, several are very well dressed, but all bear in their countenances the appearance of men of considerable intelligence and education. They havely scarcely assumed their respective stations, when blue mugs, each containing a pint or a half a pint of tea or coffee, and attended either by a smoking hot roll stuffed with yellow butter, or by a couple of slices of bread and butter, enter the hall. The little girls, who with well-combed hair and clean shining faces bring these refreshments, carry them to those who have not breakfasted at home. Before the empty mugs have vanished, a boy enters the hall at a fast walk with a large bundle under his arm—of morning newspapers; this intellectual luxury the compositors, by a friendly subscription, allow themselves to enjoy. From their connection with the different presses, they manage to obtain the very earliest copies, and thus the news of the day is known to them—the leading articles of the different papers are criticised, applauded, or condemned—an hour or two before the great statesmen of the country have received the observations, castigations, or the intelligence that they contain. One would think that compositors would be as sick of reading as a grocer's boy is of treacle; but that this is not the case, is proved by the fact that they not only willingly pay for these newspapers, but often indemnify one of their own community for giving up his work in order to sit in the middle of the hall on a high stool, and read the news aloud to them while they are laboring at their work; they will, moreover, even pay him to read to them any new book which they consider to contain any interesting information! It of course requires very great command of the mind to be able to give attention to what is read from one book, while men are intently employed in the creation of another. The apprentices and inferior workmen cannot attempt to do this, but the greater number, astonishing as it may sound, can listen without injury to their avocation. Very shortly after 3 o'clock, the whole body are at their work, at which it may be observed they patiently continue, with only an hour's interval, until 8 o'clock at night.—Quarterly Review.

Public Charities and benevolent associations, for the gratuitous relief of every species of distress, are peculiar to Christianity: no other system of civil or religious policy has originated them; they form its highest praise and characteristic feature: an order of benevolence of disinterested and so exalted, looking before and after, could no more have preceded revelation than light the sun.

SUFFERING.—'There is a great want about all Christians who have not suffered. Some flowers must be broken or bruised before they emit any fragrance. All the wounds of Christ send out sweetness—all the sorrows of Christians do the same. Commend to me a bruised brother, a broken reed—one like the Son of Man. To me there is something sacred and sweet in all suffering; it is so much akin to the Man of Sorrows.'

BEREAVEMENTS.—'Oh, God, how thou breakest into families! Must not the disease be dangerous, when a tender-hearted surgeon cuts deep into the flesh? How much more when God is the operator, who afflicteth not from his hearts, nor grieveth the children of men.'

GOOD ADVICE..—That was capital advice given to a pious son by Rowland Hill, to preach nothing down but the devil, and nothing up but Jesus Christ.

Advertisements

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT

The best Remedy ever discovered for

External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheum, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, Sun Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1,00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholic in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. BLAKE'S SANATIVE LIFE PILLS, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either external or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Stanhope's Celebrated CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

For sale by G W Thompson, Jas S McCleary, Zanesville, H G O Cary, Dresden: D W Culberson, South Zanesville; Jas Bell, Otsego; Claypool & Lynn Nashport; L H Dugan, Duncan Falls; J W Howly, Blue Rock; J Dean, Putnam; Shepard & Brother Taylorsville.

All orders for the above medicine should be addresed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisnness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

FITS!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epileptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y.
Mrs. James Bertholf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HATT, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 50. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, SEPT. 14, 1848. WHOLE NO. 466.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN McD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Selected Poetry.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

MY MOTHER.

BY MRS. SALLY SMITH.

Farewell, dearest mother, what bitter tears gushing
From the fountains of grief as we lay thee to rest,
Thy bounteous love through our memories rushing,
For thou wert of mothers, the kindest and best—
Thy hand never wearied, thy heart never fainted;
Thy husband thy joy, and thy children thy care;
Thy anxious solicitude cannot be painted,
Thy patient endurance and constancy rare.

When in infancy's imbecile season reclining,
On thy gentle bosom I laid me to rest:
Thy smiles resting on me, thy fond arms entwining,
How happy that season, how brief and how blest,
And when all thy children had left thy protection,
To sail on the tide of life's troublesome sea,
Each loved one still shared thy unceasing affection—
For thou wert still toiling their helper to be.

Thy generous attentions by goodness directed,
Make motherless orphans still bless thy dear name—
Bereaved of their parents, alone unprotected,
For thou wert indeed a kind mother to them;
And strangers revere thee with grateful remembrance,
The sick and afflicted, the naked and poor—
Thy hand ever ready to render assistance,
To those whom misfortune conveyed to thy door.

Rest, rest, dearest mother, thy sorows are ended.
And toiling and cares shall oppress the more;
While gratitude, fondness and filial love blended,
Our throbbing hearts swell as thy death we deplore,
Thy image engraven on each heaving bosom,
The scenes of thy love and thy tenderness past,
Shall ever inspire us with greatful emotions,
While life shall endure or memory last.

Goshen, O., August 20.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

"THEY MADE LIGHT OF IT."

NO. II.

At the close of a very interesting prayer meeting one night, the officiating brother took occasion to ask this question—"Who can say he will be here this night one week to come?" A young man standing just without the door, in all the vanity of his boasting spirit replied—"I will." One week after a company were gathered again at the same place to attend a prayer meeting. was the vain boaster there? He was not. Where was he, dead? No, he was not dead. But during the week a message come to Br. F———, desiring him to call and see Mr. D———, who was not expected to live. He went to the house and as he neared the bed, the suffering man said: "I am glad to see you Sir; I was at prayer meeting a few nights since, and you asked at the close of the meeting this question—"Who can say he will be here this night one weak to come?" and a reply was made, 'I will.' Do you remember it? "I do sir." Well, I am the person who made that reply; but I was not there; and I am informed I must die, —as he spake he wept—but I have sent for you to pray for me, O pray for me! I am not ready to die! This man made light of gospel offers till he must die. He did die.

Mr. S———returned from college, where he had graduated, but not as he had gone there.—When he left the parental home where God's name was honored around the domestic altar, his mind was impressed with the truth and beaty of the christian religion. But being thrown into society where infidel principles prevailed, he effaced his religious impressions and tried to imbibe the principles of his infidel associates; and with them he made light of the gospel of Christ.—When he returned to his father's house, he was a boasted infidel, and often grieved his parents by his want of respect for the worship of God in the family. The father's heart yearned over the prodigal boy, and he fain would have won him back again to the Bible; and to this end he oft would introduce the subject of religion. But the vain man of letters would as oft reply—"I have no sympathy with the Bible; no faith in its authenticity." Mr. S———has been a hard student, and during his stay at College, had contracted the consumption, which shortly after his return home made such rapid progress on its victim, that serious apprehensions were awakened in his behalf. He was compelled to take his bed, and place himself under the constant care of a physician. Yet he had no thought of dying. When his friends would call to see him, he would entertain them with his infidel notions, and talk of his plans for the future. His disease was flattering, sometimes better and sometime worse. His anxious father requested the physician to give his true opinion of his son's condition. To which he replied; "Sir he must die." The father desired his son to know his condition, but how could he bear to tell him. He entered the chamber, and spoke of Jesus and urged the consideration of Christ on his son; "but he made light of it." In a few days the disease assumed the most fearful aspect, and great alarm was occasioned thereby. Messengers were despatched to bring the physician and among others, the father also. The Dr. came while the father was out; as he entered, the infidel looked imploringly at him, and with great anxiety said—"Dr. what is my condition?"—the Dr. hesitated. With much earnestness commingled with terror, he asked—"am I dangerous?" Said the Dr. "Sir you can not live many hours." "Great God!" he exclaimed, "I can not die! I am not ready to die! I am no infidel, no, I am no infidel! Where is my father? O my father! my father!" When told his father was out; "O tell him I am no infidel!" said he and he wept bitterly. Recovering from his paroxysm of grief partially, he lifted his eyes & saw a friend standing near his bed, and fixing his eyes intently on him, he cried out as if with terror—"O Arthur! Arthur! die for me, die for me! You are better prepared than I am! I am no infidel! I am no infidel!" Thus he died. He made light of the gospel till too late.

ADIEL.

Norfolk, Va.

Ministerial.

Visit your Flocks.

Ministers, servants of the Most High, you must visit your flocks, you must, it is half the battle. The richness and fullness and freeness and heartiness of your sermons depend greatly on pastoral visitation. Sometimes whole sermons are forged in a chimney corner; a vein of the richest, purest gold, is started by a single thought. Some praying mothers in Israel can wake up the soul to new life and light and glory! But how are these visits to be made? in a cold, dry, formal manner? Nay, your souls must be kindled, fired; your faces shine as Moses' when he descended from the mount of God. Pastoral visitation must be special business, and the families you visit must realize that it is a special business. Do not confine your visits merely to the members of your own church, but go from house to house, as did Paul, weeping as you go—take saint and sinner in the arms of your faith and love—let every man, woman, child, saint and sinner feel that your message is from God! Our eyes is this moment fixed on a certain preacher, who studies hard, even beyond his strength, preaches pretty well, but where is the fruit, the kindling up of souls, the growth in grace? where the awakenings, the souls born into the kingdom, where? All is mum! The church is going down, and will go down, down, down! What's the matter? He don't visit—he won't visit. Says the "Religious Telescope," touching this point,—"Some ministers preach, preach, preach, do nothing but preach from the pulpit, and wonder that the work, the spiritual work declines on their hands. They preach sound doctrine, powerfully and pointedly, the people, it may be, are edified and pleased, some, perhaps, convicted, but here the matter ends—none are converted, none sanctified. But we need not wonder at it; if the flock is not visited, and the truth pointedly and personally applied, and each member either brought to duty or dismissed from the church, we cannot expect any thing like a general waking up among the people. This is a peculiar age; the public mind is unusually excited, humbugged and diverted from the great concerns of the soul's salvation. No common effort can bring it back; pulpit efforts alone will not do the work; these must be followed by familiar personal intercourse of the right kind. Christ must be preached in the street, the store, the shop, the parlor, the kitchen. There must be less talk about Taylor, Cass, Van Buren, and Hale, and more about the Saviour of sinners. Instead of being led away by the exciting subjects of the times, ministers should take firm ground, and see too it that the soul and life of the Church is not destroyed. We must not be afraid nor ashamed to be called men of "one idea," if that idea is the one great idea which filled the heart, the head and hands of our Redeemer during his sojourn on earth—viz: the salvation of a world of lost sinners. Every minister should be able to say to his flock, in private as well as in public, "I am determined to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified." Pastors, ministers, preachers, stationed or itinerant—what is the state of your flocks? Are any lame, weekly or sickly among them? Are none gone astray? Is the place of each one filled regularly in the church, the prayer, the class-meetings? Where are they—what are they doing—how are their souls prospering? Can you answer the above questions to the Chief Shepherd with a conscience void of offence? Can you say you "have not ceased to warn every one night and day with tears;" that you have "taught them publicly, and from house to house?"

Temperance Department.

From Delevan's Enquirer.

The Ravages of the Destroyer.

BY REV. DR. NOTT.

I have done what I advise each of you to do; deliberately to look around you, and take, within the circle of your own acquaintance, the dimensions of that misery which intemperance occasions, and sum up the number of dead which it has slain.

A friend of mine once gave me the number and names of a social club of temperate drinkers which once existed in Schenectady, and of which, when young, he was himself a member; and I have often remarked, how bereft of fortune, how bereft of reputation, bereft of health, and sometimes even bereft of reason, they have descended, one after another, prematurely to the grave, until, at length, though not an old man, that friend alone remains, of all their number, to tell how he himself was rescued from a fate so terrible, by the timely and prophetic counsel of a pious mother. And I have remarked, too, how those pupils of my own, who, in despite of warning and admonition, and entreaty, persisted in the use of intoxicating liquors while at College, have, on entering the world, sunk into obscurity, and finally disappeared among those rival actors, once their companions, rising into life; and when, searching out the cause, I have, full of anxiety, inquired after one, and another, and another, the same answer has been returned, "He has become, or gone a sot into the grave."

Among these cases of moral desolation, I remember one of peculiar aggravation; it was that of a gifted and aspiring individual, and a professed Christian. Crossed and humbled by domestic affliction, he sought, as many still seek, relief in alcohol. His friends foresaw the danger, and warned him of it; that warning he derided; he even denied the existence of a propensity which by indulgence, was soon thereafter rendered uncontrolable; when suddenly shrinking from the society of men, he shut himself up in his chamber, and endeavored to drown his cares in perpetual inebriation.

His abused constitution soon gave way, and the death-scene followed. But, oh! what a death-scene! As if quickened by the King of Terrors, and the proximity of the world of spirits, his reason suddenly lighted up, and all his suspended faculties returned in their strength. But they returned only to give to retribution a severer aspect, and render the final catastrophe more instructive and more terrible. For though at intervals he seemed to pour his soul out in confession, and to implore forgiveness in the most thrilling accents, shame, remorse and despair were predominant; and there was at times an awfulness in the paroxysms of his agony which no words can describe, and which can be realized by those only who witnessed it. "There," said he, pointing to his bottle and glass, which he had caused to be placed by his death-bed, "there is the cause of all my misery: that is the cup of wretchedness; and yet—fool that I have been!—I have drank it; drank it voluntarily, even to its dregs. Oh, tell those miserable men, once my companions, who dream of finding in inebriation oblivion to their miseries, as I have dreamed of this; tell them—but it were vain to tell them—Oh! that they were present, that they might see in me the dreadful sequel, and witness, in anticipation, the unutterable horrors of a drunkard's death!" Here his voice faltered; his eye fell upon the abhorred cup; and as his spirit fled, a curse, half articulated, died away upon his quivering lip!

Whatever exaggeration there may have been in those other statements, in these there is no exaggeration. This is not poetry, but history.—Nor is this the whole. To say nothing of the untitled dead, the heads of families, the members of families, whose number has not been summed up; but—to say nothing of these—how many clergymen, how many physicians, how many jurists, in this and in the neighboring cities, have, during the existing generation, fallen victims to the destroyer! Who of my equals in age does not remember those venerable men, all moderate drinkers, who held, in Albany, their meetings at noon-day? And who does not remember, too, the result of these meetings? ay! and of those other meetings, held at a later hour by their sons—those young men of promise, that were, but are not!

Over all classes in that beloved city, intemperance has cast its withering influence. Not over these only. There is no city, or town, or hamlet, known to the speaker, where it is otherwise. Of all the avenues to death, the world over, this is the broadest, steepest, most frequented. The sword hath indeed slain its thousands, but alcohol its ten thousands.

Even in this republic, we are told by those familiar with such statistics, that there are more than 500,000 drunkards! What a deduction from our national virtue, honor and happiness! What an addition to our national guilt, infamy and misery!

Could you see those wretched beings separated from the residue of community, and congregated together in some great common Aceldama—what a spectacle of horror! How much more so, could you see them individualized, dispersed among their friends, and kindred, and linked, each in its vileness, by ties tender and indissoluble, to other beings—and often to beings of the purest virtue, of the liveliest sensibilities, and the loftiest aspirings. Ah! could you see them thus, what gauge could measure the extent, or arithmetic sum up the amount of misery comprehended within your field of vision! Oh! could you number those concealed tears, which flow from so many sleepless eyes, as God numbers them, and hear those stifled sighs, that escape from so many sorrow-wounded hearts, as God hears them, you might then, but not till then, form an adequate idea of the superadded good which intoxicating liquors must hereafter produce, to cancel the dread amount of gratuitous evil they have inflicted upon mankind! Five hundred thousand drunkards in this republic!! But I will not vouch for the accuracy of their enumeration. I am aware that among the advocates of almost every cause there exists a propensity to exaggerate; and I will not even in a good cause, insist on a hypothetical enumeration, or urge an inconclusive argument. Not having verified the details furnished of local drunkenness, I do not know with certainty the national amount. But I do know, if drunkards exist elsewhere as they exist in the Empire State, that their whole number must be very great. For I do know that here they crowd our prisons, our jails, our asylums, our poor-houses, and our workshops; and that they may be found in our drawing-rooms, our halls of legislation, our halls of justice, our halls of science, and even—alas that it should be so!—our temples of devotion!

Parent's Department.

MANAGEMENT OF CHILDREN.

Commence early with your instruction. A mother is capable of teaching her child obedience, humility, cleanliness, and propriety, while it is almost an infant; and it is always delightful to think that the first instructions can thus be communicated by so tender and natural a teacher. Remember, that it is by combining affectionate tenderness with firmness in refusing what is improper, that you secure your children's happiness; and if they are early trained to be docile and obedient, the future task will be comparatively easy.

Education must, however, be always regarded as the means to an end: for all acquirements are useless unless they make us better in our relations as children, husbands, wives; and unless they lead us to the practice of that divine precept of our religion, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Let us suppose, then, that you have secured the benefits of a good education for your children; that they have attend an infant, and afterward an adult school; that they have advanced in the different branches of instruction, as far as is necessary for the pursuits in life in which they are destined,—still are you not called upon, parents, to take care of their moral training? Is there no danger, even after the best precepts have been imparted, that your children may risk being corrupied by your own example?

If you suppose that your vices can be hidden from your children, you are greatly mistaken; for the quickness of perception of children enables them immediately to see through such deception.

If, with the words "Thou shalt not steal," in your mouth, you nevertheless overreach, or make use of any thing not your own, or take undue advantage of others, you are practically teaching your children to be dishonest. Can you expect them to have a horror of drunkenness if they ever see you drunk, or if tippling is talked of by you as an object of gratification?

If you encourage your child by a promise to confess a fault, and afterward punish him for it, do you not practically discourage his telling the truth? Or, if you hold that nothing is to be told that can injure your own interest, and say "Remember not to tell," "You must not say so and so," can you expect that your child will not lie whenever it suits its own purpose? If you are passionate and intemperate in your language, overbearing or insolent, will not your children be infected by your example?—and are you not crushing in the bud the truly Christian qualities of gentleness, forbearance, and charity?—Morning Star.

Youth's Department.

TO CHILDREN.

It seems scarcely possible that this paper can be introduced into many families, without some children, those living household treasures, occasionally looking into it.

For their sole use and benefit this chapter is penned, and I trust it may be found applicable to many a case between the ages of six and fourteen.

And now, my dear youthful reader, the writer of his article remembers well his years of childhood.

He remembers the affectionate attentions and unceasing care of parents, relatives, and friends. He remembers his first school mistress, and how she stooped to his childish capacity to make him acquainteded with the first lessons of his education.

He remembers the loss of his best and nearest friend, a pious, affectionate mother.

He remembers how many scenes of pain and sorrow followed that, to him, a loss no earthly power could supply.

He remembers being sent from home to a distant school, and many of the foolish and naughty things he did at that early period of his life.

He remembers too when his days of schooling ended, with what fond hopes and bright expectations he entered on active life; in youth united with God's people—became a man—and then a minister—and afterwards a writer of many books—and many of them for the instruction, entertainment, and improvement of the young.

Having such distinct recollections of the past history of himself, he thinks he can offer some remarks that may benefit his youthful readers, perhaps through life.

And first, he would remind them that life must have some end to answer, and that both God and men have a right to expect certain things to be accomplished by the rising generation.

To know yourselves is of very great importance.

To remember your ignorance in respect to most things around you.

That people who are older must have seen a great deal more, and understand therefore vastly better than it would be reasonable to expect from you.

Then do not think too highly of yourselves but cultivate modesty and lowliness of mind!

And remember that you must be very attentive to what you see and hear, so that you may grow daily in wisdom, that is, in the right using of what you know.

Keep your eyes and ears open and knowedge will and must get into your minds; and do not care so much about the use of your tongue, until you can say what is worth hearing, and what those around must approve.

It is very degrading to be often told be silent; and the right management of your tongue will be of the greatest service to you.

I do not wish you to be sullen, but converse freely and cheerfully, but let it be at the right time, and in proper measure.

What you desire to know that your books do not instruct you in, ask your parents, or your elder brothers and sisters, or your teacher, or some kind friends.

Give due respect and reverence to parents; do not take advantage because they love you, but value their love, and see to it that your conduct will cause it to increase.

Obey promptly their commands; and do not question what they wish, but do it, and always with a smiling face, and cheerful heart.

Never speak or act when they are absent contrary to their wishes, for if you enter on the path of deceit, it will lead you into grievous & many sorrows.

If you should do wrong, confess it and seek forgiveness, and watch more earnestly in future.

Be ingenious in all you say and do. Especially regard the truth, and never utter what is false.

A lying tongue is the hatred of God, and the utter abhorrence of all good men.

Waste not your time. I would not hinder daily play or recreation, but try every day to learn what was unknown to you before, and labor every day to do something that is worth doing, and will bear remembrance.

Be kind and gentle to your brothers, and especially to your sisters; their confidence and love are worth having.

Let not pride nor envy make you indifferent to them, or be grieved because they have what you have not.

With goodness and generosity treat all your youthful companions and friends.

Be liberal in giving what you may possess, & remember what there is left behind will thus be sweeter.

Forgive those who may offend you, and let not anger rest and lodge within you.

Be considerate and compassionate to the poor, never mock the lame, or insult old age, but cherish pity toward all who are unfortunate and less happy than yourselves.

Avoid bad company, be not enticed to acts of mischief.

Rude and profane society flee from, as you would a house infected with the plague.

Gamble not even for the smallest sums, and let your acts of play be free from malice or ill temper.

And, above all, often think that God beholds you—that his eyes are ever over and around you.

Fear God, and remember sin against him must be earnestly repented of and forsaken, or it will lead you down to darkest regions of everlasting death and sorrow.

Pray to God that he may be your guide, and save you from the numerous snares of youthful life.

Seek the Lord, that he may bless you with his favor, and give you a heart to know and serve him constantly.

Rejoice that Jesus came to seek and save poor ruined sinners, and that he stretches out his arms to gather you as a good Shepherd into his besom, and if you come to him, and trust to his redeeming grace, he will to your souls be more precious than all the world can give.

Forget not constantly to seek from God the blessings you need, and praise him daily for all the bounties he has given you.

Neglect not public worship, but go and learn true wisdom from the lips of the messenger of salvation, and daily read some portions of God's holy word. And, dear children, early dedicate yourselves to God.

Choose the godly for your chiefest friends, & resolve with all your hearts and souls to seek the way that leads to everlasting life.

Seek God's blessing on all you do, and pray that he may make you good and wise and happy; that he may make you the joy of your parents and friends—holy members of his church on earth, and blessings to the world in which you live.

And forget not, you may die before the days of childhood are flown over. How many graves just large enough for you are found in every burial ground!

I would not make you gloomy, but do remember that you must surely die—enter eternity—and appear before the Judge of all mankind.

Only the pure in heart will then be happy, or have a joyful entrance into heaven.

The blood of Jesus makes all pure and holy who do believe in it, and follow in his sacred, heavenly footsteops.

And if you should not die in youth, but live to fourscore years, religion will adorn and bless you, and also make you a real good to all around you.

Then, like John who leaned on the bosom of the Saviour, be young disciples of the blessed Jesus, and love, and serve and praise him all your days.—Christian Philosphy.

Young Men's Department.

A WORD TO YOUNG MEN.

Be not satisfied with a mere Christian profession. Be not satified with that measure of religious character that shall save you from the discipline of the church, or even secure your salvation so as by fire. Rise up to a vigorous and lofty tone of Christian feeling and action. Let no one mark your daily conduct without perceiving that it is an ever-brightening light. And here, after all, is the hope of the country, the hope of the age. If I could but see the young men of this generation, as a body, baptized with the spirit of true Christianity, and acting habitually under a high sense of obligation, I should confidently expect to see the clouds that darken our horizon soon pass away. And I should then give myself no concern about the prevalence of one political party or the other; for if I could be sure that the mass were acting under the influence of Christian feeling, that an enlightened & active conscience was in the politics of the nation, I should have no fear that the mistakes incident to human weakness, would ever greatly mar our public prosperity. Oh, if I could feel sure that the young men before me, would be valiant for the truth and the right, I would defy all the miserable plotting demagogues of the land to ruin my country. I would say to all evil men, whether in high or low places—whether they make part of the constituted authorities of the nation, or of the very refuse and dregs of the mob—I would say to them, if it must be so, do your best to ruin us, and the nation will live in spite of you. Your mission of evil will not last always. You cannot always utter bitter words, or perform desperate acts; for ere long your voice will be hushed, and your arms folded in death. I pity you, but I fear you not; for these young men, full of faith in God, and of zeal in his service, are preparing to undo the wretched labors of your life. Could I but feel an assurance that this would be so, I would go abroad and proclaim it every where; I would entreat every man who loves his country or his race, to fall upon his knees and offer up thanksgivings for such a gracious interposition. Oh, it is a glorious vision to dwell upon; young men of this nation, it is for you to decide whether this vision shall go out in darkness, or brighten into a glorious accomplishment.—Dr. Sprague.

Ladies' Department.

From the Ohio Cultivator.

Items for Young Housekeepers.

MAKING SHEETS.

Let the seam be upon the wrong side, and remember to rub it flat before the sheet is wet, and it will never roll up; hem one end of the sheet an inch wide, the other, one quarter of an inch. The former will always indicate the end to be placed at the head.

CARPETS.

Very nice carpets require to be sewed with the darning stitch, we think it is called, but this is very laborious. Common ones are very well seamed together with the saddler's stitch. Sew with strong linen thread, double, and hem on the bindings, sewing both sides at once, of course.—A professed carpet maker says, some carpets do not last half their time because stretched too tight. They are too tight when the edges draw into scollops. Paper is undoubtedly the best and most convenient material to put under them. Spread down three layers, and sprinkle them well with scotch snuff, to keep out the insects, &c. Put a layer of paper over the edges of stairs before carpeting them.

BEDS.

A nice feather bed or matrass should have a covering made of some light, cheap fabric, or always be used with an extra bottom sheet well tucked around it. In all cases positively forbid them to be placed upon the carpet, floor, or any other dusty surface.

COMFORTABLES

Should always be made of dark stuff, unless designed to be taken apart when washed. The lining should be as dark as the outside. If very nice, a piece of nankin muslin can be basted about the head where the breath would soil them.

IRONING.

A board about five feet long, and eighteen inches broad, should be provided for ironing the skirts of dresses. Pin an ironing sheet around it, insert it in the dress and place upon two chairs, having previously spread down some cloth upon the floor. Shirt bosoms can be easily ironed by means of a board the size of the bosom, well wrapped with flannel and cotton, and placed just beneath the plaits. Boil starch fifteen minutes and then strain it.

Miscellaneous.

Manners at Table.

1. Never be tardy; always be in your seat in due time.

2. Never stare about, or be indifferent when the blessing is pronounced, but close your eyes and with great solemnity, raise your heart to God in devout thankfulness. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above."

3. Never come to the table with dirty hands, face or nails, or your head looking like a brush heap.

4. Never help yourself until others around you are served, or what is more commendable for young persons, wait till supplied by those who serve at table.

5. When permitted to help yourself, never select the best articles of food. Some little folks, we believe, are in the habit of choosing the largest and best fruit, potatoes, &c. This is not merely impolite, but selfish in the extreme.

6. Never extend your arms across the table: you may by this movement brush some one in the face, upset some dish, and do great mischief. Are you in want of some article at a distance? Ask for it politely in a distinct, audible voice, thus—"Father, will you please pass the fruit?" "Will you have the goodness to help me to some pie or pudding?" (as the case may be.) "I will thank you, father, for a few more beans, if you please." Some children mumble their words, speak very indistinctly, through their teeth or nose, or in so low a voice as to render it very difficult to understand them. These evil habits should be corrected as early as possible.

7. Never make knives and forks of your fingers when you have the former by you.

8. Hold your knife, fork and spoon in the most convenient and genteel manner.

9. Hold up your head. Some youth have acquired the vulgar habit of putting their face almost into their plate, dish, or bowl, and eat with great rapidity. This habit is justifiable only in persons of extreme old age, and so bowed down with infirmities as not to be able to raise their heads; but to see a sprightly lad in this uncouth position, eating with great voracity, is almost unpardonable. Better do as Solomon says, "Put a knife to thy throat."

10. Talking with your mouth full, (especially at table,) is very impolite.

11. Never wipe you hands or mouth on the table cloth or your garment. See that you are always furnished with a napkin.

12. Never suffer your plate to be unduly loaded with various articles of food. We have known some persons, who value themselves very highly for polite etiquette, leave their plates almost heaped with mangled fragments, a kind of hotch-potch! Shocking!! This habit is both impolite and criminally wasteful!.

13. Eat slowly, masticate freely and thoroughly. We have known some individuals (especially at public tables) eat as though they were fearful of loosing their dinner, with all possible speed! Better lose your dinner than your conscience or reputation. There are three special evils resulting from this wolf-like voracity: 1. Danger of being choked. 2. It is impossible to do justice to mastication, from which neglect result the most serious consequences! 3. Great danger of eating too much.

14. Never rise from the table till you have finished your meal. Some children eat awhile, leave the table, and return a second or third time. Tut, tut, tut!

15. Never leave the table abruptly. Are you compelled to retire before others, beg to be excused.

These few general rules may be deemed by some of little moment, but little causes produce great effects. Seest thou a man courteous at table? you are almost sure to see him so every where. Few things give us a more pleasant and successful passport through life, than a genteel deportment.

"Finally, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things!"

Indian Eloquence.

No where can be found a more poetic thought, in more captivating simplicity of expression, than in the answer of Tecumseh to Gen. Harrison, in the conference at Vincennes. It contains a high moral rebuke and sarcasm, heightened in effect by an evident consciousness of loftiness above the reach of insult. At the close of his address he noticed that no chair had been placed for him, a neglect which Gen. Harrison ordered to be rectified, as soon as noticed.—Suspecting, perhaps, that it was more an affront than a mistake, with an air of dignity elevated almost to haughtiness, he declined the seat proffered with these words, "Your father requests you take a chair." And answered, as he calmly disposed himself on the ground, "My father!—the sun is my father, and the earth is my mother; I will rest on her bosom."

Religious Intelligence.

WABASH DISTRICT.

Baxley, Ia., Aug. 19th. 1848.

Br. Bassett: Permit me to say through the columns of the ever welcome Recorder that we are doing about as well as we can on Cicero Circuit. Since the burning of my house I have labored under great inconvenience as all my travelling "rigging" was consumed (having left them in the house and gone to meeting in a neighbor's wagon) as well as all my library, and being at present destitute of a horse and dependant on others for horse—saddle—bridle, &c., and withal my family being in very poor health, you and your readers may imagine the embarrassment under which I have to attend the Circuit. However, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away and blessed be his name."

Cast on the fidelity,
Of my redeeming Lord,
I shall his salvation see,
According to his word.
Credence to his word I give,
My Saviour in distresses past,
Will not now his servant leave,
But bring me through at last.

The brethren have manifested a willingness to help me. But though many of them are "rich in faith," the majority are poor in this world's goods, and all having settled in a new country have not much to spare. God bless them for what they have done and for the disposition to do more. Our third quarterly meeting was a season of refreshing. We had the very welcome labors of Br. J. Shipp & J. C. Wright. Four united with us then, and five since. Our 4th quarterly meeting will be held at Br. Ransopher's six miles east of Michigan town on Kilmores Fork of Wild Cat, on the last Saturday of September, and first Sunday in October. We earnestly invite Brs. J. Shipp, G. Williams, H. Beal, L. Swazy, and any others who can, to come over into the Reserve and help us.

S. W. WIDNEY.

Br. Bassett: Allow me through the Recorder, to acknowledge the receipt of a letter containing the very handsome and acceptable present of a five dollar bill, from one (by the hand writing and language of the letter, I suppose a sister) who seems determined that I shall not know to whom I am indebted. The letter is without any signature—Post marked Tanners Creek, Ia. May our heavenly father who seeth in secret reward her openly, is the prayer of the grateful heart of her unworthy, though sincere, and obliged brother in Christ,

SAMUEL W. WIDNEY.

Baxley, Ia., Aug. 30th, 1848.

Biographical.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Brother Editor: It becomes my painful duty to inform you of death's doings in our midst. In his long and resistless course, he has visited us and taken one of our number whose loss we deeply mourn. Yes our beloved brother, the has gone to his rest. He departed this life for his home in heaven on Wednesday the 5th of April last. His disease was inflamation of the lungs. He suffered much for 10 or 12 days, but endured them with much patience. The most of the time during the last few days of his sickness, he was deranged. On the Friday previous to his death he called me to his bed, he was calm and serene; he was perfectly rational. He said he was going home, and was glad. If he had done up the work that the Lord designed he should do, he wanted to go. He then gave directions concerning his worldly affairs, his funeral, &c. I then enquired after his prospects, he replied, with a heavenly smile on his countenance, that he had full confidence in God and in Jesus, that no cloud intervened between him and his Saviour, that all was well. He gave me the parting hand and said, you will soon meet me in Heaven. He then lay silent for a few minutes, and his rationality left him, and he was no more rational.

REV. FRED'K. N. WITHERSPOON,

Brother Witherspoon was born in Hillsborough N. C. He was a son of John Witherspoon D. D. L. L. D. and was about 34 years of age. After he began to preach which was about 8 years ago, he continued in the field with the harness on until he was called by his divine master to lay it off, and go from labor to reward. He left a companion & 5 children to mourn their loss, together with many relatives and friends. We feel that we can say with the poet,

"The churches less we all deplore &c."

And while we mourn the loss of our beloved brother and friend; we feel to rejoice that "the truth he had proclaimed so long, was his support in death. His ministerial career has been very useful to the church and world, many souls have been happily converted to God through his instrumentality, and will be crowns of his rejoicing through eternity. Thus the Methodist Protestant Church is bereft of another of her talented and useful ministers. But while we feel the rod let us not murmur, but humbly acquiesce, & sink entirely into the will of the Lord.

Yours in the Gospel,

G. S. PIERSON.

Somonauk, Ill., August 23, 1848.

A Dreadful Murder.

A German woman named Donata Hensley, was recently murdered in her house about six miles from St. Louis. It seems, says the New Era. that at a late hour on Saturday night, two men obtained access to the room in which Mrs. Hensley was sleeping, and awakened her by the noise they made in seach of plunder. The old lady sprang from her bed and seized one of the villains by the coat—a young man, who was also sleeping in the house, coming to her assistance. The robber told them in the German language to let him go, at the same inflicting a serious wound with a knife upon the young man. then released his hold and fled to a neighbor's for assistance, leaving Mrs. Hensley and the men in the house. Upon his return with several persons the robbers had fled, not however until they had cut the old lady's throat from ear to ear, and left her quite dead upon the floor. The object of the villains was doubtless to obtain a small amount of money known to be in the possession of their victim, but the amount stolen was not ascertained.—Bicknell's Reporter.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, September 14, 1848.

☞The Editor reached home on yesterday afternoon as our paper was being made up, and was greatly surprised to find that his letter of Saturday last, intended for this week's paper, had not come to hand. This is very strange, but cannot just now be helped.

Appointments of Ohio Conference, M. P. Church.

President.—JOS. WHITE.

Cincinnati, Sixth st. Station.—T. H. Stockton.
" George St. " —J. Dalbey, jr.
" Elm St. Miss.—C. H. Williams.
Cincinnati Ct.—J. Nutty, J. D. Langdon Sup. Ass't.
New Richmond Ct.—R. M. Dalbey.
Ash Ridge Ct.—S. H. Euans.
Bainbridge Ct.—S. P. Kezerta.
Bournville Ct.—E. G. Hardesty.
Clarkesville Ct.—A. H. Trumbo.
Clarksburg Ct.—G. W. Thornburg.
Lebanon St.—W. B. Evans.
Xenia Ct.—J. B. Peat.
Port William Ct.—W. G. Fowler, G. M. Hunt.
Springfield Ct.—R. Rose.
Union Ct.—O. P. Stephens, T. D. Howe.
Darby Miss.—I. Edwards.
Mad River Miss.—W. Tipton.
Lima Ct.—L. Ensminger.
Miami Ct.—J. L. Borton. [As't.
Greenville Miss.—A. Bessee, J. Flood, Sup.
Twin Creek Ct.—J. M. Flood.
Richwood Ct.—S. H. Flood.
Mt. Blanchard Ct.—R. K. Davis, J. W. Kidd.
Gilboa Ct.—C. Caddy.
Maumee Miss.—J. M. Young.
Jeffersonville Miss.—A. Channell.
Sugar Creek Ct.—R. Dobbins.
A. M'Guire—Conference Missionary.
W. B. Warrington.—St. Louis, Mo.,—on loan for a year.
A. H. Bassett,—Editor of the Western Recorder.
D. Moore, W. Hughey, O. Warrington, T. B. Graham, Is. Hunt, C. Carter, W. Chapman, without appointments, at their request.
E. H. Weer, expelled.
W. Pelan, withdrawn.

WANTED—Any number or quantity of responsible new Subscribers, to commence with Volume Ten. Brethren will please bring as many names of such as they can to the ensuing Conferences.

Annual Register, M. P. Church, 1848.—This work is now in press, and will be issued within a few weeks. A copy will be sent to each Subscriber for the Western Recorder, who pays $2 in advance for vol. 10.

Foreign News.—We surrender a large portion of our paper of to-day to the Foreign News. It is very important. The statement by the Washington, that a case of Asiatic Cholera had occurred in London, is not mentioned in the news brought by the Hibernia, and we hope that no such case has occurred. There is no doubt, however, but that its progress and ravages on the Continent, are still making great havoc amongst the people; and, it is generally believed, that we shall not escape the scourge. Surely, then, it would be wisdom for us to be prepared.

The crop in Ireland is not an average one; and grim famine, it is feared, will again visit that poor unfortunate country.

It will also be seen that the Emperor of Russia has been compelled to flee for his life, and that a Provisional Government, has been established at St. Petersburgh, the very Capitol of the country. Good! †

Serious Accident.—We learn by a friend, that a young man in Zanesville, by the name of Walter Bird, came very nearly losing his life on last Tuesday evening, by the discharge of a sky-rocket, which carried away a considerable portion of his left jaw. When will men learn to be careful? †

A Huge Sunflower.—We were shown last week the largest Sunflower we have ever seen, measuring in circumference, four feet ten inches, and weighing twelve pounds six ounces. In taking the circumference, only the part containing seed was embraced. By a pretty accurate calculation, it was ascertained that it contained about five thousand five hundred seeds. It was raised in the garden of Mrs. A. Ward, of this place. Who can beat this? †

Execution in Wheeling.—The following is taken from the "Wheeling Times," in regard to the execution of Whelan, who, it will be recollected, murdered his wife some time ago in that place. The poor unfortunate man was intoxicated at the time, and should be a warning against the ruinous habit of tippling. The good people of Wheeling, we are glad to learn, did not visit the horrid and awful scene.

"Michael Whelan was yesterday executed, in conformity with the laws of the State, for the murder of his wife. We regret to learn that many persons were present from the surrounding country, though there were very few, we believe, of our citizens present, except such as were summoned for the guard."

We regret to say that a forged confession of the criminal has already been published, and is now being hawked about for sale. We received a copy of this lying, forged confession, even before the unfortunate man had expiated his life on the gallows! It states that a portion of the proceeds, derived from its sale, are to be devoted to the maintenance of his orphan children; which, we understand, is false in every particular.—Whelan made no confession farther than the crime for which he suffered, and it is a disgrace for men, calling themselves gentlemen, to get up such humbugging publications. It is getting to be quite a common thing now-a-days, to see men (?) going about the streets engaged in practicing this wholesale deception upon the public; very frequently professing to give confessions of murderers, pirates, &c., when in fact, no such thing ever occurred. Should any one of these vile deceivers visit Putnam with this spurious confession, we trust our good citizens will be on the look out, and deal with them in a manner that won't be pleasant. It is a disgrace to community and should not be tolerated. †

Norwalk and Sandusky Banks, again.—We take the following from the last "Zanesville Gazette" in reference to this matter of Banks, which we presume is generally correct. †

Norwalk and Sandusky.

We have been politely permitted to make the following extract from a letter dated at Cleveland, last Thursday and addressed to one of our most extensive mercantile establishments in Zanesville. We give it as we receive it, hoping that we may guard some of our friends aganst loss.

"I received yours of 5th inst. covering Fifty six dollars Norwalk and Sandusky notes. They are both in a decidedly bad odor here. Sandusky is the worst. Neither of them can be used here now. I mailed last evening the Sandusky notes to a friend of mine there for redemption. To day I have not been able to get off the Norwalk, but hope I shall to-morrow. I would advise that you take no more."

In Zanesville, Norwalk is yet in pretty fair reputation, but Sandusky is generally refused unless by such as can send it home.—Persons having either of them would do well to put them in a way to get home. Thompson's Bank Note Reporter, New York, speaks of Norwalk as less trustworthy than Sandusky, and considers Massillon as no better than either. He is however, evidetly not posted up in the matter; and should be careful how he expresses distrust or confidence. No doubt is here expressed about Massillon, and Norwalk is regarded by the best judges as a safe bank; but the late movements of the Sandusky bank, in selling out, and issuing new notes, has created much distrust.

Wheat has advanced to 80 cts. in Zanesville; and Flour at retail $4.75.

On Saturday evening the Baltimore Patriot quotes Flour at $5,75 offered and $6 asked for City Mills.

In New York on the same day, western brands, were worth $6,37 to $6,50.

Dealers seemed rather disposed to wait for further advices.—Zanesville Gazette.

FOREIGN NEWS,

From the Journal of Commerce.

ARRIVAL OF THE WASHINGTON.

By the arrival of the Washington, Captain J. Johnson, jr., from Southampton. we have advices from that place of the 20th inst.. together with news from London of the evening of the 10th, and from Paris of the 18th, one day later than brought by the Niagara steamer from Liverpool.

The intelligence from Paris is rather of a gloomy nature. Agitation and dread still continued to pervade the city, arising from rumors of secret societies and formidable conspiracies, whose object was to everturn the existing system of government.

The Sardinian ministry had unanimously protested against the 45 days' armistice agreed to between King Charles Albert and Marshal Radetsky, the Austrian commander-in-chief, as altogether illegal. Charles Albert was supposed to be desirous of abdicating.

The Chamber of Deputies of Rome had come to a vote in favor of French armed intervention in the affairs of Italy.

The Emperor of Austria arrived at Vienna on the 15th August. His return to that city was hailed with great rejoicings. It was still supposed, both in London and Paris, that the conjoint mediation of France and England would effect a peaceful solution of the war in Upper Italy, and that hostilities would not recommence; the terms, however, would necessarily be more favorable to Austria than were originally proposed by the Lombards.

The London money market on the 19th ultimo was acted upon unfavorably by the position of the bank returns, by the state of the weather for harvest operations, and by the news received by the United States steamer from New York announcing declining rates of exchange.

The opinion began to be extensively entertained that large supplies of breadstuffs would be required from this side to provide for the deficiencies in the English crops, which would cause the re-exportation of bullion—the consequence of which was a perceptible increase of caution upon the part of the bankers; and it was supposed that the rate of interest and discount would certainly be raised by the directors of the Bank of England at their next weekly meeting, unless a decided change in the weather should take place.

London, Aug. 19, evening.—Numerous letters from all parts have been received, which represent the potato crops to be suffering extensively. Planters are digging them up and sending them to market, and the present low rates are the consequence.

Faversham, Aug. 18.—The wheat crops have been nearly all cut in this immediate neighborhood; some wheat has been carried, and the carrying is now most actively progressing. It is, perhaps, impossible to imagine a more splendid sight, showing the bounty of Providence, than might recently have been viewed from the outskirts of this town; very large fields of wheat, wholly in sheaf and shock, standing almost as thick as a plantation of bushes, seemingly as fine and abundant crop as ever the soil produced; there must be a very heavy yield from these crops. Potatoes of both early and late crops are somewhat extensively attacked with disease.

The crops in the south of Ireland..—A gentleman who has traversed the greater portion of the counties of Cork, Waterford, Carlow, & Kilkenny, within the last week, has communicated the following information of the growing crops, which is possessed of national interest at the present moment:

In the counties of Cork and Kerry, which form a large proportion of the south and south-west of Ireland, the plant of potatoes has been exceedingly large, computed by many to fully equal the growth of two years ago, when the most destructive blight was experienced. With scarcely a single exception, the fields now present nothing but a 'blackness of withered foliage. The disease, judging from the color of the fields, has been most virulent in the extreme southern and western parts of the country.

Traversing the road from Cork to Youghal, which skirts the northeastern side of Cork county, not a field could be seen that was altogether free, the great bulk, equalling five-sixths of the whole, being to all appearance completely destroyed.

The wheat lands in Cork have universally suffered from the heavy rains. Oats are lodged on the ground; and the general feeling throughout the country is one of extreme despondency.

After leaving Waterford, the eye is relieved in a great measure from the succession of blackened fields which wear so distressing an aspect further south, but over the route of 100 miles travelled from that city to Dublin, a perfectly healthy field was a rare exception, the large majority varying in their darkened hue from the first brown tint, symptomatic of approaching ruin, to the jet-black color indicating complete destruction..

London, August 19.—The Cholera.—Yesterday Mr. Wakley, M. P., coroner, held an inquest at the Wheat-sheaf public house, High street, Kensington, on the body af William Waldron, aged twenty-five years, who died under the effects of Cholera. Mr. Knevett, the surgeon, stated that he considered it a decided case of death from cholera. Mr. Wakley said he quite agreed in opinion with Mr. Knevett that the case was one of decided cholera, and said that considering the dampness of the present season, it would be advisable for persons to take a good deal of spices; for instance, a good deal of Cayenne pepper. He did not believe that cholera was contagious, and he considered that if the stomach be well supplied with good wholesome food, it will not be susceptible to cholera. He would repeat, that he advised the use of a good deal of spice. Mr. Knevett said he fully concurred with Mr. Wakley in opinion that cholera is not contagious, and also that the use of a good deal of spice, especially Cayenne pepper, is advisable in a damp season like the present. They jury returned a verdict: "That the deceased had died from natural causes."

The Chartist Movement.—Warrants were issued last evening for the apprehension of several other chartist leaders, who known to have taken part in the vile conspiracy contemplated to be carried out on Wednesday night last. From what the police have been able to glean since the captures, the most violent measures were intended by the chartists and confederates. Private assassination was to be carried on. All the policemen on their beats, if they attempted to interfere with the midnight mob, were to be stabbed or shot. The gas-pipes were to be torn up, so that the metropolis might be placed in perfect darkness; the rails on the several lines of railway were to be ripped up, the stations and warehouses were to be fired, and shop after shop was to be attacked, when the order was given to do so by the captains or leaders of the gangs. The procession was to have been formed in a manner similar to the last nocturnal one. The members were to be at certain houses, and as the fellows passed through the streets, the various clubs to emerge from their places of meeting, and, when they had joined the main body, the work of destruction was to begin. Very little doubt is entertained by the authorities, that the principal object contemplated by the parties was plunder; but fortunately, owing to the exertions of the police, they were prevented from carrying their diabolical intentions into effect.

Dublin, August 18.—Removal of Political Prisoners.—This morning 13 persons, charged with treason and sedition, including Messrs. Meany, Brennan, O'Higgans, and Taaffe, were sent to Kingston, and shipped on board a government steamer, which immediately sailed towards the north. It is supposed their destination is Fort George, in Scotland, or Carrickfergus prison. It was stated that some of the "American sympathisers" were amongst them. The prisons of Newgate and Kilmainham have become drowded, and it is probable that the government are removing such of the prisoners detained under the habeas corpus suspension act, as are not to be placed on trial, at least for some time.

It is believed that Doheny is still lurking in the neighborhood of Holycross, and his arrest was considered almost a matter of certainty. No accounts whatever of Dillion or O'Gorman.—The friends of the latter here are quite positive that he has effected his escape.

FRANCE.

The absence of Ledru Rolin, Caussidiere, and Louis Blanc from the Assembly yesterday was noticed, and it was rumored that they were clostered for the purpose of preparing their vindication. And I have heard that they are under surveillance, and, in case of any trouble breaking out, would at once be put under arrest.

Gen. Cavaignac has divided Paris into six divisions, and the measure of defence will be under the direction Gen. Lamoriciere, who is actually invested with all the extraordinary powers which result from the city being still in a state of siege.

Orders have been sent by telegraph to Rouen, Lyons, Lisle, St. Etienne, Bordeaux, and Marseilles, to watch the workmen & the communist societies, whose ramifications with those of Paris are no secret to government.

We may pretty safely presume that, should an insurrectional movement take place with the view of rescuing Ledrue Rollin, Louis Blanc, and Caussidiere, and of declaring the communist republic, the government will put it down.

Eighteen of the 37 persons concerned in the assassination of General de Drea and his aid-de-camp are to be tried by a court martial, and the 19 others have been ordered to be transported. It has been ascertained that the aid-de-camp was shot at the moment at which he, unbuttoning his coat from the heat, displayed a fine gold chain to which a gold watch was attached. The insurgents then cried, "to death with him!" The watch and chain have disappeared.

From the London Times, of August 19.

Our Paris letter of yesterday evening states that the public mind was more tranquil than it had been on the two preceding days. The government was said to fear nothing for the movement from the Red Republicans, but the movements of the reactionary party (as are termed all who are not violent partisans of the republic) were said to be causing uneasiness, and to attract in an especial manner the notice of the government, as they had done that of the republican press.

A telegraphic despatch is said to have received by the French government confirming the recognition of the French republic by the Ottoman Porte, and announcing the appointment by the Sultan of a new ambassador to Paris, to fill the place vacant since the departure of Soliman Pacha.

A detachment of Poles left Strasburg on the 14th inst. to join the Polish legion fighting in Italy against the Austrians.

SPAIN.

Our Bayonne letter of the 15th mentions the capture of a detachment of Queen's troops by the Carlist chief Furnes, in the province of Tarragona, and the defeat near Solsona of the band of Tristany, with the loss of 14 killed.—Nothing was known respecting Cabrera's movements.

ITALY.

London, August 19—evening.—Our advices from Italy are again scanty. Those from Bologna of the 10th speak merely of active preparations being made to resist Austrian interference. The chamber of Deputies at Rome have come to a unanimous vote in favor of the intervention of France, which was immediately and officially notified to the resident ambassador of that country. The Duke of Modena has proclaimed a general amnesty to all his rebellious subjects, with the exception of the leaders in the insurrection, but whom he will allow a voluntary exile.

A letter from Naples announces that England had formally protested against the projected expedition against Sicily.

The London Times says:

"We have letters from our late correspondent in Lombardy, dated Turin the 13th instant. The King had not yet appeared in the capital; he still remained at Alessandria. Piedmont in general was quiet, and the people, fatigued with the war, and embittered against the Lombards, were content to have peace on any terms.

"It appears by the latest accounts from Turin, received in Paris, that the Piedmontese army still consists of six divisions of infantry, sixteen batteries of artillery, containing each eight pieces of cannon, a park of reserve, and six effective regiments of artillery. The army is in echelon from Stradella to the Upper Tessino; its headquarters are with the King at Alessandria, and the reserve is established at Turin.

"The Journal des Debats explains (on the faith of a private letter from Turin) the cause of the fatal mistake committed by King Charles Albert in moving the greater portion of his army towards Mantua, and leaving only 15,000 men on the line of the Adige.

"It would appear," says the Debats, "that an Austrian major, who left Mantua with despatches for Marshall Radetzky, suffered himself to be captured intentionally, and brought to the King's headquarters, where he told his Majesty confidentially that for a thousand livres (£40,000) he would undertake to accomplish the surrender of the fortress, provided the King would appear before the town with an imposing force. Thereupon an arrangement was concluded with the major, who was permitted to return to Madua, whilst the King advanced to blockade it. Marshal Radetzky, having been apprized of this plot, marched out of Verona, and, by attacking Somma Campagna, succeeded in establishing his troops on the Mincio, and thus divided the Piedmontese army into two portions. It is stated further, that M. Pareto, the late Minister for Foreign Affairs, concealed from the King the pacific proposals of the Austrian government, consenting to confine itself to the line of the Adige. M. Pareto is said to have replied to the Austrian messenger that the King would not treat with Austria until the Austrian troops had evacuated, not only the Venetian territory, but the Tyrol and Trieste."

PRUSSIA.

Some slight disturbance broke out at Dusseldorff, on the 14th, between the military and the poeple. Several shots and blows were exchanged, and the result was, one boy wounded, and one soldier killed. Order was then re-established.

AUSTRIA.

The long-desired return of his Majesty was accompanied with demonstrations of joy and loyalty, such as have rarely resounded in the streets of Vienna.

Not only the streets and suburbs at Vienna, but the hamlets around the palace of Schonbrunn, were illuminated.

HUNGARY.

The news from the scene of war, writes a correspondent of the Kolner Zeitung from Pesth of the 9th inst.—

"It is threatening indeed. The insurgents have entered the Comitat of Toronta. and prepare the siege of Grand Becskerek, one of the largest and welthiest cities of Hungary. The district of Grand-Kikinda is threatened with invasion, and crowds of the more peaceable inhabitants are flying from their homes to escape from the cruelty of the insugents. Count Bethold, the commander of the Hungarian forces, has sent a flag of truce to the rebels encamped at St. Thomas's. They insist on their former demands. The Banat Baczka and Baranga are to be united into a Raizish county, (Woywodschaft.) and the Waywode shall be elected by the Raizish nation. The nation shall likewise appoint a patriarch, and the religious language of the Raizes shall be guarantied to them. If this be done, they will not object to a continuance of the union with Hungary, and to sending a deputy to the Hungarian Diet.

"The combat continues in a most barborous manner. Cutting off of heads and sawing off of limbs appears to be the order of the day with the Raizes. The Archduke Stephen has lately deposed the Metropolit of Carlowitz. This act has excited the fanaticism of the populace.—This state of things mournful in the extreme: and the Hungarians, in spite of all their boasts, are not equal to the emergency of the case.—The country in the lower Theiss and the Danube, the granary of Hungary, is utterly devastated by the war. Jellalich's negotiations have proved abortive; and it is expected that his Croatians will sooner or later cross the Danube, and carry the war into the heart of Hungary."

Since the above was in type, we have been favored with the "Washingtonn Union,"—containing six days later intelligence than that brought by the Washington.

By Magnetic Telegraph for the Balt. Sun.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER HIBERNIA.

Six Days Later from Europe.

REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA.

FLIGHT OF THE EMPEROR—A PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT PROCLAIMED.

Condition of Ireland—Progress of the Trials—the Chartist Movement Suppressed—State of Affairs in Italy—Burning of the Ocean Monarch—One Hundred and Fifty Lives Lost—Condition of France—Another Outbreak Threatened—Condition of the Markets, &c.

We received this morning the following important telegraphic despatch from our correspondent at Boston:

Boston, Sept., 8—A. M.

The royal mail-steamer Hibernia, Capt. Shannon, was telegraphed off Boston at an early hour this morning, and arrived at the wharf about 8 o'clock, A. M.

The Hibernia sailed from Liverpool August 26, thus making her passage in less than thirteen days. She brings six days later intelligence than that brought by the Washington. The following is a summary of the news brought by her:

REPORTED REVOLUTION IN RUSSIA.

Advices from Breslau, to August 16, say that a revolution has broken out simultaneously in St. Petersburgh and Warsaw.

Travellers who have arrived in London from Russian Poland unanimously confirm this intelligence.

The Emperor has fled to Cronstadt. A provisional government has been established at St. Petersburgh.

AFFAIRS IN IRELAND.

Irish affairs have lost much of their interest, and now begin to be regarded with total indifference, not only by the people. but by the government. The State trials have, so far, resulted in the conviction of only one of the chief leaders. John Martin, proprietor of the Felon newspaper, has been found guilty, and sentenced to 10 years' transportation.

In the case of O'Dorherty, the second jury were unable to agree upon the verdict. He is still confined, and at the next commission the trial will be again repeated. The government have determined upon issuing a special commission for the trial of Smith O'Brien and the other captured leaders in Tipperary.

In every part of Ireland, the reports give but poor hopes of saving the great bulk of the potato crop, added to which it is even reported that the grain crops will be below an average. The reports of famine have attracted the attention of government, and measures have been adopted for ascertaining the real state of the case. Lord John Russell has announced in the House of Commons, that should the fears now indulged in by a large portion of the population prove well founded, Parliament shall at once be called together to adopt such measures as may appear necessary for relieving the evil.

The chartists of England and Ireland have caused some uneasiness in the public mind for some time past, but the abortive attempt at revolution, made at the close of the last week, has considerably mitigated the fears previously indulged in, not only by the people but by the government. The discovery of pikes, pistols loaded to the muzzle, daggers and swords, ball cartridges, powder, balls, lucifers, &c., show the existence of a conspiracy.

ITALY.

The Italian question is yet unsettled. The wanton siege and bombardment at Bologna is sure to exemplify the old spirit of Austrian despotism, while the patriotism and valor of the citizens, and the manifestations that have taken place in their favor, show that the spirit of resistance has not been quelled by recent reverses. Charles Albert's addresses evince unabated courage and confidence.

The intervention of France and England continues, and rumor goes so far as to ascribe to Austria and the Frankfort Assembly a readiness to be content with the frontier of the Adige leaving Lombardy to join itself to piedmont or Switzerland. This may form the basis of a settlement, but only a temporary one. There cannot be a permanent peace while Austria retains sway over any portion of the peninsula.

SCHLESWIG WAR.

From the seat of war in Schleswig, there is little news. Correspondents speak of an armistice and a peace as about to be concluded by the belligerent powers, but rumor has said the same for many weeks past.

CONTINENTAL NEWS.

The news from the continent generally is of a pacific character. In the early part of the week there was a little uneasiness in regard to France. Much apprehension exists as to the probability of another outbreak in Paris, and the occurrences of the week seem to show cause for the anxieties so generally expressed.

The socialist confederacy has extensive influence amongst the operatives of Paris, Lyons, and all the principal cities of France; and the audacity maintained by by Proudhon, Louis Blanc, and others implicated in the former contest, strengthens the presumption that the government are unwilling to proceed against them from the fear of consequences of a conspiracy, widespread in its nature and diabolical in its designs. These designs appear to have embraced extensive incendiarism in the metropolis and the chief towns in the manufacturing districts, coupled with which were to have been massacre, robbery and governmental authority.

Loss of the Packet-ship Ocean Monarch.—Terrible Loss of Life.—The packet-ship Ocean Monarch, Captain Murdock, sailed from Liverpool to Boston on the 24th August, and was burnt in the Irish Channel soon after leaving port, and and 150 persons perished.

The Ocean Monarch, Captain Murdock, left Liverpool on the 24th August, with 360 steerage passengers, 6 in the first and 22 in in the second cabins, and, with her crew, had on board 398.—She had not proceeded far, however, before, the utmost consternation was produced by an announcement that the ship was on fire; and scarcely had the alarm been given when she was in a complete blaze.

At the time the fire was discovered, the vessel was about eight miles to the eastward of the Great Armshead, and several vessels were in sight, and signals of distress were immediately answered by a yacht belonging to Sir Thomas Littledale, which was about six miles distant.

Mr. Littledale was himself on board, and at once bore down to render what assistance was in his power. There was a stiff qreeze blowing, and had the yacht ventured alongside, it would have been total destruction to all on board. A boat was, however, lowered and proceeded to the ship, for the purpose of rescuing some of the unfortunate passengers.

The flames continued to rage with increased fury, and in a few minutes the mizzenmast went overboard, and soon after the mainmast shared the same fate. There yet remained the foremast, and the fire was making its way to the fore part of the vessel. The passengers and crew, of course, still crowded forward to the jibboom, and there hung in clusters as thick as they could pack, even one lying over the other.

At length the foremast bent overboard snapping the fastenings of the jibboom, which, with its load of human beings, dropped into the water amid the most heart-rending screams, both of those on board and those who were falling into the water. Some of the poor creatures were enabled again to reach the vessel, others floated away on spars, but very many met with a watery grave.

The Brazilian frigate Alfonso was out on a pleasure excursion; she was commanded by the Marquis de Lisboa. There were also on board the Prince de Joinville, his lady and suite; the Duke and Dutchess D'Aumale; the Brazilian minister; le Chevalier de Lisboa; Admiral Greenfelt and daughters, and other distinguished individuals.—When the Alfonso discovered the the Ocean Monarch, no time was lost in bearing down to her, and it was their intention to anchor directly under her bow, but the wind changed a little, and prevented this from being accomplished.

Four boats were, however, at once lowered; and were soon followed by the large paddle-box boat. The Marquis de Lisboa passed into one, and Admiral Greenfelt into the other. They were untiring in their exertions to save the poor people. Prince de Joinville was particularly assiduous in assisting the passengers on board the frigate.

Of those on board the Ocean Monarch, thirty-two were saved by the Queen of the Ocean, one hundred and sixty by the Alfonso, sixteen by a fishing smack, and seventeen by the ship Prince of Wales, being a total of 225 saved—leaving 153 to be still accounted for.

A subscription has been set on foot for the relief of the sufferers. Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., agents for the ship, have subscribed £50; Messrs. Harden & Co., £50; Messrs. Brown, Shipley, & Co., £20; and other parties having given from £1 to £20 each.

News of the Week.

The Irish Rebellion in Canada.

Some stir was excited yesterday among the Irish population of this city, by the arrest, at an early hour of the morning, of three persons who have taken a prominent part in the support of repeal doctrines among their fellow-citizens. The three, John Giblin, John Hearn, (the secretary of a Quebec Emmett Rifle Club,) and John Feore, were arrested by the police shortly after midnight, for shouting and being disorderly, and in their possession were found five 12-pound cannon balls, said to have been taken from in front of the now vacant officers' guard-room, near the chateau. Six shot are missing from that spot. They yesterday underwent a private examination, before W. K. McCord, police magistrate, and were committed to stand their trial for larceny, at the next criminal term, in February. They were not liberated on bail, but we understand that an application for their release, on habeas corpus will be made to-morrow morning. In the meantime, they remain in confinement.—Quebec Mercury, August 25.

Rioting and Stabbing.

One of the most extensive and serious cases of riot which transpired lately, occurred on Sunday morning about one o'clock, at the Stag Hall Coffee House, on Hanover street, below Pratt. It appears, from what particulars we have been enabled to glean, that a large party of men assembled at the above place, at a late hour on Saturday night, and after drinking and carousing about, soon commenced a murderous warfare, of which the house itself bears ample evidence, the front door having been broken and panes of glass smashed into atoms. During the affray, some one threw a brick at the barkeeper, which struck or grazed the back part of his head, fortunately inflicting no serious wound. A man named Vachel Black, however, was not so fortunate, some one in the melee having struck him a severe blow on the jaw with a chair. During this disgraceful affair, which lasted a considerable time, seven or eight persons were stabbed & otherwise injured. Upon information being given to the watch-house of the Southern district, a large posse of the night-watch soon sallied out in search of the rioters and the quelling of the fight, when they made several arrests, a number having escaped before their charge of assaulting and beating Peter W. Wilkinson, who, when found, was actually weltering in his blood, his head having been severely cut. Justice Robbins, who was aroused from his home, promptly held him to bail, in the sum of $300, for his appearance before the City Court on Saturday next, George Freeburger was also arrested, upon two distinct charges of assaulting and beating Colvin A. Sank and Benjamin F. Baker. He was likewise released on security for his appearance before the court on the same day. Warrants have been issued by Justice Robbins for the arrest of others supposed to have been engaged in the affair, and a further examination will take place on this morning, at 10 o clock.—Baltimore Sun.

The Cholera.

The accounts from Europe in relation to the cholera are well calculated to excite the attention, not only of medical men, but of municipal authorities. Its route is precisely the same as in 1832, and it is preceded as then, by influenza & diarrhœa. A London letter to the New York Commercial says it has already spread as far west as Riga, Narva and Revel in Russia, and it is also raging southward in the Turkish dominions. The return from St. Petersburg to the 24th of July gives 17,742 cases, 10,138 deaths, 4618 recoveries and 1986 remaining, so that the deaths already amount to 57 per cent. At Moscow there have been 9754 cases and 4309 deaths. At Odessa to the 28th of June, 824 cases 332 deaths, 235 recoveries and 257 remaining.

In the South at Jassy in Moldavia, (Turkey in Europe) the deaths for some time have been from 30 to 100 a day, and the total is said already to reach 10,000. At Balgat, a village near Ancona, nearly the whole population has perished. At Cairo the disease appeared suddenly on the 15th of July. On that day 5 cases occurred, on the next 18, and the next 49. All these received medical aid, and not one recovered. Every patient died in the course of a few hours. At Graditza, on the Danube, about 20 leagues from Belgrade, it has broken out with similar violence, and up to the last accounts no recoveries have taken place. One healthy woman suddenly attacked fell to the ground and died in 5 minutes. Two men in the next village died almost instantaneously. At Belgrade a curious phenomenon had been noticed. A swarm of caterpillars swept over the district and by sunset had destroyed every plant. Visitations of this kind had been seen in other places where the cholera was approaching.—Bicknell's Reporter.

Terrible Storm on the Missouri River.

Boats in yesterday, report that on the night of the 20th, a terrible and very destructive storm visited the country and many of the towns bordering on the Missouri river. The first town injured was St. Joseph. The wind commenced blowing from the prairies between 11 and 12 o'clock, P. M., and in less than thirty minutes it increased to a terrific gale. Much injury was done to the town; several persons were more or less hurt, but no lives lost. The timber, farm-houses, fences, &c., for miles in width were blown down, and everything on the track of the raging element laid waste.

The court-house in the town of St. Joseph was unroofed; several other buildings sustained great damage, and many small frame and log tenements were blown entirely down. From thence the hurricane crossed the Missouri, and swept nearly everythig before it; passed over the Platte country, doing much damage in its course.

The next town on the river, sustaining much injury, was Lexington; here its fury, if anything, was increased. Quite a number of houses were unroofed, the college among the number, the roof and entire gable walls of which were blown down. Several persons were injured, but none seriously. The court house and most of the two and three story buildings were more or less damaged, and the entire loss is estimated at over $25,000.

The steamer Sacramento, in the river five miles below, was blown from her moorings, and down stream a mile or two. Fortunately she struck a sand bar, and was thus saved from destruction. Her boiler deck and hurricane roof, forward of the social hall, were torn up, and her chimnies blown down. The storm lasted nearly two hours. After it subsided the boat was brought to rights.

It is not known to what extent the storm raged in the interior, but from its severity along the river, the presumption is that a vast amount of property has been destroyed.—St. Louis Repub., August 28.

Rail Road Accident.

The train of cars which left Washington city yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, for Baltimore, met with an accident when within a mile and a half of this city. A large number of cows were discovered by the engineer upon the track on turning a curve, when he immediatly slackened the speed of the train, which was going at a moderate rate, and reversed the engine, but they were too close to prevent the collision.—The engine and baggag car, in consequence of their great weight, passed over a cow, without being thrown off the track, but the passenger car was thrown off and damaged considerably, having the whole floor broken up. Notwithstanding large number of passengers were in the car at the time, yet strange to relate, but two received any injury, Major James P. Heath and a lady, whose name we could not learn, neither of whom, however, are seriously hurt. We learn from the passengers, that not the slightest blame attaches to those having charge of the train, as they did all in their power to prevent the occurrence. A train was sent out from the depot, for the passengers, who arrived in this city about half an hour after the usual time.

A Noble Offer.

We learn, says the Cincinnati Gazette, that a benevolent gentleman of Cincinnati offers to Mr. Davad Charisty, Agent of the American Colonization Society, for Ohio, the sum of two thousand dollars, for the purchase of a portion of the African coast, outside of the present limits of Liberia, to be paid as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made. His design is to offer the territory to the colored people of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, for their acceptance, upon which to establish a new state, in connection with the Republic of Liberia. The Agent at Washington, the Rev. Wm. M'Lain, recommends that the purchase be made northwest of Liberia, so as to include the Gallinas, and those other "darkest dens of the slave trade." This purchase would embrace the coast between the Republic of Liberia and Sierra Leone, and forever banish the slave trade from that region. There can be no doubt but that other benevolent men will promptly step forward, and offer to Mr. Christy other sums, correspondiug with their means and inclinations, to be placed in the hands of the Society and President Roberts, to secure the necessary amount of lands for Ohio and Africa.—Bicknell's Reporter.

Deplorable Accident.—On Saturday last, in Brown County, Ky., at a pole raising, the magazine box of the cannon being used, exploded, and five persons were injured—one dangerously. The names of the wounded persons are two named Jackman, M. Jack, Thomas Malott. of West Union, & Mr. Markland.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The family of Col. Edward Calston, of Berkly Co., Va., to the number of twenty-six, were recently poisoned, as is believed by their partaking of some food which had been standing in a glazed stone jar or crock. The glased substance of crockery ware, as is known, contains poisonous qualities, which, however, are only extracted by certain substances. No death had occurred in the family of Col. Calston from the accident.—Cincinnati Commercial.

An Affray.—An affray took place between two of our citizens, E. Webster and C. Rhineheart, on Monday evening about 9 o'clock.—During the scuffle Webster inflicted several stabs in the left arm and body of Rhineheart, none of which we believe are considered mortal by the attending physicians. Webster is confined in jail to await his trial.—Somerset Post.

The amount of wafers used by the House of Representatives during the present session of Congress exceeds 1000 pounds.

Let not any one say he cannot govern his passions nor hinder them from breaking out and carrying him to action; for what he can do before a prince or a great man he can do alone or in the presence of his God, if he will.—Locke.

A Devoted Female.—Mrs. Fry, the distinguished female philanthropist, solemnly declared to her daughter in her last illness, "I can say one thing, since my heart was touched, at the age of seventeen, I never have awakened from sleep in sickness or in health, by day or by night without my first waking thought being how best I might serve the Lord."

There is a great difference in the conduct of men who fall into misfortune. The fool generally resorts to drinking; and endeavors to drown his reflection in the vortex of dissipation. But the truly wise men sets about retriving his condition, and repairing the breaches made in his affairs. The result is, that the fool generally falls a wretched victim to his course and leaves his family beggared and disgraced while the wise man recovers from his fall and gains his former state of prosperity.

The world is a stage—men are the performers—chance composes the pieces—fortune distributes the parts—fools shift the scenery—philosophers are the spectators—rich men occupy the boxes—poor men fill the pit—the fair present refreshments—folly makes the concert—time drops the curtain, and death closes the play.

Bad State of Things in Cuba.—A letter received in Boston, from Havana, of recent date, written by an intelligent gentleman, who has spent some ten or twelve years in the vicinity, gives a most deplorable account of the state of affairs in that place: The writer says:

'The distress which prevails in the community is truly alarming. Daily there are failures of one or more houses hitherto extensively engaged in trade. During the week ending July 22, more than twenty-five mercantile houses suspended payment. Yesterday I followed to the grave the remains of one of our first merchants, who, frantic at finding himself irretrievably ruined, committed suicide. Many others, owing from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars, have left the city, unwilling to meet the gaze of those with whom they have been accustomed to associate in the time of their prosperity. It is estimated that there are in this immediate vicinity, but outside the city wall, some eighteen thousand souls, who, lacking the means to supply themselves with the daily necessaries of life, are literally famishing with hunger. These consist, chiefly, of cigar makers, whose employers have been obliged to close their factories for the want of means to prosecute their business. In this state of things it requires no stretch of the imagination to induce the most gloomy forebodings. I grant that in this connection the mind is apt to recur to the scenes that are enacting abroad, but it must be remembered that these act as incentives to the disaffected, to which class the great mass of the Creole population belong.'

A new comet was discovered on the 8th inst., by Dr. Peterson, the astronomer at the Altona observatory.

FROM MEXICO.

The British West India steamer Severn arrived at Ship Island below New Orleans, on the 9th inst. The Bulletin of the 21st inst., says:

She left Vera Cruz on the evening of the 15th inst., and brings us dates from the city of Mexico as late as the 13th instant, at noon. Our latest advices by her from Tampico, is also up to the 13th. The news which she brings is somewhat interesting in a commercial point of view. For several days before the English Courier left, the Mexican Congress, was debating the propriety of a further reduction of the Tariff, which, if the measure is carried, will have the effect of admitting American cotton at 20 per cent, duty, and will entirely abolish all the revenue laws which prohibit articles of any description. The Mexican Congress is using every means in its power to encourage commerce, and many other reforms are anticipated.

We learn from our correspondence that the revolutionary movement under Paredes is entirely suppressed, and that his forces are completely dispersed.—Don Ramon Giauzasola, one of his principal officers, was taken prisoner on the 8th instant, and has since been tried and shot.

The utmost good order prevails in the capitol, and it is remarked by the papers as a remarkable fact that no guards are to be seen around the Halls of Justice, as was formerly the custom.

Our Minister, Mr. Clifford, is treaed in the most corteous manner, not only by the Government, but also by private individuals, who seem to be using their best exertions to restore the good feeling which should always be conspicuous between sister Republics. Mr. Clifford has expressed his determination to return to the United States in October next. A proposition is before the Mexican Congress to establish consulates only at London, Havre, and Hamburg, and to constitute all other offices as supplementary consulates. It is thought that that the measure cannot be carried.

Vera Cruz is both extremely dull and very healthy. The citizens of the place have organized a police of forty Americans, and we learn that they expressed their determination to keep out all Mexican regular soldiers. The Castle is manned by seventy-five of the citizens, who relieve each other every week.—There is but little business doing.

The only items of interest which we have received from Tampico, are those giving some further details of the progress which the Sierra Madre Expedition is making. The affair is spoken of in the streets in the most public manner.

But in Tampico and Vera Cruz the best disposition is shown towards the Americans who are still there; and every politeness is accorded to them.

Don Arrillaga, the business agent of Santa Anna in Mexico, came as a passenger in the Severn, bound for Jamaica; where, it is said, he is to marry the daughter of the Ex-Dictator. Letters have been received from Santa Anna in which he has announced to his friends that his wife is insane.

As far as Santa Anna himself is concerned, his power is completely broken in Mexico, and there are no fears that it will ever be revived. On the 1st instant the Minister of War dismissed from the service over 200 officers, who had expressed themselves in his favor and many are to follow in the same way.

Mexican Printing.

We are indebted to our old friend Mr. Coolly, recently returned from Mexico, for a specimen book of the type and work of a large Job Office in Mexico, owned and conducted by R. Rafael. The specimens exhibits a wonderful variety of "letter," and the work is certainly equal to any we have ever seen. The fancy work is remarkably beautiful; nor have we ever seen it surpassed by either American or English printers. Mr. Rafael is a Spaniard, and was one of those first engaged in the publication of the Brother Jonathan newspaper. While in New York, Rafael married an American lady, and shortly after removed to Mexico, where he established his printing office. Its value is calculated at $75,000. He printed all the official documents during the stay of our army in Mexico, as well as the American Star newspaper.

We are much indebted to Mr. Coolly for his elegant present. Printers who would like to see what our late antagonists are capable of during in the way of our art, can see the work by calling at the Journal Office.

Origin of the Albany Fire.—This fire, says Albany Knickerbocker, originated in a very singular manner. It appears that while a woman was washing, a spark set fire to her bonnet. Without a moment's thought she jerked the bonnet from her head, and threw it she knew not where; unfortunately it allighted in the stable of Wm. Johnston, which, in a moment, almost, was enveloped in flames.

Probable Murder by Somebody.—As the workmen, on Tuesday last, were making a slight excavation in levelling a road on Constable's Hook, opposite New Brighton, they struck upon the skeleton of a man, not more than 6 or 8 inches below the surface. The skull was fractured, and the head lay inclining a little to one side. The arms were drawn up over the breast, so that the hands touched the chin; the legs also were so drawn up as to be doubled upon the abdomen.—The posture and the whole aspect of the case gave striking indications of haste, and an attempt to crowd the body into the the smallest possible space.

It is recollected that, some years ago, a German, corresponding with the skeleton in size, general contour, and the appearance of the teeth, was conveyed several times by a man of responsible character, in his skiff, from Brighton to this place, under deep anxiety to secure a considerable sum of money, $2,000, it is said, from some one to whom he had loaned it. The last time he came was toward evening of a certain day, and he made an engagement to be reconveyed next morning. He did not, however, apply, as he promised, and no one so far as is known ever saw him since. Soon after the occupant of an adjacent residence moved away, averring that the house was haunted. The bones have been put in a box and interred within a few feet of the place where they were found. It is a question whether under the circumstances, the coroner has not a duty to perform.—New York Commercial.

The Modern Babylon.—London is ten miles long by seven miles broad. The number of houses is upwards of 100,000, and it has a population of not less than 2,000,000 of souls. Its leviathan of body is composed of nearly 10,000 streets, lanes, alleys, squares, terraces, &c. It consumes upwards of 4,369, 400 lbs. of animal food weekly, which is washed down by 1,400,000 barrels of beer annually, exclusive of other liquids. Its rental is at least £7000.000 a-year, and it pays for luxuries it imports £12,000,000 a-pear duty alone. It has 587 churches. 207 dissenting places of worship, upwards of 5,000 public houses, 15 theatres.

BATTLES WITH THE INDIANS.

A correspondent of the St. Louis New Era, writing from Fort Mann, on the 28th ult. gives an account of two engagements between the Indians of the Plains and portions of the Santa Fe Battallion. The first party left Fort Mann on the 7th of July, Capt. Griffin in command, with two subalterns, Lieutenants Eldridge and Benson.

On the 8th, signs of Indians were discovered, the command being then encamped on the Cimarone. On the 9th an advance was ordered, and a Mexican boy, who had been a prisoner with the Camanches, was taken. He stated where the Camanche families were encamped, some 8 or 9 miles distant, and volunteered to conduct the command to the spot.

Capt. Griffin ordered the movement of the whole body towards the Indian encampment, which they neared about 2 o'clock, P. M.—The Indians advanced to give battle, and a brass six-pounder was put in requisition, and shots fired at the enemy, at the distance of two miles, but of course without effect.—The Indians then took up a position on a hill, in considerable numbers, and the two Lieutenants, with seperate commands, were sent to disperse them—the Captain, with the six-pounder, and a part of the command, remaining in statu quo.

The attack was made, and the Indians fled in every direction, but only one death was actually ascertained, although it was understood that Captain Griffin has reported twenty-five or thirty killed. The Indians were afterwards disloged from another hill—when to the astonishment of all, the whole command was drawn off, very much to the chagrin and and dispointment of officers and men—the Captain saying, "I am not going to have my command cut up." It was supposed that there were from eight hundred to a thousand lodges of Indians, and that they had from fifteen hundred to two thousann animals with them.

Afterwards another party was sent out in the same direction. It consisted of 100 men, under command of Captain Jones, and Lieutenants Eldridge, Bain and Kubler. They had a brass six-pounder and provisions for twelve days. Nothing remarkable occurred until the 20th, when the guide reported Indians in the direction of some groves of timber up the Cimarone river. The command was disposed in order of attack—Lieuts. Eldridge and Bain having separate commands, and Lieut. Kubler in charge of the brass piece.

On approaching the timber it was found to cover an area of more than fifty acres. A mounted Indian was at this time perceived on the hills, endeavoring by sham manœuvres to draw the command in his direction. Lieut. Bain and his command was then ordered to examine the grove, and on entering it was quickly attacked and hotly engaged hand to hand with a numerous body of Indians.

Lieut. Eldridge was then despatched with his command to the head of the grove, where he met and drove back the Indians, who were then retreating from Lieut. Bain. The enemy was now between the parties, who were closing towards each other, thus the destruction of the Indians was soon effected.

The number of the Indians seen was forty-one; of these, twenty-one were found dead by Captain Jones personally—who has reported accordingly—but in general the command consider the killed to be nearer thirty; six escaped unhurt. The remainder were no doubt wounded, and had, as was supposed secreted themselves or fallen into the creek. Lieut. Eldridge and privates Kirchlo, Vance, Hoover and Williams were severely wounded with arrows.

The Indians fought bravely and were all shot in the breast, (some having several wounds.) This was supposed to be a party of Pawnees. Captain Jones then reconnoitered around and came on the abandoned camp of the Indians, which had been attacked by Lieuts. Eldridge and Benson, under Captain Griffin, on the 9th ult. The village appeared to have been abandoned with the greatest precipitation.

Lodges, lodge poles, saddles, bags of salt and provisions, being scattered over the ground in every direction; but after making every effort, Capt. Jones was compelled to return without finding the fugitives. From various signs and circumstances he concluded they had proceeded onward towards the lower Canadian or the country between the Canadian and Red rivers.

Capt. Jones speaks in the highest terms of the conduct and bravery of the officers and men under his command. His only difficulty was in restraining their ardor, and though last not least, in the affray was the young liberated Mexican, who fought with the most heroic bravery.

The Great Telegraphic Patent Case.—A telegraphic dispatch from Frankfort, Ky., dated on Saturday last, states that eight days has been consumed in reading depositions and examining various telegraphs. Kendall & Co. brought in a Morse instrument. O'Reilly submitted a Steinheil instrument, in addition to the two Columbian instruments. There instruments were all worked and explained by Mr. Barnes, one of the inventors of the Columbian.

Mr. Barnes requested Professor Morse to correct any errors, if errors had been made in the explanation. Judge Monroe made a similar request.

Prof. Morse replied by stating that he had nothing to say.

Messrs. Morse and Kendall, through their counsel, persist in claiming a monopoly of electro magnetism for telegraphic purposes.

O'Reilly's counsel resist this claim on several grounds, alleging the want of originality and frauds connected with the patent, at the same time showing that the new telegraph used in the O'Reilly Line, between Louisville and New Orleans is not an infringement on any thing invented by Prof. Morse.

O'Reilly's counsel also assert that the monopoly of a general principle cannot be maintained, as it is contrary to law and justice.

The depositions and documents would already form a large volume. The whole field of electric discovery is brought in review, and patent laws and patent cases are stated on both sides to the fullest extent.

The great question at issue, renders this case one of the most important ever tried in the United States.

The Great Britain.—This heretofore ill-fated steamer, having been regenerated, is advertised for sale by auction in Liverpool, in September. With her present engines, she is said to be capable of carrying from 800 to 1,000 men for a fortnight's voyage. With smaller engines, by which her coal stowage could be reduced, she could accommodate 1,000 emigrants for a distant voyage. —N. Y. Sun.

"I never go to church," said a country tradesman to his parish clergyman, "I always spend Sunday in seuling accounts." The minister replied, "You will find, sir, that the Day of Judgement will be spent in the same manner."

The White Sulphur Springs, of Va., are well attended.

Stabbing of Hon. A. H. Stephens.

The Charleston Courier, of the 5th inst., has the following in relation to this lamentable stabbing case:

The excitement against Judge Cone for committing the act, was great, and it with much difficulty that those present, were prevented from taking summary vengeance on him at the instant.

Since writing the above, we learn that the cause of the assault was a difficulty which took place some days previous. Judge Cone we are informed, had cast some severe reflections on the course which Mr. Stephens had pursued in Congress, which led to angry words, and a denial of the use of the terms said to be applied to Mr. Stephens by Judge Cone, and some correspondence had taken place on the subject. On meeting at Atlanta the matter was renewed.

The wounds of Mr. Stephens were so severe as to leave little hope of his surviving. Judge Cone is stated to be a powerful and muscular man, while his opponent is of diminutive size, and possessing but little physical strength.

The National Intelligencer says:—We are gratified to learn, by a telegraphic despatch from Augusta, Georgia, that there was an improvement in Mr. Stephens' condition at noon on Wednesday, and his recovery was confidently anticipated.

Desperate Rencontre.

We copy the following from the Paulding (Mississippi) Clarion, of the 19th August:

Mr. H. E. Raney returned from his pursuit of Daniel Stuckey, on the 12th inst. He brings intelligence of the killing of his brother-in-law and Benj. Stuckey, in a recent attempt to take the life of the latter individual. It appears that Mr. Raney, the sheriff of Lauderdale, his deputy, and his brother-in-law, traced Stuckey to the interior of Texas, where himself and his son had quietly settled. At the time of their arrival in the neighborhood, Daniel Stuckey was absent some sixty miles from home; and the party at once took steps for the arrest of his son.

This was done by engaging one of the neighbors to decoy him from his house, under the pretence of taking a hunt. In accordance with this agreement, Raney and his party were concealed in the house of the neighbor alluded to, when Benjamin Stuckey came up. Young Stuckey took his seat upon the step of the gallery, after having arrived, and leaned his gun beside him against the house. Mr. Raney, who had been watching his movements, now cautiously approached behind him, and succeeded in getting possession of the gun. This drew the attention of Stuckey, and he at once comprehended his situation. The deputy-sheriff, Herbert Raney, and his brother-in-law, were present in in the gallery, with each a loaded gun presented; but Stuckeye, nothing daunted by the odds against him, drew a bowie-knife and rushed upon his assailants. In this crisis, the guns in the hands of the deputy-sheriff and his companion missed fire, and the combat for a moment was now hand to hand—Stuckey pressing fiercely upon Mr. R. for the recovery of his gun, and that gentleman being unable to defend himself, from having two firelocks in his hand, was compelled to relinquish one, in order to use the other. A shot from a pistol in the hands of the brother-in-law of Mr. R. at this juncture, took effect upon Stuckey, who by this time had recovered his gun, and immediately returned the fire, mortally wounding his antagonist. Stuckey now again turned upon sheriff Raney—but that gentleman by this time was prepared, and as the desperate man leaped forward with the bowie-knife, discharged the whole contents of his gun into his breast. This ended the struggle. Stuckey lingered about an hour and died, with loud imprecations upon his lips, and the unfortunate brother-in-law, whose name we could not learn, expired also in about four hours. The deputy-sheriff was left to bury the dead, whilst William Raney and four others, started in pursuit of Daniel Stuckey. This is the last account we have from him. Herbert Raney, after the burial of his brother-in-law and Benjamin Stuckey, returned home and is now at Lauderdale. He was severely wounded in the hand by the bowie-knife of Stuckey, during the rencounre above related.

The Population of Canada.—We understand that the result of the census, just completed, of Upper Canada, will give that section of the province a population from 689,000 to 700,000 souls; while, by the census of 1842–3, it was only 401,061, giving an increase, in five years, of nearly 300,000. The last census for Lower Canada was taken in 1844, when the population was 699.806 souls, the increase upon which, during the last four years, is calculated, by reference to preceding terms at which censuses have been taking, to be about 70,000—giving this section of the province a population of about 770,000. The population of Upper Canada would thus appear to increase at the rate of about 40.000 per annum, and Lower Canada at that of about 17,000 per annum.

Supposing these relative rates of increase to be maintained, the year 1852 will see Upper Canada with a population of 859,000, and Lower Canada with only 840,000. 1862 will give the former a population of 1,259,000, and the latter only 1,015,000 souls. The experience of the past, and the present condition of Great Britian and Ireland, will, we think, justify the belief that the increase of our population by immigration will be greater during the next twelve years than it has ever hitherto been, and that the relative proportions of such increase will be largely in favor of Upper Canada. The probability then, is, that by the year 1862, the western section of the province will contain one-third more than that of the eastern section.—Scott's Weekly Paper.

The Jesuits in Gallicia (Austria,) have received orders to quit that country before the 15th of July. The reverend fathers possess there 5 great establishments, viz: a convent in the capital, a gymnasium at Neusandezc, in the east of Gallicia, another gymnasium and a seminary of philosophy at Tarnopol, in the east, and a normal school to which is attached a sort of penitentiary prison at Starnowicz, in the circle of Sandecz, so that the country was found entirely under the domination of the Jesuits.

O'Reiley's line of Telegraph is now completed to Dubuque, Iowa.

Deaths in Boston, for the week ending Saturday noon, 111, Males, 65; Females, 46.

A grand agricultural congress will be held in Brussels in September.

Considerable quantities of cider have lately been imported into London from Jersey & Guernsey.

Joseph Wagner, a Revolutionary soldier, aged 90 years, died at Fort Plain, on the 15th ult.

Commodore Reibeaud, of the Mexican Navy, is at present on a visit to New Orleans.

NOTICES.

GENESEE CONFERENCE.

The Genesee Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will commence its nineteenth session at Loon Lake, Stuben county, New York, on the first Tuesday in October, 1848, at 10 o'clock, A. M. It is presumed that a committee will be in waiting, at the place, as usual, to assign ministers and delegates their respective places for entertainment. A full attendance is desired. And we shall be happy to greet any of our brethren from sister Conferences, who may be pleased to favor us with a fraternal visitation. The post office address of the Conference is "Patchin's Mills, Stuben county, New York." E A WHEAT, Secretary.

Elba, August 21st, 1848.

ONONDAGA CONFERENCE.

The tenth session of the Onondaga Conference will commence on the 6th of September, at 10 o'clock, M. A at Sand Bank Village, Oswego Co., NY.

Ministers and Delegates will please call at the parsonage house, opposite the M. P. Church, and Rev. Francis Pierce, Sup't. will direct them to places of entertainment during the session.

IRA H. HOGAN, Pr.

Wm. W. Sterricker, Sec.

Otsego Circuit, Muskingum District.—Our fourth qr. meeting will be held at Jacobsport, commencing September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. We cordially invite Brs. G. Springer, T. Potter, A. H. Bassett, W. Ross, and J. H. Hamilton, with all others who can, to attend and assist on the occasion.

W. DULING.

Tanners Creek Ct.—Ind. Dist.—Our 4th Quarterly Meeting will be held at the E. Fork Meeting House, near Brother William Smith's, commencing on Saturday, September 16, 1848. We cordially invite our esteemed President, Brother T. Shipp, and Brother T. Finkbine, and all other brethren from the Indiana and Ohio Districts that can attend.

JABEZ SIBLEY, Supt.

Clarksville Ct., Ohio Dist.—The fourth quarterly meeting for this cit. will be held at Cuba, commencing Saturday September 2d, at 11 o'clock, a. m. As this meeting is to be held the Sabbath previous to the sitting of the Annual Conference. We would be much pleased if our brethren from the eastern part of the Dist. would make it convenient for them to get this far on Saturday and tarry with us till Tuesday. Come, brethren, for we need help.

W. TIPTON

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego, N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange ch. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgomery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attaal county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W W Bridge,	O.	S W Widney, 2,	Ia.
C W Langdon,	"	J Gay,	Mich.
T Hanna,	"	J Warner,	"
L R Reese,	D. C.	R H Sutton,	Pa.
J C Kimble,	Va.

OUR LIST.

The names of five or more responsible subscribers will entitle any Brother to have his name added to the following list. Please, however, send only such as are good.

Rev. John Burns, Mt. Pleasant, O.	10
Rev. W. G. Fowler, Paintersville, O.	16
Rev. A. S. Robinson, Ridgefield Four Cor. O.	9
Rev. S. P. Kezerta. Bainbridge, O.	8
Rev. T. Finkbine, Cincinnati, O.	7
Rev. V. Lucas, Johnstown, Pa.	7
Rev. Wm. Reeves, Pittsburgh, Pa.	6
Rev. O. P. Stephens, Catawba, O.	8
Rev. A. P. Corey, Waitsfield, Vt.	8
Rev. C. J. Sears, Chaneyville, O.	6
Rev. Jer Jack, Bucyrus, O.	5
Rev. J. Nichols, Hoskinsville, O.	5
Rev. R. M. Dalbey, Bethel, O.	5
Rev. C. H. Williams, Bournville, O.	6
Rev. W. Hatfield, Alum Creek, O.	5
Rev. E. S. Hoagland, Brownsville, O.	6
S. B. Johnson, Putnam, O.	5
Rev A R Brown, Vienna, Ohio,	5

☞We hope to add other names each week.

Should we through oversight, fail to give full credit to any brother, we will be glad to make the correction, as soon as it is pointed out to us.

Advertisements

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues to be superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from those cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev. Levi R. Reese.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

JUST RECEIVED

From the Book Concern, Baltimore,

A NEW SUPPLY OF

HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,

DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.

ALSO A FEW COPIES OF

Sne [illegible]'s Sermons.

For sale for C. A. wholesale and retail at the Office of the Western Recorder.

Poet's Corner.

SYMPATHY.

BY W. LYLE GLASGOW.

The odor that springs
From the ruby wings
  Of the rose in its blooming hour,
When the light of morn
Bids its bloom return,
  Hath a far less healing power
Than a kind word breathed,
With a sweet smile wreathed,
  When the sky of fate looks dark;
For it lighteth up
Sorrow's saddest cup
  With a soul restoring spark.

Oh! Nature hath flowers
For her summer hours,
  And dews for each twilight's fall;
While over the Earth
Streams run in their mirth,
  And sympathy flows from all.
The linnet's wild lay
On the budding spray
  Hath a sound to Sorrow dear;
And the rays of Hope
Brighten every drop
  Of dew on the ripening ear.

There's a soothing balm
On the noontide's calm;
  There's peace in the midnight hour;
There's a golden beam
Over wood and stream,
  And a glory gilds each flower;
While only frail Man
In the wondrous plan
  Hath set his Creator at nought;
Love's feeling glows not,
Sympathy flows not,
  Deep in his heart as it ought.

Oh, Man! there is not
In the fairest spot
  On earth or the living sea,
A work more grand
From Jehovah's hand
  Or a rarer gem than thee:
Then why should thy heart
From its faith depart,
  Or a kindly thrill resign?
Suffer for a while;
Be patient and smile;
  For a blessed hope is thine.

Narrative.

A SAILOR STORY.

BY REV. JOHN S. C. ABBOTT.

The following story of a seaman was recently related to the writer. Many years ago, when New Zealand was a land of uninterupted heathenism, the ship in which I was a common sailor, dropped anchor at a cautious distance from the shore, in one of the harbors of that island.—We had been months upon the ocean, without seeing any land. And when the sublime mountains and luxuriant vallies of that magnificient isle rose from the wide waste of waters before us, it was difficult to realize that we were not still in the world of sin and woe for it so happened that there was a terrible fight between two war parties of natives raging at the very hour in which we entered the lovely bay. From the deck of our ship we witnessed with awe the whole revolting scene, the fierce assult, the bloody carnage, the infuriated shrieks, the domanic attidudes of those maddened savages, as they fell upon each other with a degree of fury which seemed worse than human. Often we saw the heavy club of the New Zealand savage fall upon the head of his antagonist, and as he fell lifeless to the ground, his head was beaten by reiterated blows, till exhaustion satiated fury.—This awful scene of savage life, as beheld from the deck of our ship impressed, even us unthinking sailors with emotions of deepest melancholy.

In consequence of the war, or for some other cause, no canoe from the shore approached our ship. As we were entirely destitute of wood, the captain sent a boat's crew, with many cautions as to safety, to the opposite side of the harbor to collect some fuel. I was sent with this party. We landed upon a beautiful beach, upon which a heavy surf was rolling.—The savage scene we had just witnessed so filled us with terror that we were every moment apprehensive that a party of cannibals would fall upon us and destroy us. After gathering wood for some time we returned to the boat, and found to our dismay that the surf rolling in upon the beach had so increased, that it was impossible to launch the boat.—The sun was just setting behind the angry clouds which betokened a rising storm. The crested waves were rolling more and more heavily in from the ocean. A dark night was coming on, and savage warriors, their hands already dripping with blood, every where around. We were all silent. No one was willing to speak of his fears and yet no one could conceal them.

Before we left the ship, the captain had informed us that an English Missionary had erected his hut about two miles from the place where we were to land. The captain had visited him about two years before in his solitary home, and it was then very uncertain whether he would be able to continue in his post of danger. We immediately resolved to endeavor to find the missionary, and to seek such protection as he could afford us for the night.

Increasing masses of clouds rolled up and spread over the sky; and as we grouped our way through the deep and tangled forest, darkness like that of Egypt enveloped us. After wandering about, we hardly knew where for some time, we heard the loud shouts of savages in conflict or revelry. Cautiously we approached the sounds, till we beheld a large war party gathered around their fires, with the hideous trophies of their recent battle, and exulting over their victory. We thought it wise to keep as far from them as possible, and again turned from the light of their fire into the dark forest, where we could scarcely see an arm's length before us. We at length came upon a little path, and slowly following it along, stumbling in the darkness, over rocks, roots and trees, we came in view of the twinkling light of a lamp. I, with another one of the party, was sent forward to reconnoitre. We soon found that the light proceeded from a hut, but whether from the night fire of a savage New Zealander or from the lamp of the Christian missionary we knew not; and few can imagine the anxiety with which we cautiously moved along to ascertain how the fact might be. Our hopes were greatly revived by the sight of a glazed window. Through which we saw a man in the garb of civilized life, with his wife and one little child kneeling in their evening prayers; our joy knew no bounds. Waiting a few moments till the prayer was closed, we entered the door, and though the surprise of the inmates was very great in seeing two white sailors enter their dwelling, we were most hospitably received. The missionary immediately lighted his lantern, and proceeded with us, led the rest of our party to his humble abode. We all slept upon his floor for the night. Weary, however as I was, I found but little rest. I thought of my quiet New England home, from which I had been absent a few months. I thought of my mother, and her anxiety about her sailor boy in this his first voyage. The scene was indeed a novel one to me. The swelling winds of the tempestuous night, the wild scenes of man and nature all around us, the vivid images of the bloody conflict, with the remembrance of its hideous and fiend like outcries, all united so to oppress my spirit that I found but little repose. My companions, however, perhaps more accustomed to danger, and perhaps less addicted to thought, were soon soundly asleep.

Early in the morning a party of warriors came to the missionary's hut in search of us, having somehow ascertained that a boat's crew were on the shore. The missionary and his wife, both in countenance and manner, manifested the deepest anxiety for our safety. The savages were imperious and rude, and it seemed to me then, that nothing but the restraining power of God preserved this family uninjured in the midst of such cruel and treacherous men. While they had been somewhat subdued in spirit by the kindness, the meekness, and the utter helplessness of the missionary's family, they considered us sailors fair game for plunder and abuse. By the most earnest solicitations on the part of the missionary they were induced to spare us.

The missionary accompanied us to our boat, and we had for our retinue, a troop of rioting and carousing savages, brandishing their bloody war-clubs over our heads, to convince us that we were in their power. A walk of two miles conducted us to the beach. It was a fearful walk, and the watchful anxiety of our friend proved that he considered our danger to be great.

When we arrived at the beach, some of the natives manisfested great reluctance to let us go. Some took hold of our boat to draw it further on the land, while they seemed to be earnestly arguing with the rest upon the folly of permitting our escape. At length, however, they yielded to the remonstrances of the missionary, and aided us in launching our boat, through the now subsiding surf.

As we rowed from the shore, and I looked back upon this devoted man, standing upon the beach in the midst of these rude savages, and thought of his return to his solitary home, and of the days, weeks and months he must there pass in thankless labors, I thought that his lot was in a worldly point of view, one of the hardest I had ever known; and I wondered that any man could be so heard-hearted as to speak in terms of reproach, and point the finger of scorn towards the Christian missionary.

In my last voyage, about two years ago, I again entered this same harbor. It is now called the Bay of Islands, and is one of the most beautiful places in natural scenery on the surface of the globe. I could hardly credit my eyes as I looked out upon the handsome and thrifty town, with many dwellings indicative of wealth and elegance. There were churches of tasteful architecture, and school children with their slates and books. And there were to be seen New Zealand families dwelling in cheerful parlors, sanctified by morning prayers and morning hymns. The untiring labors of the missionary had through God's blessing created a new world. And the emotions of deep compassion with which I had regarded him when we left them on the beach alone with the savages, were transformed into sentiments of admiration and almost envy in vew of his achievements. All other labors seemed trivial compared with his. And I then felt and still feel, that it any man can lie down with joy upon a dying bed it is he who can look back upon a life successfully devoted to raising a savage people to the comforts, refinements and virtues of a Christian life.—N. Y Evangelist.

Natural History.

The Flying Fish.

The body of the fish is oblong; the head is almost three cornered, the fin covering the gills with ten rays; the pectorial fin placed high, and long as the whole body; the back fin at the extremity of the back. The tail bipercated or pronged. As it is a small animal, seldom growing above the size of a herring, it is chiefly sought by the Dorado. Nature has furnished each respectively with the powers of pursuit and evasion. The Dorado being above six feet long, yet not thicker than a salmon, and furnished with a full compliment of fins, cuts its way through the water with amazing rapidity; on the other hand the flying-fish is furnished with two pair of fins, longer than the body, and these also moved by a stronger set of muscles than any other. This equality of power seems to furnish one of the most intertaining spectacles these seas can exhibit. The efforts to seize on one side, and the arts of escaping on the other, are perfectly amusing. The Dorado is seen upon this occasion, darting after its prey, which will not leave the water while it has the advantage of swimming in the beginning of the chase. But like the hunted hare, being tired a last, it then has recourse to another expedient for safety, by flight. The long fins which begin to grow useless in the water, are now exerted in a different manner and different direction to that in which they were employed in swimming; by this means the timid litule animal rises from the water, and flutters over its surface for two or three hundred yards, till the muscles employed in waving its wings are enfeebled by that particular manner of exertion. By this time, however, they have acquired a fresh power of renewing their efforts in the water; and the animal is capable of proceeding with some velocity by swimmiug; still, however, the active enemy keeps it in view, and drives it again from the deep, till at length the poor little creature is seen to drop down at last into the mouth of its fierce pursuer But not the Dorado alone, all animal nature seems combined against this little fish, which seems possessed of double powers, only to be subject to greater dangers; for though it should escape from its enemies of the deep, yet the tropic bird, and the albatross are continually on the wing to seize it. Thus pursued, in either element, it sometimes seeks refuge with a new enemy, and it is not unfrequent, for whole shoals of them to fall on shipboard, where they furnish men with an object of useless curiosity.

Danger of Weeping.—However poetical tears may be in themselves, the act of weeping is undoubtedly attended with a certain risk. We have known beautiful women who looked at least plain when they cried; and we never knew plain women who did not look, if we may venture upon a profane expression, downright ugly. The reason must be, that the act of weeping distorts the features, just like the act of laughing, while it is unredeemed by the agreeable associations of the latter.—Ex.

VARIETY.

The Mother's Lesson.

Lamartine, whose influence for the last few months, has been so great in France, thus opens the beautiful narrative of his travels in the East:

"My mother had received from hers, on the bed of death, a beautiful copy of the Bible of Royamont, in which she taught me to read when I was a litule child. This Bible had engravings on sacred subjects on every page. They depicted Sarah, Joseph, and Samuel; and above all, those beautiful patriarchial scenes, in which the solemn and primitive nature of the East was blended with all the acts of the simple and wonderful lives of the fathers of mankind. When I had repeated my lesson well, and read with only a fault or two the half page of historical matter, my mother uncovered the engraving, and holding the book open in her lap, showed and explained it to me, as my recompense.

She was endowed by nature, with a mind as pious as it was tender, and with the most sensitive and vivid imagination. All her thoughts were sentiments, and every sentiment was an image. Her beautiful, noble, and benign countenance, reflected, in its radiant physiognomy, all that glowed in her heart, and all that was painted in her thoughts; and the silvery, affectionate, solemn, and impassioned tone of her voice, added to all that she said an accent of strength, grace, and love, which still sounds in my ear, after six years of absence.

The sight of these engravings, the explanations, and the poetical commentaries of my mother, inspired me, from the most tender infancy, with a taste and inclination for biblical lore.

From the love of the things themselves, to the desire of seeing the places where these things had occurred, there was but a step. I burned, therefore, from the age of eight years, with a desire to go and visit those mountains on which God descended; those deserts where the angel pointed out to Hagar the hidden spring, whence her famished child, dying with thirst, might derive refreshment; those rivers which flowed from that terrestrial paradise; the spot in the firmament at which the angels were seen ascending and descending Jacob's ladder. The desire grew with my growth, and strengthened with my strength. I was always dreaming of travelling in the East. I never ceased arranging in my mind a vast and religious epopee, of which these beauty spots should be the principal scene."

ALL FOR BUSINESS.

"I hope," said some one to Rothschild, "that your children are not too fond of money and business, to the exclusion of more important things. I am sure you would not wish that?" Rothschild—"I am sure I should wish that. I wish them to give mind, and soul, and heart, and body, and every thing to business; that is the way to be happy."

What a sentiment for a man, who believes he has a soul! And yet there are too many, who practically seem to be of Rothschild's opinion. The lives of such men are one long blunder.—He whose happiness is circumscribed by his business, and made dependent on its success, and who does not cultivate these resources, may live and die like Rothschild or like Astor, and be a happy man after their fashion; but what rational, religious being would covet such happiness? In doing ample justice to his business, a man should not forget the obligations which he owes to himself—to his own moral and intellectual nature. Rothschild's sentiments converts what should merely be the means of life into the end.—Transcript.

THE LOWER CLASS.

Who are they? Are they the toiling millions, the laboring man and woman, the farmer, the mechanic, the artizan, the inventor, the producer? Far from it. These are nature's nobility—God's favorites—the salt of the earth. No matter whether they are high or low in station, rich or poor in pelf, conspicious or humble in position, they are surely the 'upper circles' in the order of nature, whatever the fictitious distinctions of society, fashionable or unfashionable, decree.

It is not low—it is the highest duty, privilege and pleasure, for the great man and whole-souled woman to earn what they possess—to work their own way through life—to be the architects of their own fortunes. Some may rank the classes we huve alluded to as only relatively low, and in fact the middling classes. We insist they are absolutely the very highest. If there is a class of human beings on earth who may properly be denominated low, it is composed of those who spend without earning—who consume without producing—who dissipate on the earnings of their fathers or relatives without being or doing any thing in and of themselves.

Little Kindness.

Small acts of kindness, how pleasant and desirable do they make life! Every dark object is made light by them, and every tear of sorrow brushed away. When the heart is sad, and despondency sits at the door, a trifling kindness drives despair away, and makes the path of life cheerful and pleasant. Who will refuse a kind act? It costs the giver nothing, but it is invaluable to the sad and sorrowing.—It raises from misery and degration, and throws around the soul those hallowed joys that were lost in Paradise.—Exchange.

Philosophic Courtship.

Sir Isaac Newton was persuded by one of his friends to marry; he excused himself by saying that he had no time to court a wife; his friends said they would assist by sending to his apartment a woman of worth. He thanked them for the offer, and promised to receive a visit from her. His friends applied to the woman, and requested her to dispense with the usual ceremonies of courtship, and wait on the philosopher, which she consented to do. When she came to his apartment, and produced her letter of recommendation, he received her politely, filled and fired his pipe, sat down by her side, took hold of her hand, and conversed on the subject. Before they had brought the point to a close, some question about the magnitude of the heavenly bodies struck his mind with such force that he forgot what he was about—he turned his eyes up to heaven, took the pipe out of his mouth with his left hand, and being lost in study, without design, took the lady's left hand, which he laid in his own, and with one of her fingers crowded the tobacco in the bowl of his pipe, and held it there so long that her heart, as well as her finger, took fire, and she in a huff sprung up and went off, leaving the philosopher to finish his study alone.

"Every misery that I miss is a new mercy," said good old Izaak Walton. How few of us in enumerating our blessings think of this.

A BAD EDUCATION THE HIGHWAY TO RUIN.

Here the ruin of many begins. Vice need not be planted. If the gardener neglects to dress, sow, and manure his garden, he need not give the weeds a greater advantage; but if he also scatter seeds of hemlock, dock, and nettles, he makes it fit for nothing.

Many parents, and they godly too, are guilty of many neglects through carelessness, worldly incumbrances and fond indulgence. While they neglect the season of sowing better seed, the devil takes hold of it. If they will not improve it, he will. If they do not teach them to pray, he will teach them to curse, lie, and swear; if they put not the bible and catechism in their hand, he will put in obscene ballads and songs, &c. Thus the offspring of many godly parents turn into degenerate plants, and prove a generation that know not the God of their fathers. This age furnishes us many sad instances. They are spoiled in the blood; simple ignorance in youth becomes affected and wilful ignorance in age; blushing sins in children become impudent sins in age. And all this for want of a timely and prudent preventing care.

Others there are who are bred much like the brutes, and are fitly described (Job xxx. 6, 7.)—Go into their houses, and you may sooner find in the window or upon the shelf a pack of cards than a bible or catechism; their beds and tables differ little, or not at all, from the stalls and cribs where beasts lie down and feed, in respect of any worship of God among them; or if for fashion's sake, a few words be huddled over in the evening when their bodies are tired,—the man says something he scarce knows what, the wife and children and servants are asleep.

This is the education most of parents give their children, all the week, and when the Sabbath comes, the most they learn to know at church is where their own seat stands, and that it is necessary to speak to such a neighbor about such or such a bargain for the next week.

Others teach them by their example the newest oaths that were last minted in Hell, revile and scoff at serious godliness and its professors; smiling to hear with what emphasis they can talk in the dialect of devils, or how witily they can dwell upon the godly ministers and christians.

Such familics are nurseries for Hell. And, though God may, by an extraordinary hand, now and then snatch a soul by conversion from among them, as a brand out of the fire, yet, generally, they die, as they live, going to the generation of their fathers.

Oh! what a cut must it be to the heart of that father, whose son's lips shall tell his conscience what a profane son's lips once told his father to his face. "If I have done evil, I have learned it of you."

Parents, consider what a fearful thing it is to be the instruments of ruining forever, those who have received their being instrumentally from them, and to seek whose good, they stand obliged by all the laws of God and nature.

In vain are all your cares and studies for their bodies, whilst their souls perish for want of knowledge. You rejoiced at their birth, but they will have cause to curse the day they were born of you, and say, "Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which I was conceived." You were solicitous for their bodies, but careless for their souls; earnest to see them rich, but indifferent whether they were gracious; you neglected to teach them the way of salvation, but the devil did not neglect to teach them the way of sin. You will one day wish you had never been parents, when the doleful cries of your children damned shall ring such notes as these in your ears:—

"Oh cursed father! Oh cruel, merciless mother! whose examples have drawn me after you in all this misery. You had time enough and money enough to have warned me of this place and misery, whilst my heart was tender and my affections pliable. Would it not have been as easy to have put a bible as a tale or novel before me? To have chastised me when I provoked God by sin, as when I provoked you about a trifle? One word spoken in season might have saved my soul—one reproof wisely given and set on by your example might have preserved me. Would it not have been the same pains to have asked me, child what wilt thou do to be saved? as what wilt thou do to live in the world?—Or had I but observed any serious religion in you, had I but found my father or mother upon their knees in prayer, it might have awakened me to a consideration of my condition. In my youth I was shamefaced, bashful, credulous, and apt to imitate; had you had but wisdom as other parents have, to have taken hold of these handles in time, you had rescued my soul from Hell. Nay, so cruel have you been to your own child, that you allowed me no time, if I had a disposition for any exercise of religion; yea, you have quenched and stifled the sparks of conviction and better inclination that were sometimes in my heart.—Oh! happy, happy had it been, if I had never been born of you, or seen your faces." This will be the result of your negligence, except God by some other hand rescue them from their impending ruin.

FRANKNESS.

Be frank with the world. Frankness is the child of honesty and courage. Say just what you mean to do on every occasion; and take for granted you mean to do what's right; if a friend asks a favor, you should grant it, if it is reasonable, if not, tell him plainly why you cannot. You will wrong him and yourself by equivocaton of any kind. Never do a wrong thing to make a friend nor keep one; the man who requires you do so is dearly purchased at a sacrafice. Deal kindly but firmly with all men; you will find it the policy which wears best. Above all, do not appear to others what you are not. If you have any fault to find with any one, tell him not others, of what you complain. There is no more dangerous experiment than that of undertaking to be one thing to a man's face, another behind his back. We should live, act and speak out of doors, as the phrase is, and say and do what we are willing should be known and read by men. It is not only as a matter of principle, but as a matter of policy.

Forgiveness of Injuries.—One day the Caliph Hassan, son of Hali, being at table, a slave unfortunately let fall a dish of meat reeking hot, which scalded him severely. The slave fell on his knees rehearsing these words of the Koran, "Paradise is for those who restrain their anger."

"I am not angry with thee." answered the Caliph.

"And for those who forgive offences aginst them," continues the slave.

"I forgive thee thine," said the Caliph.

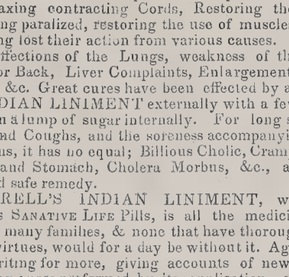
"But especially, for those who return good for evil," adds the slave.

"I set thee at liberty," rejoined the Caliph, "& I give thee ten dinars."

Deaths in Philadelphia.—The interments in the city and Liberties of Philadelphia for the week ending Aug. 19th were, adults 58, children 116.

Advertisements

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT



The best Remcay ever discovered for

External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheam, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, San Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1.00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholic in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. BLAKE'S SANATIVE LIFE PILLS, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either external or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Stanhope's Celebrated

CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

For sale by G W Thompson, Jas S McCleary, Zanesville, H G O Cary, Dresden: D W Culberson, South Zanesville; Jas Bell, Otsego; Claypool & Lynn Nashport; L H Dugan, Duncan Falls; J W Howly, Blue Rock; J Dean, Putnam; Shepard & Brother Taylorsville.

All orders for the above medicine should be addresed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S

Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LEROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the mode of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

FITS! FITS!!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says, "My son has been afflicted for years with epile,tics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken four to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respec to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,

(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly proscribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Lino Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 293, Eighteenth st., N. Y
Mrs. James Berthelf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over Nine Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HART, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market Sts Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 51. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, SEPT. 21, 1848. WHOLE NO. 467.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

—oo—

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

—oo—

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

—oo—

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

TEMPERANCE SONG.

Tune—"shed not a tear."

Drink not a drop from the drunkard's dire bowl,
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop;
For it will poison thy body and soul:
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.
Though in the cup it is spark'ling and bright,
Though it may promise to give thee delight,
Yet at the last like a serpent 'twill bite;
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.

Though gay companions the cup may present,
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop;
Deeply, alas! you the draught may repent:
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.
Take not the cup as you value your life,
For it will kindle contention and strife,
With all the plagues of the pit it is rife:
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.

Though the rich goblet be held to your lip,
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop,
While the old tempter cries, "take but a sip:"
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.
Think of the thousands once blooming and gay,
Who have been led by the syren astray,
And to intemp'rance have fallen a prey:
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.

Heed not the laugh of King Alcohol's throng,
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop,
If they should jeer you just sing them this song—
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.
Though they may call you the dupe of the priest,
Tell them you heed not their scoffs in the least,
For you'd be rather a man than a beast;
Drink not a drop, no, not a drop.

Boxly, Ia., Aug. 19th, 1848. S. W. W.

Letters From the Navy.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Receiving Ships---Recruits---Elopements, &c.

BY L. D. J., OF THE U. S. NAVY.

Those who have had an eye upon the proceedings of Congress, in the early part of the session just closed, may have noticed that a certain amount of prize money has been allowed to the heirs of John Paul Jones—money which it was made appear was due him for prizes which he captured in the Revolutionary War.

My reason for alluding to this fact is, that commodore Jones is regarded, in a certain sense, as the father of the great naval operation of this country—having been the first man who flung out to the breeze the stripes and stars of this nation.

Those who are acquainted with our naval history must be familiar with the hard fought battle between the Bon Homme Richard, Commodore Jones, and the Serapis. From this event 1779, until the present time, our naval forces have continued to accumulate strength and power, until as the "nation's right arm" our ships of the line "walk the waters like a thing of life," defying all human resistance.

If we consider the great dimensions of a "Seventy-Four," especially as we pass from deck to deck, the mind becomes impressed with all the feeling of greatness, inspired by looking upon a vast edifice such as St. Paul's of London or St. Peter's at Rome.

The compliment of hands required to man a frigate, is about five hundred, and a Seventy-Four, about double that number. The "Pennsylvania," the largest ship in our navy, largest at least twelve hundred men, officers and all, to fit her for sea, in times of war.

The expenses of building such a ship is about One Million of Dollars, and her expenses every day, on a three year's cruise, will be more than two thousand dollars, making but little less than a million of dollars per annum. This is the reason why Congress makes annual appropriations of millions of dollars to the navy.

With those who are not much acquainted with these matters, a question would naturally arise—Where are the great number of sailors obtained, to man these vessels when merchant vessels and other craft which require perhaps, from five to eighteen men only, find it difficult to obtain the necessary compliment? The answer is this:

There are stationed at the several navy yards along the Atlantic coast Receiving Ships, for the purpose of making a home for sailors who may be disposed at any time to enter the naval service, where they can remain in quietude until their services shall be wanted in some man-of-wars-man bound out on a cruise. While remaining in these ships, often-times in comparative idleness for months together, they draw the same pay, sick or well, as when in a sea-going-ship.—They enter the service as landsmen. Ordinary seamen, and seamen, with wages, nine, ten and twelve dollars per month. To induce those who are "hard up" without the means to procure an outfit to enter the navy, the government advances the wages of three months to all who desire it.—The landlords—keepers of sailors' boarding houses, being aware of this fact, generally manage so as to take this advance money into their own hands. When sailors come in from sea, it is the custom with many to deposit their money in the hands of their landlords, and he becomes their banker while ashore. Jack often forgets how often he makes a draft, for he is now having what he calls a good time. He cannot endure anything tame—nothing short of high life will answer his purpose, and he "goes it" day and night,—sometimes "the hardest kind." Time flies—and he flies with it until he is struck down from his lofty soarings by his landlord, who says—"I have nothing against you as a boarder, but really it is against my custom to let sailors into me deeper than you are now. By looking over your bills I see you have overdrawn—to the amount of—dollars. This wakes Jack up—he is taken all aback—he is in debt! The landlord sees him somewhat chop-fallen as he pores over the loss of two, three, and sometimes four hundred dollars—the hard earned money of his last voyage! To cheer up his drooping spirits he is offered some two or three extra "tats of grog," and when his host has got him mellowed into the right frame of mind, he says, Come, come, you had better try Uncle Sam once more,—I believe he has always used you well. Come, if you will go now, I will go with you right to the rendezvous ship again,—get your advance money and you will be all right again. This done the landlord brings in his bill which the advance money must pay—leaving perhaps just enough to procure a scanty outfit of certain articles which every recruit is required to have when he is received on board the Receiving Ship. The poor sailor therefore finds himself shipped for another three years' cruise, for they never enter the navy for a less time—with three month's wages already gone. But this is not all. He is now suddenly removed from all the excitement and scenes of revelry in the midst of which he has been passing his days and nights—and from drinking his twelve and twenty glasses a day, he is now confined to his two "tats" a-day, for the naval regulations still provide two gills of Whiskey—one in the morning and the other at noon to all the hands who desire it. On this he cannot "taper off." The immense quantity of liquor which he has been drinking begins to die within him, and away poor Jack goes into a scene a most horrid scene of the horrors!

These Receiving Ships make a home not only for new recruits who may be daily dropping in to the service, but they often receive whole crews at a time—as when a vessel may be ordered home to refit and finish her three years on some other station. It is therefore necessary that they should be the largest class of ships. The "Pennsylvania" the largest ship in the American navy is stationed at Norfolk, the "North Carolina" at New York, and the "Franklin" at Boston—all ships of the line. On board these ships there are not unfrequently to be found hoarded together more than a thousand men, and then diminishing in numbers as they may be called for in drafts to other places to man other ships-of-war bound to sea. Those who are unacquainted with the order of things, might suppose that on board such a Receiving Ship, there might be a good deal of filth and confusion: but such is not the fact. On the contrary there must be some capital defect among the officers which would not be long tolerated if all were not order and neatness throughout every deck of the Ship. The Spar Deck, which is the first, or upper deck, on which the Captain's Cabin is situated, is generally scoured to perfect whiteness with spittoons placed at equal distances all round it, so that it is a crime which is visited with a severe rebuke if not some severe punishment for a sailor to spit on the deck. On the Quarter Deck in front of the Cabin aft of the main-mast is the sailors' judgment seat, or police court. Hence he meets the "officer of the deck," and generally the First Lieutenant, through whom all communications are made to the Captain who sits in his cabin, without any associate officer communing with his own dignity. He issues his orders to the First Lieutenant, who is indeed the executive officer of the ship. Here also is the gang-way by which many a poor sailor has been triced up and received upon his bare back his dozen of the "cats." I have seen them receive the lashes in writhing agony until my heart would ache for the poor fellows. But whipping and serving out grog in the navy are both becoming unpopular, and I think will soon be dispensed with entirely. The Gun Deck comes next in order at one end of which you will find the Ward Room fitted up in fine style and is the home of the Ward Room officers including all the lieutenants, surgeon, purser, and and Chaplain. Below this is the Berth Deck where the sailors hang their hammocks and also take their meals.

On this deck are to be found the Forward officers, including the gunner, carpenter, boatswain &c. But the Master-at-arms and Ship's Corporal, are held responsible for the good order of both men and things throughout the deck, which, at meal time, and when the hammocks are piped down, presents a busy scene. On the forward end of this deck is also to be found the hospital of the ship, fitted up with comfortable cots, and with a Dispensary, containing every variety of medicines and surgical instruments, which long experience has suggested the importance of providing for a ship's company. Another deck below this is called the Aulup Deck—and still another—(for I am describing a Seventy-Four Gun Ship)—built on the ship's bottom, is called the Hold. It is a large and roomy place, larger than any of the decks, as it is all in one room, and contains all the vast amount of ship's stores. All these decks are supplied with officers, whose duty it is to see, as there is a place for every man and every thing, that every thing is in its place. So that order and neatness, beyond what could be imagined to exist, is preserved with tenacious exactness throughout these vast floating edifices, and with officers distributed, as they are, among the men, it is intended that profane swearing, and other immoralities shall be suppressed. But, alas! how great are the violations of our wholesome Naval Rules in their behalf. Were the officers men of God I can plainly see how it is that "the abundance of the seas shall be converted unto God." But while such a great majority of the officers have so little regard for chastity temperance, and the other virtues, how can we expect to see the men under their immediate charge—sailors, who have a constant tendency to go to the bottom of every sin, rise above them in moral excellence?

It is wonderful to know, what I have had good opportunity of knowing, with what sly-cunning old man-of-war's-men will elude detection in smuggling liquor on board, and never perhaps would it become known only by their drinking to such excess as to become noisy and troublesom Receiving ships are usually placed some thirty five or forty rods from the wharf to prevent the "recruits" who may become sick of the job, of three years' cruise, from running away. Yet with all the vigilence of officers and a marine guard, on watch by night and day, many a one succeeds in making his escape. Sailors, who are so used to exciting scenes and active life, regard with horror the confinement and idle life of a guardship. Hardly knowing what they are about, when decoyed into the service by their rapacious landlords. When they come fairly to themselves, now shipped again for three years, and laying all in sight, perhaps, of the houses of revelry and ill-fame, where they had been gratifying their sensual desires and passions, which are made almost uncontrolable by excessive indulgence, they sometimes lose their lives in an attempt to return to their wallowing in the mire! I have known them to leap out of a port holein the winter time, before the harbor was frozen over, and swim a-shore—in which some, attempting to do, have lost their lives!

For some time past I have held an humble office in one of these Receiving ships, from which, by order of government, I have made my escape, and expect in a few weeks to be coasting along the classic and long long known shores of the Mediterranean, the "Great Sea" of the Scriptures. Should you wish to hear from me, your readers may regard this communication as the to a series of letters which it is my purpoc to send you, if my life be spared me, containing a description of the places I may visit, and the impression they may make on my mind.

Ministerial.

Written for the Western Recorder.

LOOK HERE!

I mean you man with a black coat. Are you a minister of the gospel? Then what are you about? Arguing, contending, quarrelling about polics. For shame! go home to your prayers or to your studies if you can't find better employment abroad. Candidates for the presidency did you say? Thousands around you in their present state are candidates for eternal perdition and God has sent you to warn them of their danger. To entreat—to beseech them to become candidates for a crown in heaven, and to tell them that in this election all who will, may be elected. Go about your business then, and leave it for those, who have a less important and sacred station to fill, to dabble in the polluted waters of political strife. But you say every christian should have a regard for the welfare of his country. True—but what threatens the ruin of our country at present more than that violent party spirit kept up by interested men from sinister motives. If you meddle at all let it be as a peace maker. Throw oil upon the troubled waters. Strive with all your might to keep the spirit of religion above the party spirit and political excitement. All your efforts to the contrary notwithstanding, there will be political excitement enough to endanger if not eternally ruin thousands of souls. Quit it then, duty says—conscience says—God says—quit it at once.

S. W. W.

Temperance Department.

Written for the Western Recorder.

TEMPERANCE.

In the village of H———, Va., there has lived an old man for many years. At one time this village was noted for its riotous, and intemperate character. During this time the man above alluded to was the keeper of a tavern, perhaps better styled a drinking house. Alcoholic drinks being much in demand, and this man keeping the most popular house in the village, of course made money; yea, he made much money.

He became the father of four children; three sons & one daughter. When the oldest son was thought fit for business, the father gave him a sufficient sum to start him in commercial life; he soon became a drunkard and failed. The father gave him a second start in business, but he met the same misfortune. And the old man abandoned him.

The next son received from the father a sufficient sum to begin life with, and married. He then migrated west, strove hard for a fortune. amassed money and finally committed suicide. Leaving some property which to the present is a bone of contention.

The third child, the daughter, married, and the father gave her a marriage portion. Her husband became a drunkard and lived so for years; growing his family (consisting of several children beside his wife and himself) entirely on his father in law for support. He finally died with delirium tremens.

The fourth and last child a boy, was detained on the bar and learned to do nothing but to mix and sell alcohol. After the father withdrew from the business, the son continued it; until having disposed of all his liquor and having no money to buy more, he of necessity closed doors. And now having no money and no business wherewith to procure a livelihood for himself and family, (for he had a wife and two children.) he of necessity put himself as an apprence to learn the carpenter's trade, and now follows it for an honest living.

The father still lives, is much afflicted in his old age and is very poor. For several years last the father and youngest son worked together at the carpenters' business.

I have introduced this one family as an illustration of what I believe: that is—that money made by making drunkards will be as hot dollars in the pocket, which are sure to burn their way out.

Being well acquainted with this family, I think I can say with much confidence there is not a shilling left them of their rum selling gains.

ADIEL.

Norfolk, Va.

Western Sketches.

THE WESTERN RESERVE.

When we look back on the past, and reflect on what has been affected by human industry in reclaiming the forest, and spreading civilization over the West, even during the life of living men, we cannot help but feel proud of our country and its form of government, under whose auspices this has been affected; and nothing in my opinion is more interesting than a review of the first settlement of a country. A few facts can enable a reflecting mind to appreciate the services done to their country and to posterity at large, by those who fearlessly remove themselves from civilization, and as it were, commence a new empire where nothing but desolation reigned. With these brief observations, I proceed to write a few lines on the subject which heads this article.

The Western Reserve, as most of your readers are no doubt aware, is that part of Ohio, the proprietorship of which was granted to the State of Connecticut by the United States, to compromise the claims made by that State, in conformity with her original charter—and is what formed her public domain, the proceeds of the sale of which formed the school fund of the State which has operated so much to the benefit of not only her own citizens, but has exerted a powerful influence in diffusing knowledge through the whole of the North and West. This is the country where the sturdy sons of New England have made the forest become a beautiful region, and have achieved more in a quarter of a century, than has been achieved by man in milder regions in three times that period of time. Scarcely any part of the Union was settled under greater disadvantages than was this portion. The first settlers came from Connecticut and Massachusetts, by land, at a time when Western New York and Western Pennsylvania, were both very sparsely settled—and for miles the trees of the forest were their only guide to their destined home.

At this time I speak of, Lake Erie was but partially navigable, and there was very little sale for the productions of the soil till Erie Canal by connecting Lake Erie with the Hudson, gave an impetus to Western agriculture and commerce. Before this time wheat would not sell for twenty-five cents per bushel, and store goods were high in an inverse proportion, as goods had to come by land from Philadelphia, at an expense of twelve dollars and fifty cents per hundred pounds. Under such circumstances it is a wonder that the country was not abandoned; but the mildness of the climate compared with climate of the Eastern States; and the ease with which a man could settle his family on land, the friendly intercourse of neighbors buoying up each other's spirits, and the hope of a better day approaching, were sufficient compensation for all the toil and privations to be borne in the infancy of the settlement of the country. Going from twenty to forty miles to mill; cutting log-heaps to burn by night for the cattle and cows to get round, to be protected by the fire from the wolves and bears; a dense forest of beach and maple, to subject to cultivation; roads to make through forests and miry swamps; rivers to bridge; all these things had but little influence on those people, many of whom left comparative ease and affluence in the Eastesn States, and encountered privations which can be better appreciated than described, especially by one who never experienced them. The first settlement on the Western Reserve was made at Cleveland, in 1797, and was a permanent one; but it was not until after the war with Britain that this country began to be settled rapidly, nor did it begin to flourish much till within the last twenty years.

And now to take a glance at the present. The stranger in travelling through this portion of Ohio, cannot help but admire the level surface of the country, covered with its green carpet, the excellent roads running east and west, north and south, crossing each other at right angles, at every mile and a quarter's distance as you travel. At the center of every township you see two or three places of worship; and at convenient distances from each other, school-houses are scattered over the surface of the country, in each of which schools are kept at least six months in every year. Thus it is evident that the habits of their ancestors prodominate in a pre-eminent degree over the minds of these people, in respect to devotedness to the service of their Maker, and in bestowing the blessings of education on the rising generation. The man of a reflecting mind, in travelling through a country like this, might well consider himself in a favored land—favored by what? By nature? No—but by the indomitable preservance of its inhabitants. The soil of this country is chiefly a heavy clay, producing good crops of grass; but on account of its tendency to produce grass and its heavy cohesive nature, it is not suitable to be cultivated in grain, with the exception of a crop of wheat which may be raised to advantage as a first crop on newly cleared land. Hence dairy business and the raising of stock constitute the chief business of the farmers.

Some sections of the country form exceptions to this observation; but grass farming is generally considered more profitable than the raising of grain. Within the boundry of the Western Reserve are the ports of Coneaut, Ashtabula, Fairport, Cleaveland, Ohio City, Huron, and Sandusky City, all of which are ports of entry, and are accessible to the steamboats and other vessels which navigate Lake Erie. Cleaveland is an incorporated city, and stands at the mouth of the Cuyahoga River, at the terminus of the Ohio Canal, which canal intersects the Reserve of the north line of Stark county; and from Akron, another canal is cut, which connects the former canal with the Ohio River, at Beaver. The Cuyahoga River rises abont twenty miles from Lake Erie, and running a considerable distance southwest, suddenly turns to the north and forms an immense water-power at Cuyahoga Falls; and again at Akron, where the canal has sixteen locks, is a power which is employed to drive several flour-mills, &c.

It might be mentioned that in this tract is situated the Western Reserve College at Hudson, and the Oberlin Institute in Huron county. These institutions are well calculated to exert a strong influence on the moral and religious character of the West, and in associating with the people of this section, may be seen the effects produced by education and religious institutions; drunkenness and swearing being practiced to an extremely limited extent, and scarcely a person can be found in the whole country, either old or young, but what can read and write, and do the common business of life.

What I have written above, is the result of observations during a seven year's residence in this part of Ohio. I left in 1842. In conclusion I will state, that the Western Reserve is bounded on the North by Lake Erie, East by the line of Pennsylvania as far as the 41st degree of latitude, thence by a line due West one hundred and twenty miles; thence North by the east line of Sandusky and Seneca counties to Lake Erie. It was originally divided into eight counties, viz: Ashtabula, Geauga, Cuyahoga, Huron, Lorain, Medina, Portage and Trumbull, which are divided into one hundred and ninety-five townships, five miles square each, excepting those bordering on the lake Lake, where the square form could not be preserved as a matter of course.—Great West.

Miscellaneous.

Late Visit to Pompeii.

Pompeii is getting daily disencumbered, and a very considerable part of this Grecian city is unveiled. We entered by the Appian way, through a narrow street of marble tombs, beautifully executed, with the names of the deceased plain and legible. We looked into the columbary below that of Marius Arius Diomedes, and perceived jars containing the ashes of the dead, with a small lamp at the side of each. Arriving at the gate, we perceived a sentry-box, in which the skeleton of a soldier was found, with a lamp in his hand; proceeding up the street beyond the gate, we went into several streets and entered into what is called a coffee-house, the marks of the cups being visible on the stone; we came likewise to a tavern and found the sign (not a very decent one) near the entrance. The streets are lined with public buildings & private houses, most of which have their original painted decorations fresh and entire. The pavement of the streets is much worn by the carriage wheels, and holes are cut through the side stones for the purpose of fastening animals in the market place—and, in certain situations, are placed stepping-stones, which gave us rather an unfavorable idea of the state of the streets. We passed two beautiful little temples; went into a surgeon's house, in the operation room of which chirurgical instruments were found; entered an iron-monger's shop where an anvil and hammer were discovered; a sculptors's and a baker's shop, in the latter of which may be seen an oven and grinding mills, like old scotch querns. We examined, likewise, an oil-man's shop, and a wine shop lately opened, where money was found in the till; a school in which was found a small pulpit, with steps up to it, in the middle of the department; a great theatre; a temple of justice; and amphitheatre, about two hundred and twenty feet in length; various temples, a barrack for soldiers, the columns of which are scribbled with their names and jests; wells, cisterns, seats, triclinium, beautiful Mosaics, altars, inscriptions, fragments of statutes, and many other curious remains of antiquity.—Among the most remarkable objects was an ancient wall, with a part still more ancient frieze, built in it as a common stone; and a stream, which has flowed under this once subterancous city long before its burial; pipes, of terra cotta, to convey water to the different streets; stocks for prisoners, in one of which a skeleton was found. All these things incline one almost to look for the inhabitants, and wonder at the desolate silence of the place.

The houses in general, are very low, and the rooms are small—I should think not above ten feet high. Every house is provided with a well and a cistern. Every thing seems to be in proportion. The principal streets do not appear to exceed sixteen feet in width, with side pavements of about three feet. Some of the subordinate streets are from six to ten feet wide, with side pavement in proportion; these are occasionally high and are reached by steps. The columns of the barracks are about fifteen feet in height; they are made of tuffa, with stucco—one-third of the shaft is smoothly plastered, the rest fluted to the capital. The walls of the houses are often painted red and some of them have borders and antique ornaments, masks and imitations of marble, and, in general poorly executed. I have observed on the walls of an eating-room various kinds of food and game, tolerably represented: one woman's apartment was ornamented with subjects of love, and a man's with pictures of martial character. Considering that the whole has been under ground upwards of seventeen centuries, it is certainly surprising that they should be as fresh as at the period of their burial. The whole extent of the city, not one half of which is excavated, may be about four miles.—From Williams' Travels in Italy, Greece, &c.

The population of the United States is now estimated at 20,746,000, and the whole personal and real property at $8,264,560,000.

One third of the potato crop in the neighborhood of Pittsburgh, is ruined by the potato rot.

A SCENE IN COURT.

There is a point beyond which human forbearance cannot go, and the most even of tempers will become ruffled at times. At the Assizes held during the past year at Lincoln in England, both Judge and Counsel had had much trouble to make the timid witnesses upon a trial speak sufficiently loud to be heard by the jury, and it is possible that the temper of the counsel may thereby have been turned aside from the even tenor of its way, and the more likely perhaps owing to his feeling himself to be a man of considerable importance since he had married a Dowager Duchess. After this gentleman had gone through the various stages of bar pleading, and had coaxed, threatened, and even bullied witnesses there was called into the witness box a young ostler who appeared to be simplicity personified.

"Now, sir," said the above named counsel, in a tone which at any other time he would have denounced as vulgarly loud, "I hope we shall have no difficulty in making you speak up."

"I hope not, sir," was shouted or rather bellowed out by the witness, in tones which almost shook the building, and would have certainly alarmed any timid and nervous lady.

"How dare you speak in that way sir," said the counsel.

"Please, zur, I can't speak no louder, zur," said the astonished witness attemptipg to shout louder than before, evidently thinking the fault to be his speaking too low.

"Pray, have you been drinking this morning?" shouted the counsel, who now had thoroughly lost the last remnant of his temper.

"Yes, zur," was the reply.

"And what have you been drinking?"

"Corfee, zur."

"And what did you have in your coffee, sir?" shouted the exasperated counsel.

"A spune, zur," was the answer, innocently spoken, amidst the roars of the whole court—excepting only the now thoroughly wild counsel who flung down his brief and rushed out of the court—City Item.

Families of Literary Men.

The Quarterly Review in discussing an object to the Copyright Bill of Mr. Sergeant Talfourd, which was taken by Sir Edward Sudgen, gives some very curious particulars about the progeny of literary men. "We are not," says the writer, "going to speculate about the causes of the fact, but a fact it is, that men distinguished for extraordinary intellectual power of any sort, rarely leave more than a brief line of progeny behind them. Men of genius have scarcely ever done so; men of imaginative genius we might say, almost never. With the one exception of the noble Surrey, we cannot at this moment point out a representative in the male line, even so far down as in the third generation, of any English poet; and we believe the same is the case in France. The blood of beings of that order can seldom be traced far down even in the female line. With the exception of Surrey and Spenser, we are not aware of any great English author of at all remote date, from whose body and living person claims to be discended. There is no other real English poet prior to the middle of the eighteenth century; and we believe no great author of any sort except Clarendon and Shafisbury, of whose blood we have any inheritance among us. Chaucer's only son died childless; Shakspeare's line expired in his daughter's only daughter. None of the other dramatists of that age left any progency; nor Raleigh, nor Bacon, nor Cowley, nor Butler. The granddaughter of Milton was the last of his blood. Newton, Locke, Pope, Swift, Arbuthnot, Hume, Gibbon, Cowper, Gray, Walpole, Cavendish, (and we might greatly extend the list) never married. Neither Bolingbroke, nor Addison, nor Warburton, nor Johnson, nor Burke, transmitted their blood. M. Renourd's last argument against a perpetuity in literary property is, that it would be founding a nobleness. Neither jealousy, aristocracy, nor envious Jacobinism, need be under much alarm.—When a human race has produced its "bright consumate flower" in this kind, it seems commonly to be near its end.

Poor Goldsmith might have been mentioned in the above list. The theory is illustrated in our own day. The two greatest names in science and literature, of our time, were Davy and Walter Scott. The first died childless. Sir Walter left four children, of whom three are dead; only one of whom (Mrs. Lockhart) leaving issue; and the fourth, (his eldest son,) though living and long married, has no issue. These are curious facts.

Most Melancholy Accident.—Some quite young lads of this village, while on a hunting excursion, on Saturday last, came near the house of Mr. Samuel Beyea, when his two young sons went out to see the party, with whom they were well acquainted. In the course of their interview, and while standing together, the elder of Mr. Beyea's sons took the gun in his hand and held it with the breech on the the groud. While holding it in this position, the dog, with which one of the boys was amusing himself by throwing up a dead squirel for it to catch, leaped up, and striking his paw upon the lock, the gun was discharged, and the load of coarse shots, entered the skull of the lamented youth just above the eye, and passed out, we believe, near the top of the head. He fell but arose upon his feet two or three times, and fell to rise no more. He was conveyed to the house, and medical aid immediately procured, but he expired some time during the night. This stroke has fallen like a thuderbolt upon this excellent family. The youth, about fourteen years of age, named William Henry, was a lad of unusual promise.—Goshen Dem.

In the beautiful contrast that the poet Cowper has drawn between Knowledge rnd Wisdom, he says, that, "Knowledge and Wisdom far from being one, have oft-times no connexion." The distinction between the two is one not generally easily perceived or often drawn; and yet it can be done without difficulty. Wisdom is, simply speaking, the proper use & application of knowledge. It is Knowledge rightly put into practice. A man may have knowledge without wisdom, but not wisdom without knowledge.

Words.—Nothing is cheaper than kind words—there is no excuse, therefore, for surliness. If a civil word or two will render a man happy, said a French king, he must be a wretch indeed, who would not give them. Louis Phillippe owes his life to his politeness. It was by bowing to the people as they cheered him, that he escaped being shot by an assassin.

Religious Intelligence.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Cambridge, Ohio, Sept. 18th, 1848.

Br. Bassett: I embrace the present opportunity to say that our labors for Leesburg Circuit, are closed—have spent three years pleasantly on this circuit. Our last quarterly meeting was held at Br. George R. Mecaskey's, we have no society at this place, but he is desirous there should be one. Consequently he has built a comfortable meeting house on his own expense and the 4th Quarterly Conference of the last year, has agreed to give him 11 o'clock preaching in hope that a class will soon be organized.—We had a pleasant meeting. Br. J. W. Case assisted us at the quarterly meeting and labored faithfully, and acceptably. Br. Archibold from the M. E. C. preached in the afternoon a good practical discourse, and I think good was done. Upon the whole, Leesburg Ct., I think is improving. A kinder hearted people I never labored among, and I trust the blessing of the Divine Being will still rest upon them, and preserve faithful and ultimately bring them to the enjoyment of everlasting life.

Yours, truly,

WM. L. BALDWIN.

MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

Kingsbury, Ia., August 22, 1848.

Br. Bassett: We are enjoying refreshing seasons from the presence of the Lord, within the bounds of this circuit. We held a two days' meeting at one of the appointments a week from last Saturday and Sabbath—a number professed to find peace in believing, and six or seven joined the church. And last Saturday and Sabbath, we held another meeting in Laporte, which is still in progress, with encouraging prospects. The membership though small is well engaged, enjoying a great degree of spirituality. Sabbath evening there were from six to eight forward for prayer—some found deliverance, and had a "shout of the King in the camp" and last evening there were about fourteen forward for prayers, and a good state of feeling. Br. Oaks is with me at this meeting laboring as zealously as ever. The good Lord is raising up some more official help within the bounds of this circuit, who are taking hold of the work as exhorters, and preachers. Formerly there were a goodly number of preachers on this circuit. But since I have been here, there has not been until of late an efficient exhorter or preacher belonging to the circuit—most of them have removed, a number of whom are now in the itinerant ranks, engaged on other circuits.

Yours, affectionately,

JAMES GAY.

Conference Proceedings.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

Appointments of the Pittsburgh Annual Conference, M. P. C.

JOHN COWL,—President.

Pittsburgh	Station—	Jas. Robinson.
Allegheny	"	W. Reeves.
N. Brighton	"	J. L Simpson.
Wheeling	"	To be supplied.
Washington	"	G. B. McElroy.
Union	"	A. Marple.
Connellsville	"	Geo. Brown.
Johnstown	"	V. Lucas.
Sharpsburgh	Ct.	J C Hazlett. [Lake.
New Castle	"	To be united with Sandy
Conneaut	"	N Burgess.
Summerville	"	M Stewart.
Susquehanna	"	David Pershing.
Connellsville	"	J I Stillians.
Brownsville	"	H Palmer.
Fayette Springs	Ct.	H Lucas.
George's Creek	"	A Lister.
Waynesburgh	"	N Gillespie, S J Dorsey.
Monongahela	"	P T Laishley, over-ruled,
Morgantown	"	R H Sutton. [&c.
Fairmount	"	S Clawson, N Watson.
Evansville	"	J Wood.
Phillippi	"	G A Compton.
Clarksburgh	"	D R Helmick.
Lewis	"	Geo. Nestor.
Buchanon	"	E Martin.
Braxton	"	I Holland.
Huntersville	"	T G Isherwood.
Greenbrier	"	D D Hughes.
Jackson	"	P Louther.
Freeport	"	W G Williams.
Harrisville	"	W Sexsmith.
Tyler	"	J Sexsmith.
Wheeling	"	G G Collins.
Ohio	"	W H Doe.
Manchester	"	J Scott.
Valley	"	J Chambers.
Pittsburgh	Miss.	T L Forkner.
Sandy Lake	"	R T Simonton.
Washington	"	To be supplied.
Lewis	"	R H Walker.
Fishing Creek	"	To be supplied.
Munroe	"	I P Prickett.

F A Davis received a certificate of his moral and ministerial character in view of retiring from active service in the conference.

G Lanham do

James Hopwood left in the hands of the President.

W P Ellison do
J L Turner do
J Clark do

Jos. Burns without an appointment at his own request.

C S Callahan do
Samuel Hazlett do
A J Waren do
A Shinn Superannuated.
A Barnes do
W A Porter do
H Reger do

W Browning transferred to the unstationed list.

W Ellis withdrawn from the Church.

The P. A. Conference commences its next session in the city of Pittsburgh on the 1st Tuesday of Sept., A. D. 1849.

JOS. BURNS, Sec.

Appointments of the Muskingum An. Conference, Meth. Prot. Church.

Z. RAGAN,—President.

Mt. Vernon Circuit—		J W Suthard.
Zanesville Station—		W H Marshall.
Mt. Zion Circuit—		J Hamby.
Otsego	"	I Thrap. one to be supp'd.
Coshocton	"	W L Baldwin, & C Gray.
Pleasant Hill	"	W W Tipton.
Leesburgh	"	D Kinney.
Wellsville Station—		To be supplied.
Vienna Circuit—		P Kinsley,
Burton	"	E P Steadman.
Warrensville	"	C T Kingsbury.
Granger	"	A R Brown.
Wayne	"	J K Duffy.
Thompson	"	J Jack.
Sandusky	"	W Ross.
Bucyrus	"	J Burnett.
Frederick	"	J S Thrap.
Youngstown	St.	R Andrew.
Delaware Circuit—		W Hatfield.
Licking	"	J Dorcas.
Zanesville	"	E S Hoagland, S Lancaster.
Lancaster	"	J H Hamilton.
Portsmouth	"	S Gee.
Salt Creek	"	M Scott.
Columbia	"	To be supplied.
Morganville	"	G M Scott.
Pennville	"	H T Lawson.
Pisgah	"	J Nichols, C J Sears.
Cambridge	"	G Clancy, O V Warren.
Woodfield	"	N Linder. [ley, sup. asst.
Belmont	"	W Remsburgh, S W Laish-
Georgetown	"	To be supplied.
Newark	"	W Munhall, J S Vansant.
Mt. Pleasant	"	W Duling, S Catlin.
Steubenville Stat.—		J W Case.
Bellview Circuit—		A S Robison.
Cadiz Mission—		J Burns.
Wyandot	"	J H Freese.
Millersport	"	To be supplied.
N. Lisbon	"	To be supplied.
Mansfield	"	To be supplied.
Mahoning	"	To be supplied.
Martinsburg	"	To be supplied.
Conference Missionary—		T Potter.
H L Gray, S Long, Wm Sears		Left in the hands of the Pres't.
A Tracy, T Foster, D Richardson, T B Cushman, W B Moody, J Baker, G R Bowman, W Maynard,		Left without appointment at their own request.

G Waddle, D B Dorsey, J Wilson, J Hoover, Superannuated.

C Springer.

C Caddy, Transferred to the Ohio Conference.

N Burgess, and C Callahan, Transferred to the Pittsburgh Conference.

J Myers, Transferred to the Illinois Conference.

J M Piper, Transferred to the unstationed list.

R S Rice, A K Earl, } Transferred to the unstationed list at their own request.

Simon Elliott, Withdrawn without certificate.

J M Winn, Left under charges.

The next session of the Muskingum Annual Conference, to be held in Brownsville, Licking county, O., commencing on the last Wednesday (29.) of August, 1849, 9 o'clock, A. M.

On motion, a vote of thanks was tendered to the citizens of Cambridge and vicinity, for the very hospitable manner in which they have entertained its members during its session.

JNO. BURNS, Sec.

Sept. 19, 1848.

WESTERN RECORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, September 21, 1848.

Not Pleasant.—A letter we mailed at Lebanon, O., dated 9th inst., in which we furnished for our paper some account of the session of Ohio Conference in that place, and also some account of the prosperity of our cause in Cincinnati, has not come to hand, to this day. This is more than mysterious. A letter also mailed at Cincinnati, on the 2d inst., the day we reached that city, did not reach the post-office here, till the day we got home, viz. the 13th instant, tho' by regular course of mail, it should have reached here on the day next after it was mailed.

[Editorial Correspondence of the Western Recorder.]

Lebanon, O. Sept. 11, 1848.

The Ohio Annual Conference closed its twentieth session in this place, this afternoon. Unbroken harmony prevailed throughout, in the transaction of the business of the conference. We were gratified to find in attendance some five brethren, including some of the ancient men, who were members of the Conference in 1830, when we were first admitted. Br. Robert Dobbins was born the same year with the venerable departed Snethen. He is now considered the patriarch of the Conference, having reached his eightieth year. He retains remarkably well his mental and physical vigor, and, octogenarian as he is, he has once more, with undiminished zeal, received an appointment to the charge of a circuit. By the vote of the Conference, our aged brother was called upon to deliver an address in the conference lovefeast, after the final adjournment this evening. His interesting narrative, and his sage, patriarchal and affectionate counsel and exhortation produced a kind of outburst of sacred enthusiasm which will not soon be forgotten. The parting scene which ensued, was most overwhelming. It seemed very like an adjournment, to meet for next session in heaven! Next to Br. D. is Br. A. M'Guire, now in age, full three score years and ten. His heart seems full of zeal in the work of the Lord, and he has again been appointed Conference Missionary. Next is Br. Wm. Hughey, who did much as a pioneer of our cause in forming and building up circuits, and who is still a firm and efficient laborer. Then, Br. Wm. B. Evans, also a zealous pioneer, but noted especially as author of the "Questions and Answers on Church Government." As pastor of the church in Lebanon, his labors have been decidedly blessed, and his relation is continued another year. Br. Joel Dalbey jr. is the remaining brother to whom we refer, having been a member of this Conference at its first session, though then in his youth. It has pleased the Lord to bless his labors in raising up and establishing a society and congregation in the year past, in the western part of the city of Cincinnati, and he has been returned to take charge of the same another year.

We rejoice in the good degree of prosperity which still attends the Ohio Conference. We "call to mind the former days." We well remember when its District included the entire west, and yet, the Conference embraced a less body of men than at the present time. Since that period, the District has been divided again and again, till we now number nine Conferences in this western valley, and still the original Conference of O. District, seems to be undiminished. A neat increase of a few hundreds has been realized, the past year, and there is an increasing spirit of enterprise in erecting churches and procuring parsonages in many Circuits and Stations. A kind of missionary spirit also is being waked up—a disposition to extend the work in destitute and unoccupied portions. An interesting occurrence took place to-day. The brother who h served as President for three years past, volunteered to take his destination for the comin year at an unoccupied point in a remote pa of the District, as a Missionary field. With prompt magnanimity, the sum of one hundre dollars was made up in the Conference, by mem bers and visiting friends present, as an outfit fo the brother.

A. H. B.

Cambridge, O. Sept. 16, 1848.

We left Lebanon, the seat of the Ohio Confer ence, on the morning of the 12th inst. A ver kind brother conveyed us in his carriage 2 miles to Xenia, where we were to take the publi conveyances homeward. Delaying here several hours for the departure of the evening coach fo Columbus, we made some calls amongst ou friends. Having waited full three quarters of a hour beyond the regular time for the arrival the evening train of cars from Cincinnati, and not having arrived, we were accommodated wi an empty coach, and a solitary passage for th night. This was to us as unexpected as it is u usual. When we came out from home, we we pressed beyond measure with the throng of pas sengers, but now we have to take it alone. first we were inclined to congratulate ourself finding such comfortable and enlarged accom modations, but then we were checked by the ap prehension that something disastrous had possibl happened to the train, or that other passenger by the detainure may be put to serious convenience. It was a most delightful night and the moon was full. We were off at a little after seven o'clock. After a few hours, as the moon approached the meridian, we were surprised by an overspreading darkness! Looking about, we could discover no clouds, and our driver demanded what had become of the moon! And, sure enough, we found that that luminary had retired into a total eclipse, of which we directly found the particulars, by refering to our pocket "Register." At the next village, our driver had to prepare his lamplight. The obscuration lasted from two to three hours. We had good opportunity of viewing it. What added to the interest of the phenomenon, we found the moon to be in close contact, or nearly in conjunction with the planet Saturn, the only planet now visible. It is now in the constellation Pisces, just below or South of the notable Square of Pegasus. By the way, Professor Mitchel, of the Cincinnati Observatory, has lately announced that he has been enabled to discover the reappearance of the rings of that remarkable planet, which have been for several months invisible, by their illuminated side being turned from the earth. He says:

"On last evening, September 1st, two days in advance of the time at which the re-appearance of the ring was expected while the planet was yet some two hours east of the meredian, I caught sight of the edge of the ring, which appeared as a minute line of light extending beyond the planet on either side. A very fine spider's web is drawn across the field of view of the thermometer, [micrometer?] and is seen when illuminated, as a beautiful bright lime on the dark ground of the Heavens. Its diameter is less than half a second of arc, and yet it appeared as a large cord compared with the delicate fillament of light reflected from the edge of Saturn's ring. The thickness of the rings is estimated at about 100 miles, while the distance from the earth is about 900 millions of miles.

"This curious phenomenon will continue visible for about ten days, when the Earth and Sun will again be on opposite sides of the planet of Saturn's ring, and the ring will again become invisible.—The last disappearance of Saturn's rings took place in 1832, and the next will not occur for fifteen years."

We reached Columbus at 5. on the morning of the 13th inst. and after a refreshing delay of two hours, we proceeded on our way, and safely reached home the middle of the afternoon, thankful to find all well. The Muskingum Conference had already commenced its session at Cambridge, but though anxious to be there, we must needs spend one day at home. On Friday afternoon we came to this place by coach, and soon found ourself happy in greeting, and being greeted by numerous friends and brethren.

A. H. B.

The Muskingum Conference closed up its business with a night session on Monday night. As we only enjoyed the privilege of attending the last two days of the session, (exclusive of the Sabbath) we do not undertake to give a detailed account of the proceedings. A list of the appointments, furnished us by the Secretary, will be found in this paper, and the rest will be furnished us shortly, at his convenience. Four members of the Pittsburgh Conference were in attendance; Br. G. Brown, whose health is nearly re-established. He informed us that our "prayer" was heard; that after three weeks pretty severe illness, he recovered strength to go to his Conference at Fairmont; Brs. W. Reeves, P. T. Laishley, and Jos. Burns. We had the satisfaction to hear a sermon by each of the above-named brethren, save the last named. General unanimity prevailed. The members of the Muskingum Conference, with few if any exceptions, are a loving band of brotherhood. Right thankful are we that the brethren as a whole, cheered us with a more liberal lift, for the Western Recorder, in the way of dues collected, that at any previous session. On Monday evening, a spirited occurrence took place in the Conference room. A collection was taken up for the Home Missions, amounting to two hundred dollars. Certainly this was doing well. A similar effort had been made, we learn, in the Pittsburgh Conference, resulting in a sum of rising of one hundred and fifty dollars.

On Tueday, we returned home from Cambridge, in company with our excellent friend, Br. Potter, the Conference Missionary.

A. H. B.

Omission.—In the list of appointments we brought with us from the Ohio Conference, the name of Br. T. Finkbine did not appear. It is our impression that it should stand connected with that of Br C H Williams, at Elm St Mission, Cincinnati, but whether as Assistant, or Supernumerary Assistant, we do not know. The Secretary will please inform us when he writes again, and we will give a corrected list of appointments, when the rest of the Minutes is received.

"Oliver Dyer's Phonographic Report of the proceedings of the National Free Soil Convention at Buffalo, N. Y., is upon our table. It was forwarded us by its enterprising publishers, and professes to give a full and faithful account of the doings of said Convention. New York: Andrews & Boyle, 22 Spruce Street. Price, only 12½ cts., or $8 per hundred. †

The Wreath.—The September number of this beautiful little publication, (containing thirty-two pages) is now before us. It is just the magazine we like, and just the kind of reading matter that should grace the fireside of every family. It is embellished with a fine colored engraving of the "Cardinal Grosbeak, or Virginia Nightengale." "Childhood and its Reminiscences" is, indeed, beautiful. Philadelphia: J. Vancourt. One Dollar per annum. Cheap enough. †

Godey's Lady's Book, for October, is in very truth a splendid number, containing seventy-two pages, making twenty-four extra pages of reading matter. The "Coquette" is a beautiful mezzotint engraving, and is of itself worth the price of the number. The embellishments are numerous—too many, entirely, to notice in detail.—The present number can't be beat. Address, L. A. Godey, No. 113, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia. †

Communications.

For the Western Recorder.

To the Trustees of Putnam Female Seminary.

"The undersigned, in discharging the duty asgned them, have been present, one or both, at te whole of the examination now closed. They ave had every opportunity afforded them, for sting the progress of the Pupils and the faithlness of the Teachers. Incidentally they could ot help noticing the differences in individual upils, and of course the general progress of the hole. But they believe great injury is done to e young ladies in some of our higher Seminaes, by the extravagant praise awarded to their erformances, by examining committees. If your ommittee err on this point it will probably be on te other extreme."

After speaking of the classes in the languages, ainly beginners, and of the lower classes in the nglish branches, and remarking that "there appared evidence of accurate and thorough instuction;" they go on to say:

"With the Mathematical Department your exaiiners were highly gratified. The examination in all parts was rigid. In Arithmetic there were great differences, in the familiarity with the subject, manifested by the young ladies. Some were very good, and a few were poor. The reduction of the statement of the problem to a formula, or in other words the use of the symbols in Arithmetic, showed a regard of the teacher for system, which is rarely found. In Geometry each individual was called on to demonstrate a great number of propositions, and they acquitted themselves well, showing great familiarity with the whole subject, and giving their numerous demonstrations, with a readiness, and accuracy and elegance, that gave great pleasure. A like meed of prase should be awarded to the class in Natural Philosophy. This examination was particularly gratifying, from the fact that it was the first of the kind ever witnessed by the examiners. It is enough to say, that some of the most difficult theorems in Olmsted's Mechanics, were demonstrated with the utmost exactness, by the young ladies of this class. And the examination was the more severe, as the demonstrations of none of the propositions were written.

The examinations in all the higher studies of the English branches, were well sustained. Each one as it occurred was noted as particularly good, and it would be difficult to decide in which of these branches the young ladies appeared to the best advantage. The examiners could detect no memoriter reciting, but in all cases the answers and analyses were given in the language of the pupi. There was satisfactory proof, that the teacher had accustomed her pupils to take comprehensive views of the subjects pursued. They had not only studied, and thoroughly too, paragraphs, sections, and chapters separately, but had been made to view them as parts of a whole, & thus reduce their knowledge to that form in which alone it will be permanent. In the judgment of your Committee, the whole examination in the higher English branches gave abundant evidence of the ability, skill, and faithfulness of the accomplished Principal, and of the diligence and studiousness of the young ladies.

In conclusion, your Committee repeat the expression of the great interest and gratification, with which they have examined the condition, and prospects of usefulness, of the Seminary under your charge. They have no hesitation in expressing their full conviction that the cause of Female Education imperatively requires, in our higher seminaries, just such a course of study as is here pursued. And they assert this with the greater willingness, after having received from the examination just closed, the best evidence of the entire ability of young ladies, of suitable age, to master every subject however difficult, which is contained in the course. All that is necessary, beside skill and ability on the part of the teachers, is that every subject should be studied in its proper place. And this feature has evidently been kept constantly in view, in all the arrangements of the course. With the prominence given to the Languages and Mathematics, your Committee are particularly pleased, and they have no doubt that it will be regarded with increasing favor every year. With the reiteration of their highest confidence in the accomplished Principal, and her able co-adjutors, and their best wishes for the prosperity of the Seminary, the Examining Committee subscribe themselves,

Yours, truly,

I. W. ANDREWS,
W. WAKEFIELD.

Aug. 8, '48."

FOREIGN NEWS,

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMER EUROPA.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Progress of the Irish Trials.—Arrest and Sentence of Chartists.—Escape of O'Gorman & Magee.—State of affairs in France.—Flight of Blanc & Caussidiere.—Decline in Breadstuffs,—The Markets, &c., &c.

[Telegraghed for the Baltimore Sun.]

The following despatch, by telegraph, from our correspondent at New York, has just come to hand.

New York, Sept. 14—10 p. m.

The royal mail steamer Europa arrived at her wharf this morning, at 8 o'clock, from Liverpool, from whence she sailed on the 2d instant, bringing seven days later intelligence than the Hibernia, after a passage of twelve days.

In Liverpool, during the week previous to her sailing, favorable representations as to the crops in the United States had induced holders of breadstuffs to offer American descriptions more freely, and the choice afforded was large.

Corn Market.—At the Liverpool corn exchange on the 1st of September, it was announced that the duty had declined during the week 1s. per quarter on wheat; 6d. per quarter on barley, oats, beans, peas, and rice for each.

Wheat has declined 3d. to 4d. per bushel, on both free & bonded. Flour in sack was 2s., & in bbls. 1s. lower. There was no change in the market value of oats and barley. Oat meal was sold at a decline of 1s. per quarter.

There was a better demand for Indian corn for shipment than on Tuesday.

Provisions more steady, with a disposition on the part of holders to take lower prices.

Cotton Market—Liverpool, Sept. 2.—The demand for cotton continued steady, the trade not holding large supplies. The sales for the week were 39,400 bales. Upland and middling qualities were the same as last week; Orleans had declined 1-8d., but had advanced 1-8d. on lower and middling qualities.

At public sales Sea Island was heavy, prices being from 1-4d. to 1-2d. lower than previously.

IRELAND.

Ireland continued perfectly quiet, and was becoming more tranquil. Lord John Russell had made his tour for the purpose of a personal inspection as to the condition of the crops in Ireland, and as to fears entertained of another famine.

The special commission will not commence to sit as soon as has been expected, as the counsel for the prisoners are to receive an official intimation on the subject a fortnight before the day fixed for its opening. The commission is to be holden at Clonmel about three weeks hence.—The immense mass of documentary evidence has been the cause of the delay. The commission will open at the end of the present month, and it is said that Charles Gaven Duffy will be tried at Clonmel along with the others.

Meagher and several other of the confederate leaders, now in the State prisons, are busily preparing themselves for their defence. Mr. Meagher is less active in consulting with his attorneys than his companions. He has been quite ill in Kilmailham, and is constantly visited by his partner, Mr. Meagher, M. P.

The statement which has appeared, to the effect that Mr. Duffy was greatly depressed in mind and debilitated in frame, is positively contradicted upon the authority of the prisoner.—He can hardly be expected to be in good spirits, but his health is by no means impaired since his arrest. He plays ball, and takes as much exercise every day as the prison affords him.

Wm. Smith O'Brien maintains his nonchalant air to such persons as are permitted to see him. He complains bitterly of not being permitted to read the newspapers, which he declares to be one of his greatest privations. Mrs. O'Brien has taken up her residence at Golden Bridge Spa, to which prison she has access at all hours of the day.

ENGLAND.

Numerous arrests of leading chartists continue to be made at Manchester and the adjoining towns. Five had already been tried and sentenced to fifteen months' hard labor in jail. It turns out that Kirkdale did not assault the peace officers.

Dr. P. Murray McDowell, a leading chartist, has been convicted of uttering treasonable language, and sentenced also to two years' imprisonment.

The announcement that Mr. O'Gorman has escaped, is now positively confirmed. He is known to be in Paris.

It is confidently stated that Mr. D'Arcy Magee, sub-editor of the nation newspaper, has succeeded in making his escape to America, where he has been before, as an editor of a Boston journal.

The steamer America arrived out on Wednesday, the 20th ult. She experienced very severe weather most of her passage, and for five days heavy easterly gales prevailed.

FRANCE.

Flight of Louis Blanc and Caussidiere.—The long expected debate on the report of the committee of inquiry into the affairs of the June insurrection came off on Friday week.

Ledru Rollin, Louis Blanc, and Caussidiere separately defended themselves, the two former in the most indignant terms, repudiating each & all of the charges against them. The latter, more humble, went into details, and contradicted seriatim the insinuations against his honor.

When Caussidiere descended from the tribune, General Cavaignac, as president of the Assembly, read, amidst profound silence, the requisition from the Attorney General of the republic, calling upon the Assembly to authorise proceedings to be instituted against Louis Blanc and Caussidiere, charged with being authors and accomplices in the May attempt at insurrection. Caussidiere then stated that the Assembly must decide immediately.

After an exciting debate, warrants were granted and issued by the police, who proceeded at once to their residences. Louis Blanc has since fled to Belgium. He was arrested at Ghent by the authorities, having no passports. The government, however, released him, and he sailed for England, arriving at Dover on Tuesday.—Caussidiere has not been found. He probably lies perdu in Paris.

Louis Phillippe has applied to France for his private funds.

During the week the French trials were continued.

ITALY.

Austria has accepted the mediation of France in her Italian difficulties, and expresses the hope that through the intervention of the central German power at Frankfort, peace may ensue between the belligerents. This proposition does not perfectly satisfy France, and an armed interference is thought of.

GERMANY.

The German Assembly is engaged in discussing the constitution. The Hungarian troops have been defeated by the Servian rebels with great slaughter. A serious riot had occurred at Vienna, occasioned by an attempt to reduce the wages of the female laborers. The contest between the laborers and the national guards continued for three days. Six laborers were killed, and sixty-one wounded, including the women.—They had taken refuge on an island in the Danube.

Berlin, also, was the scene of a riot. The house of the President had been attacked with fragments of benches, railings, and stones.—Barricades were attemped, and several were killed or wounded.

The Austrian and Prussian ministers had both introduced bills into the assembly to suppress public meetings.

News of the Week.

THE CONFLAGRATION IN BROOKLYN.

Several Hundred Houses Destroyed.

FULL PARTICULARS.

The New York Courier of yesterday morning, received by the Philadelphia boat last night, contains the following account of the calsmitous fire which has laid so large and fair a portion of the city of Brooklyn in ruins, entailing of course at the same time much misery and suffering upon the unfortunate inhabitants. The loss of life is not so great as it was represented yesterday.—Several persons missing, were discovered:

About midnight on Saturday our sister city, Brooklyn, was visited by a wide spread and destructive conflagration, which laid waste several acres in a densely populated neighborhood, and destroyed property to the estimated value of a million and a half of dollars.

The principal part of the business section of the city is in ruins.

The fire was discovered shortly before 12 o'clock, and it had evidently been burning for some time previously, for it burst forth vividly and spread with great rapidity toward the river, the direction of the wind being that way at the time, blowing greatly, it is true, but strong enough to carry the shower of sparks and cinders some distance. In less than half an hour the flames were rising from several buildings, and their progress menaced with the greatest danger the entire neighborhood.

The firemen were quickly at work, but their efforts were paralyzed by the want of water, and they were compelled in many instances to stand idly by and see the destructive element making a rapid prey; or to content themselves with saving such personal property as could be hastily handed out of doors and windows. In this last good office, particularly, they labored unceasingly and rescued much of value; the streets leading to the scene—and supposed to be free from danger—being filled with furniture and goods of every description piled up indiscriminately by those who had rescued them. Amid these piles, too, were not unfrequently to be seen those who had been suddenly hurried forth, and in an hour rendered homeless.

From one until six o'clock the scene was grand beyond description. The wind changed about 2 o'clock and blew more strongly than before, and the showers of sparks and flakes of fire tossed up from the roaring flames, were carried over toward Washington st., giving new and wider limits to the work of the destroyer. Building after building ignited, burned and tumbled into ruins, and the great mass of flame which soared upwards in ungovernable fury, illuminated the heavens and cast its reflections a great distance. Shining against the windows in the buildings on the New York side facing the river, it made them appear as if there was a general illumination of the whole river front.

The irregular arrangement of the streets contributed much to aid the progress of the fire by presenting many points upon which it could act; and the heat of the burning buildings was so intense that the firemen could scarcely get within proper distance of them.

About half-past six o'clock the flames were got under, and the firemen were relieved from their protracted labors. Upwards of three hundred houses, the larger portion of them dwellings, have been destroyed and as many of the occupants were poor and have been thrust forth at once penniless and unprovided for, an amount of positive misery has been created, which it is painful to contemplate.

We subjoin the details furnished by our reporters:

The fire commenced in a rear building used for dressing feathers, by Mr. Drew, who kept a furniture and furnishing store on Fulton street, two doors below Middagh street. It spread in all directions, and destroyed, before it was finally subdued, the greater part of eight blocks of buildings, bounded by Henry, Pine-apple, Concord, Washington, Sands, and Fulton streets.—Three blocks fronting on Fulton, Henry, Middagh, Cranberry and Orange streets, were entirely destroyed, as was also one bounded by Fulton, Nassua, Liberty and Concord streets. The blocks fronting on Fulton, Sands, High, Nassau and Washington streets, and also the one on Fulton, Orange and Pine-apple streets, were only partially destroyed. The dwelling houses in Sands street, past the Methodist church, and in Washington street, from Sands to High, and from High to Nassau street, were all saved except one frame dwelling. The block on Nassau, Washington, Concord and Liberty streets, was all destroyed but three houses on the corner of Washington and Concord streets.

About half-past 12 the fire had made such rapid progress, and there was no water wherewith to combat it in the cisterns, that Mr. Stryker, the chief engineer of the Brooklyn fire department, sent over to New York to solicit assistance. The assistance required was immediately given, the alarm being rung, and the following companies proceeding to Brooklyn: Engine Cos. 2, 3, 14, 20, 21, 30, 34, 38, 42, 44, and Hose Cos. 1, 8, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 22, 25, and 36. Lines werethen formed to the river and water drawn thence to the fire.

The first result of the aid afforded by Y. York companies was seen in the saving of the large block between Fulton and Main streets, from falling a prey to the flames, which having burned down to the corner of Fulton and Henry, would have crossed to the before-named block, but for the stream of water directed upon it by the N. Y. companies. The efforts of the New York force were also directed to preventing the fire from extending beyond the Methodist church on Sands streets, which desirable end was also accomplished. The flames meanwhile, however, had uncontrolled sway for some hours before the water could be brought from the river, and the Mayor and Common Council of Brooklyn finally decided upon endeavoring to arrest the progress of the flames to the northeast, where they were progressing very rapidly, by blowing up some of the houses with gunpowder. This was carried into effect under the directions of Capt. Joshua sands, of the Navy, and the house of Mr. John G. Murphy, on the corner of Concord and Liberty, was thus destroyed. Preparations were also made to blow up some of the houses on Washington street, between Nassau and Concord street, but Mr. Anderson, the Chief Engineer of the New York Fire Department, told he thought that they could save those houses (which were already on fire,) and the powder being withdrawn, the efforts of the firemen were renewed, and the further progress of the fire was stayed.

The extent of surface covered by the burnt district is about eight acres, certainly not more than ten acres.

Fulton street.—Every building on both sides of this street was destroyed, on the right hand side from Henry to Pine Apple st., and on the left hand side from Sanda to Concord st. Almost every building was occupied in the lower part as a store and the uper part as a dwelling.

Henry street.—Every building on the left hand side of this street, from Fulton to Orange, was totally destroyed. These were almost all frame dwellings, there being, however, a few doors from Fulton, a large four story house of brick, just finished but not occupied.

Middah street.—Every building on both sides of this street was destroyed. Principally frame.

Cranberry street.—Every building on both sides of this street, from Fulton to Henry, was also totally destroyed. On the lower corner of this street and Fulton st. was situated Hall's buildings, a large brick edifice, containing a public lecture room, and Odd Fellows and Sons of Temperance lodge rooms. The furniture of the Odd Fellows is said to have been worth $4,000, and was injured.

Orange street.—Every building on the lower side of this street between Fulton and Henry was totally destroyed. On the upper side of the street was a block of very fine brick buildings, extending from half way to the corner of Henry street to the Universalist church on the corner of Fulton and Pineapple, the lower story being intended for stores, and being faced with brown stone, which were unfinished, except one on the corner of Fulton, which was occupied by Mr. Rowland's drug store, and Mr. E. B. Spooner, printer, publisher and editor of the Long Island Star, on the lower floor, and the upper part being fitted up for offices and as a hall for the Society of American Mechanics. This block of buildings belonged to Mr. Cary, and was one of the finest in Brooklyn. It was totally destroyed however. It is believed to be insured.

Pine Apple street.—The only building destroyed on this street was the Universalist Church, on the corner of Fulton—the lower part of which was fitted up and occupied as stores.

Sands street.—About half the block on the upper side of the street, from Fulton to Washington street, is destroyed, including the Sands st. Methodist church.

High Street.—Both sides of this street, from Fulton to Washington st., are destroyed, except the houses on the corner of Washington street. The houses were of wood.

Nassau street.—The whole of the buildings on both sides of this street, from Fulton to Washington, were destroyed, except the one on the lower corner of Washington street. On the upper side of the street, at the corner of Liberty, a Baptist church was destroyed.

Liberty street.—Both sides of this street, from Nassau to Concord were destroyed. On one side was a row of fine four-story brick houses which belonged to Mr. Cary, who is one of the largest losers by this fire. The house on the corner of Liberty and Concord street, belonging to Judge Murphy, was blown up.

Washington street.—One frame house between High and Nassau streets was burnt and six very fine brick houses from the corner of Nassau, running up towards Concord, were also burnt.

Concord street.—The lower side of this street, from Fulton to Washington, all but the corner of Washington, was destroyed.

The Presbyterian Church on the corner of Fulton and Pine Apple was uninjured, although opposite to the Universalist Church, which was destroyed. The Savings Bank on the opposite corner of Fulton and Concord streets was uninjured, although the house adjoining in the rear on Concord, occupied by Mr. Fegeman, was on fire and was saved only by the strenuous exertions of the fire department. The Lyceum House on the corner of Concord and Washington was uninjured, being probably preserved by the blowing up of Judge Murphy's house opposite.

We have omitted to mention that the Williamsburg Fire Companies were also on hand and rendered efficient aid, as did also a company from Jersey.

As usual upon such occasions, accidents occurred, but we are happy to say that thus far we have been able to get positive information of only one that has proved fatal. A young man by the name of Edward Croly, a native of Ireland, about 23 years of age, was run over by Engine No. 20 of New York, the wheels passing over his head and crushing his skull so badly, that he lived but a short time. He was not a member of the company, but run as a volunteer.

It is also rumored that a New York firemen was drowned at Catharine Ferry, but we cannot vouch for its accuracy.

We are also informed that a Mr. Kirby, member of Brooklyn Hose Co. No. 14, was severely injured by the falling of a wall, which injured several other individuals, but none seriously, as far as we could ascertain. A child was also said to be killed in the same manner.

The bridge on the New York side of the Fulton Ferry gave way in consequence of the immense human weight which crowded upon it, despite the remonstrances of the ferry masters, and several persons fell into the water; but we cannot hear that any loss of life or limb attended this accident.

Any quantity of thieves and rogues, of every description, were detected, preying upon property of the houseless sufferers, and dozens of them were sent to the police office, and Kings county jail.

A detachment of the Marine guard, under Brevet Captain Shuttleworth, was placed at the disposal of the mayor, and rendered great assistance in the preservation of propety from flames and thieves. The City Guards and the Columbia Rifles, also assisted in the duty. The Armory of the Pierson Guards and the Union Rifles was destroyed, and they saved their arms with difficulty.

As to the amount of property destroyed, &c., &c., the Herald says:

The nearest we could reach by a comparison of all the estimates, is nine hundred thousand dollars. The number of buildings destroyed varies from two hundred and fifty to three hundred, and the families that have been thus suddenly deprived of shelter, will number two hundred. Allowing three to each family the number of persons rendered houseless, makes 600.—The area over which the fire extended is, as was stated in yesterday's Herald, about ten acres.

Captain Sands, of the Navy, with a force of men from the flag ship North Caroliua, labored assiduously in supplying the engineers with powder to blow up various buildings.

A letter of Sunday, to the Philadelphia Inquirer, says:

The spectacle which Brooklyn presented this morning was deplorable and heart-rending.—Women were running hither and thither, looking for their children; children were screaming for their lost parents; the friends of a N. York firemen, supposed killed by the falling of some walls, were searching for his body; pile upon pile of furniture, broken and smashed in pieces, were heaped at every corner. All was confusion, disorder and horror. It presented the appearance of a sacked city in every respect.

Railroad Route Decided.—The directors of the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati Railroad have been several days in this city, for the purpose of deciding which of the two surveyed routes to Columbus should be adopted After a careful and patient review of the whole matter, hearing all sides and cautiously consulting costs 'profits,' &c., they have determined on what is known as the western or Delaware route. This route leads thro' or near Worthington. Delaware, Cardington, Gilead, Iberia, Shelby and Greenwich, to Cleveland.

The Board are undetermined whether to go through Elyria, Oberlin, &c., or more southerly through Berea. The line selected crosses the Sandusky Railroad 12 miles north of Mansfield: is remarkably straight; of an easy grade and 3 miles shorter than the other line. With a side cut to Mt. Vernon, it will drain all the western part of the State and will pass through one of the finest agricultural regions in the world. It is contracted to be completed in about two years.—Cleveland (Ohio) Plain Dealer.

Arrival of the Great Comet.—The great comet whose revolution round the sun is accomplished in 292 years has at lenght appeared. It was first seen, says the Boston Courier, by Dr. Peterson of Altona, on the 7th of August, and is now small in appearance, but bright and easily discernable. It passed its perihelion during the last week in July, and is now descending into the Southren hemisphere, and approaching the earth, but will not come so near it as in 1264. It is expected to be visible in the evening, in the Northeast, not far from the constellation of Castor and Pullux.

Loss of Insurance Companies by the Brooklyn Fire.—The New York Journal of Commerce says that the following list may be relied on as accurate, of the insurance companies affected by the fire at Brooklyn on Saturday night, with the loss incurred by each:

'Equitable company loses $10,000; City 23.000; Firemens' 10.000; Ætna 3,000; Howard 4.500; North American 8.000; Eagle 1.400; Mutual Safety 20.000; Long Island 60.000; Brooklyn 85.000; King's County Mutual 50,000; Jefferson 7.000; Hartford 800; Protection, do., 12.000; National 3.500; United States 14.000; Buffalo 7,000; Williamsburg 2,000; Franklin, Philadelphia, 50,000."

The express, of Monday evening says:

The loss by the fire has been overstated, and will hardly exceed $700.000 if indeed it reaches that sum. The Long Island Insurance Company issues a circular stating that its capital is unimpaired, and that all losses will be met promptly."

Two shocks of an earthquake were felt in this city and vicinity, on Friday night, about half-past ten o'clock. The first shock was very slight, lasting nearly a minute. It was more of a tremulous motion than a shock. About one minute after, another shock was felt—a short, quick jerking undulating motion, accompanied by a rumbling noise, like that made by a carriage or heavy vehicle passing rapidly over the pavement. The second or principal shock lasted only five or six seconds. In New Jersey its duration is stated to have been eight or ten seconds. On Long Island, the second shock and the sound appeared to come from the north, passing southward.—N. Y. Sun.

No Slavery in California.—The people of California have taken bold ground against the introduction of Slavery into that Territory. We find in the California "Star" of March 25th, a long article on this subject. It declares there is not a slave in that territory, and no power of the United States Government can establish slavery. The people will not permit it, and every slave taken there, we are given to understand, will be liberated as promptly as he would be in Canada or New England.—N. Y. Sun.

Mrs. Tann, of Pittsford, Pennsylvania, who had been of unsound mind for some time past, killed two of her children on Sunday by holding their heads in a copper kettle of water. She adduces as a reason the fear that they might be neglected and suffer through life.

Death on the Stump.—The Albany Argus contains a letter stating that a meeting of gentlemen of the Free-Soil party, held at Schroon Lake, Judge Tyrill commenced speaking in a highly excited and energetic manner, and had proceeded about twenty minutes, when he said: "Gentlemen, you have the prayers of all good men & good Christians in your behalf: God is on the side of the Barnburners!" Suddenly his voice fell, he sank back into his chair and fainted. He was supported by persons who were near him, and carried down stairs, but did not breathe afterwards. He had expired instantly.

An Incident.—We learn from the Boston Transcript, that the Artist, Southworth, who sustained heavy losses by the burning of the Ocean Monarch, met a Brooklyn friend in Boston the other day, who insisted on making Mr. S. a present in money, in consequence of his loss. Mr. S. took the money, and in a few hours afterward heard of the Brooklyn fire, by which his generous friend had been a heavy loser, when he immediately repaired to his hotel and paid the money back, with interest in the way of kind words of condolence and sympathy.

Another Strike.—The operatives in several of the Allegheny (Pa) Factories suspended operations again on Monday. They now demand the former rate of wages, with the ten hours.

Phenomenon.—A gentleman informs the Newark Advertiser, that, while at the Ocean House, all being calm, waiting the rising of the moon, just as her whole disc was visible above the ocean, a ship "far out at sea," with all sails spread, moved slowly across her face, and apparently impressed upon it the free and beautiful outline of every sail and spar. Slowly indeed, it moved along, too soon disappearing, but while it lasted, it was a most beautiful phenomenon.

"Dependence is a poor trade to follow."—That depends upon what you depend on. A man may sometimes come to something by following a poor trade—provided he follows it well. "Diligence is the mistress of success." There is no doubt of that; but prevent scandal, it ought to be stated that the intimacy between them is purely Platonic; they never sleep together.

Late from Hayti--Wholesale Executions

By an arrival at Boston of the Mary Chilton, from Jeremie, the Traveller has received intelligence from Hayti to the 14th ult. Affairs are in a most melancholy condition. During the stay of the President in Jeremie, twenty days, five men were shot and fifty were imprisoned. Five were executed the Thursday before the vessel left which brings the intelligence. The scene is described as a very affecting one.

The condemned were brought into the public square, dressed all in white, with their arms tied behind. Hundreds of women, in tears, were kneeling and beseeching for mercy. A detachment of about four hundred of the army, with their officers on horseback, were drawn up to carry out the fatal sentence. The first victim was an old man, the father of thirteen children. The soldiers fired one by one, and seven balls entered his body. Another, the son of an old woman, a doctress, who had, by her skill, saved the lives of many blacks, which was, however of no avail. The first ball entered at the side of the young man and came out at the back. He told the General who commanded at the execution, that America was a country of liberty and humanity and would not look coldly on and witness such barbarous bloodshed. Six more balls were then put into his body, and even after he was down they riddled his body with balls. After the whole five had been thus executed, their friends were allowed to place their bodies in coffins, when they were followed by large crowds of people to their graves. Even the soldiers of the President's army were in tears at the sad spectacle, which so alarmed the President that he left the town at 12 that night, it was supposed for his house near Aux Cayes.

It is stated that previous to the execution the President was waited upon by a large number of the relatives of the condemned, mostly women, praying for mercy. The President came out dressed in a red vest, which he always wears upon execution days. While wives and mothers were pleading for the lives of their husbands and sons, the President stood laughing at them. Two executions took place after the President left Jeremie, and two more were to be executed on the Thursday after Capt. Fales left. A leading merchant, named Chassayne, who had been condemned to be shot, and who would not fly on account of his wife's sickness, had, so far, escaped death by bribing the General in command, at the rate of $100 per day. It is feared that as soon as his means are exhausted he will be given up to the executioner.

The following extracts from the letter of an American merchant at Jeremie will best explain the state of affairs there:

"Owing to the stagnant state of affairs, there are few or no sales; small collections and little security; coffee is very high and scarce and very difficult to be obtained; a large stock of provisions on hand and no purchasers; shops all shut and the goods deposited in the stores of foreign merchants to secure them from pillage, with which we are threatened every night; thus you can form some idea of the state of things."

The writer, after stating that he shall come home as soon as possible, says:

"I do not think Hayti will longer be habitable for civilized man. The same deplorable event which has befallen Jeremie is suspended over every town in the French part of the Island, and the approach of the President is the signal for its desolation; and woe to the poor fellow who may have prevented his flight; they have determined to exterminate the mulattoes, and are effectually accomplishing their object. They even propose driving off foreigners, and establishing black merchants."

Captain Fales has on board the Mary Chilton six refugees from Jeremie, one of whom, named Bosee, was under sentence of death, but escaped on board the Mary Chilton in female apparel.—The other refugees are Bosee's brother-in-law and his own sons, and Mesere and son. Two or three have brought some property with them, but the others are nearly pennyless.

The Trade in Child Murder.

We see that the London press is calling attention to the poisonings which have become a practice among certain classes of the English population, for the sake of gain, by frauds on insurance offices and burial clubs; and shows reasons for supposing that the known cases are but a few instances of a crime which is to a wide extent undetected, especially in the factory districts. At Preston, where 23,000 members are enrolled in three burial societies, statistics suggest a very dark suspicion. Only healthy children are accepted for enrolment, and sixteen weekly payments are exacted before the benefit can accrue to the person who enrols a child; accordingly, between the ages of two months and six months, the mortality among children enrolled, is less than that among the unintered children of the general population; but after six months it is greater; that is, the healthier children, who are insured, die off faster than the uninsured and sickly.

"The average amount granted at death," says the London Daily News, "is between eight and nine pounds; and it is not unfrequent to find that an infant is enrolled in three or four different burial clubs, so that the premium for its death become as much as twenty pounds. In the manufacturing districts where the mother of a family is working in a factory, the infants are intrusted to hired nurses, who often take charge of the children of several families at the same time.—Now, it is by no means rare to find these nurses speculating on the decease of their charges, by enrolling them in burial clubs, in the expectation that a speedy death may insure a large return for investment. It is unnecessary to allude to the easy methods by which this gambling speculation may be realized, for negligence, with the aid of Godfrey's Cordial, will soon terminate the life of a child, under circumstances in which criminal intention could not be construed. These pecuniary inducements to negligent treatment act upon parents themselves. The chaplain of Preston jail mentions the case of the sickness of a child of a nurse, who, being offered by her sympathising mistress the services of her own medical man, declined them on the ground of the enrolment of the child in two burial clubs, and the consequent gain by its death.

"This systematic child murder appears too horrid for belief, but unquestionable facts prove that is, alas, too true."

Insurrection Among the Women.—A female convention has just been held at Waterloo, New York, at which was a "declaration of rights," setting forth, among other things, that "all men and women are created equal, and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalianable rights." The list of grievances which they exhibit, concludes by expressing their determination to insist that women shall have "immediate admission to all the rights and privileges which belong to them as citizens of the United States." It is stated that they design, in spite of all misrepresentations and ridicule, to employ agents, circulate tracts, petition the State and national legislatures, and endeavor to enlist the pulpit and the press in their behalf. This is bolting with a vengeance.—Worcester Telegraph.

A Frightful Accident.

On Saturday there was an accident at the laying of the corner stone of the Catholic Church, corner of 8th street and Avenue B, N. York. It had been announced, the Herald says, that Rev. Bp. Hughes would perform the services of the laying of the corner stone of a new Cath. Ch., to be erected at the corner of those streets, and drew a large crowd together to witness the ceremony. The walls of the basement had been built, and and the floor laid over the timbers. About 4 o'clock, from eight hundred to one thousand persons collected on this floor, when one of the walls about 8 inches thick and not very strongly built, gave way, and was pressed out by the weight upon it, precipitated the mass of human beings into the basement below, a distance of twelve feet, and against the front wall, amidst the falling of brick and timber. The scene of confusion and despair that followed can more easily be imagined than described. About fifty persons were taken out more or less hurt. Some were very seriously injured. Two were taken immediately to the City Hospital. One man named Patrick Kelly, was so crushed that what he had eaten for dinner was forced out of his mouth. Altho' there were no outward bruises, yet he died soon after, probably from some internal injuries. One boy had both legs broken, and there is very little reason to believe that he will recover. Jane Burns had her right leg badly fractured. Hector McDougall also had his right leg badly fractured. Another man was injured in the spine.—Dollar News.

College in Liberia.—Some time since, Mr. Pinney, formerly Governor of Liberia, made some statements before a meeting in the Broadway Tabernacle, to the effect that two hundred slaves had been manumitted, near Natchez, Miss., by the will of Captain Ross; that the estate to which they belonged, was valued at about $400,000, and that all the property, real and personal, except the slaves, who were given their liberty, was destined first to defray the expenses of their passage to a settlement in Liberia, and the residue, estimated at $100,000, was to found a college on the same coast. The fact has since been communicated to him, that this ample property has been so wasted by protracted litigations, that the present cotton crop of the estate will scarcely pay the debts. Happily, while these hopes have proved delusive, a movement is now making which promises fair to repair the previous loss, and found on the shores of Africa an institution which shall grow up with the people and mould their character.—N. Y. Jour. Com.

Railroad to Lake Erie.

The Mad River and Lake Erie Railroad is now completed to Springfield, which, connecting with the L. M. Railroad, gives a railroad communication from Cincinnati to Sandusky. The trip is performed in fifteen hours. Travellers can breakfast in Cincinnati and sup at Sandusky. By an arrangement recently made by the two companies excursion tickets may be purchased during the month of September to and from Sandusky City for $10—to and from Buffalo $16.

The time and distance between Cincinnati and New York, and the intermediate points, are thus summed up:

	Hours.	Miles.
Cincinnati to Springfield,	6	84
Springfield to Sandusky,	10	134
Sandusky to Buffalo,	19	249
Buffalo to Albany,	24	325
Albany to New York,	10	147
Total,	69	939

This is a fraction short of fourteen miles to the hour.—Lebanon Star.

The new Diving Bell.

We gave a partial description of a diving bell that had been invented and built by a young Boston Mechanic. Our account was as full as we had liberty to present at the time. Since then the bell has been practically tested, and the result has been entirely satisfactory, fully answering the sanguine anticipations of the inventor.

This bell is the invention of Mr. J. Avery Richard, foreman in the philosophical instrument establishment of Mr. J. M. Wightman, Cornhill, and reflects great credit on him as a mechanic capable of working out the competition of his own brain, and applying it practically to the purpose intended. It is entirely original with him. It is a close instrument of cast iron, and weighs 6000 pounds, with space enough of lead balance, if required. Its form is an elongated globe, seven feet in height, by five in diameter, with glass windows on four sides, and two arms of a peculiar construction passing through its sides, at the control of the operator. With these arms articles can be hooked up or grapled, and a chain cable attached to a sunken wreck. There are tubes for the admission of fresh, and to carry off the foul air, and for conversation. The interior is spacious enough to contain three persons, and two can work in it any necessary length of time, with perfect ease and safety.

Yesterday the bell was taken on board the Lighter sloop Noddle, Captain Cumminsky, who, with the inventor and his assistants, proceeded down to Light House Channel, where the instrument was rigged and hoisted overboard, and sunk to the depth of one hundred and twenty-six feet, where it remained one hour. When hoisted up and opened, it was found to be perfectly tight, notwithstanding the immense pressure to which it had been exposed at this great depth. Every thing being satisfactory to Mr. Richards and his party, Mr. Samuel Rumrell, who has had some experience with Mr. E. A. Child, entered the Bell, and the head was screwed on, and let down ninety-five feet, at which depth they remained one hour and twenty minutes. A free conversation was kept up with them all this time through a tube 133 feet in length. They were very anxious to be let down to the bottom 126 feet, but it was thought prudent not to let them any lower the rigging not being suitable in case of any accident, and not working quick enough from so great a depth. They make quite a favorable report of their doings "down below." The air was perfectly pure and easily breathed. They were as comfortable as they would have been in a small close room. They could see objects, by calculation, from 14 to 20 feet in all directions. The arms worked perfectly easy. The light was sufficient for them to see to read a newspaper, and the small figures on an ivory thermometer. The thermometer on deck stood at 86 degrees: in the Bell when lowest, 85 feet, it indicated 68 degrees, a difference of 18 degrees.

The operation of the compass was noted, but there was a doubt about its traversing perfectly. Further experiments will be made when the bell is so rigged that it will have a rotary motion. When they came to the lowest depth the Bell was struck with a hammer, and the blows were distinctly heard by those in the sloop; but the sound seemed to come from a very great distance. When about 70 feet down, they passed into a stratum of deep green water, which slightly dimmed the light in the Bell; it was like the effect of a cloud passing over the sun.

The only annoyance they encountered, was from a large sculpin, who was detected several times rather saucily looking in at one of our windows. The operation of the instrument on the whole, was entirly satisfactory. Mr. Richards is quite confident he can attain a depth of 200 feet with perfect safety, and that his Bell will bear a pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch; but at this debth his arms cannot be worked so easily, in consequence of the great density of the water. It is believed that the descent here made was from 20 to 30 feet lower than has ever been accomplished by man—60 or 70 feet is the lowest depth before attained, that we have accounts of. The lowest depth ever gone in England was about 70 feet. Persons went down to the deck of the Royal George, sunk in the British channel, for the purpose of blowing her up, which was partially accomplished.

The advantages of this bell over all other heretofore constructed, are its capability of being worked in deep sea, is simplicity, the ease with which it can be operated, the view it affords of objects, the comfort and perfect safety it secures to the operator, and the indefinite time he can remain under water.

We look upon the invention as a curious and valuable one, another step in the progress of art over the element of water, one which will lead to the revelation of many of the mysteries and riches of the great deep, which have hitherto been hidden from our sight;

"Where rolls the huge leviathan o'er sands Glistening with shipwrecked treasures."

NOTICES.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Washington, Pennsylvania, August 13, 1848.

Br. Bassett: You will confer a favor, by publishing for me, the following plan of presidential visitation:

Fairmont circuit, October 7th and 8th.
Clarksburgh circuit, October 14th and 15th.
Lewis circuit, October 21st and 22d.
Braxton circuit, October 28th and 29th.
Buchanan circuit, November 4th and 5th.
Lewis mission, November 11th and 12th.
Phillipi circuit, November 18th and 19th.
Evansville circuit, November 25th and 26th.

The superintendents will please give me notice, either by letter, addressed to this place, or thro' the 'Recorder,' where my meetings are to be held. The above appointments I will fill, if the Lord will. May the Great Head of the Church be with his servant and aid him in his labors. Yours in Christ, JOHN COWL.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Br. Bassett: By leave of Divine Providence, I will fill the following appointments:

Mt. Pleasant circuit, October 8th, 1848.
Georgetown circuit, October 15th, 1848.
Woodsfield, circuit, October 22nd, 1848.
Belmont circuit, October 26th, 1848.

Z. RAGAN.

OHIO DISTRICT.

Br. Bassett: Please publish the following list of appointments:

Darby mission, October 7th and 8th, 1848.
Richwood circuit, October 14th and 15th, 1848.
Mad River mission, October 21st and 22nd, 1848.
Miami circuit, October 28th and 29th, 1848.
Clarksburgh circuit, November 11th and 12th, 1848.
Bainbridge circuit, November 18th and 19th, 1848.
Bourneville circuit, November 25th and 26th, 1848.

JOSEPH WHITE.

GENESEE CONFERENCE.

The Genesee Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will commence its nineteenth session at Loon Lake, Stuben county, New York, on the first Tuesday in October, 1848, at 10 o'clock, A. M. It is presumed that a committee will be in waiting, at the place, as usual, to assign ministers and delegates their respective places for entertainment. A full attendance is desired. And we shall be happy to greet any of our brethren from sister Conferences, who may be pleased to favor us with a fraternal visitation. The post office address of the Conference is "Patchin's Mills, Stuben county, New York." E A WHEAT, Secretary.

Elba, August 21st, 1848.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego, N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange sh. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgomery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attaal county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

T Finkbine,	O.	J Cowl,	Pa.
C Wamsley,	"	G B M'Elroy,	"
J White,	"	M Stewart,	"
L D Johnson,	N Y.	H Wright,	Ill.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

From	For	Pays to Vol.	No.	$ cts.
E A Wheat,	S M Short,	10	34	1 00
T Shipp,	J Fitch,	9	29	3 00
Dr W W Bridge,		10	28	2 00
T Foster,	J Howard,	9	17	2 00
J Hamilton,		10	4	1 00
S Jasper,		9	52	2 00
L Clarke,		"	52	2 00
J Warner,		"	50	1 00*

* An uncurrent note, and double postage charged.

Credits of moneys received at the Pittsburgh, Ohio, and Muskingum Conferences, will now be published without delay.

Br. T. Shipp, we have credited J. Fitch in full. You sent $4 instead of $3. What shall we do with the other dollar?

Dr. Bridge, we would gladly remedy the irregularity of the mails, complained of, if in our power. The paper ought to reach you regularly the same week it is issued.

Advertisements

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

HAVE the pleasure of announcing the earliest arrival of a CHOICE and EXTENSIVE ASSORTMENT of

FALL & WINTER GOODS,

Consisting in part of Dry Goods, Groceries, Queensware, Hardware, Hats and Caps, Boots and Shoes, Leather, Paints, Oils, Dye-Stuffs, Iron, Nails, Glass, Stationary, Music, Jayne's Family Medicines and other Drugs.

We are prepared to offer GREAT BARGAINS in WOOLEN GOODS, Dress Goods, Boots Shoes, and Heavy Domestics.

Our stock of Prints, Ginghams, De Laines, Alpaccas Lyonesse and Coburg Cloths. California Plaids, Cashmeres French Merinos, Roselind Plaids, Italian Lustres and Gala Plaids, is very full, and the styles new and very pretty.

Cambrics, Jaconetts, Mull Muslins, Edging, and Lace, of all kinds, in great variety.

Hosiery, Shawls. Hkf., Linens, &c. &c. CHEAP.

We deem it unnecessary to go into a tedious detail. We say with confidence that our stock is the best that will be seen in Putnam this season, and that our prices can and shall be made satisfactory to our Customers. We respectfully tender our thanks to our large circle of patrons and request a continuance of their favors. To the public in general we say, examine our stock if you please, whether you buy or not, we take pleasure in showing our goods.

WANTED

Every description of Country Produce, for which the market rates will be paid.

We hope that the present plentiful crops will enable our debtors to square up old accounts. And we respectfully request them not to pass us by whether able to pay up or not.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co.

Putnam; September 18, 1848.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE Winter Term of the Putnam Female Seminary will commence Wednesday October 4th, and continue 25 weeks.

The design of this Institution, in its present organization, is to elevate the standard of Female Education.—It has a Primary, Academic and Collegiate Department. Through its excellent Principal, Instructresses and Professors, it provides thorough and solid instruction, for the various stages and branches of education, deemed requisite to the formation of a useful, accomplished, christian character.

The full Collegiate course occupies four years, and has it is believed, a wider range of studies, and a more thorough system of instruction, than any similar institution in the State: embracing, not only the English branches taught in our best Colleges, but also the Latin and German Languages, for which there is no extra charge.

Young ladies, however, who do not wish to study the languages, have every facility for pursuing the English branches, which is furnished by any female Seminary.

Parents, who wish to give their daughters an accomplished and thorough education, are assured that the very best advantages for this purpose are here enjoyed; and that no pains will be spared, by competent and efficient teachers to render the situation of the young ladies, who may resort to the Institution, in the highest degree pleasant and conducive to their mental and moral improvement.

The location is delighful, the building ample, the accommodations excellent, and the facilities for quiet and retired study such as are rarely furnished.

The expenses are put at the lowest possible rate. For Board, Washing and a separate room for every two pupils, lighted and warmed, (while the season requires it) so as to be a convenient and retired study, the charges are $2,00 per week for the Winter term, and $1,75 for the Summer term. Those who choose to do their own washing will be allowed a deduction of 25 cts per week.

TUITION.

Winter Term $12,000 Summer Term $8,00

EXTRA STUDIES.

Music with the use of the Piano $30,00 per year.
(Instruction in vocal music to all pupils gratis.)
Drawing and Painting $15,00 per year.
French 12,00 "
Latin and German, as they are embraced in the regular course, no charge.
Tuition in the Primary Department. $10,00 per year.
This department will hereafter be taught by Miss Alice Cone.

For further particulars, inquiries may be made of the Principal, Miss M. Cone, or any of the undersigned Trustees of the Institution.

A. Kingsbury, President.

Solomon Sturgis,
Alva Buckingham,
J. C. Guthrie,
C. C. Convers,
C. P. Buckingham,
} Trustees.

A. A. Guthrie Secretary.

References: Dr Smith, President Marietta College; Drs Stowe and Allen, Lane Seminary; Rev E Goodman, Cincinnati; Rev W H Beecher, Euclid; Hon B Lane, Sandusky City; Rev H L Hitchcock, Columbus; Rev F S Howe, Chillicothe; and the Rev H Little, Madison Ia. n51

September 6, 1848.

DR. WM. MILHOUS,

OFFICE Main Street Putnam, opposite the residence of P. Munch, Esq.

Dr. M. devotes special attention to diseases of the TEETH, and is prepared to perform every variety of Dental operation, in the most modern and improved style and durable manner. Having secured the assistance of Mr. C. Kruger, an experienced and skilful operative, Dr. M. has no hesitation in saying his "PLATE WORK" will not be surpassed in neatness and durability of style, by any thing in the west.

Ladies will be waited upon at their residence if preferred.

Putnam, May 3, 1848.

TO THE AFFLICTED, READ AND BE WISE.

ALL those afflicted with that most distressing disease the PILES, can obtain certain relief, and in nineteen out of twenty cases a positive and permanent cure, by calling at S. B. Johnson's Agency, Putnam, and obtaining a box of Johnson's Vegitable Pile Ointment. This remedy has been in use in this vicinity for several years. And it is admitted by all who have tested its virtues bote superior to anything of the kind ever before offered to the public. A large number of certificates, from these cured by the use of the Vegitable Ointment, could be given in proof of its virtues, but it is deemed unnecessary

S. B. JOHNSON.

Putnam, April 17, 1848.

Thoughts of an Itinerant;

Or Brief Chapters on the Church of Christ—Its Positive Institutions—Its Means of Grace, and Social Obligations; designed as a Family Companion for Methodists. By Rev.

Levi R. Reese.

A few copies just received, and for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents single, $5 per dozen.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

CLEANING & RENOVATING LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on West street, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart silk dresses.

Poet's Corner.

A SISTER'S LOVE.

There is a clear and precious gem
Not brilliant like the star of day,
Yet clustered in that diadem,
Which owns not time's relentless sway;
Its radiance sparkles from above,
Its earthly name—a sister's love!

Tho' orient pearls, by friendship strung,
Around thy brow are pendant;
And though by love's own finger hung,
One diamond shines resplendent;
Yet which that potent spell can prove
That test which tries a sister's love!

Blest was that spot which owned its power,
That consecrated spot where He,
Whom the angelic host admire,
Indulged in sweet society,
And bade the stroke of death remove,
To sanctify a sister's love.

Bind on your heart this jewel rare,
Oh, ye to whom this praise is given!
Nor let rude hands your treasure tear,
But hold it as the gift of heaven!
Till death its shinning worth improve,
And angels crown a sister's love!

Reformatory.

Written for the Western Recorder.

USE OF TOBACCO.

NO. VI.

FRIEND BASSETT: My two preceding numbers have shewn what is the opinion of medical men of the use of tobacco. I now propose to add some testimony by way of cases with which I have become acquainted. I was present when Mr. Glass, late of this village, called on his physician and requested him to prescribe some remedy as a preventative to bilious colic, to which he was so subject, that he said he could not live a year longer, unless it could be prevented. His medical adviser who had himself experienced the good effects of abstinence in his own person, enquired if he used tobacco. Mr. Gloss replied that he did, and found relief, occasionally, from its use. The doctor told him if he would abstain from the use, he would doctor him for all cases of the disease he had after, for nothing.—He did abstain, and for years after he had no return of bilious colic. Since his removal from this place I cannot say what has been his case.

I was told by an elder in the Presbyterian Church in Fayette county, Ohio, that their pastor had been subject to bilious colic for years, and when he abstained from the use of tobacco as a matter of principle, his disease left him.

I was told by another minister, that he had formerly used tobacco, and was subject then to bilious colic, that when he gave up the use of tobacco, he had no more of the disease, though years had intervened. Neither of these gentlemen, had suspected tobacco as the origin of the disease, until by abstinence it seemed to affect them.

An old and respectable citizen of this place commenced using tobacco for water-brash in his youth by the advice of a physician. Twelve years since his health was so infirm he apprehended he could not live another year. I myself advised him to try abstinence from tobacco, a month or two after he abstained and within a few weeks after, he was able to do his day's work at a laborious employment, and walk two miles to, or from, the place of his job, and has for years since enjoyed a good measure of health for his age. Previous to his abstaining he had to lose a fourth of a day whenever he went to or from his job.

Another told me his health had failed very much which he attributed to the effects of age, though then not so old as that he would naturally expect so much decline. I advised him to try abstinence from tobacco. He did so for 6 months, and he enjoyed as good health as he ever had, as he told me, having all his life been a hard-working man. He treated his resolution to a few chews of tobacco, and without any reason he could assign to himself, again returned to the habit. He had gained twelve pounds in flesh in the six months.

I know a gentleman of Zanesvile who smoked excessively for many years and was a thin, spare man until a few years since, he quit the habit, because his allowance of cigars for the day (18) was gone before dinner. He has since been a very healthy man, and is now forty pounds heavier than when he smoked.

Another in this county left off drinking spirits and chewing tobacco for six or eight months, and gained twenty pounds of flesh and as much in proportion in strength. He returned to his former habits and soon was the victim. He died.

Another left off tobacco, tea and coffee and gained forty pounds. He was a very stout man naturally, but he said he could lift more than before his reform.

All these cases go to prove that diseases of a very serious nature are a consequence of the use of tobacco while the afflicted person does not suspect the habit to have given rise to them.

I could multiply cases within my own knowledge but these may suffice.

A REFORMED TOBACCO USER.

Putnam, O.

Communications.

MR. EDITOR:

You will confer a favor on me by publishing the following from the N. Eng. Puritan, being part of the introduction to a collection of music called National Psalmist, the whole article is thought of so much importance as to be published in that influential paper in parts but is I fear too long to find a place in yours,

A PRESBYTERIAN.

Putnam, Sept., 1848.

CHURCH MUSIC.

Among the multitude of books of tunes which have been in quick succession issuing from the press, we know not of a single one that has been prepared with an intelligent view either to the preservation of the church style in choral music, or to furnish available congregational tunes; they are filled almost entirely not merely with choir tunes, but with choir tunes which in melody or in harmony, or both, are of a secular character; and if, peradventure, a genuine people's tune is occasionally found, it is very probably spoiled by transposition, or by a modern or secular harmony, without suitableness or consistency. The old wine has been put into new bottles. "The Old Hundredth," for example, has been usually printed in A, (quite beyond the compass of men's voices,) and sometimes as high as B flat, or C.—"Let the Old Hundredth," says Dr. Gauntlett, "be sung in the key of F when the highest tone is C, or in the key of G when the highest tone is D, and the men will be able to sing the melody with the women and children; but change the key to A or B flat, and one half of the male congregation present are foundered, and compelled to remain silent unless they force their voices upon the E or F tones in a way which is not very solemn in effect, and not often practicable." Most of the old tunes that have been published have been similarly transposed. Add to this, that it has been supposed that the air of a tune should always be the upper part, and sung by females or boys, and the direction has often been given, "The air must be invariably sung by treble voices." Now while this is generally true in choral music, it is by no means so in reference to congregational singing. Both the melody and the harmony of a congregational tune should be so constructed as to admit male voices on the air; the melody should be within their compass, and the harmony should be free from such progressions as produce forbidden consecutives by inversion. Indeed we are fully of the opinion that congregational singing can never succeed unless it be mostly unisonous; the parts may and ought to be sustained by a choir, but the singing of the people must be mostly confined to the leading air, or melody, in unison or in octaves. This is also, so far as we know, the opinion of the most experienced musicians and others who have examined the subject. "Surely," says Dr. Gauntlett, "it is not to be tolerated that this most primitive order of hymning the praises of the Eternal shall be denounced and overturned; and that before being fitted for singing hymns, we must become half instructed in the wailings of a contra-tenor part, or the mysterious grumblings of the bass. But yet it has been supposed by some who do not know the difficulty of choral music, that it is not only practicable to sing congregationally in parts, but also in the use of difficult choir tunes. Such a state of musical cultivation has been urged on congregations as would enable them to do this; and some congregations, driven by the abuses which unhappily so often find their way into choral associations, have made the attempt. It is hardly necessary to add, that a failure in such cases has sooner or later been the result, and then, congregational singing has been condemned as impracticable. With almost as much propriety might a man be condemned for not flying when he has only the ability to walk. On the other hand, members of choirs and such persons as have made some progress in musical cultivation, but who are not aware that there is such a thing as a distinct and available congregational style, say, in view of the difficulties of choral performance, that it is quite impossible for a congregation to sing with tolerable decency, and that any attempt at this style of psalmody is barbarous and horrid. But these two parties are no less at variance with one another, than with the truth; they are equally in error; for, while congregational singing can never succeed in the use of choir tunes, it is certainly quite practicable and comparatively easy, if it be confined to the right kind of tunes, and these, for the most part, in unison. We add with confidence, that it is not merely practicable and easy, but also eminently useful; it is a most delightful, appropriate and effective form of the service of song in prayer and praise; it may be sublime and devotional in the highest degree, enkindling or awakening in the soul holy emotions of love, gratitude and joy, which can neither be reached or drawn out in any other way. Such the congregational singing described by the poet:—

> The multitude of angels with a shout
> Loud as from numbers without number,
> uttering joy;
> Heaven rang with jubilee, and
> Loud hosannas filled th' eternal regions;

and such the singing of the "ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands" described in the Apocalypse of John.

It may be thought that we are disposed to attach an undue importance to congregational singing; but let it be remembered that while we would urge this as essential form of church music, we would urge with equal earnestness the importance of choirs and of the choral style. Choirs are not only necessary to sustain congregational singing, but the higher style of forms of musical expression can never be reached without them. We feel certain that delight and edification may unitedly result from a well directed choral performance in religious service. To reject a choir then is to reject the beauty and truth of musical art; it is to reject the means of spiritual progress and happiness; it is to reject one of the most effectual means of music's influence, to clip its wings, and limit its power over the heart.—While, therefore, we are decidedly friendly to congregational singing, we are equally so choir singing; they are both legitimate forms of musical truth, derived from the nature of the art, and sanctioned by common experience and by the word of God.

The history of psalmody in New England certainly proves the two following things: 1st. If congregational singing be left to itself, it will not only decline, lose its interest and its power, but become intolerable, a hindrance and not a help to devotion. Such was the state of things in N. England at about the beginning of the eighteenth century. See extracts from preface to Walter's collection, page 2. 2d. If choir music be exclusively cultivated, and congregational neglected, the singing is in great danger of degenerating to a mere matter of musical exhibition or amusement. So it was in the time of Billings, and so, if we mistake not, it has continued to be, and is now, to a great extent, in the American churches. We may add, also, as another lesson derived from the same source, that the cultivation of church music in any form leads naturally to the formation of choirs, and to the choral style.—These two forms of church music are both necessary to the highest ends contemplated; they are interwoven with each other, and are mutually dependent. Choral music, if it does not kindle the fire of its devotions at the altar of the great congregational offering, may soon cease to burn, at least with a heavenly flame; and to leave congregational singing unaided by the ministrations of a well regulated choir, is "to leave it to be moulded into any shape that the passions of a changing world may please to impress upon it—is but to resign it to decrepitude and old age."

Narrative.

LOST IN THE WOODS.

In Chambers' Edinburgh Journal we find the account of a surveyor being lost for five days in the forests of New Brunswick, 'without food.'—The story is a thrilling one, and vouched for as true. After narrating his wanderings for two days, the sufferer continues as follows:

I had felt, without at that moment comprehending them, very evident symptoms of approaching weakness. I frequently heard the sound of voices quite distinctly, and stopped to listen. I whooped! but not a sound in reply. The stream murmured on its bed, the wind rustled amongst the leaves, or whistled through the long grass; but that was all; everything else was silent as the grave. In a short time after, a most extraordinary illusion occurred. My attention was first attracted by distinctly hearing a tune whistled in the direction of the river; and, on looking round, I saw through the trees an Indian with two squaws and a little boy. My joy at the sight may be readily conceived; their canoe, I thought, could not be far off; and I already fancied myself seated in it, and quietly gliding down the river. I hallooed! but to my utter amazement, not the slightest notice was taken, or reply made. The Indian, with folded arms, leant against a tree, and still continued to whistle his tune with philosophic indifference. I approached, but they receded, and appeared to shun me; I became annoyed, and persisted, but in vain, in trying to attract their notice. The dreadful truth at length flashed upon my mind; it was really no more than an illusion, and one of the most perfect description. Melancholy forbodings arose. I turned away, retraced my steps, and endeavored to think no more of it. I had turned my back upon the vision, but as I retreated its accompaniment of ghostly music for some time continued to fall upon my unwilling ear like a death-knell. A sort of mirage next appeared to me to spread over the low grounds, so completely real in its effect, that frequently, when expecting to step over my boots in water, I found that I was treading on long dry grass to be convinced of the truth of which, I frequently felt with my hand. My first vision was undoubtedly the result of delirium tremens, brought on by exhaustion; but whether the latter arose from the same cause, or from real external phenomena, I cannot well determine.

I continued my toilsome journey along the alternately flat and tangled, or precipitous banks of the river, which, from being now swollen, left me no beach to travel on. I crossed a large brook, which, mistaking it for the Odell, led me to suppose myself but a very little way from the settlement, (in reality, upwards of twelve miles off.) I had not advanced a great way further until I suddenly dropped down. Supposing I had merely tripped and fallen, I got up, and endeavored to continue my march, but again staggered and fell. I got up a second time, & leaning against a tree, in the hope of recovering from what I at first imagined to be temporary indisposition, again made several fruitless attempts to walk, until at last the appalling fact forced itself upon me, that I had really lost my strength; and as any further exertions of my own were now impossible, my case was indeed hopeless, unless discovered by some of the party, who I had no doubt were by this time in search of me; or, what certainly did appear improbable, by some persons going up the stream to lumber. Under these circumstances, I thought it best to endeavor to regain the banks of the river; but owing to my weak and disabled condition, I could scarcely do more than drag myself along on my hands and knees, and was consequently overtaken by the night and a sharp frost. I took shelter behind the roots of a fallen tree, and pulled off my boots, for the purpose of pouring out the water, & rendering my feet as dry as I could make them to prevent their being frozen; after which, from my feet being much swollen, I found it quite impossible to get them on again. I lay down excessively fatigued and weak; yet other sensations of suffering, both mental and physical, kept me, through another dreary night of twelve or thirteen hours, in a state which some may possibly conceive, but which I must confess my inability to describe. There was a sharp frost during the night, against which my light jacket & trousers were but a poor protection. On the morning of the 8th, when it was sufficiently clear, I discovered that I was not more than a hundred yards from the bank of the river. On endeavoring to get up, I was unable, and found both my feet and hands frozen; the former, as far as my ankles, felt as perfectly hard and dead as if composed of stone. I succeeded however, with a good deal of painful exertion, in gaining the bank of the river, where I sat as long as I was able with my feet in the water, for the purpose, if possible, of extracting the frost. The oiled canvass haversack in which I carried my sketching-case I filled with water, of which I drank freely. The dreadful gnawings of hunger had by this time rather subsided, and I felt inclined to rest. Before leaving the bank of the river, I laid hold of the tallest alder near, and drawing it down towards me, fastened my handkershief to the top, and let it go. I also scrawled a few words on two slips of paper, describing my situation; and putting each into a piece of slit stick, threw them into the stream. I next moved back a little way amongst the long grass and alders; and striving to be as calm and collected as my sufferings and weakness would allow, I addressed myself to an all-seeing and merciful Providence, and endeavored to make my peace with Him, and place myself entirely at His disposal—feeling assured that whatever the issue might be, whether for time or eternity, it would undoubtedly be for the best. I trust I was not presumptuous, but I felt perfectly calm and resigned to my fate.

I lay down amongst the long wet grass having placed my papers under my head, and my haversack, with some water, near my side. My weakness seemed to favor the most extraordinary creations of the brain. I became surrounded, especially towards evening, with a distinct assemblage of grotesque and busy figures, with which, could I have seen them under different circumstances, I should have been highly amused.—Yet do I believe them to have been a great relief from the utter loneliness that must otherwise have surrounded me, as it really required an effort to establish the truth of my being alone. I passed another long and dreary night; and from its being rather milder, had some little sleep, although of a distressing and disturbed nature, and not in the least refreshing. The morning of the 9th arrived, and I could then with difficulty support myself even on my knees. Still, after extraordinary exertions, I procured a fresh supply of water, and lay down—I thought most likely never to rise again. A violent burning sensation in the stomach had now come on. A few mouthfuls of water allayed it, but brought on violent spasms for five or ten minutes, after which I had, for a little while, comparative relief. In this state, gradually growing weaker, I continued until the morning of the 10th. During the night it rained in torrents, which, although in some respects inconvenient and disagreeable, had in a great measure drawn the frost from my feet and hands, which, as well as my face, had become very much swollen.

In the course of the morning I thought I heard the sound of voices. I raised my head a little from the ground—all I could now accomplish—and looking through the alders, I saw a party of men and some horses on the opposite side of the river, and scarcely a hundred yards distant from where I lay. My surprise and joy were of course excessive; yet I had of late seen so many phantoms, that I was quite at a loss whether to consider it a reality or not. When at length convinced, I discovered alas! that both my strength and voice were so completely gone that I could neither make myself seen nor heard. All my exertions were unavailing; and my horror and disappointment may be readily conceived at seeing them depart again in the direction from which they had come. I had now given up all hope, and once more resigned myself to my apparently inevitable fate. Three hours had passed when I again thought I heard the sound of horses feet on the bed of the river. On looking up, I saw they had returned to the same spot. My efforts to make myself heard were once more renewed, and I at last succeeded in producing a howl so inhuman, as to be mistaken by them for that of a wolf; but on looking up the stream, they saw my handkerchief, which I had fastened to the alder, and knowing me to have been missing before they left the settlement, surmised the truth, and came at once to my assistance. I was taken into a cabin built at the stern of the tow-boat, in which there was a small stove. They there made a bed for me, and covered me with blankets and rugs. They made me a sort of pap with bread and sugar, which they offered me, and also some potatoes. I declined their kind offering, but begged to have a little tea, which they gave me, and I went to sleep. The tow-boat had to continue her voyage some distance up the river with her freight, after which we returned, and got to Campbell's late in the afternoon, where I met with every kindness and attention. The house of Mr. Campbell, to which I was brought, was but a very ordinary log-house, yet with all its simple homeliness I left quite comfortable, seeing I was surrounded with the most perfect cleanliness; and the good dame was, from long experience, well skilled as to the case she had to deal with, at the same time saying mine was much the worst she ever had under her care.

I have thus endeavored to give an impefect sketch of my wanderings during the period of more than five days and nights, without either food, fire, or shelter from the inclemency of the weather. My recovery has been rapid; although I at first suffered a good deal, both from the returning circulation in my hands and feet, and after partaking of food. I was in a few days sufficiently well to be removed down to the mouth of the river Tobique, where I found my poor wife anxiously awaiting my arrival. I must in conclusion, say that my wondertul escape ought at least to convince me that God is ever merciful to those who sincerely put their trust in HIM.

An Old Pastor.

The Rev. Thomas Snell, D. D., pastor of the Congregational Church in North Brookfield, Mass., preached his half-centuary sermon on the 27th of June. It was founded on Acts 23: 22, 23; "Having therefore, obtained the help of God," &c. In this sermon he gave a simple account of what the church and town were when he first came there, their present condition, and the means used to effect the change.—He also made some interesting statements. Some of them will be very encouraging to young preachers.

"After fifty years study, and after having written sermons to the amount of several bushels, he found more matter yet untouched than he did when he had preached only six months. He did not therefore feel the need of preaching philosophy or history, or any species, of moonshine, in order to supply his hearers with fresh material.

"He had preached on fifty-one Thanksgiving occasions in that town, and had written for the purpose forty-eight sermons; and as a worthy example of attendance on public worship, a gentleman was then present who had heard fifty of those discourses.

"The speaker had preached some sermons the second time, when not an individual was in the congregation who had listened to them at first; and what was a little amusing, he had been complained of for personality in sermons which were written before the complainer was born.

The number removed by death, during Dr. S's. ministry, is 925; the number of marriages solemnized, 364; and among others, that of a young man, at the marriage of whose great-grand father he officiated. The church had been called in council in 135 instances, 129 of which he had attended in person. On the 2,610 Lord's-days in fifty years, he had been able to preach 2,596."

In reply to the question how he had remained fifty years the pastor of one church in this age of ministerial change, he stated 1. That he always wished to gratify the wishes of his people so far as he could consistently. 2. He had never supposed that wisdom would die with him, but if with any body, with his people. 3. He had nevsuffered himself to take sides with any faction that had arisen in his church or society. 4. He had always been content to preach the simple doctrines of the cross and the duties that immediately grow out of them.

Men are like bugles; the more brass they contain, the farther you can hear them. Ladies are like violets; the more modest and retiring they appear, the better you love them.

MAN'S ABILITIES.—No man know what he can do till he is fully resolved to do whatever he can. When men have thought themselves obliged to set about any business in good earnest, they have done that which their indolence made them suppose impossible. There are several abilities unknown to the possessor, which he hid in the mind, for want of an occasion to bring them forth.

The best read man is not always the man who has read most, but he who has best reflected upon, and digested, what he has read; as the healthiest man is not he who eats most, but he who takes just food enough to digest well. Crowding too much knowledge into the mind at once, is like over loading the stomach: it only serves to oppress and weaken it, instead of strengthening & invigorating. The rule about eating will hold about reading: the proper quantity of the proper food, and at proper intervals.

A new locomotive lately put on the Portland Rail Road, Maine, ran at the rate of 60 miles per hour, for short time, between Saco and Portland.

Illinios contains 730.000 inhabitants, and produced last year 4.909,000 bushels of wheat. and 33 000.000 bushels of corn. What a country, which was forty years ago a wilderness!

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT

The best Remedy ever discovered for
External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheum, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, Sun Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1.00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholic in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. BLAKE'S SANATIVE LIFE PILLS, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either external or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Sherbe's Celebrated
CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

For sale by G W Thompson, Jas S McCleary, Zanesville, H G O Cary, Dresden: D W Culberson, South Zanesville; Jas Bell, Otsego; Claypool & Lynn Nashport; L H Dugan, Duncan Falls; J W Howly, Blue Rock; J Dean, Putnam; Shepard & Brother Taylorsville. D Reddington, No. 4, College Hall, Cincinnati, G E Pryor & Co., Wheeling, Va Russell & M'Doll, Ohio City, Thos M'Crary Beaver, Pa G M'Cullough, Richmond, Ia Jos Northcraft, Madison, Ia J M Tharp, Dayton, Ohio Humphrey & Langworthy, Columbus Ohio, Chas Cook & Co, Maumee, City, O D Spefford, Erie, Pa J Watson, Massillon, and by all authorized agents in every town in the United States and Canada.

All orders for the above medicine should be addressed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

CLEANING & RENOVATING
LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S
APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisnness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

FITS! FITS!!
A GREAT DISCOVERY!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says, "My son has been afflicted for years with epilaptics, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth." Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respec to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 25 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 12 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years, Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y
Mrs. James Berthlof, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HATT, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States.

Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.

L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market St. Pittsburgh.

H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

THE WESTERN RECORDER.

VOL. IX---NO. 52. PUTNAM, MUSKINGUM COUNTY, OHIO, SEPT. 28, 1848. WHOLE NO. 468.

The Western Recorder

Is Published every Thursday,

AT PUTNAM, OPPOSITE ZANESVILLE, OHIO

OFFICE ON MAIN STREET.

A. H. BASSETT, Editor and Proprietor.

JOHN MCD. KENDALL, PRINTER.

TERMS.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance Two fifty at the close of the year. Payments within three months will be considered in advance.

All letters and communications must be addressed, to the Editor, post paid, except such as contain funds, and directed to Putnam Muskingum Co. Ohio.

Itinerant Ministers and others, who collect from subscribers and remit to us as much as ten dollars within the year, shall receive a copy of the paper free.

Itinerant ministers and preachers, not acting as agent, can have the paper at one dollar.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Western Recorder.

Br. Bassett: Permit me through your medium to present to your numerous readers a Missionary Hymn entitled

The Voice of the Jew and Gentile.

Send the gospel to the Heathen,
Who are sunk in nature's night:
And to each our woes are crying,
Send to us the gospel light.

Send it by your contributions,
If yourselves can't hither come,
Let no sectual facination,
Make you keep your aid at home.

Send it by your freely giving,
Not of necessitated strife,
But as those in light that's living,
Send to us the word of life.

Send it now, each tribe are crying,
To our lost and ruined race;
Send it, for our souls are dying,
For the lack of saving grace.

Send it now to Jew and Gentile,
Is our one united call,
To every nation, tongue and people,
Every creature great and small.

Send it e'er the foul deceiver,
Drags us to the burning lake,
Show compassion now if ever,
Show it for the Saviour's sake.

H. C. M'BRIDE.

Roseville, O. 30th August 1848.

Communications.

Written for the Western Recorder.

I AM NOT HAPPY,

There are many professing christians who frequently say I am not happy; and they as frequently ask, "why am I not happy?" Such persons have no right to expect happiness, and I can tell them, I think, why they are unhappy. Such persons are generally what may be termed negative christians, that is, they do no one any positive harm; and may be termed harmless christians. But they do no positive good, and consequently can not be called useful christians. How is it posible for such to be happy, when they do not throw aside selfishness long enough to carry bread to the hungry—water to the thirsty—and clothes to the naked? Selfishness is no component part of our holy religion, but on the contrary Christ and his apostles condemned it. Christ, when representing the Judgment scene, applauded only those who had fed the hungry—clothed the naked, &c. Yet there are christians who think to be happy while they are expending the Lord's time and money too on themselves, while the poor are suffering and the afflicted distressed. Is it not a principle in every day's experience, that happiness is the effect of action? If I do an act of kindness to any suffering fellow, do I not realize a satisfaction which tells me, it is better to give than to receive? Do I not always feel happy when I have done right? and on the contrary, do I not always feel unhappy when I have not done right? Who does not know this? Hear the words of the Master: "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." Look to the happy christian, and you will see an active christian. Look to the active christian, and you will see a happy christian. The idea of praying for the poor and needy and not alleviating their wants, is mockery in the sight of heaven. To hear a man praying for missions and never giving a dollar to prosper them, is folly. Such are like the character James gives us, he said to the hungry and the naked: be filled—be clothed; but he gave not.

It would be well to remind such christians, however, that happiness is not religion, but rather the effect thereof. Then what is religion? St. James tells us: "pure and undefiled religion, is to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Here it is defined as being negative & positive in its properties. First—doing good.—Second—doing no harm. Christ spoke of his religion as imposing a burden and yoke upon his disciples. He also said: "If any man will be my disciple, let him take up his cross and follow me daily." Can any christian expect to go to Heaven "on flowery beds of ease?" My dear brother and sister, come wake up! 'tis time you were done looking for happiness; look first for grace to help you discharge your christian duties—live up to your christian privileges and I will warrant you happiness. Perhaps you have been praying for a long time to be happy without realizing your desire; now change your efforts a little, and in connexion with your prayers go to work—work in the Sabbath-School—prayer meeting—class-meeting—cabin of poverty—chamber of sickness. Go to work distribute Tracts—Bibles, &c., and my word for it, the first day's labor will bring a happy night to you.

Think of this—the laborer toils first and then receives his pay. Christ says: "go work in my Vineyard, when the sun goes down he will pay thee. Will you not try him? go try now.—Only try and you shall not despond for happiness.

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but they that do the will of my father which is in heaven."

ADIEL.

Norfolk, Va.

Ministerial.

A Frank Acknowledgment.

Speaking of ihe 'American Pulpit,' the Richmond Christian Advocate says:—"Its notices and sketches are comprehensive and preachable—we have tried one or two of them."

We like the honesty of the acknowledgment, whatever some may think of the honesty of the procedure. Some people make a great ado about borrowed sketches, but we see no reason why a man who is unable to construct properly leading topics of discourse for himself may not have liberty to adopt those of others. He who can put life and energy into the dry bones" commonly met with in "skeleton books," must have something of the preacher about him. Nevertheless, a man who thinks for himself will seldom use the sketch of another, except as a mere suggestive, for the arrangement of his own thoughts and expressions. The themes of Gospel preaching are so identical, that he who studies to avoid similarity of arrangement to others in his discourse, commits a great folly, and gives himself much trouble to no good end; but he who depends upon others exclusively for the minuteness of his plans, does himself great injury, by the constraint such a course must necessarily put upon his own powers of arrangement and elucidation. On the whole, it is somewhat difficult to decide whether ministers are more profited than injured by the use of 'sketch books.' When they do use them, however, it is certainly frank in them to say so to their hearers; and, in such cases, though one may have his opinion of the original ability of a preacher shaken, and hear all his good things with a suspicion that they are borrowed, he must come to the conclusion that the preacher has some honor along with his pilfering.—Methodist Prot.

Rev. Sidney Smith, in speaking of the prosy nature of most sermons, said, "they are written as if sin were to be taken out of man like Eve out of Adam, by putting him to sleep."

If two angels came down from heaven to execute a divine command, and one was appointed to conduct an empire, and the other to sweep a street in it, they would feel no inclination to choose employments.—Newton.

Western Sketches.

From the Religious Telescope.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MORMON TEMPLE.

BY BISHOP HANBY.

Nauvoo, Ill., Aug 26, 1848.

Br. Edwards:—

In my last I promised to give your readers a general description of Nauvoo, and the great Mormon Temple. I will now endeavor to redeem my pledge.

Nauvoo is situated in the State of Illinois, on the eastern bank of the Mississippi, at the head of what is called the Desmoine rapids; about 30 miles below Burlington in Iowa, and two hundred miles by water above St. Louis. The rapids at this place form a kind of horse shoe curve, and Nauvoo is situated right in this curve, consequently a great portion of the city is bounded by the Mississippi, and nature here combined with art would have rendered this location a very formidable one. Doubtless Joe Smith had a view of this fact, in making his selection. The rapids are twelve miles in length, at the foot of which are the towns of Warsaw in Illinois, and Keokuk in Iowa.

Nauvoo, in the days of Mormon glory contained at one time, within the corporate limits, (say six miles square) about twenty-five thousand souls. Now, the present population will not, perhaps, exceed four thousand. It is estimated that nearly one thousand of the small houses in the city have been destroyed, moved away, &c., and I presume that about one half of the houses now to be seen are unoccupied. This part of the state is said to be very healthy, and the city is filling up very fast. A rare opportunity is here presented for emigrants. Good houses can be had at a mere nominal rent, and purchased upon very reasonable terms. Good two story brick houses with cellars under them for from two to three hundred dollars. Farms of one hundred acres, well improved, for about six hundred dollars. The Brethren have a small society organized here, and a small meeting house, though the house is not all paid for, and indeed it is quite too small for the place.

I shall now undertake a description of the Nauvoo Temple. It is situated upon the highest bluff of the city—perhaps one hundred feet above the low lands thereof; about one mile from the Mississippi, and may be seen from twelve to twenty miles distant in almost any direction.—The material of which it is built is limestone of a very white and transparent quality—resembling the New England marble, admitting of a very beautiful polish. The building stands east and west precisely, with front end westward, facing the river. The length of the temple is 129 feet—breadth 90 feet. Highth to square 90 feet; highth to the upper floor in the cupola is one hundred feet, and from the basement to the top of the spire, two hundred feet. The basement story is twenty feet high in the clear, and finished off with six rooms on each side. These rooms are about 12 by 14 feet, for the accommodation of the subjects for baptism, leaving a great hall through the centre and whole length of the basement, about one hundred feet by seventy. In the centre of this wall stands the baptismal fount, resting upon twelve exen with heads out, carved in solid rock to almost life itself and nearly full size. There is a flight of stone and iron stairs at each end of this fount, to go in & come out of the "Brazen Sea."

The next story is thirty four feet high in the clear, one hundred by ninety feet, finished off for preaching purposes. This room presents a rare specimen of Mechanism, with a rostrum at each end, with pulpits fitted to eight grades of the Ministry. There are on each side of the arch of this room, and above the main body of the room, six rooms intended for School purposes, and this arrangement was intended to be carried out in each Story, making in all forty-eight rooms about 12 by 14 feet square.

The third story is like unto the second, but is not finished, is thirty four feet high, and was intended for preaching purposes.

The fourth story is perhaps 14 feet high, with a row of rooms on each side called committee rooms, with a large room through the centre, one hundred feet long by seventy wide. All the rooms in this story are lighted from above being a garret story. Each chapel is calculated to seat three thousand persons.

There are fourteen flight of stairs from top to bottom, with one hundred & eighty-six steps.—There are forty windows to a side.

Upon the front end of the building far above the arched doors is the following inscription in letters of gold—

"The House of the Lord,
Built by the Church of Jesus Christ, or
Latter day Saints, Commenced April 6th, 1841,
Holiness to the Lord."

The cupola is mounted with a golden angel seven feet and two inches long, having in one hand the Bible, and with the other blowing a golded Trumpet, as represented by the Revelator—The everlasting Gospel.

I was informed that the books showed an expense upon the building of eight hundred thousand dollars; yet it is thought that all told would amount to near a million of dollars.

Immediately above the pulpit is found the following inscription in large letters of gold—

"The Lord has accepted our Sacrifice, Come after us."

Upon each out side of the Temple are nine splendidly polished columns about eighty feet high,—each mounted with a female head clothed with the Sun, and at the base of each column, is a large half Moon—representing the women in Revelation clothed with the Sun and Moon under her feet.

A wall is commenced around the Temple enclosing five acres of ground, ten feet high, six thick at the bottom and four at the top.

I have been the more particular, Br. Edwards, in describing this Temple, as it has become quite notorious almost to the world, and especially to your readers—hundreds of whom doubtless will never have the pleasure of seeing it. I must now close.

Ladies' Department.

A GOOD WIFE.

A friend of ours who has been spending a few weeks in the "country," and who visited some of the private dwellings of the rustic inhabitants, tells of a singular old man who lives near Brookfield. He is somewhat noted for his odd expressions. He was one day visited by a small party of ladies and gentlemen, who went to hear his "talk." "Now young gentlemen," said he, "I will give you some derections how to tell a good wife. A good wife will be like three things, and she will not be like them. She will be like the snail, who stays at home, and will not be like the snail who carries all he has on his back.—She will be like the echo, that speaks when spoken to, and she will not be like the echo, always to have the 'last word.' She will be like the town clock, that speaks at the right time, and she will not be like the town clock, heard all over town."

THE WIVES.

It is astonishing to see how well a man may live on a small income, who has a handy and industrious wife. Some men live and make a far better appearance on six or eight dollars a week than others do, on fifteen or eighteen dollars.—The man does his part well; but the woman is good for nothing. She will even upbraid her husband for not living in as good style as her neighbor; while the fault is entirely her own.—His neighbor has a neat, capable and industrious wife and that makes the difference. His wife, on the other hand, is a whirlpool into which a great many silver cups might be thrown, & the appearance of the waters remain unchanged.—No Nicholas, the driver, is there to restore the wasted treasure. It is only an insult for such a woman to talk to her husband about her love & devotion.

"IS HE RICH?"

Many a sigh is heard many a heart is broken, many a life is rendered miserable by the terrible infatuation which parents often manifest in choosing a life companion for their daughters. How is it possible for happiness to result from the union of two principles so diametrically opposed to each other in every point, as much as virtue is to vice? How often is the first question which is asked respecting the suitor to the daughter, this —"Is he rich?"

"Is he rich?"—yes, he abounds in wealth; but does that afford any evidence that he will make a kind and affectionate husband?

"Is he rich?"—yes, his clothing is purple and fine linen, and he fares sumptuously every day; but can you infer from this that he is virtuous?

"Is he rich?"—yes, he has thousands floating on every ocean; but do not riches take to themselves wings and fly away? Will you consent that your daughter should marry a man that has nothing to recommend him but his wealth? Ah! beware; the gilded bait sometimes covers the barbed hook. Ask not them, "Is he rich?" but "Is he virtuous?" Ask not if he has wealth, but if he has honor; and do not sacrifice your daughter's peace for money.

Punctuality.—"I give it," said the late Dr. Fisk, "as my deliberate and solemn conviction that the individual who is habitually tardy in meeting an appointment, will never be respected, or successful in life."

Temperance Department.

Advertisement of a Honest Rumseller.

Friends and neighbors! Having just opened a commodious shop for Liquid Fire, I embrace this opportunity of informing you that on Saturday I shall commence the business of making drunkards, paupers and beggars, for the sober, industrious, and respectable to support.

I shall deal in "familiar spirits," which shall excite men to deeds of riot and robbery, and blood; and by so doing diminish the comforts, augment the expense, endanger the welfare of the community.

I will undertake at short notice, for a small sum, and with great expedition, to prepare inmates for the asylum, the poor house, the prison and the gallows.

I will furnish an article which shall increase the amout of fatal accidents, multiply the number of distressing diseases, and render those harmless, incurable.

I will furnish a drug which shall deprive some of life, many of reason, some of property, all of peace; which shall cause fathers to be fiends; wives, widows; children, orphans, and all mendicants.

I will cause the rising generation to grow up in ignorance, and prove a burden and a nuisance to the nation.

I will cause mothers to forget their sucking infants, virgins to forget their priceless innocence.

I will corrupt the ministers of religion, obstruct the progress of the gospel, defile the purity of the church and cause temporal, spiritual, and eternal death; and if any be so impertinent as to inquire why I had the audacity to bring such accumulated misery upon a comparatively happy land, my honest reply is money!

The spirit of the trade is the most lucrative, and professing Christians give it their cheerful countenance.

I have license from the court, and if I do not bring these evils upon you somebody else will.

I live in a land of liberty.

I have purchased the right to demolish the character, destroy the health, shorten the lives and ruin the souls of those who choose to honor me with their custom.—Aurora of the Valley.

Narrative.

A FELON'S REMORSE.

It is a sad mistake, that is almost universally made, to believe that criminals who have become inured to vice and transgressions of the law, are totally void of sensibility and remorse. Altho' pride, obstinacy, and daring hardihood may conceal from observation, the workings of that inward monitor called conscience, there has never existed the felon, deeply as he may have been steeped in crime, who has not felt its prickings, and in a greater or less degree, succumbed to its warnings and its power.

A powerful illustration of this fact, came under our own observation, a few years since. A man, whom we shall designate by the name of Thomas Burke, was arrested for a burglary in breaking into a dwelling house with intent to steal. He was caught in the act. He had obtained access to the building, and had even penetrated as far as the sleeping room of the master of the house, who awoke and arrested him before he could effect his escape. Burke was tried, convicted, and adjudged by the court to imprisonment in the State Prison, to hard labor, for the term of twenty years. Before his removal to the State Prison, the prisoner sent for us, stating that he desired a personal interview before he was removed forever from the scenes of this world's pleasures, and we accordingly visited him in his lonely cell. It has been our lot to confer with criminals of every age, and never did we witness such a picture of despair and remorse, as this young man presented. He was seated on his pallet—his eyes were sunken, his face pale and attenuated, and his whole appearance betokened the most fearful mental torture. He arose upon our entrance, and said, "this is most kind of you, sir! I desired much to see you, and yet I feared that you would not listen to the request of so worthless and miserable a wretch as I am. I am about to leave this world forever, for I am convinced that I shall not survive my imprisonment, and God grant that I may not! What have I to live for? My life has been one varied catalogue of crime; from the time I attained the age of twenty years to the very day of my arrest. I lived by plunder and robbery. Should I live beyond the term of my sentence, what would life be worth to me? I should be shunned, and justly so, by all whose esteem is worth possessing, and cast off as wearing the felon's brand. I might desire to live if I could atone for past offences, but I cannot. I wished to see you, sir, to make a request of you, which I am sure will not be denied, and in order to do so, I must relate to you my history; please be seated, sir, and I will briefly detail the prominent events of my life."

I complied with his request, and he resumed:

"I was born in the town of ———, in the interior of this State; my father was a physician, and a more worthy man never breathed. My mother—my sainted mother!—how dare I profane her name with my polluted lips! My mother idolized me, and my sister, who was ten years my junior, loved me—how, how tenderly. Oh, how I loved that child; her name was Ida, sir, and I never, even in the midst of my abandoned associates, mentioned that name but with the most devoted affection. But to proceed, my father died when I was about eighteen years old; my mother followed but a few months after, and I was compelled to look after employment, as my parents were deeply involved at the time of their death. My sister was taken into a family of our aunt, who had ever hated me, and who forbid me to present myself at her residence. Taking a tender leave of my sister, sir, I came to this city and soon became acquainted with some abandoned young men, who led me into all sorts of excesses, and step by step induced me into the various gradations of crime, until I became an expert and daring 'cracksman,' which you know, sir, is the slang term for burglar.

"I will not detain you by a history of the offences I have committed, but I simply say that during the last twelve years I have committed in connection with others, upwards of thirty burglaries, and numberless larcenies, the consequence of all of which I have escaped up to this time. And I should not have been now the inmate of this cell had not Providence, in His mysterious workings, stopped me almost miraculously in the very act of crime. As you already know, sir, I was arrested in the bed chamber of Mr. Perkins, whose house I had entered. I obtained access through the hall door by the aid of my 'nippers,' and by the same means opened the door of his sleeping apartment. I had obtained information from one of his servants, that he generally had a large sum of money in the drawer of his dressing table, and I was cautiously making my way to that for the purpose of obtaining the booty—to reach which I had to pass the bed of a child—a young girl of about 6 years, and as my eye fell upon her face, the strong resemblance to my sister sent a chill of horror to my very soul. I stood spell-bound gazing upon the child, and as I gazed the happy hours of my childhood, my sister's merry prattle, her sweet caress—my mother's passionate tenderness, and my father's doting fondness, came to my mind with electric force, and heart-stricken by the recollections which crowded to my brain, I forgot my purpose of plunder and my position, and exclaimed frantically, my dearest mother! my darling Ida! I awoke by my cries, Mr. Perkins, the owner of the house, who leaped from his bed and seized me; I stood powerless and helpless as an infant, for I could not have resisted, so spell-bound was I by the power created by that sweet child. I made, I could make, no replies to his question as to my purpose in that chamber, but submitted to be taken to the station house. I have been tried and convicted, and must suffer the penalty of the crime, but to the hour of my death never shall I forget that face; it will be the subject of my dreams by night, and the sole object of my thoughts by day; and I trust in God that this vision of my wronged, neglected sister, will be the means of bringing me to repent of all my crimes and enormities. My sister still lives in ———. I could die happy if I could see her once more, and my request is that you will write to her for I cannot, tell her my present condition, and real feelings, tell her that contrition for the past and a desire to see her and obtain her forgivness are the predominant, the only feelings that move me; and beg that she will visit me at the State Prison. Promise me this, and also that you will procure her a permit to enter the prison, and you will remove a load of care from one who, though covered with crime, is at last bro't to tell the loathsomeness of his condition, and who really and truly mourns his depravity of mind and heart."

We promised compliance with his wishes, and fulfilled our promise, and have no doubt but that the walls of the State Prison confines at this hour as humble and contrite a peneitent as ever survived his crime. Conscience will speak, and the blackest villian does at some time feel the keen pangs of remorse tearing at his very heart strings.

Miscellaneous.

Pictures of Lowly City Life.

Who can estimate the misery enclosed in one single city? What can measure the height and depth of its sorrow? On every street there is a troubled mind, an anguish-stricken soul, an afflicted body. There sits an old man; a few white hairs are scattered over his head. Once he was young and strong, had a firm step and active limbs; his eyes were bright, his face was full and ruddy; but, alas! time has been stealthily wearing him away; his strength is gone, his eye is dim, his limbs are withered, his whole body but the nursery of pain. He is like an old vessel grown useless and leaky, and is staggering for the last time towards the shore, where it shall be stranded, and rot.

Yonder sits a daughter of grief; she was once the mother of a lovely infant, given to her amidst pangs. But it was hers, and she cherished it; she had jewels, but this was her richest. She forgot to thank God for giving it, never recognised him as a co-partner in the ownership. It sickened, died. Its very cries would have been music to her ears at the moment it ceased to breathe; but the bud was too deeply bitten by the frost of death to be revived. The poor mother wept, and the tear lingers on her eyelids. Her heart still beats faintly and sorrowfully. She is a stranger to prayer and to God, and finds in him no relief. She is unhappy.

Behold another; melancholy sits heavily on her brow. Does she sometimes smile? she does it with reluctance, and as if to chide those who caused it. Her thoughts are on the past. She thinks of her youth, when she was enshrined in the heart of parental love; then she was blest. Beneath a father's and a mother's smile she grew up to beauty and womanhood. Admirers clustered around her, they sought her hand, one gallant youth obtained it. He led her to the altar, they vowed mutual love, she was his; she thought she was happy. But a few years found her mistaken. She was the wife of one who loved her not. His heart was too cramped for refined, lasting affection. He ceased to admire her; he ceased to comfort her. He left her parentless, lone and miserable. "The worm, the canker, and the grief, are her's alone."

There lives a consumptive; he has friends, talent, fame; but he is diseased. His physical strength is well nigh exhausted. He breathes as if he listened to hear every moment the summons of death. He coughs as if he was yielding up his life. His bony hand, his shattered and attenuated frame betoken his approaching end. The poor man is unhappy. The joys of religion are not his. He holds no title to heaven. Soon will the "silver cord be loosed, and the golden bowl be broken." Soon shall "the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit unto God who gave it."

In that humble dwelling lives an industrious mechanic. Those who know him best award him meri; but withal he is a son of misfortune. The woman who he selected as the companion of his boson is only a scorpion there, poisoning and embittering his soul. She is addicted to a habit which more commonly disgraces the hardier sex. It is that of drinking. Yes, she is a drunkard. What a name for a woman, a mother, a daughter, a wife! She has a lovely sprightly daughter, whose, little heart has known many a throb of woe while gazing upon her senseless and intoxicated mother. Often has she been compelled to bear the fatal bottle to her disgraced parent, while her little soul shuddered in the service. Poor child! I pity thy doom! May kind heaven snatch thee from ruin! But thou unfortunate husband, for thee would I drop a tear. Thy unsmiling features bespeak a troubled soul. No wonder thou dost shun the public gaze, no wonder home is to thee cheerless prison-house; for there thou seest in one disgraced, thy disappointed hopes,—thy murmured love. May the God of mercy pity thy affliction.

Beneath the roof of that newly painted cottage are wounded stricken hearts. There lives an aged mother, who has lately yielded up her son to the chilling embrace of death. He has left behind him a wife, a mother, and children whom he loved. The eyes of all these are turned to him for their daily bread. He was their earthly stay, their constant friend, the devoted husband, the affectionate son. But he died. He departed amidst sighs and aching hearts. A household of widows and orphans are left to weep over his loss. They are poor; want dwells in their midst. May the hand of plenty find that cottage!

What is that which moves so slowly clothed in mourning? It is the hearse; some one has lost a friend. Some sacred tie has been broken. How solemn moves the procession. How melancholy look the living when following the death. How serious his reign. His empire is silence. He sits enthroned upon a tomb, "The king of terrors." The destroyer of our afflicted race.

For these and the myriad woes of society, Religion is the only balm.—Christian Advocate.

Methodist New Connexion Conference

The Annual Conference of ministers and representatives belonging to this denomstration, lately held its siting at Liverpool, Eng. The return of members showed an increase of 500 over that of the previous year; nearly 200 of that increase being in Canada, and the rest in England. There was also an increase of 689 teachers and 3,034 scholars in the schools of the Connection. At the Missionary meeting the Rev. William Cooke read the Report; which, after referring to the increase in various stations, announced a balance of income over expenditure. The total number under the care of the Society was stated as follows:—In Ireland, there were 10 stations, 137 chapels and preaching-houses, 11 Missionaries, 104 local preachers, and 806 members.—In Canada, there were 30 stations, 367 chapels and preaching-houses, 41 Missionaries, and 4,374 members. Total number of Missionaries, 52; members, 4,180. The Report concluded by stating that the committee had cause for rejoicing in the general prospects of the Missions.

Sacred Music in Scotland.

An association has recenly been formed for the revival of sacred music in Scotland. It appears that a law of the Scottish Parliament, enacted nearly three hundred years ago, required the keeping up of singing schools with efficient masters; and that the plan was prosecuted then, with such effect, that, on the return of a banished minister, not many years after, the people of Edinburg, to the number of two thousand, accompanied him through the streets, singing with loud voices, in four parts, the 124th Psalm, 'till heaven and earth resounded it,' as a contemporary says.

The objects of the association formed in Edinburg in 1844, are—1st. The improvement of Church Psalmody. 2d. To instruct teachers, precentors, and the children of parish and district schools of all denominations, in the principles of vocal music. 3d. To prepare and fit young people to impart these principles; so that the pupils of those schools in which vocal music is introduced may be able to read music at sight. To effect these objects, there were established, 1st. The Normal Music School. 2d. Classes for Congregational Psalmody. 3d. Public Evening Classes.

The normal school has been most successful, and promises the richest results. It was opened in March, 1845, with one hundred and fifty pupils,—assistant teachers in the parish and district schools—who were instructed gratuitously twice a week. "Such was their progress," says the Westminster Review, from which we derive our information, "that at the end of four months, their knowledge, tested by reading at sight, surpassed that of many who have received instruction for years. When the classes were resumed in the winter 1845-6, the scholars, of their own accord, began to impart their knowledge to the younger at their respective schools; and so thoroughly were they initiated in the principles of music, and so simple is the plan of tuition, that after a careful examination by the director, the association were agreeably surprised to find a new class thus formed, already numbering two hundred and six children, who were all as well acquainted with the elementary exerciseses, in one or two parts, as their young teachers. The children then and still continue to form their own classes, teaching from two or three to thirty or sixty; a pupil of the Lancasterian school taught one hundred and ten; and sometimes girls of ten years old are found teaching sisters double their age; thus carrying into the family and social circle an innocent and cheering amusement, connected with moral and elevated sentiments.

"With this new mode of multiplication, the classes rapidly increased; and at the end of '46, numbering nearly one thousand; and at the close of 1847, it was estimated that three thousand had been instructed in the elements of vocal music. All these were able to read part music at sight; and besides the songs suited to their age, took part in the public meetings in the choruses of Handel and Beethoven; while about three hundred of their number, who had attended for two or three seasons, were able, in the month of June, 1847, to perform, with the assistance of the necessary bass voices, the whole oratio of Judas Maccabeus, and that with power, an expression, and a pathos, not unworthy of a work of Handel. This was followed shortly after by a fete champetre in the grounds of the Duke of Buccleuch, at Dalkeith, where the oratio was again sung, and a numerous assemblage of company was equally astonished and delighted to find in the vicinity of modern Athens, a scene which hitherto has been only met with in more favored Germany, where such meetings for the enjoyment of the works of Mozart, Bethoven, and Handel, are as frequent as here they are rare.

India Rubber Pavement.—The court-yard of the English Admiralty, Whitehall, has been covered with a paving of India Rubber. An experiment tried upon it resulted very satisfactorily. It is laid down in pieces about twelve inches square and one in thickness. The quadrangle at Buckingham Palace, formed by the erection of a new wing, will also be covered with this material, which its projectors have named "Kamptolite." Its chief recommendation is, that it deadens all sound, rendering the passage of a vehicle or horses perfectly noiseless.

Religious Intelligence.

NORTH ILLINOIS DISTRICT.

Uniontown, Ill., Sept. 13, '48.

Br. Bassett: With my business letter, I send you a few lines for insertion in the Recorder.—Our last quarterly meeting commenced here last Friday evening, The meeting is still in progress. Some six or eight have professed to find peace and pardon. Many other professors that had lost their enjoyment, but not given up all hope, have been greatly quickened. Many sinners appear greatly alarmed in regard to their condition. We had 12 or 14 for prayers last night. It rains to-day, which will be against our meeting. The Devil is loth to yield the ground. He has hitherto held entire control over this most intelligent and respectable community. One man yesterday came to our anxious room and compelled his wife to leave it, when she was in the very act of praising God for converting her soul, and he appeared before in deep exercise of mind, and last night was at the mourner's bench. But he would not pray. We expect a general revival. May God send it. We will continue our meeting over the Sabbath, and longer if God continues to work, and sinners want religion.—We have had the labors of Brother Bagley. The laity from other parts of the circuit, have labored faithfully. We have no class here yet, but expect to form one to-day. We have a promising field of labor here. The fields are white to the harvest, but laborers are few. O that God would increase their number.

SAMUEL DILLEY.

INDIANA DISTRICT.

Tanners Creek, Sept. 19, 1848.

Dear Br. Bassett: We held our 4th Quarterly Meeting as published in the Recorder and am happy to say the Lord was with us, Br. Cohan an ordained preacher of the "United Brethren Church" came up to our help and preached boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus and with the assistance of Br. Proctor unstationed minister of this circuit we were enabled to get thro'. We had a crowded house on the Sabbath. The Lovefeast on Monday morning was a melting season. hearts were affected, tears flowed down the blooming faces of the youth as well as down the furrowed cheeks of the aged sire and matron Thank God, the Church in this circuit is looking for a Revival it has already begun in their hearts.

"Kindled in some hearts it is,
All partake the glorious bliss."

O that all might catch the flame. Believers are quickened and acknowledge they are in expectation of better days; there are some here to whom the words of the venerable Wesley will apply "they live, they think, they speak the same, they are of one heart and soul, and only love inspires the whole.

Yours in the Bonds of the Gospel,
JABEZ SIBLEY, Sup't.

California and Oregon Mails.—Official information has been received at the Post-office Department, that the United States steam-packet "California," built under contract with the Secretary of the Navy, eventually for the service of that department of the government, but in the mean time to be employed in the transportation of the mails, will leave New York for California and Oregon, via Cape Horn, on Monday, the 2d day of October next.

Mail bags wil be made up at New York, to be forwarded by said steamer for Rio Janeiro, Valparaiso, and Callao; also for San Diego, Santa Barbara, Monterey, and San Francisco, in California, and Astoria, in Oregon.

The inland and sea postage on all letters and newspapers, to be forwarded by said packet for places not within the territory of the U. States, is to be pre paid at the offices where mailed.

The ship-postage for single letters, not exceeding half an ounce, will be 24 cents to Rio Janerio, Valparaiso, or Callao; and for each newspaper, pamphlet, or price current, 3 cents. In each case the regular inland postage to New York is to be added.

To Panama, each letter, as aforesaid, will be rated at 30 cents; and to San Diego, Santa Barbara, Monterey, San Francisco, or Astoria, 40 cents, without any addition for inland postage.

Nine Miles of Flour.—The quantity of flour burnt on the Pier was about 15,000 barrels, which being placed endwise would extend over nine miles, the same being two feet deep and as many wide.—Albany Knickerbocker.

A correspondent of the London Literary Gazette, alluding to the numerous cases of death from accidental poisonings, and particularly the melancholy fate of the late royal academician, Mr. Owen, adds, "I may venture to affirm, there is scarce even a cottage in this country that does not contain an invaluable, certain, and immediate remedy for such events, nothing more than a desert-spoonful of made mustard, mixed in a tumbler glass of warm water, and drank immediately; it acts as an instantaneous emetic, is always ready, and may be used with safety in any case where one is required. By making this simple antidote known, you may be the means of saving many a follow creature from an untimely end."

Making History.—Gen. Cavaignac, in his proclamation to the people, uttered this noble sentiment: "Let us not forget that we are making history, and that a blot at such a time can never be erased." If all would act from this spirit, the world would be more discreetly governed.

Baltimore, Sept. 13.—Hon. Louis McLane resigned the Presidency of the Baltimore Railroad Company to day. He retires at the end of the fiscal year.

Remarkable Aqueduct.—Boston is about to be supplied with water from Long Pond, which being on the main land, the pipes have to cross Charles river, to accomplish which a solid stone bridge has been built. The water is brought to the edge of the hill, says the Traveller, (the river running through very low ground,) and descends in iron pipes, and then ascends in the same manner upon the other side. Upon each side is a pipe chamber. To connect these pipe chambers, it has required 230 long pipes, weighing 3,000 pounds each—in all, about three hundred and fifty tons.

Illinois and Winconsin lands, to the amount of 49,000 acres, are to be sold, by order of the trustees of the United States, at Philadelphia, on 3d Oct.

Fires.—The season for morning and evening fires is approaching and it is perhaps the time that peculiarly requires attention.—Persons should look to their flues and see that there are no unused pipe-holes pasted over with paper. or stuffed full of rags or other combustibles. These may be in upper or in lower rooms, and still equally expose the building when fire is put into the flue. This is not mere theory; we have noticed the frequent accidents produced in this way.—Z. Gazett.

WESTERN REGORDER.

PUTNAM, OHIO:

Thursday, September 28, 1848.

Close of the Volume.—This number closes the ninth volume of our paper. We have received an encouraging number of new subscribers at the recent Conferences, to commence with our new volume. But as we have to make an annual trimming of our list, and shall probably have to dispose of a considerable number of names, we may have but a small net increase to our list for the coming week. But we trust that the names will now be coming in rapidly. We shall therefore have a supply of extra copies struck of the first number and so on, to furnish those who may wish to commence with the volume, and have the Minutes of the Conferences. Our Agents will please now be somewhat diligent in procuring for us as many responsible names as they can, to commence with vol. 10. We do not say what amount of improvements will be found in our sheet hereafter.

Delinquents.—We are sorry to find it needful to strike from our list the names of some of our friends, who do not indicate any probability of doing their duty by us, though we have waited long. If they will accept of a hint in finding their paper discontinued, and will pay up, we will be pleased to send to them again.

☞ The Minutes of Muskingum Conference have just come to hand—not in time for this number. Shall appear in our next. Also, an obituary of good mother Ewbank, of Tanners Creek.

☞ The Ohio Annual Conference Methodist E. Church, commenced its session on yesterday, at Newark, Ohio.

☞ The Northern Christian Advocate, advocates the removal of the seat of the U. States Government to Cincinnati.

African M. E. Church.—The Unbana Gazette of the 23d inst., states that the Annual Conference of the African M. E. Church is in session in that place.

Presbytery.—The Presbytery of Pataskala held its session at the Presbyterian Church in this place, last week. Some fourteen or more ministers and a less number of laymen were in attendance. Rev. S. P. Hildreth, son of Dr. H. of Marietta, of the same name, was ordained an evangelist. We are informed that an agreeable and harmonious session was enjoyed, and that the place appointed for next session of the Presbytery, is Newark, Ohio.

Asiatic Cholera!—We have no disposition to excite groundless alarm in reference to this malady, or to suppress the truth in reference to its approach. It is no secret that the epidemic is rapidly extending over Europe, and that a visitation of it upon this continent again, has for some time past been seriously apprehended.—We were quite surprised however to see it gravely announced in the last number of the Cincinnati Commercial, that an unequivocal case of Asiatic Cholera has occurred in the city of St. Louis. The authority the this announcement is the St. Louis Republican, containing a letter of Doctor Thomas Barbour, presenting the facts in the case. A Mr. Palmer, an organ builder was the unfortunate subject, who died within 24 hours of the attack. The symptoms as described, are identical, and yet we believe that a solitary case has occasionally occurred, in very close resemblance of cholera, without the same becoming epidemic. We are fond of hoping that from so fearful a visitation we may be spared. Yet we must be submissive to the arrangements of an inscrutable Providence. A life of temperance and correct habits, and especially a renewed heart and good conscience, are the best precautions & preventives we know of.

Star in the West.—This is the well known organ of the Universalist denomination, at Cincinnati. It is conducted by Rev. J. A. Gurley, with decided ability, in his way. The "Star" is in its appearance one of the handsomest weeklies that come to us. Wish we could speak so well also of its merits. We notice the publication now, for the purpose of taking exceptions to what we consider unbecoming in any Christian editor. Whenever Br. Gurley gets information that a minister of an orthodox denomination is overtaken in a bad fault, (which sad to tell, does sometimes happen,) he makes an ado of exultation over it, as though glad to see an unworthy fellow do wickedly, provided he be not of his favorite faith. In the last number of the "Star," we have one of those cases, which we think must be more than the dozenth if not even the hundredth which he has reported. It is announced under the heading, "A Methodist Preacher Fallen." The story bears that the Rev. Mr. ——— of a certain county, a Methodist preacher of 30 years standing, lately compromised a difficulty with a female whom he had seduced, by paying her $700; that he was afterwards sued by his wife for a divorce, that she obtained it, with an annuity of $250, from him for Alimony. Now, it is possible that this entire statement is correct—we do not dispute it. We have no knowledge of the individual, nor is he of our denomination; and if this were the case, we would not defend him in the wrong. Br. Gurley seems evidently glad to get hold of this story, and to proclaim it to the four winds, whilst we are sorry to hear it, and should be sorry to hear it, even if the Rev. Mr. ——— had been a Universalist preacher. Now we have known some worthy persons of the Universalist faith. But we have known others, no better than they ought to be. Yet we have never thought it would be befitting that we should tantalize and outrage the feelings of the worthy and respectable portion, by harping upon the case of some hypocrite, or some wicked Universalist.

Can't Do It.—We give it up. Can't please every body. We have just now before us a case in point, which is however but one of many, & which will show what a difficult task we have on hand, to suit all. A few weeks ago, we inserted amongst our miscellaneous selections, a short article headed, "Keep your promises," containing as we thought at the time, some cogent hints to some general reader whom it might concern. We had almost forgotten that such an item had found its way into our columns, when, a few days ago, we received a letter from an excellent brother, whom we have ever respected, one of our subscribers, who certainly never broke a promise with us, if indeed he ever made one to us, and who did not at the time he wrote, owe us as much as a single dollar, and of course could not possibly have been alluded to in the short article spoken of. Our friend writes thus:

———, September 21, 1848.

"Rev. Sir: In No. 43, there is a piece inserted, entitled, Keep Your Promises, which I suppose you have intended for me, as one that has broke it. Perhaps I am guilty in some respects, but not willingly. But I think it was printed for my case, and consider it hard on me. So I have enclosed you one dollar, which will pay up for what I have had, and I do not want you to send me more till further orders.

Truth—Read—Read."

Our excellent friend will now think that we mean this for him. He will observe however that we withhold his name, and no body will know, unless he tells. We however intend this chiefly for the benefit of others, who would expect us to pursue a course they might mark out. There are those who will be displeased if we publish this or that, and there are others who will be displeased if we do not publish this or that. So that, do as we may, we are bound to displease some. Is not this a hard case? We have sometimes thought of mailing a blank sheet to our patrons, as that would most probably contain nothing offensive, but then again we fear that even this might displease some. So upon the whole, we have concluded that we will, whilst we may continue to edit a newspaper, use our best judgment, as to what is most suitable for our columns.

Church Suit.—We regret to learn by the Nashville Christian Advocate, that the southern division of the M. E. Church, is about to resort to legal process, to recover its dividend of the church property. A meeting of the Commissioners of the M. E. Church, South, Drs. Bascom, Green and Lana; the Bishops. Soule, Andrew, Capers and Paine; and the Book Agent, Rev. John Early, was held at Louisville, Ky., on the 9th inst. The following resolution expresses the unanimous decision of the meeting:

Resolved, That it is expedient and necessary, in view of the rights and interests in controversy, that the necessary suits be instituted as soon as practicable, for the recovery of the funds and property falling due to the Methodist E. Church South, under the contract of the Plan of Seperation, adopted by the General Conference of 1844.

We had hoped that we were about to witness a praiseworthy example of Christian forbearance and magnanimity, in the amicable adjustment of the difficulties between the two divisions of the M. E. Church, without recourse to law. But it is painful to find that such is not to be the case. If it be "good and pleasant, for brethren to dwell together in unity," how does it look "for brethren to dwell" apart, in hostility? For the honor of religion, we hope that an arbitration will yet be effected. We are for "peace on earth, and good will."

☞ The following account, furnished us by an aged and respectable unstationed minister, who was an early settler in Adams county, Ohio, will be found to contain some interesting particulars.

Written for the Western Recorder.

NEW LIGHTS AND SHAKERS.

Br. Bassett: As I am now in the 69th year of my age, I have of course seen and known some things, not known to the present generation of young people. It may be that I can accommodate you with some things worth inserting in your columns, which have never been committed to print. At present I would furnish you a statement of the rise of two denominations now extant, viz: the New Lights and the Shakers.

I came to this State, (then the North West Territory,) in the Fall of Wayne's Treaty with the Indians, perhaps about 55 years ago. There was then no such thing as preaching in all these regions, till shortly after two ministers of the Presbyterian Church came across the Ohio as Missionaries, and established several preaching places. On the waters of Eagle Creek they met with great success. They built a large meeting house, but it was too small to hold the people, for many came from great distances. The names of the ministers were MacNamer and Dunlavy. For want of house room, they erected a stand in the woods. One would preach at 11, and the other at 4. The remainder of the afternoon was spent in singing and prayer, and they oftentimes continued all night with prayer and exhortation. The seats were crowded with mourners, and it was common for ten or fifteen to get religion at every appointment. Numbers assumed the exercise of exhorting. The exercise of the jerks now became prevalent, and was powerful indeed. Women in many instances would jerk till they were exhausted, and then fall as if they were dead.

The two afore named preachers were arraigned before the church, and excommunicated.—They however returned to the Territory, and commenced on their own footing, and would not be called any thing but Christians. In a few years, a preacher by the name of Bates came from New England and united with them; also a preacher by the name of Stone. Bates, being opposed to jerking and shouting, introduced the exercise of dancing, for the purpose of preventing the spirit of jerking. This was agreed to, and a large shed was erected, and bannestered around, with a nice floor and no seats, for the purpose of dancing. A choir of singers was selected, and after sermon, music was struck up, and all that were in the spirit of dancing sprang upon their feet, and danced to the Lord, till they would fall to the floor. This had the effect of preventing the jerks. The next thing Mr. Bates introduced was to have all things in common. Some sold their possessions, and threw down the proceeds at the feet of their preachers. The next thing that Bates attempted to introduce was the parting man and wife, and forbidding to marry. This was like throwing a rock in the hornet's nest. It produced great confusion, which terminated in a split. Stone opposed the measures, whilst Dunlavy, Mac Namer and Bates united. In the separation, one party went with Stone, and would call themselves Christians, and do so to this day. Stone wrote a pamphlet which contained so many new things that his people received the name of New Lights, and are so called to this day. The other three proceeded, and their number increased, till the place was too small for them; and they gathered all together, sold their possessions, and bought where the Shakers now reside, and received the name of Shakers, from their dancing and shaking.

C. WAMSLEY.

West Union, O. Sept. 5, 1848.

FOREIGN NEWS,

ARRIVAL OF THE ACADIA.

New York, Sept. 25.

Editor Ohio Statesman:

The Acadia steamer arrived last evening. It sailed from Liverpool on the 9th, and brings later and interesting news from Europe.

The grain market has declined nearly the extent of the recent advances.

Corn $6 26a$6 48 per quarter of 8 bushels, and dull at that. Wheat $6 16a$6 81. Flour unchanged and dull. Cotton is in good demand. The sales for the week are 26,730 bales, closing with Mobile upland at 4 1-8.

The transactions in provisions have been limited. Lard brisk at an advance of 22 cents on the 100 weight.

The manufacturing districts are doing a more active business and look decidedly encouraging. Bacon is dull, yet firm at previous prices. The money market easy, Consols closing at 80—85 1-8 and 86.

The weather looks more favorable to harvesting. The potato disease less alarming.

The United States steamer, in a damaged condition returned to Southampton.

The Queen addressed Parliament from the Throne on the 5th, and then started to Scotland;

Ireland is tranquil.

FRANCE.

Lamartine has published a defence against the charges made by which Cavaignac was compelled to deny any intention of suppressing the Constitution.

The Journal and La Presse have resumed their fierce attacks upon the Government in spite of Cavaignac's declarations, not to allow the Republic to be impeached. The Bonapartists are moving with a view to the election of Louis Napoleon to the presidency.

The Austrians having asked a heavy contribution on the city of Parma, which was refused, commenced pillaging the city. The inhabitants sounded the tocsin, and flew to the defence of the city and commenced a battle. The result is unknown.

Schleswig Holstein has refused to acknowledge the armstice concluded by Prusia.

The French government has recieved despatches from Arago, the French Minister at Berlin, announing the acceptance, by Austria, of the mediation of France and England to settle the Italian question.

Italy is every where excited by constant tumults.

News of the Week.

Mexico.—Mexico is comparatively quiet. The Cabinet of Herrera seems popular. Trade is beginning to revive. Two hundred American teamsters entered the city of Mexico in one day, with wagons loaded with goods, principally cotton. The sierra Madre project is exciting some uneasiness, but the Government was about despatching a large force to the seat of the conspiracy, and entertaind no doubt of its ability to put it down.—Nat. Era,

Cassius M. Clay in Trouble.—Some two years since, while Col. Humphrey Narshall's regiment of Kentucky Cavalry was encamped below this city, Captain Cassius M. Clay was ordered by the Colonel to proceed with a detail of men and arrest some men who had left the camp without orders, and were supposed to be at a house of questionable character in the lower part of the city, kept by a woman named Eliza Boler. Captain C. proceeded to the house and being refused admittance, ordered an entrance to be forced, which was done although several shots were fired from it one of which took effect in the face of one of his men. During the affair the house was considerably damaged, and the furniture in it almost entirely demolished. Mrs. Boler instituted suit against Captain Clay for the amount of damage she sustained, and the case was brought up for trial yesterday. After a patient hearing of the case the jury returned a verdict of $501 damages against Captain Clay. We understand that her counsel claimed that all who participated in the affair were liable, but suit was brought against Captain C. he being in command, and regarded as fully responsible.—Louisville Courier, Sept. 12.

Sold at Auction.—At Louisville, Ky. on the 6th instant, Peter Roberts, a free man of color, a regularly licensed Methodist Preacher, a member of the Indiana African Conference, and a Master Mason of the Philadelphia Lodge, was sold at public auction before the Court House door, in that city for the term of one year. He was bought by J. L. Hyatt, for $75 50. An act of the Kentucky Legislature prohibits the migration of free negroes to that State under the penalty of three hundred dollars, on which charge he was arrested and sold. Roberts is a citizen of Jeffersonville, Indiana. A correspondent of 'The Pitusburgh Gazette' suggests that this case be laid before the United States Supreme Court. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—True Weslayan.

Tender Mercies of Slavery.—The Danville (Ky.) Tribune, of the 8th inst., says that a "gentleman" of that vicinity recently whipped a negro woman so severely that she died a short time afterward. Walden the inhuman being who perpetrated this act, has given himself up to the authorities who held him to bail for the sum of $1,500.—True Wesleyan.

From the Baltimore Sun.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

The Gold Fever and Gold Region, &c.
Condition of Mexico.

The Union notices the arrival in Washington on Saturday evening, from California, of Mr. Edward Fitzgerald Beale, (the grandson of Commodore Truxton,) a passed midshipman. He is just from Commodore Jones' squadron, and he has performed the most rapid journey that has ever been known from the Pacific to Washington. The Union says:

He left Commodore Jones at La Paz on the 1st of August, came by Mazatlan and arrived at the Port of San Blas on the 10th, and pushed his way by horses and mules across the country to the city of Mexico, where he arrived on the 17th. He was detained by Mr. Clifford three days for dispatches, and in 48 hours passed from Mexico to Vera Cruz, about 275 miles, sleeping not more than ten minutes at a time. From Vera Cruz he sailed to Mobile, and arrived here on Saturday evening. Mr. Beale crossed from the Pacific at San Blas to the Gulf at Vera Cruz in the unexampled journey of ten days on the road, and was detained at Mexico three days. He brings despatches to the Secretaries of the State and Navy.

He found the country full of insurrection, robberies, and murders. He passed several murdered bodies on the road. It was said at Mexico that there were only about $200 000 of the $3.-000 000 left on hand; and when it is all exhausted, fears are entertained of an insurrectionary spirit and serious disturbances.

But the most extraordinary intelligence which Mr. Beale brings is about the real El Dorado, the gold region in California. His accounts of the extraordinary richness of the gold surface, and the excitement it had produced among all classes of people inhabitants of the country and of the towns, among seamen and soldiers, are confirmed by letters from Commodore Jones and from Mr. Larkin, the United States naval agent at Monterey, California. Mr. Beale states that the whalers had suspended their operations—the captains permitting their seamen to go to the gold region upon condition that every ounce of gold the seamen obtained should be given to the captain for $10, making six or seven dollars by the bargain. The towns were being evacuated—mechanics, &c., going to the attractive spot. The two newspapers had been suspended—the compositors going off to gather gold for themselves. It is fortunate that no such El Dorado is within striking distance of our office—although we hope that our worthy partner will be amply compensated for "leaving us alone in our glory" for the rich El Dorado gold mines of Virginia.

The danger in California is from the want of food for the residents, and still more for the stream of emigrants. Would not some of our merchants find it a profitable speculation to send cargoes of buscuit, flour, &c., round to the Pacific coast?

This is the country which the last House of Representatives has left without an organized government—no provision made for the public lands—and none for the collection of revenue, at a time when so much could be obtained from its increasing resources.

It is, of course, impossible for us to say how long this gold fever will continue. And it is still doubtful whether it will eventually redound to the advantage of California. One effect it may have, viz: to invite emigrants from the United States, Oregon, &c., to fill up the country sooner.

The "Union" gives the last letter of Mr. Larkin, U. S. Naval Agent, dated Monterey, California, July 1, 1848. It confirms fully all the statements we gave yesterday in an article on the subject, made up from letters from the Rev. Mr. Colton. We append the following extracts, presenting some new features:

Since my last letter to you, written in San Francisco, I have visited the "Placer," or gold region of California, and found it all it had been represented to me. My anticipations were fully realised. The part I visited was the south fork of the river American, which joins the Sacramento, at Suter's Fort, or two miles from it. This river has its north and south forks, branching more than twenty miles from Fort Suter. On these two forks there are over 1,000 people digging and washing for gold. On Bear Creek and Hulo Creek, branches of Feather River, many are now beginning to work. It is supposed that the banks and bottoms of all these small streams contain vast quantities of gold, and that the valleys between them are rich with the same metal.

As to the "modus operandi" of procuring the gold, Mr. Larkin, after mentioning two rough machines belonging to 8 men, 80 to 100 feet long, in the shape of a cradle without ends, thro' each of which there was daily washed three fourths to one pound of gold each. He says of the plan of others:

First with a pick and shovel they clear off two feet of the top earth, then put in a tin pan or wooden bowl a shovel of dirt, go into running water, with the hand stir up the dirt and heave out the stones, until they have remaining a spoonful of emery or black sand, containing one to five dollars. This can be done once or twice a day.

Each day is causing some saving of labor by the improvements in the rough machines now in use. The day I left, some small companies of five to eight men had machines from which they anticipate five or six hundred dollars a day.

As to the present and prospective product, Mr. L. says:—

I do not think I am exaggerating in estimating the amount of gold obtained on the rivers I have mentioned at ten thousand dollars a day for the last few days. There is every reason to believe the amount will not this season (unless the washers are driven from their work by sickness) be any less. In this case the addition of workmen now joining the first ones, and the emigrants from the Atlantic States we shall have in October and December, will soon swell the value of California gold that will be washed out to an unheard-of value. Many who have seen the "Placer" think it will last thirty or forty years. I should think that it would afford work two or three years to many thousands of people, and may for very many years, as I cannot calculate the extent of country having gold. The working of quicksilver mines, like everything else, is stopped.

The Union adds:—"We have seen specimens of the California gold. As far as we have seen, it does not appear in large lumps, such as was found the other day in a gold mine in Virginia, worth $550. Indeed, the largest piece said to have been found does not exceed an ounce. The specimen we have seen is in minute pieces, very much resembling the scales of a small fish."

The Rumseller Remembered.—A rumseller once visited a victim of his murderous trade on his deathbed, said to him, Do you remember me? "Yes," said the dying man with a startling emphasis, "I do remember your shop; where I formed the habit which has ruined me; and when I am dead my beggared widow and fatherless children will remember you!

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

Dr. Cartwright's Cure for Cholera.

Dr. Cartwright, of Mississippi, in Cholera times was very successful in his treatment of Cholera. As a theorist and practitioner of medicine, there are few men to excel him. His reputation, at home and abroad, stands high.—When the Cholera broke out at, and around Natchez, it proved very fatal, baffling the skill of the most experienced physicians. The practice of Dr. Cartwright was attended with such success, that the gentlemen, on whose plantation he practiced, called a public meeting and voted him a silver vase worth six hundred dollars. I copy below his mode of treatment.

Extracts from Cartwright's Cholera Prescription:

Recipe. Calomel, two drachms;
Red Pepper, two drachms;
Gum Camphor, one drachm;

Rub together in a mortar, and divide into six equal parts, and label non-purging powders,—or make into forty-two pills, and label non-purging pills; keep them in a vial.

Recipe.—Calomel, one drachm;
Aloes, one drachm;
Rhubarb, (Turkey optimus,) one dr.;
Gum Camphor, one drachm;

Rub together and divide into six equal parts, or make into forty-two pills, and label purging powders—or pills. Dose one powder or seven pills.

[Non-Purging Powders.—Dose for an adult, one powder or seven pills; for a child seven or eight years old, one half a powder or three or four pills; for one two or three years old, one fourth of a powder or three pills, broken up and mixed with molasses. The dose of the purging powders is similar to the above.]

Directions.—As soon as pain in the bowels is complained of, or any bowel complaint or vomiting occurs, give one of the non-purging powders or pills. Half a powder, or three or four pills, should be given after every spell of vomiting, and after every thin and whitish evacuation. After the pain has been relieved, and the vomiting and purging arrested by the non-purging medicine, one of the purging powders or seven pills should be given every four, or six, or eight hours, until bilious evacuations are produced—known by their black, green, or bright yellow color.—In the meantime, mint or chamomile tea should be taken warm, & in small quantities frequently repeated. After bilious evacuations, if the patient be not restored to health, Ginger and Virginia Snake-root tea—with or without senna, according to the state of the bowels—should be used occasionally.

Remarks.—If the first dose of non-purging medicine does not produce perspiration in 2 hours, it will be necessary to repeat, and if the pain, diarrhœa or vomiting continue, a moderate quantity of blood should be drawn. Bleeding should be resorted to at once, if there be much pain in the head. In violent cases the medicine should be aided by the application of mustard plasters over the stomach—rubbing the extremities with mustard or hot spirits of turpentine, and rubbing spirits turpentine along the spine (back bone.) When the rice-water purging continues, after the vomiting has ceased, a tea-spoonful of Red Pepper in alum water, may be given as an injection with good effect.

In giving this an insertion in your valuable paper, you will oblige many persons. I have been asked very frequently for a copy of it, and have concluded to ask you to publish it for the benefit of the community. Mr. G———, of this city, has kept the extract since 1834, when he took it from a paper, the the name of which he has forgotten.

Yours, truly and respectfully,
J. H. B.

Another Fire at Akron.—A fire broke out in Akron, on the morning of the 23d, by which three stores, one jeweller's shop, & several other shops of different kinds were consumed. Loss from $10,000 to $15,000.

A son of Mr. Archbald, residing on Abagail st., Cincinnati, died from the effects of being finned by a fish, some ten days since!

Visitations of Providence.

The city of Brooklyn has been visited with a fearful conflagration, that has destroyed some eight blocks of buildings, covering about twelve acres. The loss is estimated at one million of dollars.——A frightful accident occurred at New York on Sunday last, at the laying of the corner stone of a Roman Catholic Church, corner of Eighth and Avenue. The walls of the basement had been built, and the floor laid over the timbers. About 4 o'clock, from eight hundred to one thousand persons collected on this floor, when one of the walls gave way, and was pressed out by the great weight upon it, precipitating the mass of human beings into the basement below, a distance of twelve feet, and against the front wall, amidst the falling of brick and timber The scene of confusion and despair that followed can be more easily imagined than described. About fifty persons were taken out more or less hurt. Several had their limbs broken and one or more have died.

On the 23d ult. a severe hurricane was experienced at Antigua, which destroyed the entire place, it is said. Houses were blown down, trees uprooted, and a general devastation made. The hurricane was also felt in all the islands, with greater or less force. At St. Thomas it did but liule damage, but at Nassau, (N. P.) it was quite severe. No detailed accounts had been received from the other islands.

Letters have been received by the steamer Hibernia, announcing the death of Mr. Y. H. Weed, of Boston, at Singapore, and of Lieut. Dale, of this city, attached to the Dead Sea Expedition.

The Ocean Monarch, a splendid ship belonging to Boston, has been destroyed by fire, when only a few hours' sail from Liverpool. Of the four hundred persons on board, nearly two hundred perished, either by flood or flame. "When thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness."—Epis. Rec.

Slavery was abolished, by public decree, in French Guiana, on the 10th of August, in virtue of a decree of the French Republic of the 27th of April, and in the name of the French people. The proclamation was made amidst much ceremony, an immense number of the new citizens, with their wives and children, celebrated the day with dances and sports, and great enthusiasm, shouting Vive la Republique! Vive la Liberte! Vive la Commissaire General!

Assignment of Land Warrants.—To prevent undue exactions from soldiers in necessitous circumstances, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, suggests for the future, that the assignments of land warrants be made on the backs of warrants in all cases when practicable. Justices of the peace and notaries public are strictly enjoined, in certifying to the acknowledgments of soldiers, either to powers of attorney, or assignments of warrants, to fill up the "dates" on the days on which such instruments are executed.—Balt. Sun.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

The "American Indicating Disc Telegraph."

We announced some time since an invention of our own, a new TELEGRAPH! Our business East was principally to test the invention, and secure "Letters Patent" for it. We had new machines made by the best workman in Philadelphia, and tested them in a circuit of 83 miles. They worked beautifully, far better than we expected. We then proceeded to Washington and had our papers, descriptions, and drawings made out and deposited in the Patent Office. The trial of the machines, and the whole business, was kept from the press, purposely that the influence of the Morse party, which has been of an undue nature, might not be brought to bear against our invention.

By a letter just received from our Agent and Attorney in Washington, we learn that the Patent will surely be granted. This being the case, the invention, which we call the "American Indicating Disc Telegraph," will immediately be publicly tested, and in a manner that will present it on its true merits. Numerous editors in the East requested us to allow them to make mention of our invention; but all notices of the same were withheld, at the time, at our own personal request, and for the reason above mentioned. It seems, however, that since we left Washington, a scientific gentleman has been examining the Patent Office—a person entirely unknown to us—& we are indebted to our friends Robinson & Jones, of the "Great West," for his remarks on our Telegraph, we not even exchanging with the paper he communicated with, viz: "the N. Y. Farmer and Mechanic:

CURTISS' TELEGRAPH IMPROVEMENT.

A correspondent of the New York Farmer and Mechanic, thus refers to our worthy contemporary's recent invention. We hope the anticipations of the writer may be realized:—

[Cin. "Great West."

"Having been observing the progress of improvement, and examining the various "new and useful" inventions in the Patent Office at Washington, for a few days past, I have seen nothing recently entered which appears more interesting, more perfect in its operation, or evinces more scientific genius in its mechanical arrangement, than an improved telegraph, invated by L. G. Curtiss, Esq., editor of the Cincinnati Commercial. The machine is much more simple than the ordinary register, and is so constructed that when in connection, every motion of the finger of the operator causes a revolving dial to move one point. The periphery or face circle of the dial, has the figures, 0, 1, 2 3, 4, several times repeated; and by means of these and other figures, not only the several letters of the alphabet, but nearly half of the words in common use, may be expressed or designated by four or less motions of the finger. The motion of the dial is continuous from one position to any other required, but stops on the figure to be noted, or a little beyond it, at the option of the operator; & by means of these variations, any number from 1 to 999 may be readily designated by four or less motions; and the different numbers within this compass are used to express the longest and most difficult words. Whether Mr. Curtiss' improvement will be preferred to all others, I will not say; but he will probably reap a liberal reward for his ingenuity displayed in this invention."

That the reader may be more acquainted with our invention we state that there are only two modes of telegraphing discovered. One is by 'marking' characters on paper, said to have been discovered in Europe, by Steinheil, and now in general use in this country. The other indicating letters, discovered long ago, and in use in England. The Steinheil operation is far superior to the Indicator of Prof. Wheatstone, which is the telegraph now in use in Europe.—Ours is the "American Indicating Telegraph," differing in every essential from Prof. Wheatstone's, being 'faster' and more accurate than the Steinheil or Morse instrument, and capable of be worked when the marking instruments must remain idle! Our opinion is that Morse perfected and patented the marking or Registering Telegraph, and that we have perfected the Indicating Telegraph, and that our application of figure, as representations of letters & words, enables us, with our simple machine, to be faster and more accurate—to write with periods and points, and to designate italic and capitals, which cannot be done with Morse's instruments, or any other in use! Again, our instruments can be learned in one day by any intelligent man, boy, or girl, while Morses' requires at least three months, and at last only a few persons can ever learn to telegraph by it rapidly and correctly; & further, in geneally requires as much time to 'correct' a despatch sent by Morse's instruments, as it does it originally, and at last mistakes are most frequent and annoying! In our American Indicating Telegraph system, mistakes of the machine cannot occur; for, if the machines move at all, they must indicate correctly.

VESSEL FOR LIBERIA.—A vessel will leave N. Orleans for Liberia in December next. Colored people in the valley of the Mississippi are to apply to Rev. Wm. McLain. Washington city, or to Rev. A. M. Cowan, Frankfort, Ky.

The African M. E. Church.

The membership of the Ebenezer station have had erected for their congregation, a very handsome edifice, located on Montgomery street, east of Hanover, which constitute quite an ornament to the neighborhood. It is constructed in a very creditable manner, containing side and front galleries, the former reserved for the use of the flourishing Sabbath School attached to the station, and the latter used by the choir.—The church is provided with very neat lamps, and the pulpit forms one of the most prominent ornaments of the interior, whilst the seats are so arranged, as to seat, very conveniently, about six hundred persons. The church was consecrated on Sunday last, when the following exercises took place:—In the morning, reading of the 86th psalm by Rev. D. A. Payne, and hymn by Rev. H. Jones, pastor of the church, and the regular discourse by Rev. A. W. Wayman, of Washington, concluding with the usual exercise by Rev. B. Lynch. In the afternoon, reading of the 136th psalm, and an appropriate sermon was also pronounced by Rev. Dr. J. M. Moore, based on chap. 3, verse 10, of Malachi. Rev. John L. Armstrong also delivered an able sermon in the evening. Collections were taken up throughout the day, amounting in the aggregate to $110.—Baltimore Sun.

Hayti.—The French consul has written a letter to the President of Hayti, to stop all political executions, or France will commence hostilities against him.

Terrible Hurricane in Antigua.—The island of Antigua was visited by a most destructive hurricane on the 21st ultimo, by wich 2,000 buildings were unroofed, and 700 totally destroyed. Some fifteen or twenty persons were killed.

EMANCIPATION IN KENTUCKY.

A correspondent writing from Frankfort to the Louisville Courier says:

Now, that the election is over, and it has become to "fixed fact" that we are to have a convention to form a new constitution, the changes in the present constitution is a subject of very frequent discussion on the streets, in the barrooms, and other places where people congregate to kill off a half hour of leisure time. The gradual emancipation of slaves seems to be the all-absorbing question; and from all I can learn from persons who live in different portions of the State, that will be the 'great question' next summer in the election of members of the convention. During the last and previous winters, the friends of the convention, assembled here, issued a pronunciamento that the slavery question should not enter into the canvass, nor be considered as one of the reforms they desired to bring about. The people, however, will no be controlled or hemmed in by the articles of faith promulgated in the document referred to. I think the slavery question will be the only 'exciting' question in the convention. Those in favor of the gradual emancipation will not urge that the present generation of slaves are to be made free, but that all born after some period to be fixed, say 1855 or '60, should be free at the age of 22 years. Now, when it is recollected that slaves are regarded as very unsafe property on the Ohio river, and for one hundred miles back, and that four-fifths of the voters of Kentucky are non-slaveholders, the presumption may be indulged, by those in favor of gradual emancipation, that a majority of the members of the convention will be in favor of their peculiar notions. The great body of foreigners who support themselves by daily labor may be counted in opposition to slavery, and in favor of gradual emancipation.

Interesting Slave Cases.

The Holly Springs (Miss.) Gazette, of the 4th inst., gives the following important cases decided in the Circuit Court. The first was to this effect:—

Two men had employed a slave without the consent of the master, to assist them in unloading a wagon of cotton, promising to pay the slave in liquor. The liquor was furnished, and the boy, while engaged in unloading the wagon, was killed by a third person. Suit was brought by the owner of the slave for his value, against all the parties, the employer and the slayer.—The jury gave the plaitiff a verdict for the value of the slave against all the defendants.

The other case was a State prosecution against a slave for stealing a slave.

The court, Hon. Hugh R. Miller, presiding, charged the jury that a slave could steal a slave, and that the owner of the thief was responsible to the owner of the stolen slave for his value.—The case was one of much excitement, inasmuch as negro testimony was admitted on behalf of the State to sustain the prosecution. The jury found a verdict for the prisoner upon the ground as stated by them in rendering their verdict, that the proof for the prosecution was not satisfactory.

REFORM.—As this is the great day of reform on all hands, we advise that some of reformers proceed, forthwith, to reform themselves, of which they stand in great need.

Great Earthquake in the West Indies.—Accounts from the West Indies have been received by an arrival at Boston, Sept. 13th.

An earthquake had occurred at St. Kitts, more destructive in effects than any for several years past. There were three shocks, which lasted for five hours, throwing down most of the tenements upon the Island, and extending its ravages to the sugar and other crops. The canes have been destroyed, and many of the plantations are a perfect waste. Many lives have been lost, upon land and water. The Schooner Mary foundered off the Island, and was lost with all the crew. Another went down at St. Martins, carrying with it ten persons. It had been found necessary to convene the Legislature to afford relief to the sufferers.

At Antigua, the English Harbor and Falmouth were visited by the earthquake, and the greater portion of both overthrown. All the sugar fields and plantations had been more or less injured.—In the towns the ruin is general, large buildings and among them five churches, have been demolished. Eleven persons were killed by the falling fragments. As gloomy as is this intelligence, it is feared that the worst is still to come.

Interesting Marriage.

The Second Baptist Church, was the scene of very interesting missionary ceremonies on Sunday evening. The occasion was the farewell exercises, preparatory to the departure of two Missionaries for Arracan. Reverend Henry I. Van Meter, of Philadelphia, and Miss Louisa Hooker, daughter of Alexander Hooker, Esq., of Irondequoit.—These young persons, who go out under the auspices of the Baptist Board of Missions, have been preparing themselves for the work, by a diligent course of study at Maddison University. There were interesting religious services at the church, and after appropriate remarks from Rev. Mr. Colliut, of Roxbury, Mass. and Rev. Chas. Thompson, of this city, and the singing of a beautiful hymn by the Choir, Mr. Van Meter and Miss Hooker were united by Rev. Dr. Tucker.

In the course of the evening Rev. Dr. Tucker, who, some years since, when pastor of the Church, baptised the young lady who has now devoted herself to the work of Missions, and who occupied that same pulpit when the Rev. Grover Comstock, fourteen years since, took his farewell of his congregation with whom he had been connected for years, to enter the field where he had since fallen, addressed the congregation; Dr. T. also read a beautifully written and very affecting farewell address from Miss Hooker, in which she bade an affectionate adieu to the Church with which she had been connected as Sunday school scholar and member from infancy to the present time. She also took leave of her relatives and friends, and declared that although the sacrifice was painful in the extreme, yet so profoundly was she impressed with a sense of duty that were the pains much greater, she could cheerfully endure them for the sake of the cause to which she had devoted her life.

A fish came through the hydrant of a hotel in Cincinnati, alive and in good case, and delivered himself up to the authorities in the kitchen.

The Ohio Penitentiary is now lit up with gas, manufactured in the building, from grease saved from the kitchen.

There were 132 deaths in Philadelphia last week.

The St. Lonis Republican says Bishop Chse was thrown frm his buggy on Thursday the 24th ult. at Springfield, Illinois, and had some of his ribs broken; besides being otherwise injured.

The Dreadful Railroad Accident.

The Philadelphia Ledger, of yesterday morning, gives the following full account of the fatal accident on the Baltimore and Philadelphia Railroad, on Sunday night, a brief account of which we gave yesterday:

A shocking accident occurred about half-past one o'clock yesterday morning on the Baltimore Railroad, near Wilmington. The train that left this city at 10 o'clock on Sunday night, was detained for an hour and a half by a car running off the track near Gray's Ferry. After much labor, the car was replaced, and the train proceeded at its usual rate. As it neared Wilmington. Mr. John Dowling, the conductor, had taken his station on the locomotive beside the engineer, and in anticipation of meeting the up train, he directed the engineer to proceed slowly, so as to avoid all danger of a collision. With these precautions, the train had arrived within half a mile of Wilmington, when the conductor, concluding that the other train was awaiting his arrival at that place, caused the speed of the train to be slightly accelerated. The train was going at the rate of about ten miles an hour, and had reached the curve between the Brandywine Bridge and Wilmington, when the up train was seen to be approaching. The engine was immediately reversed, but the trains were too close to avoid a collision.

The engineer and Mr. Dowling both jumped from the engine on the opposite side of track. The former escaped uninjured, but the latter fell, and the express car that was trown off the track by the collision passed over his foot, crushing it dreadfully.

The conductor of the up train, Mr. John Wolf, was also on the engine with the engineer and by his direction was proceeding very slowly. The motion of the engine was reversed immediately on perceiving the approach of the other train and by this means its progress was arrested, and was stationary when the collision occurred. Mr. Wolf and the engineer jumped from their stations; and in this way saved themselves.

Michael McDermott, the breaksman of the up train, was at his post on the front of the baggage car, and beside him stood Mr. Chickering, a machinist.—Both these unfortunate men were crushed through the door of the baggage car by the tender being driven against it in the collision. Their injuries were of the most serious nature, and terminated fatally. McDermott died in about an hour, and Chickering survived until after 4 o'clock.

The engines sustained but little damage, and can be repaired in a few days. The tenders, express cars and baggage cars were considerably damaged, being thrown off the track.

The passengers, though dreadfully alarmed, escaped any serious injury, which is mainly to be attributed to the fact that none were upon the platforms at the time of the accident. One of the cars had its platforms completely broken up, so that if any persons had been standing upon them they would have inevitably been horribly crushed.

Mr. McDermott was a man of family, and lived in South street, near the Gray's Ferry Road Chickering was employed as a machinist in the company's shop at Wilmington. The remains of these individuals were left at Wilmington, and inquests held upon them yesterday morning.

The conductors having charge of the trains had been in the employ of the company for many years, and were noted for their carefulness. Unfortunately the steam whistles of both engines were blowing as the trains approached, mutually preventing each engineer from hearing the alarm from the other train.

This is the first serious accident that has occurred upon the road for the last five years, and considering the circumstances of the case, it is a Providential affair that the passengers escaped injury.

The Wilmington Gazette contains the following particulars as to the cause of the accident:—

The "up train" waited half an hour longer than its due time at Newport, the instructions being, that in the event of not meeting an expected train at a passing-place, the train which may have arrived shall wait half an hour and then proceed slowly, presuming that the cause of delay has occurred beyond the next station ahead. A train delayed and endeavoring to gain its goal is directed to keep a "sharp look out," and to keep a man ahead at curves, following him slowly. A slight delay by the down train was mas made at the curve here, and the whistles of both trains blown; but no man was sent ahead, and upon this ommision of the down train, is according to the report which we have, the blame of the accident laid.

Mr. Dowling's foot, it is believed, will not be lost.

The lost of life is dreadful to reflect upon. Is there no remedy for these occurrences? A train had better wait until doomsday at appointed passing places, rather than run these risks.

NAVIGATION.—The waters are extremely low, and the repairs at Beverly are not yet completed but is supposed they will be before long.—Z. Gazett.

MURDER.—On last Thursday night a murder was committed near Sharon, in Morgan county. The name of the murdered man was McBride: the murderer was his step-son, William Ashfield; his mother, the wife of the deceased, being implicated.—Ashfield has fled, but his mother is in prison. Persons were in Zanesville in pursuit of him on Friday last.—Z. Gaz.

ACQUITTAL.—Daniel L. Kemp, who was arrested a few weeks since at Ravenswood, Jackson county, Va., on the charge of having, ten years ago, killed Salathiel Carter, at Mount Sterling, in this county, was tried on Monday last, and promptly acquitted by the jury. He alleged that the deed was done in self defence; and the jury did not consider that the evidence sustained a different opinion. They were out a few minutes; and their verdict seemed to be highly gratifying to the crowded audience that had patiently listened to the trial. The prior and subsequent good character of the accused was abundantly proved.—Z. Gaz.

A NOBLE ACT HANSOMELY ACKNOWLEDGED.—The City counsels of New York have voted the freedom of the city and a gold box, with suitable inscriptions, to Frederick Jerome, the gallant sailor who saved so many passengers on the Ocean Monarch, at the evident peril of his own life. Jerome belongs to the port of New York, where his wife and family reside. He had, on a previous occasion, saved a number of lives, and when the catastrophe happened to the Ocean Monarch, he swam to the wreck and with his own hands lowered some fifteen or twenty helpless females into the boat. He was rewarded by a present of £50 from the Prince de Joinville and the Duc d'Amule; the Queen of England also presented him with another £50, and the Humane Society of Liverpool with a gold medal. The intrepid sailor is expected to reach New York in a day or two in the ship New World, where his heroism and humanity have been so handsomly acknowledged.

CINCINNATI.

It is always pleasant and sometimes advantageous, to learn what intelligent travelers think and say of our city and the state of which this is the great metropolis. A correspondent of the New York Evening Post traveling west, says:

The "Lake Erie and Mad River Railroad," passes through a beautiful portion of Ohio. It is now completed from Sandusky to Cincinnati, with the exception of a few miles between Urbana and Springfield.

Between Sandusky and Bellefontaine, the country along the railroad as perfectly level and occasionally swampy. But most of the land of small extent, and the land that has been cleared by settlers, it is covered with the most magnificent forests eye ever beheld. The principal trees are the elm, the white oak, & the hickory. They are tall and straight, and generally not less than two or three feet in diameter. There is but little under-brush; so that one can see nothing on each side of the road but the high columns of the forest trees, and their intermingling boughs above. To ride with railway speed for hours on a pleasant morning through these forest is well worth, to a citizen of an eastern town a journey to Ohio.

The traveler is astonished at the evidences he sses of the immense amount of wheat that is raised in this region. Large stacks of it are standing in almost every field. At the stations and villages along the railroad capacious storehouses are filled with grain. Long trains pass daily over the road to Sandusty, freighted with wheat. At Griffin, thirty-eight, and Kenton, seventy-eight miles from Sandusky, more than 300,000 bushels of wheat are yearly received, and sent to market on the railroad.

From Bellefontaine south, the land is rolling and more thickly settled. Urbana, 120 miles from Sandusky, and 14 miles south of Bellefontaine, is a beautiful town containing two or three thousand inhabitants. Springfield, 14 miles farther south, has a considerable amount of water power, which is partly improved, and a population of 4,000. Dayton, to the south-west of Springfield, is one of the finest towns in the State. The lands in these towns and their vicinity, and down the vallies of the Miami rivers, are the best in Ohio. Their fertility and beauty are unsurpassed by any in the vallies of the Connecticut and Genesee.

In fact it is difficult to conceive of a region better adapted to agriculture. Large portions of these lands are under cultivation. The stage road from Dayton to Cincinnati, a distance of 50 miles, passeed through one almost continuous field of corn, the same is true of the railroad, down the valley of the Little Miami. In these portions of Ohio it is nothing unusual to see one, two and three hundred acres of corn in a single field. Near Milford, ten or fifteen miles from Cincinnati, I saw a field of corn three miles in length, and containing, it is said, 1,000 acres. These are strange sights to an eastern man, but none the less beautiful or interesting.

The region of Columbus and the valley of the Sciota is said to nearly equal, in beauty and fertility, the lands we have described. If so, then large portions of Ohio are exceedingly beautiful and fertile. The mineral and commercial resources of this State are limited. Hence there is nothing to turn its citizens aside from agriculture. With its fertile soil and delightful climate, Ohio must, therefore, contain when its entire surface shall be brought under cultivation, many millions almost exclusively devoted to agriculture.

Cincinnati is situated on the Ohio, 494 miles from its mouth, and 455 miles from Pittsburgh. It extends three miles along the river and two back from the water. The city is regularly laid out. Many of the streets are adorned by fine edifices and shaded by beautiful trees.

The population of Cincinnati, in 1820, was 10,000; in 1830, 24 831; in 1840 48 338; and at the present time it is more than 100.000.

The city contains 72 Churches, an Astronomical Observatory, 3 Colleges, 4 Medical Schools, 1 Law School, and numerous Female Seminaries and Classical Schools.

Thirteen daily, twenty-five weekly, and four monthly periodicals are published here.

There are in Cincinnati several extensive foundries, numerous cotton and woolen factories, and manufactories of almost every kind. But the business in which Cincinnati excels every other place, is pork packing. 487.094 hogs were killed in the city. Supposing their average weight was 200 lbs., their total weight would be nearly 100.000.000 lbs., which, if equally distributed, would give every man, woman & child in the U. States, each five pounds of pork.

Just back of the city lies a range of hills which are crowned by two beautiful villages, Mount Auburn and Walnut Hills. Being 200 or 300 feet above Cincinnati, the situation of these villages is exceedingly beautiful. They overlook the city and the river, for several miles above and below Cincinnati, and Newport and Covington on the opposite shore in Ky.

Mount Auburn is principally composed of the residences of men doing business in the city.—The cottages and dwellings in this village are, many of them, very elegant buildings. The grounds about them are very highly adorned, though there is very little of the shrubbery that is merely ornamental. The useful and the beautiful are combined in the pear, the peach, the plum, the apple and the vine.

C. G.

Cincinnati. August, 1848.

DIED.—John Hoy, a man of intepmerate habits, died in the Zanesville jail, on last Sunday. He had been committed for assaulting a watchman.—Z. Gaz.

NOTICES.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

PITTSBURGH DISTRICT.

Washington, Pennsylvania, August 13, 1848.

BR. BASSETT: You will confer a favor, by publishing for me, the following plan of presidential visitation:

Fairmont circuit, October 7th and 8th.
Clarksburgh circuit, October 14th and 15th.
Lewis circuit, October 21st and 22d.
Braxton circuit, October 28th and 29th.
Buchanan circuit, November 4th and 5th.
Lewis mission, November 11th and 12th.
Philippi circuit, November 18th and 19th.
Evansville circuit, November 25th and 26th.

The superintendents will please give me notice, either by letter, addressed to this place, or thro' the 'Recorder,' where my meetings are to be held. The above appointments I will fill, if the Lord will. May the Great Head of the Church be with his servant and aid him in his labors. Yours in Christ, JOHN COWL.

MUSKINGUM DISTRICT.

Steubenville, Sept. 25, '38.

Br. Bassett:—I find it necessary to make a change in the plan of my appointments, as published in the last Recorder. You will please therefore publish the following as the corrected plan:

Georgetown	et., Oct. 15,		1848
Woodsfield	" " 22		"
Belmont	" " 29		"
Pleasant Hill	" Nov. 5		"

Yours, very truly, [illegible]GAN.

OHIO DISTRICT.

BR. BASSETT: Please publish the following list of appointments:

Darby mission, October 7th and 8th, 1848.
Richwood circuit, October 14th and 15th, 1848.
Mad River mission, October 21st and 22nd, 1848.
Miami circuit, October 28th and 29th, 1848.
Clarksburgh circuit, November 11th and 12th, 1848.
Bainbridge circuit, November 18th and 19th, 1848.
Bourneville circuit, November 25th and 26th, 1848.

JOSEPH WHITE.

GENESEE CONFERENCE.

The Genesee Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church will commence its nineteenth session at Loon Lake, Stuben county, New York, on the first Tuesday in October, 1848, at 10 o'clock, A. M. It is presumed that a committee will be in waiting, at the place, as usual, to assign ministers and delegates their respective places for entertainment. A full attendance is desired. And we shall be happy to greet any of our brethren from sister Conferences, who may be pleased to favor us with a fraternal visitation. The post office address of the Conference is "Patchin's Mills, Stuben county, New York." E A WHEAT, Secretary.

Elba, August 21st, 1848.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The Illinois Conference, M. P. Church, meets at Camp Ground, near Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15, 1848.

The Pittsburgh Conference meets at Fairmont, Va., August 29, 1848.

The Pennsylvania Conference, meets at South Canaan Meeting House, Wayne Co. August 30, 1848.

The Ohio Conference meets at Lebanon, O., September 6, '48.

The Onondaga Conference meets at Sand Bank, Oswego, N. Y. September 6, 1848.

The Muskingum Conference meets at Cambridge, O., September 13, '48.

The Iowa Conference meets at Burr Oak Ridge, Cedar, Iowa, September 13, 1848.

The Vermont Conference meets at Shelbourn, Vermont, September 20, 1848.

The Missouri Conference meets at Mt. Pisgah Camp Ground, Green County Mo. September 21, 1848.

The Michigan Conference meets at Adrian, Michigan, September 27, 1848.

The Tennessee Conference meets at Unionville, Tenn. September 29, 1848.

The Arkansas Conference meets at James Walker's, White County, Ark. October 2, 1848.

The North Illinois Conference meets at Princeton, Ill. October 4, 1848.

The Indiana Conference meets at Pleasant Grove Chapel, Putnam County, Ia., October 4, '48.

The Louisiana Conference meets at Union Church Camp Ground, De Soto parish, October 11, 1848.

The Wabash Conference meets at Middletown, Ia. October 18, 1848.

The Georgia Conference meets at Le Grange ch. Newton County Georgia, October 20, 1848.

The North Carolina Conference meets at Fair Grove Guilford Ct October 20, 1848.

The Virginia Conference meets at Hampton, Va. November 9, 1848.

The Huntsville Conference meets at White Plains, Benton county, Alabama, November 9, 1848.

The Alabama Conference meets at Montgomery, Alabama, November 17, 1848.

The Mississippi Conference meets at Harmon's, Attaal county, Georgia, December 1, 1848.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

J Hudson,	O	G G Collins	Pa
P Kinsley	"	N Gillespie	Va
John Burns 1 sub	"	J Scott	"
Z Ragan	"	D R Helmick	"
D G Oaks	Ia	W Williamson	"
J Mills	Mich	R P Gilliam	Mo
T Foster 2; one sub	Pa	S Dilley 2 subs	Ill
		A Wood	"

☞Receipts at Muskingum Conference will be inserted in our next paper.

"Methodist Protestant," and "Boston Olive Branch." Please change the address of Rev. John Burns, from Mt. Pleasant, O. to Cadiz, Harrison county, O.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

Received at Pittsburgh Conference.

From	For	Pays to	Vol.	No.	$ cts.
R H Walker,	J Maxwell,	10	37	2	00
D D Hughes,	S M'Corkle,	10	9	2	00
"	Himself,	9	52	1	00
W H Doe,	J Claney,	8	52	4	00
"	P C Root,	10	26	2	00
"	A Robinson,	9	52	2	00
H Palmer,	W Moody,	10	52	2	00
"	T Nesmith,	7	52	2	00
J Sexsmith,	D Heysham,	9	52	2	00
I Holland,	E Squires,	9	26	2	50
J Scott,	B C Miller,	8	52	4	00
"	J Gallaher,	10	3	1	00
"	D Jenkins,	10	24	2	00
J Cowl,	H Patterson,	10	52	2	00
"	J Wright,	9	52	2	00
G Nester,	I E Morrison,	10	35	2	00
V Lucas,	J Edmiston,	10	26	2	50
"	T Rankin,	10	29	2	00
"	W Utsler,	10	9	1	00
D R Helmick,	N Warder,	8	52	2	00
G A Compton,	A Fuller,	9	52	4	00
W P Ellison,		9	52	1	00
H Lucas,		9	52	1	00
E Martin,		9	52	1	00
Joseph Burns,	J Moon,	9	52	2	00
"	M Fleming,	9	52	2	00
"	G M Ray,	9	52	2	00
"	I Hall,	9	52	1	00
"	J Bowers,	10	26	1	50
"	G Nester,	9	26	2	00
"	A Fordyce,	10	52	2	00
"	Wm Powell,	9	52	2	00
"	J W Phillips,	9	52	4	00
"	O Haymond,	9	52	4	00
"	J Gepford.	9	26	5	00
"	E H Compton,	10	9	2	00
"	W M Dunnington,	7	52	2	00
"	Wm John, fun,	9	52	2	50
"	J Patterson,	10	13	2	50
"	Z M Peirpoint,	9	52	2	00
"	A Fleming,	9	52	4	00
"	W Holland,	9	26	2	00
"	J Cochran,	7	26	1	05
"	Jas Thorp,	9	52	4	00
"	J W Brown,	11	26	5	00
"	R Wilkinson,	9	52	1	00
"	A Hall,	10	52	2	00
"	J Shoop,	9	52	1	00
"	Dr J N Green,	9	52	1	00
"	J M'Daniel,	9	52	1	00
B Garrettson,	J Kern,	10	42	5	00
A H Trumbo,	Mrs. S Hopper,	10	9	2	00
"	W Buchanan,	9	52	2	00
"	S Coukling,	10	41	2	50
"	I Coukling,	10	45	4	00
Wm Tipton,	R Seal,	10	41	2	00
A M'Guire,		9	52	1	00
J S Cleland,		10	30	2	00
R Rose,	A Laybourn,	10	52	2	00
"	T Funston,	10	53	2	00
"	T Mills,	10	52	2	00
"	J Hess,	10	4	1	00
"	E Arbogast,	9	30		75
Wm Jacks,		8	52	4	00
J D Langdon,	Miss S Nisely,	10	52	2	00
"	Himself,	10	52	1	00
T B Graham,		10	52	1	00
W Hamilton,	J Stout,	9	52	1	00
"	Himself,	9	52	1	00
L S Ingersoll, Lebanon,		9	52	2	00
A Crotors,		10	52	4	00
G Crotors,		9	52	4	00
A Lane,		10	26	2	00
Mrs E Hall, Cincinnati,		10	52	2	00
J Layman,		9	52	2	00
W W Cones,		10	35	1	50
Wm Closson,		10	52	1	50
E Mudge,		10	52	1	50

W. D.,—Va. owes only for 3 months past

Br Z M Peirpoint, Va., will see that he is credited to end of vol. 9.

Br J Gepford, the $5 received pays for volumes 7 & 8, and half of vol. 9. One dollar more yet due on vol. 9.

Received at the Ohio Conference.

J M Young,	J Leach,	9	16	2	00
J B Peat,	J Chapman,	10	28	2	00
"	J S Peat	10	38	2	00
"	J Norris,	10	39	2	00
"	E Norris,	9	26	1	00
W G Fowler,	T Parmer,	10	28	2	00
"	Jos Turner,	10	4	1	50
"	J Middleton,	10	20	2	00
"	E B Harnsock,	9	43	2	00
"	Mrs E Johnson,	9	52	2	00
"	A Sabin,	10	34	2	00
"	S Earley,	10	34	2	00
"	G Johnson,	10	23	2	00
"	I Gerard,	9	52	2	00
"	Z M Baugham,	10	32	2	00
"	D Falkner,	9	47		50
"	S Painter,	10	34	2	00
"	J M Johnson,	9	52	2	00
"	B Thomas,	10	34	2	00
"	Wm Ary,	10	34	2	00
"	W Cattrell,	10	17	2	00
R K Davis,	A D Safford,	9	23	1	00
A Channell,	A Patton,	9	52	2	00
R M Dalbey,	L Lyons,	10	14	5	00
"	J Carnes,	9	52	2	00
"	Wm Riley,	10	25	2	00
"	W P Taylor,	10	4	2	00
C H Williams,	G W Corn,	9	52	2	00
"	R Elliott, Jr.,	11	10	2	00
W Hughey,	C Straley,	9	52	2	00
J H Surface,		10	9	1	00
J L Borton,	J M'Guire,	10	7	1	00
L Ensminger,	R Wallace,	9	5	2	00
"	M Ensminger,	8	52	2	00
S P Kezerta,	R Smith,	10	28	2	00

Advertisements

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & CO.

HAVE the pleasure of announcing the earliest arrival of a CHOICE and EXTENSIVE ASSORTMENT of

FALL & WINTER GOODS,

Consisting in part of Dry Goods, Groceries, Queensware, Hardware, Hats and Caps, Boots and Shoes, Leather, Paints, Oils, Dye-Stuffs, Iron, Nails, Glass, Stationary, Music, Jayne's Family Medicines and other Drugs.

We are prepared to offer GREAT BARGAINS in WOOLEN GOODS, DRESS GOODS, BOOTS SHOES, and HEAVY DOMESTICS.

Our stock of Prints, Ginghams, De Laines, Alpaccaas Lyonesse and Coburg Cloths, California Plaids, Cashmeres French Merinos, Roselind Plaids, Italian Lustres and Gala Plaids, is very full, and the styles new and very pretty.

Cambrics, Jaconetts, Mull Muslins, Edging, and Lace, of all kinds, in great variety.

Hosiery Shawls. Hkf., Linens, &c. &c. CHEAP.

We deem it unnecessary to go into a tedious detail. We say with confidence that our stock is the best that will be seen in PUTNAM this season, and that our prices can and shall be made satisfactory to our Customers. We respectfully tender our thanks to our large circle of patrons and request a continuance of their favors. To the public in general we say, examine our stock if you please, whether you buy or not, we take pleasure in showing our goods.

WANTED

Every description of Country Produce, for which the market rates will be paid.

We hope that the present plentiful crops will enable our debtors to square up old accounts. And we respectfully request them not to pass us by whether able to pay up or not.

GUTHRIE, BUCKINGHAM & Co.

Putnam, September 18, 1848.

PUTNAM FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE Winter Term of the Putnam Female Seminary will commence Wednesday October 4th, and continue 25 weeks.

The design of this Institution, in its present organization, is to elevate the standard of Female Education.—It has a Primary, Academic and Collegiate Department. Through its excellent Principal, Instructresses and Professors, it provides thorough and solid instruction, for the various stages and branches of education, deemed requisite to the formation of a useful, accomplished, christian character.

The full Collegiate course occupies four years, and has it is believed, a wider range of studies, and a more thorough system of instruction, than any similar institution in the State: embracing, not only the English branches taught in our best Colleges, but also the Latin and German Languages, for which there is no extra charge.

Young ladies, however, who do not wish to study the languages, have every facility for pursuing the English branches, which is furnished by any female Seminary.

Parents, who wish to give their daughters an accomplished and thorough education, are assured that the very best advantages for this purpose are here enjoyed; and that no pains will be spared, by competent and efficient teachers to render the situation of the young ladies, who may resort to the Institution, in the highest degree pleasant and conducive to their mental and moral improvement.

The location is delightful, the building ample, the accommodations excellent, and the facilities for quiet and retired study such as are rarely furnished.

The expenses are put at the lowest possible rate. For Board, Washing and a separate room for every two pupils, lighted and warmed, (while the season requires it,) so as to be a convenient and retired study, the charges are $2,00 per week for the Winter term, and $1,75 for the Summer term. Those who choose to do their own washing will be allowed a deduction of 25 cts per week.

TUITION.

Winter Term $12,000 Summer Term $8,00

EXTRA STUDIES.

Music with the use of the Piano $30,00 per year.
(Instruction in vocal music to all pupils gratis.)
Drawing and Painting $15,00 per year.
French 12,00 "

Latin and German, as they are embraced in the regular course, no charge.

Tuition in the Primary Department. $10,00 per year.

This department will hereafter be taught by Miss Alice Cone.

For further particulars, inquiries may be made of the Principal, Miss M. Cone, or any of the undersigned Trustees of the Institution.

A. KINGSBURY, President.

SOLOMON STURGIS,
ALVA BUCKINGHAM,
J. C. GUTHRIE,
C. C. CONVERS,
C. P. BUCKINGHAM,
} Trustees.

A. A. GUTHRIE Secretary

References: Dr SMITH, President Marietta College; Drs STOWE and ALLEN, Lane Seminary; Rev E GOODMAN, Cincinnati; Rev W H BEECHER, Euclid; Hon B LANE, Sandusky City; Rev H L HITCHCOCK, Columbus; Rev F S HOWE, Chillicothe; and the Rev H LITTLE, Madison Ia. n51

September 6, 1848.

DR. WM. MIL

Poet's Corner.

Regard to the Feelings of Others.

There is a plant that in its cell
All trembling seems to stand,
And bend its stalk and fold its leaves,
From each approaching hand.

And thus there is a conscious nerve
Within the human breast,
That from the rash or careless hand
Shrinks and retires—distrest.

The pressure rude, the touch severe,
Will raise within the mind
A nameless thrill, a secret tear,
A torture undefined.

O you who are by nature formed,
Each thought refined to know,
Repress the word, the glance that wakes
That trembling nerve to woe.

And be it still your joy to raise
The trembler from the shade;
To bind the broken, and to heal
The wounds by others made.

Whene'er you see the feeling mind,
Oh, let this care begin,
And though the cell be rude or low,
Respect the guest within.

Reported for the Western Recorder.

ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Board of Managers of the Aid Society, of the Pittsburgh Conference, Methodist Protestant Church.

As the success of the Aid Society is of vital importance to the efficiency and perpetuity of our Itinerant Ministry, which is the only hope of the prosperity of the Methodist Protestant Church, so dear to our hearts;—so it is with unfeigned pleasure and satisfaction that we are able to report the encouraging circumstances in which the Society is now placed. The chief cause of the cheering increase of the funds of the Society—which will be reported this year, is the success of the President round the District, in obtaining subscriptions. That was a happy course—in the last Annual Meeting—the appointment of an Agent in the person of the President, to procure subscriptions and donations, at all appointments for his official visits. For it is to be expected that the President, at his annual visits, will excite a greater interest in bringing out the people than the minister can do who is laboring statedly among them for the year. And then the hearts of the people, probably, are more open to give to this benevolent object, than on ordinary occasions.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers, in January last, the President reported his success up to that time, beside unpaid subscriptions, in monies received—from different, appointments—in all, $73 85cts. Upon which, the Board passed Sundry Resolutions, expressive of their views of the vast importance of this effort to raise a Fund for the benefit of our superannuated itinerant ministers, their widows, and orphan children.—Tendering also our heart-felt thanks to Brother Brown, for the successful exertions he has made to increase the supscriptions to the Society. Calling also upon all our members and friends to come forward heartily, and aid in this great and good work. Also earnestly and affectionately soliciting the aid and co-operation of our female friends in this delightful labor of love, for which they are so admirably qualified to render efficient assistance. Those Resolutions, by order of the Board, were published in the Western Recorder. And doubtless, when the President's account of his labors during the year is read, fresh hopes and new vigor will be inspired in the bosom of all the friends of the Society.

Much has been done during the past Conference year, for which we feel truly grateful. But much more need be done, to make the fund what the friends of the Society most ardently desire, to wit: a source of confident and safe reliance to the effective Itinerant, that when he can labor no longer, he will not be left without bread; and when he is removed by death, that his helpless family will not be abandoned to absolute want. Accordingly, we respectfully recommend that the President for the ensuing Conference year, be also appointed Agent for the Society, to procure more subscriptions and donations—for the object above specified. And hope that he too may be abundantly successful in his endeavors, and pray that he may be equally blessed in his deeds.

It will be necessary, we may just remark, as must be obvious to every one, that the subscriptions be collected, or, after all, the labor of procuring the subscriptions will be lost, and the expectations of friends cut off. May we be permitted to suggest that it is attended with many & great advantages, when the money is paid at the time of subscribing it. And when this cannot conveniently be done, the subscriber confers an additional favor by calling and leaving it with the minister, as early as opportunity allows.—But where payment is not made, in due season, let the minister be sure to call on the subscribers for the amount due. We know this adds to his many duties, but it is necessary that this should also be done.

Of course, by recommending the appointment of an agent for the District, it is not supposed that the zealous co-operation of the Superintendents or their assistants, is thereby superseded. The active efforts of all our friends are necessary to accomplish the Benevolent design of the society to meet the pressing necessities of our Superannuated itinerant ministers, their widows and orphans.

The Board ventures delicately to suggest that the money to be distributed annually, be scrupuously applied to the proper objects expressly contemplated in the constitution and charter of the institution. The occasion of this remark is, that it has been said that part of the avails of the society, on one occasion at least, was thrown into the annual conference collections, and distributed among the needy in effective service. Now, pressing as may be the need of Itinerants still in the field of active toil, and worthy so-ever of all the help the church can render them, and deeply as we may sympathise with them in their necessity, they are not the objects for whom this society was organized. And to appropriate a single cent to their use, is to depart from the letter of the constitution of this organization. If the information in the above allusion is correct, we wot that through ignorance it was done; and that a recurrence of the kind will not again take place.

Finally, from the confidence we have in the practical knowledge of the Treasurer of the society, touching the most secure and profitable vestment of capital, we urge attention to the suggestion he has kindly made in his report. We esteem him a competent judge of these monetary matters, and know he has the good of the society in view in the remarks he has voluntarily made upon the subject.

All of which is respectfully submitted by the COMMITTEE.

1. Resolved, That the Report just read, justifies the belief, that the praise-worthy enterprise to which it refers, is regarded by the Almighty with special favor and approbation.

2. Resolved That as we live in an age of means—miracles being no longer necessary to the establishment of the principles of the Gospel, God expects his people to co-operate with Him in doing good to each other, and to mankind universally.

3. Resolved, That an indisposition on the part of professing Christians to be co-workers with the Great Head of the Church.—visible and invisible,—will inevitably involve them in guilt, and, there is reason to fear, in final condemnation.

4. Resolved, therefore, That it is not only the duty but the interest of the ministry and membership of the Methodist Protestant Church, within the bounds of the Pittsburgh Annual Conference, to manifest their faith by their works; and, as they are instructed, in the selection of the objects of their benevolence, to give a decided preference to such as are of the household of believers. it is earnestly hoped they will actively and efficiently participate in the business and proceedings of the "Aid Society," and thus make provision for the Superannuated and worn-out Ambassadors of Christ, their widows and orphan children.

Published by order of the "Aid Society of the Pittsburgh Annual Conference, of the Methodist Protestant Church."

G. B. M'ELROY, Secretary.

VARIETY.

VALUE OF THE SCIENCES.

The Journal of Commerce has an article on Electro-Magnetism, and the use made of the power by Professor Henry and Morse. To show the practical use of a study of such a science, the Journal says:

We are reminded in this connecion of an anecdote related to us by one of the most eminent counsellors in this State, which, while it illustrates our remarks, pays a very just complement to the learning of Prof. Henry. It is known to scientific men, that the field of this gentleman's most extensive and important investigations and discoveries, has been Electricity. In the course of a trial of a cause in the city of Albany, said Judge ———, I was employed by the defence, & called on Prof. Henry, then in the Albany Academy, to give the court and jury some information in regard to the variations of the magnetic needle. I was surprised and interested at the clear, dignified and forcible character of his testimony, and the readiness with which he explained the most difficult points. So much was I interested, that I made my notes of his testimony very full, and, after the confusion of the cause, I filed them away with the papers. Many years later I was employed in a cause in Albany county, which originated in the variation of the land marks from those laid down in the old deeds. Six county surveyors had been employed to run the line, and none could hit the old marks. We examined them all, day after day, and could reach no result. It occurred to me to open the testimony of Prof. Henry, which I had forgotten for years. I took it into court with me, and selecting the most intelligent of the surveyors, I asked him a series questions framed on that testimony. His replies were satisfactory. I then requested him to take a pencil, and giving him certain data from my notes, I requested him to calculate what his line would have been under such and such circumstances, variations, &c. He spent a long time in the calculations, but the result was to confirm the old deeds. All were astonished but myself.

A better illustration of the utility of many studies and discoveries which appear at first to be uselessness, not be asked.

THE TOBACCO REFORM.

We are pleased to learn that the religious press generally is speaking out against the useless and injurous habit of chewing and smoking the filthy weed. Many christians in different parts of the country are becoming awake to the importance of enjoying liberty from the evils of so unnatural and indecent a habit.—Some we could name who have lately declared their liberty purely for conscience' sake. Some we know who are very zealous in advocating liberty in other respects but who are perfect slaves to tobacco. We have sometimes wondered whether those who are so conscientious on other points have any conscience on this; or wether they think they are doing no harm in influencing every little boy and girl within their reach to learn the same evil practice.—How can a minister, especially, indulge in any habit that he would not recommend to others? But the work is begun, and will progress in proportion to the advancement of correct principles. Success to the anti-tobacco movement.—Rel. Tel.

Cases of Drowning.

The Coroner was on Friday of last week called to hold an inquest on the body of Mark Quindlen, 60 years of age, who on Wednesday evening fell overboard, at Almond street wharf, and was drowned. The deceased was one of the oldest pilots on Delaware, but for several years past he had not been in service.

Another inquest was held on Friday morning in Concord street, Southwark, on the body of Alfred W. Thornton, 13 years of age, who on the evening before fell from a vessel and was drowned. Verdicts according to the facts.

PRESERVATION OF STAIR CARPETS.—Stair carpets should always have a strip of paper put under them at and over the edge of every stair which is the part where they wear out, in order to lessen the friction of the carpets on the boards beneath. The strips should be within an inch or two as long as the carpet is wide, and about four or five inches in width; so as to be at a distance from each stair. This simple plan, so easy of execution, will, we know, preserve a stair carpet half as long again as it would without the strips of paper.—Germantown Telegraph.

From the Lutheran Standard.

Exploration of the Dead Sea.

There are only two instances known in which a boat was ever upon the water of the Dead Sea, previous to those of the United States Exploring Expedition. Dr. Robinson states in a note in his "Biblical Researches in Palestine," that Messrs. Moore & Beke transplanted a boat from Joppa on the Mediterranean Sea, to the Dead Sea, and attempted a survey of the latter; but were compelled to leave it unfinished. In what year this attempt was made, is not said. They sounded several times; and found the apparent depth to be more than 300 fathoms or 1,800 feet. But this depth was probably a deception, for it must have been a very heavy lead not to have been borne up by such a length of line in water of so great specific gravity as that of the Dead Sea.

The other instance is metioned by Stephens, in his 'Incidents of Travel in the Holy Land.' When Stephens visited Jericho, he was lodged in a hut which had a small boat set upon its side before it, so as to form a front wall. He learned the history of the boat which told a melancholy tale. It was the only one which had ever floated on the Dead Sea. About eight months before, namely in the summer of 1835, Mr. Costigan, an Irish traveller, had been for some years in the East, had projected a most interesting journey, and most unhappy for himself and the interests of science, died almost in the moment of its successful completion. He had purchased his boat at Beyroot, and with a Maltese sailor for his servant, in spite of many difficulties and impediments from the Arabs, had carried it across the country on a dromedary, and launched it on the sea of Galilee. He explored this most interesting water, and then entering the river Jordan where it leaves that sea, he followed it down until he narrowly escaped with his life among the rocks and rapids of an ancient but unknown river, & then constantly obstructed by the Arabs, even the Governor of Damascus refusing him any facilities, with great difficulty he succeeded in bringing his boat by land to the Dead Sea. In the middle of July he had embarked with his servant to make tour of the sea, and eight days afterwards an old Arab woman found him lying on the shore alone, gasping for breath. She carried him to her hut, where he lay till the Rev. Mr. Nicolaisen, the English Missionary at Jerusalem came for him, and the second day after his arrival in Jerusalem he died.

When the unfortunate Costigan was found by the Arabs on the shore of the Dead Sea and during the two days that he lived after he was carried to Jerusalem, he never once referred to his unfortunate voyage. He had long been a traveller in the East, and was long preparing for a voyage; he had read every book that treated of the mysterious water, and was thoroughly prepared with all the knowledge necessary for exploring it to advantage. Unfortunately for the interest of science, he had always been in the habit of trusting greatly to his memory; & after his death the missionaries at Jerusalem found no regular diary or Journal, but merely brief notes written on the margins of books, so irregular and confused that they could make nothing of them, from indifference or because they had no confidence in him, they allowed Costigans' servant to go without asking him any questions. Stephens took some pains to trace out this man, and afterwards, while lying at Beyroot, suffering from a malady which abruptly put an end to his travels in the East, he induced his guide to hunt him up. He was a little, dried-up Maltese sailor; had rowed around that sea without knowing why, except that he was paid for it; and Stephens thinks that what he stated to him in answer to his questions bore the stamp of truth, for he did not seem to think he had done any thing extraordinary. He knew as little about it as any man could know who had been over the same water; and yet after all, perhaps he knew as much as any one could learn. He seemed however to have observed the coast and the soundings with the eye of a sailor, and Stephens got him to make out a map of the sea from his recollectin of it which is engraved and printed in Stephens' work, and bears a very good resemblance to the best maps of the Dead Sea.

From his statement it appears that Costigan and himself, made the entire tour of the lake.—They were eight days in accomplishing the task, sleeping every night on shore, except one, when afraid of some suspicious looking Arabs whom they saw on the mountains, they slept on board, beyond the reach of gunshot from the land. He stated that they had moved in a zig-zag direction, crossing and re-crossing the lake several times, that every day they sounded, frequently with a line of 175 brachia, (about six feet each;) that they found the bottom rocky, and of very unequal depth sometimes ranging thirty, forty, eighty brachia all within a few boats' length; that sometimes the lead brought up sand like that of the mountains on each side; that they failed in finding bottom but once, and in that place were large bubbles all around for thirty paces, rising probably from a spring; that in one place they found on the bank a hot sulphur spring; that at the southern extremity Mr. Costigan looked for the River of Dogs, but did not find it; that in four places they found ruins; and could clearly distinguish large hewn stones, which seemed to have been used for buildings; and in one place they saw ruins which Mr. Costigan said were ruins of Gomorrah. Stephens thinks there is no doubt that Mr. Costigan talked with him as he went along and told him what he stated to Stephens; and that Mr. Costigan had persuaded himself that he saw the ruins of the guilty city; that he may have been deceived, and probably was, but it must have been the most intensely interesting illusion that ever man had.

He further stated to Mr. Stephens that the boat when empty, floated a palm higher out of the water than on the Mediterranean; and that Costigan lay on the water and picked a fowl, and tried to induce him to come in; that it was in the month of July, and from nine o'clock to five dreadfully hot, and every night a north wind blew, and the waves rose worse than in the Gulf of Lyons; and in reference to the peculiar exposures, and the circumstances that hurried poor Costigan to his unhappy fate, he said that they had suffered exceedingly from the heat, the first five days Costigan taking his turn at the oars, that on the 6th day their water was exhausted, and Costigan gave out; that on the 7th they were obliged to drink the water of the sea, and on the 8th they were near the head of the lake, and he himself exhausted, and unable any longer to pull an oar. There he made coffee from the water of the sea; and a favorable wind springing up, for the first time they hoisted their sail, and in a few hours reached the head of the lake; that feeble as he was he set off for Jericho.

A wag having had a dispute with a man who kept a sausage shop, and owing him a grudge, ran into his shop one day as he was serving several good customers, with an immense dead cat, which he quickly deposited on the counter, saying, 'This makes nineteen; as you are busy now we'll settle some other time;' and he was off in a twinkling. The customers, aghast, soon followed him, leaving the sausages behind.

The two Husbands.

Some ten years ago, as our readers will remember, there was what was termed a 'rebellion' in Canada, and after the 'patriots' were subdued, some were summarily executed, and a portion banished. for a long term of years to Australia. Most of these latter were men of families, from which they were torn without mercy, to expiate in a far distant land, by imprisonment and hard labor, the crime of the evils of misgovernment.

We think they acted very unwisely in proceeding to the extremes they did, but this point we will not stop to consider. With one of these expatriated men our tale has chiefly to do.

For seven or eight weary years he had borne the hardship of lonely captivity, hopeless of ever seeing his friends again, when a general amnesty was proclaimed by the British Government in regard to all, with one or two exceptions, of those who had been concerned in the rebellion. Our hero was now at liberty, and his first thought was to seek his home.—But he had no means to pay his passage there, and he accordingly shipped on board a whaling vessel, which at the end of two years more, landed him upon his native shores.

Wife, children, and friends filled his thoughts, as he hastened on to his old residence in Canada. Everything remained as it had been; friends and neighbors greeted him as he passed along—but how his heart sunk within him to find the homestead deserted, and to learn that his wife had been married two years to another, supposing the husband of her youth to be dead. She and her new found mate had left that part of the country and settled somewhere in Illinois.

The poor man felt desolate indeed, and he determined to see, and if possible to reclaim his wife and children. After a weary travel and many inquiries he traced them to Knox county, Illinois, where they were comfortably settled in their new home. There he presented himself a few days since. The wife could not have been more surprised or pained to see an apparition from the grave, for she had long considered him as dead. The new husband, too, was rather disagreeably surprised to see before him a claimant for his wife. What should be done? The first husband was anxious to obtain the lady, the second was disinclined to give her up, looking upon his claims as good.

They were reasonable people all round. The original claimant remained in the neighborhood a couple of weeks, during which time the matter was frankly talked over. At last the rivals came to the conclusion that the lady was the proper person to make a final decision of the question, and to her it was mutually agreed to refer it, giving her time to consider it in all its bearings.

What more perplexing position could a woman be placed in than that? Here were two men with almost equal claims upon her affection. One was the father of her children, the companion of her youth—the other bound to her heart by near and sacred ties, and by the mutual love they bore an infant that had been born to them. She could not for a time decide—what true hearted woman could? A tumult of thoughts and emotions filled her heart, alternately swaying her from side to side. Thus the conflict lasted for several days, during which time she was enabled to look clearly into her own heart, and at last she was ready for a decision.

Which could she choose but the man around whom were twined the tendrils of a first and strong affection—to whom she had given the first offerings of her heart? The needle may vibrate for a time, but it points at last with undeviating constancy to the never-setting star of the north; and in like manner, the heart of the true woman, having in the wide universe but one fitting mate, will, after all vicissitudes, turn lovingly to the sunny warmth of its "first, and only love."

A disposition of the youngest child must now be made, and it was mutually agreed by the two men, that as it could not be deprived of a mother's care, the first husband should take it with the other children, to be restored to the father at some future time. The re-united family now made preparations to go to a new home, and so great was the interest excited in the neighborhood by this singular affair, that as many as a hundred and fifty persons from the neighborhood were present to witness their departure. On Saturday last they came up in the packet Louisiana, on their way to Michigan, where they will take up their residence.

We naturally sympathize with the first husband, to whom wife and children are restored, but who will not feel for the bereavement of the second?—Chicago Tribune.

Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come but resist it stoutly. A spark will set a house on fire. A fit of passion may give you cause to mourn all the days of your life. Never revenge an injury.

He that revenges, knows no rest;
The meek possess a peaceful breast.

LIFE THE WORLD OVER.—When Peter of Cardova was engaged on a picture for the royal palace of Petti, Ferdinand II. particularly admired the representation of a weeping child. "Has your majesty," said the painter, "a mind to see how easy it is to make this very child laugh?" And suiting the action to the word the artist merely depressed the corner of the lips, and the inner extremity of the eyebrows, when the little urchin seemed in danger of bursting his sides with laughter, who a moment before seemed breaking his heart with weeping. If this is true in the world of art, it is eminently true in the world of living men. Slight, very slight, are the causes that make or break the happiness of life. The touch of a brush can dim heaven with a cloud or brighten the prospect in the far horizon.

An Eloquent Figure.—The Mechlenburg Jeffersonian says: "Like one of those wondrous rocking stones reared by the Druids, which the finger of a child might vibrate to its centre, yet the might of an army could not move from its place, our constitution is so nicely poised and balanced, that it seems to sway with every breath of opinion, yet so firmly rooted in the hearts and affections of the people. that the wildest storms of treason and fanatacism break over it in vain."

Pleasure of Paying Debts.—What a pleasure it is to pay one's debts! It seems to flow from a combination of circumstances. In the first place, it removes that uneasiness which a true spirit feels from dependence and obligation. It affords pleasure to the creditor, and therefore gratifies our social affection. It promotes that future confidence which is so very interesting to an honest mind; it opens a prospect of being readily supplied with what we want on future occasions; it leaves a consciousness of our own virtue; and it is a measure we know to be right, both in point of justice and sound economy. Finally it is the main support of simple reputation.

REFORM.—As this is the great day of reform on all hands, we advise that some of the reformers proceed, forthwith, to reform themselves, of which they stand in great need.

Advertisements

JUST RECEIVED
From the Book Concern, Baltimore,
A NEW SUPPLY OF
HYMN BOOKS, M. P. CHURCH,
DISCIPLINES M. P. CHURCH.
ALSO A FEW COPIES OF
Snethen's Sermons,
For sale for cash, wholesale and retail at the office of the WESTERN RECORDER.

The best Remedy ever discovered for
External or Internal Applications.

PREPARED from the original Indian Receipt. It has been found to effect the most surprising cures in the following Diseases of Man:

Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Sore Throat, Croup, Swelled Limbs, Pains in the Breast, Back or Side, Stiff Joints, Ague in the face, Sprains, Salt Rheum, Bruises, Chill Blains, Tooth Ache, Pains in the Joints, Stings of Insects, Burns, Frosted Feet, Sun Pain, being used externally. Issues, Nervous Diseases, Weakness in the ankles and limbs generally. Erysipelas, Head Ache, Diseases of the Spine, &c.

TRY IT ONCE.

Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1,00.

FOR HORSES.

It cannot be supassed for sprains, Galls, Chafes, Scratches, Strain of the Shoulders, Stifles, Cracked Heels, Ring Worm, &c. The most severe cases of Cholic in Horses, and Cattle have been cured by the Indian Liniment.

It is a well known fact, that the Indians, possessed a knowledge of the medical virtues of PLANTS entirely unknown to the white man. A knowledge of these plants, so important to mankind, would have remained forever secret with the Indians, had it not been that missionaries travelling among them have become acquainted with these remedies and their mode of preparation.

It was by this means that the celebrated INDIAN LINIMENT was found out, a discovery of the greatest importance to suffering humanity.

For all complaints where an external, and many where an internal application is required the country is challenged to produce a better article or one that will produce such surprising cures, as can be proved by thousands of certificates in the hands of numerous Agents throughout the country. It operates upon the system in a powerful and effectual manner, yet with the greatest safety, from the nature of its composition. It penetrates speedily, relaxing contracting Cords, Restoring the use of limbs long paralized, restoring the use of muscles which have long lost their action from various causes.

For affections of the Lungs, weakness of the Sides, Breast or Back, Liver Complaints, Enlargement of the Spleen, &c. Great cures have been effected by applying the INDIAN LINIMENT externally with a few drops taken on a lump of sugar internally. For long standing Colds and Coughs, and the soreness accompanying such affections, it has no equal; Billious Cholic, Cramp in the bowels and Stomach, Cholera Morbus, &c., an effectual and safe remedy.

BARRELL'S INDIAN LINIMENT, with Dr. BLAKE'S SANATIVE LIFE Pills, is all the medicine used by very many families, & none that have thoroughly tested its virtues, would for a day be without it. Agents are daily writing for more, giving accounts of new and astonishing cures performed by its application, either external or internal.

The proprietor of this invaluable Medicine hesitates not to say, that it is his firm conviction that the day is not far distant when the "Indian Liniment" will rank among the first remedies of the day, for all internal as well as external diseases; and that no family will be without it who have had an opportunity to test its virtues.

Also for sale by the same Agents, Barrell's Indian Vermifuge or Worm Exterminating Extract,

Prepared from the Original Indian Receipt.

Dr. Stanhope's Celebrated
CHOLAGOGUE PILLS,

For Fever and Ague, Purely Vegetable, and never known to fail.

Dr. Blake's Sanative Life Pills,

The best Cathartic medicine in use.

For sale by G W Thompson, Jas S McCleary, Zanesville, H G O Cary, Dresden: D W Culberson, South Zanesville; Jas Bell, Otsego; Claypool & Lynn Nashport; L H Dugan, Duncan Falls; J W Howly, Blue Rock; J Dean, Putnam; Shepard & Brother Taylorsville. D Reddington, No. 4, College Hall, Cincinnati, G E Pryor & Co., Wheeling, Va Russell & M'Doll, Ohio City, Thos M'Crary Beaver, Pa G M'Cullough, Richmond, Ia Jos Northcraft, Madison, Ia J M Tharp, Dayton, Ohio Humphrey & Langworthy, Columbus Ohio, Chas Cook & Co, Maumee, City, O D Spofford, Erie, Pa J Watson, Massillon, and by all authorized agents in every town in the United States and Canada.

All orders for the above medicine should be addressed to G. W. Thompson, Zanesville, Ohio.

☞ If the sick wish a diseased stomach restored and impure blood cleansed without endangering the constitution, go to J. Deen, Grocer and Shoemaker, Putnam, and obtain a box of Dr. Le Roy's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Pills which is the best family medicine now in use. So says Mr. O'Neil the Agent.

DR. LE ROY'S
Wild Cherry, and Sarsaparilla PILLS.

DR. LE ROY has most happily succeeded in combining Wild Cherry and Sarsaparilla with other vegetable ingredients, so as to produce a medicine at once tonic, and purgative, the only perfect discovery of the kind ever made. Their great peculiar excellence, and that which distinguishes them from all other purnatives is, that their operation is followed by no re-action. Their unrivalled purifying and purgative properties, for which they are indebted to the essence of Sarsaparilla, and other ingredients, being controlled by their highly tonic virtues, derived from the extract of Wild Cherry, they do not strain the digestive organs into action, as is the modo of operation with other cathartics, but on the contrary strengthen them into action. Thus all other purgative medicines produce more or less subsequent costiveness, and sluggisnness of the gastric juice, while Dr. Le Roy's Pills leave all the machinery of the system full of life and activity, and the bowels open and natural. "Hence," writes Dr. Cheeseman, "they are the only active purgative which I can recommend with confidence, and without alarm; for they remove nothing but what ought to be removed—neither rack, nor strain—occasion no apathy or debilitation—and leave the bowels free, open, and vigorous." But the great virtue of Dr. Le Roy's Pills—the virtue which has spread their fame over the two hemispheres with a rapidity almost miraculous—lies in their purification of the blood. Here they not only stand altogether unrivalled, but fill up the measure of desire. They at once arrest the formation of bad blood, by removing all impurities from the chyle, of which the blood is formed; and moreover keep it clean, by toning and strengthing the digestive organs, so as to be able to exclude from it all matter of an innutricious nature; and then they purify the blood already in circulation; and never cease operation until it is entirely free from every noxious particle & full of health, life, and vigor. For sale at J. Deen's.

LIFE OF REV. JOHN WESLEY, M. A.

Some time fellow of Lincoln College, Oxford, Collected from his private papers, and printed works; & written at the request of his executors, to which is prefixed some account of his Ancestors and Relations.

WITH THE LIFE OF REV. CHAS. WESLEY, M. A.

Collected from his private Journal, and never before published. The whole forming a History of Methodism, in which the principles and economy of the Methodists, are unfolded.

BY JOHN WHITEHEAD, M. D.

AUTHOR OF THE DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT MR. WESLEY'S FUNERAL.

A supply of the American editions of the above valuable work, is kept on hand and for sale at a very low price, by the Editor of the Western Recorder.

CLEANING & RENOVATING
LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S
APPAREL!

ALSO COLORING LADIES' DRESSES, SILKS, &C.

THE subscriber, on WEST STREET, Putnam, opposite the residence of Mr. Nesbaum, will clean and renovate ladies' dresses, shawls, &c., taking out all grease spots and stains, and make the articles look as well as when new. Also men's fine coats, and other articles cleaned and done up in the best manner, colored, if faded, and insured not to injure the cloth or colors. All work done at low charges, by

BETSY JORDAN.

Putnam, Ohio, July 20, 1848.

N. B. Ladies need not rip apart their dresses.

FITS! FITS!!

A GREAT TRIUMPH!

In medicine has been achieved by Doctor S. Hart in the cure of all Disorders, which arise from an Enfeebled or Unhealty state of the Nervous or Vital System.

Hart's Vegetable Extract

Is the only remedy ever discovered that can be relied on for the permanent cure of Nervous Tremors, Spasmodic Contraction, Irritation of the Nerves, Neuralgic Affections, General Debility, Paralysis, Deficiency of Nervous and Physical Energy, and all Nervous Disorders; including

Epileptic Fits,

Or Falling Sickness, Hysterical Fits, Convulsions, Spasms, &c.

Doctor Hart would again repeat that the Vegetable Extract is the Only Remedy that can be relied on for the permanent cure of these most dreadful of all diseases that ever afflicted the human race. As their tendency is to Insanity, Madness and Death,

Skilful Physicians

Of Europe, as well as those of our own country, have pronounced Epilepsy incurable. And it has been so considered by many, until this important of all discoveries was made by Dr. S. Hart, nearly sixteen years since, during which time it has been performing some of the most

Remarkable Cures

Upon record, and has acquired a reputation which time alone can efface. Physicians of undoubted skill and experience, Ministers of various denominations, as well as hundreds of our eminent citizens, all unite in recommending the use of this truly valuable medicine to their patients, charge, and friends who are thus afflicted, as the only remedy.

We Quote the Language

Used by those who have been cured of Epilepsy by this valuable medicine. One says, "I have suffered beyond power of description, but now I rejoice in being fully restored to health and happiness." Another says, "I thank God I feel that I am a well man. I also feel it my duty to proclaim it to the ends of the earth, that they who are afflicted, may find relief. Another, who is an

Eminent Lawyer

And well known in this city, says. "My son has been afflicted for years with epile, ties, but is now enjoying good health from the Vegetable Extract. Its fame," says he, "should, and ought to be sounded to the end of earth" Another says, "Language is entirely inadequate to express my gratitude to Dr. Hart, for having been the means, under the blessing of God, of restoring me to the enjoyment of good health, after having been afflicted with epilepsy, in its worst forms, more than twenty years, and my morning and evening oblation of praise and thanksgiving shall continue to ascend to that God, who has afflicted, but to make me whole."

The time is not far Distant

When thousands, who are now trembling under the hand of this dreadful disease, and, fearing that every attack may prove fatal, will find permanent relief, and be restored to new life by using this celebrated medicine.

Fits of 27 Years and 6 Months Cured by the use of this Truly Wonderful Medicine.

Read the following remarkable case of the son of Wm Secore, Esq., of Philadelphia, afflicted with Epileptic Fits 27 years and 6 months. After travelling through England Scotland, Germany and France, consulting the most eminent physicians, and expending for medicine, medical treatment, and advice, three thousand dollars, returned with his son to this country in Nov. last, without receiving any benefit whatever, and was cured by using

Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Mr. Wm. Secore's letter to Mr. Hart:—I have spent over three thousand dollars for medicine, & medical advice and attendance. I was advised to taken tour to Europe with him, which I did. I first visted England. I consulted the most eminent physicians there in respect to his case: —they examined him, and prescribed accordingly. I remained there three months without perceiving any change for the better, which cost me about two hundred and fifty dollars, pocketed by the physicians, and the most I received was their opinion that my son's case was hopeless and positively incurable. I accordingly left England, and travelled through Scotland, Germany and France, and returned home in the month of November last, with my son as far from being cured as when I left. I saw your advertisement in one of the New York papers, and concluded to try Hart's Vegetable Extract, seeing your statements and certificates of so many cures, some of twenty and thirty years' standing, and I can assure you I am not sorry I did so, as by the use of Hart's Vegetable Extract alone, he was restored to perfect health. His reason, which was so far gone as to unfit him for business, is entirely restored with the prospect now before him, of life, health and usefulness. He is now 28 years of age, and 27 years and 6 months of this time has been afflicted with this most dreadful of all diseases; but thank God he is now enjoying good health.

Now, gentlemen, faith conviction I don't believe in.—To say that I shall be ever grateful to you is one thing, and as I here enclose you one hundred dollars I have no doubt but you will think this another, and quite a different thing. The debt of gratitude I still owe you, but please accept the amount as interest on the debt in advance.

Yours, very respectfully,
(Signed,) WILLIAM SECORE.

Col. Denslow, of Yonkers, New York, states that his daughter has been afflicted with Fits for more than nine years, and has been cured by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Mrs. J. Bradley, 115 Orchard street, N. Y., states that she has been subject to Fits for many years, and has been restored to perfect health, (after every other means had failed,) by the use of the Vegetable Extract.

Dr. Chas. A. Brown, of Dover, Russell Co., Ala., who is one of the best physicians in the State, says that he has been much benefitted by the use of the Vegetable Extract, and that he unhesitatingly prescribes it in every case of Epilepsy which comes under his knowledge.

Curtis G. Mayberry, Esq., formerly Postmaster at Line Mills, Crawford, Co., Pa., now living in Erie Co., Pa., states, that for many years past he has been sorely afflicted with Fits, and he is now happy to state, that a persevering use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract, has restored him to sound health, being entirely freed from that worst of all diseases.

We would refer to the following persons, who have been cured by using Hart's Vegetable Extract:

W. Bennett, nine years, 171 Grand street.
J. Ellsworth, seven years, 19 Dover street.
Joseph McDougall nine years, East Brooklyn, L. I.
H. W. Smith, New York Custom House.
S. Kelly, twenty years. Staten Island.
Miss E. McKeef, twenty years, Yorkville.
Miss E. Crane, twenty years, 112, Hammersly street.
Wm. H. Parcell, twenty-three years, 78 Norfolk st.
Jacob Petty, four years, 174 Delancy st.
Philo Johnson, twenty-eight years, Greencastle, Ct.
Judge Randall, 94 East Broadway, N. York.
Thomas R. Jones, of the U. S. Navy.
Capt. Wm. Jennings, State st., Bridgeport, Ct.

REFERENCE ALSO MADE TO

Rev. Richard Taggart, West Davenport, N. Y.
Rev. T. L. Bushnell, Baltimore, Md.
C. H. Doughton, 203, Eighteenth st., N. Y
Mrs. James Bertholf, Chester co., N. Y.
John Fahr, 178 Elizabeth street, N. Y.
D. A. Richton, 318 Delancy street, N. Y.
James Smith, 136, Suffolk st.

Testimony Upon Testimony.

In reference to the almost miraculous efficacy of this truly wonderful medicine, read the following letter from Dr. W. L. Monroe, of Guilford, Ohio, one of the most eminent physicians in that place.

Guilford, Ohio, August 17th, 1847.

BROTHER LABORER IN THE CAUSE OF HUMANITY:

Dear Sir:—It is with no small degree of pleasure that I am enabled to announce to you the complete triumph of your invaluable medicine in case of Epilepsy. I have prescribed it in four instances in this vicinity, and it has been highly successful in all. Three of the patients, I trust, have been radically cured. The fourth one is rapidly improving, and will, I think, without doubt, recover. I am not in the habit of prescribing or recommending Patent Medicines, but when I see an article which promises so much for the relief of suffering humanity, I feel it my duty to recommend it, and I have no hesitation in saying that as soon as the faculty are fully acquainted with the real merit of your medicine, they will close their eyes against prejudice and lend you a helping hand. I subscribe myself, yours, sincerely,

(Signed,) W. L. MONROE, M. D.

Over One Thousand Certificates

Have been received in testimony of the beneficial results produced by the use of Dr. Hart's Vegetable Extract.

Prepared by S. HATT, New York.

☞ Price Single Package Three Dollars. Four Packages Ten Dollars.

THOMAS & MILES, 169 Main Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, General Agents for the United States. Mexico, Canada, and West Indies, to whom all letters must be addressed, POST PAID.

Eastman & Bigelow, Zanesville, O.
L. Wilcox, Jr., corner of Diamond and Market St Pittsburgh.
H. & E. Gaylord, Cleveland, O.

Maj. Nye's Reminiscences, Vol. Ext. of Ohio. Feb. 13, 1847.
Jer. Johnson Dec 9. 1847
Whitehead's Life of Wesley. (W 581) July 1. 1847.
Hannah Ann Bissell. Jan. 27. 1848. ——————— not Important
N. Amer. Mch. 16. 1848.
Mary Ann. Springer — May 25. 1848.
C. S. Vs. A. H. B. — June 9. 1848.
Jos. Newlove — Sept. 7. 1848.

Jane McC[illegible] Obit Dec. 19/46 Early Reformer Not very Important.
Margaret Scott Original Reformer.
Obituary W. Rec. Apr. 8. 1847
not Important - at all.
Elizabeth Crafts
John Jordon
Elizabeth Marmon. } Reformers. Biographies W. Rec. Apr. 15 - 47 Not Important.
William Brookfield July 15 - 47 Obituary
W. Rec.
Mrs Mary Evans W. Rec. July 29 — 47
Thos. Pennel. W. Rec. Aug. 7. 47
Dr David Pierce Reformer a Laymen. Jan 25 48. W. Rec.
Lexox Shepherd Reformer. Laymen
W. Rec. Apr. 27/48